Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold its first meeting of the semester at University Health Services Room 304 from 5:30–6:30 p.m. Anyone interested is invited to attend this introductory meeting.

Meeting — Biracial/Multiracial Students Association (a new RSO) will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge. Questions? Call Jordan at 546- 3548.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will be holding their first general meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 908. All beliefs are welcome and diversity is encouraged. Refreshments available.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold its first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center. New members are always welcome. For more information, call Tim at 546–0562.

Meeting — Have you ever done theatre or always wanted to? If so, then the UMass Theatre Guild wants you! Come to our first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Many artistic positions are available for the spring shows, Fame and Heidi Chronicles. Audition information will be available. Call the UMTG office at 545–0415 or Tara 546–2104 for more information.

Thursday, Feb. 6

Lecture — Keith Boykin, author of One More River to Cross: Black and Gay in America, graduate of Harvard Law School and Executive Director of the National Black Gay & Lesbian Leadership Forum, will speak at 8 p.m. Location to be announced. Contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824 for more info.

Lecture — The Office of Human Relations and the philosopy department will offer an informal discussion on Spirituality and Identity at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. For more info, call 546–5174.

Religious — Rosh Chodesh, a Jewish ritual celebration for women meets at 8:30 p.m. in the Hillel House downstairs.

Friday, Feb. 7

Dance — A Welcome Back UMass Ball will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium from 7 p.m–1 a.m. Cost is $4 per person. Semiformal requested. Dance instructions from 7–8 p.m. Refreshments included. For info call Kevin Murphy at 549–4036. Sponsored by the Ballroom Dance Club.

Lecture — Chastity Bono, writer and former spokesperson for the Human Rights Campaign (a national lesbian and gay political organization), and current Entertainment Media Director for the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD) will speak at 4 p.m. in Campus Center room 917. For more info, contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Service — A very special Faculty, Staff and Student Shabbat Service will be held at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House.

Religious — All Christians are invited to Fellowship, pray and worship together at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. For more info, call Mark at 253–0361.

Notices

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Auditions — Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's Spring production of Fame will take place Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 8 at 1 and 7 p.m. in room 101 of the Campus Center. You only need to attend one audition. Callbacks will take place Feb. 9 at 10 a.m. No need to prepare, come as you are. All are welcome. For more information call the UMTG office at 545-0415.

Karate — The UMass Shotoran Karate Club is now accepting new members. No prior experience necessary. Come watch and join our daily training in a traditional Japanese martial art. For more info, contact Loukia at 549– 8058 or Ian at 549–5485.

Orientation — Orientation tours for the W.E.B. Du Bois Library will be held today and Feb. 4–7. The tours will leave from the Entrance lobby at 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. daily. We encourage you to come, visit and get to know the library.

Independent study — Resources in Women's Studies Research, WOST 496B, will be held Wednesdays, 4–4:50 p.m. in the Calipari Instruction Room in the W.E.B. DuBois Library. Reccomended for juniors and seniors. Call instructor Emily Silverman at 545-0995 or e-mail essilverman@tiibrary.umass.edu to register.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Comedy — The UMass improv comedy show Mission Improvable will perform every Saturday in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617)641–2303.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will hold free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. every Saturday in February at Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. Appropriate for all ages. Dates: Feb. 8, 15, 22. For information, call Tom Whitney at 256-6234.

LAUREN KOSKY/COLLEGIAN

Rise and shine!

A grey Tuesday morning in the orchards between Orchard Hill and Central residential areas.

■ Simpson

continued from page 1

That was on top of the 14 hours over three days that were interrupted Friday when the judge replaced the only black member for failing to disclose that her daughter was a secretary in the district attorney's office that prosecuted Simpson at his murder trial.

The final six-man, six-woman jury consisted of nine whites, one Hispanic, one Asian and one of Asian and black heritage.

In its last day of deliberations, the jury spent three hours listening to readbacks of some 200 pages of testimony focusing on Simpson's opportunity and motive. It heard testimony about Simpson's alibi, a bruising argument with his ex-wife and a limousine driver's time line.

Jurors were particularly attentive when they heard the testimony of limo driver Allan Park, the only witness whose testimony the jury at Simpson's murder trial asked to hear again before it acquitted him.

A central issue in the case was whether Simpson would have had time to kill two people at Ms. Simpson's condo, dispose of a weapon and bloody clothes, and return home in time to meet the limousine at 11 p.m.

Correction

Yesterday's story on the latest case of Hepatitis A on campus established an incorrect date for immunizations being offered to food service employees who work on the ground floor of the Campus Center. Immunizations will be provided tomorrow from 9–11:15 a.m. and 1–4 p.m. in Campus Center room 1001-02. The Collegian regrets the error.

LOOK WHAT WE FOUND IN THE BASEMENT

Watch them play on a big stage at the UnVailed'97 semi-finals.

Two local unsigned bands will duke it out for a spot at the final event in Vail.

DGENERATION

and 2 UnVailed Semi-Finalists

What's a concert without a PRE-PARTY?

will be appearing at the pre-party

Before the local showdown, the sponsors are throwing a pre-party on campus. WFNX 101.7 FM will be there too broadcasting live and giving away prizes, including free tickets to the UnVailed semi-finals at the Sugarbush Sportcenter. Enter to win an all expenses–paid trip to the UnVailed finals in Vail, Colorado. Winner will be drawn before the bands go on stage.

University of Massachusetts
Thursday, February 6th
10 a.m. to 3 p.m.
Campus Center Concourse

Sugarbush Sportcenter
Saturday, Februaury 8th
8:30 p.m.
doors open at 8:00

What is UnVailed, you ask?

The search for the best unsigned band. By day, pro–snowboarders will take to the slopes. By night, the final unsigned bands will battle it out. Both showdowns happen in Vail, Colorado, March 27–29.

Can't make it? The play–by–play action will be televised later in the year. UnVailed. Serving all your battle of the band needs since 1996.

samgoody got it.

UnVailed

The Ultimate Band and Board Event

VISA Butterfinger 1 800 CALL ATT Mountain Dew L'OREAL Vail.

Israel stunned as 73 soldiers die in crash

Helicopter collision raises questions about presence in Lebanon

By Dianna Cahn
Associated Press

SHAAR YESHUV, Israel — Two transport helicopters shuttling elite troops to Lebanon collided yesterday in fog and rain and crashed in flames into a rural settlement, killing all 73 soldiers aboard. It was Israel's worst military air disaster.

About 7 p.m., a bright, white burst of light illuminated the night sky five miles south of the Lebanon border. One of the two CH-53 Sikorsky helicopters smashed into an empty guest house, which exploded into flames.

"There was a huge explosion," witness Rachel Fromovitz told The Associated Press. "They crashed right above us, and the helicopters came down in a fiery blaze."

The accident appeared likely to raise new questions about Israel's costly involvement in Lebanon — as well as the decision to send in the troops by helicopters despite the stormy weather. Officials said the helicopters were ferrying soldiers to Lebanon as part of a troop rotation.

Smoke poured from one helicopter as it went down, Yoav Frenkel told Army Radio. "The second helicopter lit up in the air as it fell," he said.

Despite extensive damage in Shaar Yeshuv, a communal settlement in the eastern Galilee, there were no known injuries to anyone on the ground.

Military chief Lt. Gen. Amnon Shahak said the crash killed 65 troops serving in south Lebanon and eight air force crew members. Dalia Golan, nurse who lives near the crash, rushed to try to help any survivors, but heard only "very, very weak cries" from the empty building that one of the helicopters hit.

"They must have been the last cries of the wounded who were trapped inside," she told Israel TV. "I bent down over the first of the victims whom I saw... but there was no pulse, and everything was torn apart."

Hours later, amid a light snowfall, workers in a crane were still trying to fish out pieces of helicopter wreckage remaining inside the rubble of the destroyed house. Soldiers searched the site looking for more bodies and trying to dismantle the scattered ammunition.

Convoys carried the dead to a nearby army base for identification. Israel's Channel Two television showed pictures of bodies being carried away from the crash.

"This is a grave disaster, and a heavy heart goes out to the families of the victims," Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said in a statement. "The entire nation cries today for the loss of our young fighters."

Netanyahu called off a trip to meet with Jordan's King Hussein, scheduled for today, after receiving word of the crash. He has reportedly cleared his scheduled for the next several days, which would also postpone a planned meeting with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat tomorrow.

Arafat and Hussein both conveyed their condolences to Netanyahu, as did President Clinton in Washington. The Knesset planned a special session today to honor the dead.

Officials said an inquiry into the cause of the accident would begin immediately.

"As far as we know, the weather was not the problem," said Brig. Gen. Oded Ben-Ami, the military spokesman.

Israel's worst previous military air accident was a 1977 helicopter crash that killed 54 people.

Tuesday's crash comes at a time when Israeli politicians are increasingly calling into question the wisdom of Israel's policy in south Lebanon, with some urging that Israel withdraw its troops. In 1985, Israel established the so-called "security zone" in southern Lebanon to guard northern towns from guerrilla attacks, while pulling its troops out of a larger area of Lebanon that it had occupied.

More than 200 soldiers have died in the security zone since then, mostly in clashes with the Iranian-backed Hezbollah guerrillas. According to army figures, 26 soldiers were killed in south Lebanon last year and four have been killed so far this year. Hezbollah guerrillas issued a statement expressing joy at the crash, Israel Radio said.

Public Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani, a former general, said this week that Israel should withdraw because Israeli soldiers were too easy a target for Lebanese guerrillas. Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai rejected the idea.

Former Prime Minister Shimon Peres said the lesson of yesterday's disaster was that Israel needed to pay the "price for peace" with Lebanon and Syria.

That was an apparent reference to his support for returning the Golan Heights to Syria in exchange for peace. Such an agreement would win Syria's backing for an end to the guerrilla war in Lebanon.

LAUREN KOSKY/COLLEGIAN

A different view.

A reflection of the W.E.B Dubois library off the facade of the Morrill science building.

Attention potential news writers:

There will be an important meeting for all people interested in news writing Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom. Everyone is welcome, even if you have already contacted me about writing. Call 545-1782 if you cannot attend. Thanks!

—Laura Stock, News Editor

Mental Health Groups Spring 1997

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY		THURSDAY
Mindfulness-based Stress Management Group — Learn to live fully in the present moment. Mindfulness meditation will be used as the foundation for all stress management exercises. This group is appropriate for both general stress management as well as for assistance in managing stress related medical disorders. Group runs for 8 weeks, Mondays, 3:30 - 5:30 p.m.	Self-Discovery Groups — Learn to develop better social skills; improve relationships; become more assertive; improve connections with others; feel more in control of your life; and cope with sadness, lonliness, or isolation by talking with others who share your concerns. These groups run for 10 weeks. Group I -Tuesdays, 3:30 - 5:00 p.m.	Self-Discovery Groups — Learn to develop better social skills; improve relationships; become more assertive; improve connections with others; feel more in control of your life; and cope with sadness, lonliness, or isolation by talking with others who share your concerns. These groups run for 10 weeks. Group II - Wednesdays, 3 - 4:30 p.m.	Ninos Adultos de Familias Disfuncionales — This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Group is held in Spanish. Group runs for 8 weeks, Wednesdays 3:30 - 5:00 p.m.	Men's Group - If you are a man who has difficulty with self-confidence, friendships, romantic relationships, or expressing anger you're not alone. This weekly discussion group can help you understand and overcome these problems as group members talk with and learn from each other. The group is co-led by a man and woman and runs for 8 - 10 weeks, Thursdays, 4:00 - 5:00 p.m

All groups require a pre-group interview. For more information, or to sign up for an interview, please call the Mental Health Division of University Health Services at 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North, M - F, 8:00 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Hurry! Get Your Senior INDEX Yearbook Photo

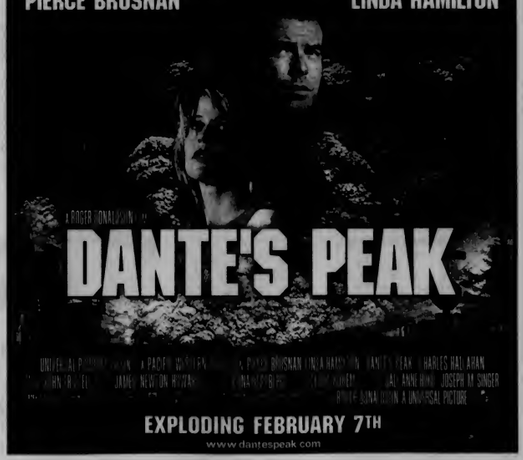
NOW!

This will be the Final Sitting!

February 3 - February 28

Campus Center Rm. 177



Call Now To Schedule a sitting.

There is a $5 sitting fee.

the INDEX

(800) 836-0558

PIERCE BROSNAN LINDA HAMILTON

A ROGER DONALDSON FILM

DANTE'S PEAK

UNIVERSAL PICTURES A PACIFIC WESTERN PRODUCTION PIERCE BROSNAN LINDA HAMILTON DANTE'S PEAK CHARLES HALLAHAN JAMES NEWTON HOWARD JAY ANSTEN JOSEPH M. SINGER RONALD M. SHUSETT & JOHN GAY PRODUCED BY GARY LUCCHESI & DON MURPHY DIRECTED BY ROGER DONALDSON A UNIVERSAL PICTURE

EXPLODING FEBRUARY 7TH

www.dantespeak.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig L Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor Position Vacant Systems Manager
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Laura Stock News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Thang Vo Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Pre-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Hands off Social Security

Sam McAfee

There has been much talk lately about what to do with Social Security. It is widely speculated that the current system will not be ample enough to supply the baby boomers with retirement security in 20 years or so. The key is to grow the fund in a way that will sustain the increase.

Since every other government service under the sun is being cut or privatized, why not the grand-daddy of them all? The most atrocious idea so far has been for the funds be invested in the stock market. Driven by free-market, anti- public sector mania, this concept is sure to serve the interests of the rich at the expense of working people's retirement security.

There are many reasons why this is a bad idea, but I shall focus on only a few. First, the use of the stock market will necessitate portfolio managers to monitor growth. This will provide a large brokerage house with the most profitable and secure clientele, the U.S. government. Enormous commissions will be charged for the handling, giving these brokers an unfair advantage in the marketplace, and using tax dollars to do it.

Also, since the government will own stock in certain firms, say General Electric for example, it will have a vested interest in making that corporation more profitable. Since the government already has many contracts with GE, a conflict of interest is created which benefits executives and other stock holders, while tax payers bear the risk.

This brings us to my next point. The stock market is one of the least stable places to invest your money. Under the old system, the retirement funds of workers were protected by the government. If any portion of this amount is invested in stock, the values of which violently fluctuate every day, that portion is placed in a risky position.

Should the stocks in which the money is invested crash, that money is gone. Shall we then throw the retirees out on the streets? Of course not. Tax payers will be asked to bail them out, in effect paying twice for their own retirement because of government frivolity.

These reasons seem very obvious to me, yet there has been little protest by the public. Even the AFL-CIO has endorsed a milder form of this plan involving individual portfolios. This idea is risky and unfair, since some workers will have growing accounts and some will not, regardless of how much they paid in Social Security tax. Hardly fair, and again benefitting Wall Street rather than retirees.

Of course, selling out workers is nothing new for the AFL-CIO, which endorsed Clinton for president, the same man who brought us NAFTA. NAFTA has proven to be a death sentence for unions, whose limited influence is further undermined by global competition. NAFTA was praised by Wall Street, since it will allow corporations to cut costs by pitting workers of different countries against one another, resulting in a booming stock market.

One might notice that the markets have done quite well since the agreement, while hundreds of thousands of workers have been laid off. Consolidation is occurring rapidly in every industry, great for investors who can be seen in the financial news praising economic growth; growth primarily seen in such unproductive industries as advertising, consulting and, of course, security.

For every story in the news about Wall Street records, there are two about unemployment, crime, or drugs. Does no one see the connection that what is good for Wall Street is bad for everyone else? But the corporate sector claims they have no choice, that global competition forces them to lay off and cut back in order to stay profitable. Why produce in the United States when labor is cheaper elsewhere?

I say this is crap. Corporations use "globalization" as an excuse to do what which creates globalization. That the government has no choice but to yield to them is also a lie. A 5000 percent tariff on anything produced for wages under our minimum would instantly discourage importation of goods produced under savage conditions in the Third World. Why do we have to lower our standards instead of raising those of others.

"Mexico lets us pollute so we make our sneakers there," is not a good enough answer. Labor is cheaper in Mexico because the government we support actively crushes unions for the benefit of corporations who invest there.

Governments for the people by the people have become governments for the corporations controlled by the corporations. The Social Security plan is just the latest example.

Sam McAfee is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

NEWTONIAN PHYSICS: WHAT GOES UP, MUST COME DOWN

Hickbonics & more

Luke Meredith

If I was a senior, I could call this column "Notes From the Campus Center Basement." But I'm just a junior, which means I don't have the privilege yet. You could think of this as a "Notes From the Campus Center Basement, Jr." if you wanted too, though. I won't tell, I swear.

* * *

There's been a lot of talk about Ebonics, and how much of America is divided on the topic. To be honest, I like the idea, because I think any way that you can improve teaching methods for kids is a good idea. But I have one question about Ebonics. Is it just for inner-city African American children, or can others benefit?

Like, take rednecks for instance. Do the words "Dagummit" and "Y'all" have to be analyzed and dissected so we can better teach our hillbilly brethren? Would Bo and Luke Duke have to go back to school? These questions have to be answered before I am sold on Ebonics.

* * *

Can anybody explain to me how the BlueWall can justify charging as much as Antonio's does for a slice of cheese pizza? How do they sleep at night?

* * *

Last week Riddick Bowe joined the Marines as a reserve. The former heavyweight champion of the world is now headed to Parris Island for boot camp. Hey, Riddick. If you train for the Marines like you trained for your last fight, you'll be shipped home faster than you can say "Don King."

* * *

Bon Jovi is coming out with an album this summer, or so I hear. Yeah, Johnny! Prove to the world that Jersey can still raise the roof. By the way, I met Jon's cousin Cathy Bongiovi, who works for the A-10, at the women's hoop game Sunday. I expected a random outburst of Slippery When Wet lines at certain points in the game, but it didn't happen. Needless to say, I went home disappointed.

* * *

I still only have three classes, but they're nice classes.

* * *

Dennis Rodman has decided to donate the rest of this season's salary to charity. I'm all for charity, but come on, chief. When you spend your last five bucks playing craps in Vegas, you'll wish you had a paycheck to throw down on the table. Maybe I was wrong, Dennis.

Maybe you are the stupidest man alive.

* * *

I went to Health Services Monday for the first time since I broke my ankle two years ago (remember?), this time for an ingrown toenail. You don't want the details. It's pretty nasty, and that's all I'll say. Although I've bashed the administration more than once on these pages, I found the staff there courteous, polite and sympathetic of my dilemma. Two problems though. First, my appointment for the actual surgery is Friday at 8:15 a.m., which means that I have to walk around for four days in gnawing pain, and I have to wake up before sunrise on Friday for the first time since eighth grade. Secondly, the pharmacist informed me that Prozac is not available over the counter because, and I quote, "You just want to try it." I guess I'll have to come up with a better reason next time.

* * *

What about UMass Ebonics? Would our professors have to be re-trained so that words like "schwag," "it's all good" and "dude" would be put in their proper context, so we could all learn better? I think if a professor came into class and said, "Let's examine the word 'alright' (pronounced "I-ite") and what it means to society," I'd be out the door faster than you could say "No diggity."

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Gandhi's message for the world

Martin F. Jones

Lead me from untruth to truth,
From darkness to light,
From death to immortality.
–Hindu Verse

The day was Jan. 31, 1948. Large numbers of people, close to one million, stood in the sun awaiting the funeral procession as it approached the cremation grounds. Predominating the dress of the people was white. White cotton saris worn by the women, and the same for the men's clothes, caps and bulbous turbans.

At Raighat, near the body waters of the Yamuna River near New Delhi, a fresh funeral pyre had been built a few hundred feet from the river. Comprised of stone, brick and earth, it stood eight feet square and about two feet high.

Long, thin sandalwood logs sprinkled with incense were stacked on top. On this funeral pyre, one of countless millions which had been constructed and emulated to cremate the deceased over many thousands of years, the body of a 78-year-old man rested, his head to the north. He was known to millions as "The Mahatma" or "Great Soul." Many millions more had come to remember him simply as Gandhi.

Born Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi on Oct. 2, 1869, this great soul, who had been felled a day earlier by an assassin's three bullets, had received unsolicited messages of condolences from the heads of all the world's major religions, numerous heads of state and a special tribute by the United Nations, which lowered its flag to half-mast.

Then U.S. Secretary of State, General George C. Marshall, said, "Mahatma Gandhi was the spokesman for the conscience of mankind." As the fire of his funeral pyre was lit by his son Ramdas, the world solemnly marked the passing of one of its greatest spiritual and moral teachers.

Forty-nine years after his death, Mahatma Gandhi, still revered as the Father of the Indian Nation, has become the focus of a revival over the meaning of his legacy. On Jan. 30, the 49th anniversary of his assassination, an emotional ceremony was held in India at a sacred site along the Ganges River in Allahabd.

Ashes from his cremation were scattered into the sacred river after being discovered in a bank vault in Cuttack where they had been secured for the past 49 years. Gandhi's great- grandson Tushar Gandhi organized the ceremony to complete unfinished family business, but he also hoped that the rite would stir a debate in India about Gandhi's ideals.

Mahatma Gandhi is best known for implementing a philosophy called Satyagraha in his drive to liberate India from British rule in the 1940s. The name of this philosophy is derived from satya, which means truth, the equivalent of love, and both are attributes of the soul; agraha is firmness or force. Satyagraha therefore translates into Soul Force.

Satyagraha, Gandhi wrote, "is the vindication of truth not by infliction of suffering on the opponent but on one's self." The opponent must be "weaned from error by patience and sympathy." Weaned not crushed. Satyagraha thereby assumes a constant beneficent interaction between contestants with a view to their ultimate reconciliation. Violence, insults and fiery rhetoric will obstruct this end.

Satyagraha ultimately reverses the eye-for-an-eye policy which ends in making everyone either blind or blind with fury. It returns good for evil until the evildoer tires of evil. In South Africa and at times in India, Gandhi showed that ordinary human beings were capable of high-mindedness even under the most severe of circumstances. His success in these struggles would later serve to inspire and guide the spirit of another great revolutionary who lived in America: Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the young charismatic Baptist minister who effectively employed Gandhi's principles of non-violent resistance to lead the Civil Movement in its historic transformation of American society.

This revolutionary new philosophy had its grounds in the spiritual beliefs upon which Gandhi was raised. A devout Hindu, Mahatma Gandhi lived as a karma yogi. There are yogis who meditate and yogis who act. The karma yogi is the yogi of action. In a comment of the ancient Hindu script Bhagavad-Gita, Gandhi defined the perfect karma yogi: "He is a devotee who is jealous of none, who is afount of mercy, who is without egotism, who is selfless, who treats alike cold and heat, happiness and misery, who is ever forgiving, who is always contented, whose resoluteness is firm, who has a dedicated mind and soul to God, who causes no dread, who is not afraid of others, who is free from exultation, sorrow and fear, who is pure, who is versed in action yet remains unaffected by it, who renounces all fruit, good or bad, who treats friend and foe alike, who is untouched by respect or disrespect, who is not puffed up by praise, who does not go under when people speak ill of him, who loves silence and solitude, who has a disciplined reason. Such devotion is inconsistent with the existence at the same time of strong attachments."

Gandhi summarized all of this as "Desirelessness." Desirelessness, or Hindu renunciation, creates the inner peace and poise necessary to achieve real lasting results, even material results, untainted by ugly means. Herein, Gandhi established that the means by which change is accomplished is more important than the actual desired results.

Gandhi's politics were indistinguishable from his religion. "My patriotism," he said, "is subservient to my religion." Gandhi's religion made him political, and his politics were religious. Throughout his political career, which began with a successful movement for Indian human rights in South Africa, Gandhi never sought to humiliate or defeat his opponents, them being the whites in South Africa and the British in India. It was his wish to convert them. Indeed, not only did Gandhi succeed in converting his opponents to see his truth but he would go on to inspire a whole new era spiritual consciousness which has transformed the whole of humankind and shall continue to do so for many generations to come. All that is needed is for all of us to remember and live out his great message for the world.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

A question of fairness

To the Editor:

Affirmative action has been under attack, on ideological and legal grounds, since the Reagan era. The ideological argument of the opposition to the affirmative action asserts that, since racism has been eradicated in the United States, affirmative action is no longer necessary, it is discriminatory against white people. Our laws should now be made "color- blind," so as to discriminate against no one. This argument's most damaging and most obvious weakness is its premise: that racism has been eradicated in the United States.

If this premise were true, we might conclude that, given the affirmative action programs supposedly in operation now, people of color have an advantage over white people in the arenas of education and employment, and so must be over-represented there. Following our happy chain of logic, we should then come to the obvious corollary that people of color are, on average, more well-off than white people. Sadly, these conclusions are in sharp contradiction to the state of affairs we see around us, in Massachusetts and the country at large. Five hundred years of affirmative action for white people in the United States cannot be erased by 30 years of statutory affirmative action for people of color, no matter how effective.

Here at UMass-Amherst, we see this sad fact reflected in statistics available from the Graduate School: of the 5,955 graduate students enrolled this academic year, 527 of them identified themselves as "minority," amounting to only 8.85 percent of the total (if international students are deducted from the total number, the percentage rises to 10.9 percent), much less than the level of the general population of Massachusetts. We at the Graduate Employee Organization feel that this constitutes grossly inadequate representation among the graduate student body. We feel that this is, at least in part, a question of access, one of the themes we have been emphasizing during our contract campaign.

One reason for this underrepresentation is the cost of attending this University, the most expensive public state university in the country. This is why GEO is bargaining for increased funding for the Office of Minority Graduate Student Recruitment. We are asking for increases in every year of our contract, something that we won in our last contract. We are also asking that some of this money be set aside for retention of graduate students of color, which has also been a concern. In addition, we are asking for money for the recruitment and retention of other underrepresented groups (eg., low income students, single mothers, immigrants, etc.). For us at GEO this is a question of fairness to those people who have been excluded by our University, as well as an issue of the quality of the education that this University provides.

This latter point has to do with diversity. For many here at this University, the desirability of diversity is limited to the entertainment provided to white people. As has been true for many years in the United States, white people have been very open-minded when it comes to their entertainment (at least as sports and music go). However when it comes to other arenas of public life, diversity becomes less of a priority. Diversity in education here at UMass means having a diverse teaching staff. Diversity of background and culture means a wider range of perspectives gained from the learning process, something no quality education lacks. Since TAs do a large portion of the teaching here at UMass, diversity in the composition of the TAs working here is a necessity. The changes we are asking for in our contract, such as funding OMGSR adequately, begin to address this need.

Further testimony to this problem is given in the column written by Lisa Chiu and Christine Soh in the Jan. 28 edition of the Collegian. As they point out, the administration has fallen short in meeting the terms of the 1992 ALANA Agreement. What is more, they demonstrate that the administration has tried to cover up their shortcomings, massaging statistics and claiming success. These are not the actions of an administration that is committed to addressing issues of white privilege here on campus and in the country as a whole. If UMass wants to project an image of shiny, happy diversity to possible donors to its Capital Campaign, perhaps it should be working towards nurturing that diversity, rather than resorting to smoke and mirrors to present the illusion that it exists. We at GEO call on the administration to fund OMGSR at the levels we are asking, to settle the contract negotiations and to reaffirm its commitment to the concerns of ALANA students by updating and implementing the 1992 ALANA Agreement.

Tom Masterson
GEO Treasurer

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Academics and More !!!

UMass Division of Continuing Education

For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
Explore our web site and see how we can help you - http://www.umass.edu/contined/

Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years

Tons of credit undergrad courses in the evening!
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops affordable, fun practical, including
- Bartending,
- GMAT, GRE, LSAT, & MCAT Preparation,
- Magical Arts,
- Photography,
- ESL,
- EMT Training,
- Marketing,

and CHOCOLATE !

Arts & Living

Wednesday, February 5, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Allen's first musical only lighthearted fun

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

EVERYONE SAYS I LOVE YOU
Directed by Woody Allen with Woody Allen, Alan Alda, Goldie Hawn
Playing at Academy of Music

For over 30 years Woody Allen has remained one of the most important and entertaining American filmmakers. From his earlier days of brilliant slapstick to a transformation of cynical drama, Allen has successfully intertwined strong characters with innovative narratives.

In his 26th film, Allen has once again attempted to explore new territory. Everyone Says I Love You is the director's first musical comedy, and the film is representative of the genre in nearly every sense. With a large ensemble of popular stars, the cast walks about the populated streets of New York and Paris constantly breaking into song. Like most musicals, the central theme of Allen's latest feature is about finding, and often losing, true love.

Allen's scripts have usually maintained one central theme at their core. There is a constant emphasis on neurotic, Jewish urbanites with broken hearts. They are searching for redemption of some kind or another, whether from monotonous lives, religious guilt or a better understanding of right and wrong. Even in the early '70s, Allen's straight comedies like Bananas and Sleepers offered exquisite political satire. After his Academy Award winning breakthrough with Annie Hall, the director concentrated on bitter relationships mixed in with psycho-analytical charged parody.

Throughout the last decade and a half, Allen has concentrated on intelligent humor and has achieved the status of a true auteur director. With Everyone Says I Love You, Allen has decided to change direction to create an amusing musical. The problem is, there is a blatant hesitancy to make any drastic changes, and his reluctance shows. Allen has once again stayed loyal to his central theme, but unlike many of his previous films: Everyone Says I Love You has little else to offer.

Of course all musicals are known for poor character development and stale plots and Everyone Says I Love You is no exception. This, however, is not the typical Woody Allen feature his fans have come to expect or even rely on for comfort and support in their own dissatisfying lives. The best thing about Allen is his ability to allow others as high strung as himself to identify with his films as an outlet for their own neurosis.

In his latest, Allen has become too dependent on traditional musical formulas, and as a result the cast is far too large and really has nothing to say. The plot, although entertaining, is much too silly and serves nothing more than lighthearted humor. Most of the characters have little reason to exist in the film and those who do have reason, refrain from convincing us they deserve it. Even the great Alan Alda is reduced to roaming his apartment and arguing with his conservative minded son played by Luke Haas.

In the world of musicals, Allen's latest is right on target, except for one small concern. The plot is so typical of Allen's central themes that at times the film achieves nothing short of dull nostalgia. Also, Allen continuously reminds us of his trademark influences ranging from such extremes of Kafka and Groucho Marx to Ingmar Bergman. Allen has paid homage to these greats in almost every film he has made, but they seem a bit awkward in a musical format.

Everyone Says I Love You is a fun musical, but Allen's inability to stay focused takes away from the film's full potential. His hope to mix the core of all his other movies into a story where random characters sing away the narrative is intriguing but not quite original enough. The point is that the film is a good musical in that aspect, but one look at Allen's resume will prove this is far from one of his better accomplishments.

C+

Branford Marsalis' trio disappointing at Iron Horse

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

BRANFORD MARSALIS TRIO
Iron Horse
Feb. 3

Although he is one of the hottest names in jazz (mostly through his associations with pop culture icons such as Sting and Jay Leno), Branford Marsalis' Monday night trio show at the Iron Horse provided few highlights and was not a show that lived up to its potential.

The trio consisted of Marsalis (switching between tenor and soprano saxophones throughout the show), Reginald Veal on bass and Jeff "Tain" Watts on drums. From the moment they took the stage until the end of the show, they looked like they were thinking of something else, and weren't really all there. The lazy neo-bop of the first two songs validated this point.

About midway through the show, Watts decided to pull ahead of his pals and start to really put some energy into his drumming. He ended up being the real story there that night, with his fast-paced, but tight drum solos.

He must have gotten to Marsalis and Veal because their playing soon picked up during the third song. Veal had some good soloing, also. By the fourth song, one from Branford's brother, Delfeayo, called "The Reverend Judas Iscariot," the band as a complete unit cooked for the first time of the show on that upbeat tune.

But, after that song, it was that reoccurring mundane feeling, except for Watts, who quickly lost his effect on the other two. Marsalis had some real good playing in the second half of the show, but it was sadly obvious he wasn't giving it his all. There are many other young saxophonists out there, such as Joshua Redman and James Carter, so Marsalis has got to learn to keep up or else he may just lose his chops.

The encore of the show featured some good inter-play between Marsalis and Watts, and Veal chimed in for some sprinting bass playing to accompany them after a few minutes.

With Marsalis' noble position in the world of modern jazz, a good show, imaginative playing and motivational band-leading (an art in itself) was expected, but that did not come to fruition in terms of the show as a whole.

COURTESY VICTORY RECORDS

Guilt looks to the future with their last album.

Hallraker 7" out soon

Keepin' it real with Adam Dlugacz

The Hallraker 7-inch has just been printed up and should be out in a couple of weeks. It has the four songs from the demo and you should get it so that when they blow up you can get extra scenester points for having the first 7-inch.

Guilt has put out their final album Further on Victory Records. I haven't heard this band since their first album Synthesthesia and I was blown away by how far they have come. Further is a post-hardcore album and while it does borrow heavily from Quicksand at times, it is an innovative and original album with lyrics that will make you think.

Anyone who was at the Earth Crisis show last Wednesday probably remembers two things, the first being V.O.D. showing all the other bands and the second a commentary by a woman on the state of the hardcore scene. The woman jumped on stage before Earth Crisis and berated the hardcore scene for not having girls in the scene or in bands. She also slagged Earth Crisis for no reason.

The woman had some points, and I would like to respond to her accusations. Anyone at the show could have pointed out that there were quite a few girls at that show. In fact, if you went to a hardcore show in the early '90s you would remember that only one or two girls would be at the shows. The fact that today you can count a good amount of girls at the shows is progress.

Furthermore, the speaker chose an overly negative attitude when instead she should have been encouraging girls to become more active in the scene. She also made a mistake by bashing Earth Crisis when she clearly knew nothing about the band. While I may not be the biggest Earth Crisis fan, they are the farthest thing from sexist.

I agree that we do need more girls in the scene but whoever it was that jumped on stage Wednesday went about doing it the wrong way. We need unity in the scene, not people attacking it from within. The other thing is before you jump onstage (which is something I encourage) to speak, make sure you know what you are talking about.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

Tonight
Retro Night
Music of the 70's and 80's
Weekly Drink Specials
16oz. Red Dog Drafts 1.50
16oz. Captain Morgan & Coke 2.00
12oz. Bottles Rolling Rock 1.50
NEW HOURS
1/2 Price Appetizers & Nachos
3-5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11 pm
No Cover Charge
THE PUB

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $277 $517
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
212-986-6420
800-272-9676

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN • BARBADOS • MAZATLAN
$299
1-800-95-BREAK
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST
SUND, FEB 9

Campus Activities at the University of Massachusetts presents
"Something Every Friday"

A Touch of Reality

This three-person group uses poetry to express important issues like AIDs; gang violence; and day-to-day reality. This powerful trio has opened for the Fugees, the Lost Boys, and the Last Poets.

Bluewall Cafe
February 7, 1997
8:00pm
Free

For more information check our website: http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/sef.htm
This series is made possible by a grant from UMASS Auxiliary Services, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the Daily Collegian.

Jewish Appeal and UMass Hillel subsidize trip to

I kept the flower

Day 1
December 23, 1996

I'm sitting at gate 54 at the International terminal of the Newark, N.J. airport. Rachel, Aaron and Cheryl have just gone off to try to get the rest of the UMass to join them in doing the Time Warp. We've been juggling with some balls that I brought and playing limbo with various pieces of equipment in this quiet deserted terminal. I noticed a friendly looking elderly gentleman sitting across from me. I noticed that he had been looking at us for some time. After my friends left, I commented to him that we were usually quite reserved, to which he replied in heavily accented English, "You're Jewish and you're young, you're acting just how you are supposed to act. When you're 50, then you can act reserved."

Our flight which was originally set to depart at 7:50 p.m. has been pushed back an hour. We'll stop once in London and should hit Tel Aviv at 4:30 p.m. Israel time tomorrow. It will be 7:30 in the morning in America.

The reception at the Sheraton Newark was nice. We were served cold cuts, soda, cookies and chips for lunch. I was there from around 2 p.m. until 7 p.m. when we left for the airport. Most of the conversation between the 360 students consisted of "where are you from" and "do you know so and so."

*****

After seven hours in the air, and an hour and a half on the ground in London, we're preparing for takeoff once again. I believe that the flight attendants hate us considerably now. Not because we have been ill behaved (because we haven't, of course) but simply because a Boeing 747 filled with 360 college students is neither very quiet nor very disciplined. This is due to the fact that the students have not only a tendency to roam aimlessly around the cabin chatting and meeting new people, but also have a tendency to break into song at random intervals. The past nine hours have been a blur of discomfort and sleeplessness, only interrupted by the service of airline food, which is followed by more discomfort, as well as beverages and peanuts. London is a balmy 30 degrees Fahrenheit and I wonder if the men walking around our plane are Blokes or Chaps. As we taxi to the runway a second time we watch the airline's Pink Panther cartoon on safety and regulations, first in Hebrew then in English. When this trip is finally over we will have seen this video a total of six times. One of the overhead compartments has just popped open and begun to dump coats and bags onto some girls a few rows ahead of me. They remove their seatbelts and get up to fix it, the flight attendant in the back who is already strapped in for take off is yelling for them to sit in their seats. And we're off the ground. Goodbye, London. Now let's see if I can get some more sleep on this leg of the trip.

*****

Two hours of sleep was my ration for the day, and the first officer has just announced that we will be landing inside of 20 minutes. I slept through the entire movie Eraser, which is fine because I've seen it. It's 68 degrees in Tel Aviv and we're all very happy about that.

*****

After completing an Ice Breaker on the bus, where everyone shared their brushes with fame, our tour guide Giora begins to share with us a little about himself and our itinerary for the next 10 days. It is starting to sink in now where I am. Leaving Tel Aviv, we drove right through the Metropolitan patz of the city. In the dark there was no way to differentiate Tel Aviv from New York, Chicago or Boston except for the fact that every billboard, street sign and building name was in Hebrew.

*****

Dinner was served at Kfar Giladi. I believe it was our fifth or sixth meal in the last 24 hours. The meal was followed by the Galil Troup, an incredible group of singers who entertained for over an hour. During one song the eight females of the 11 member group ventured into the audience, each taking a guy, offering him a flower and bringing him up in front of the entire mission of students to dance. As my luck would have it, there I was up in front of everyone with an orange flower in my right hand slow dancing to a song that I'd never heard before. Thankfully, it only lasted for half a minute or so and the light wasn't bright enough for everyone to see how red my face was. I kept the flower.

Jason Baker is a UMass student and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

SARAH J. SIMMEL / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Bus 4 of the UJA mission to Israel poses in front of the Western Wall.

The early bird does catch the worm

Day 2
December 25, 1996

I can't remember being so happy about being up so early. Days like this, sleeping seems like a waste, this is coming from one of the all-time late sleepers. From the limited view of the window in the room of the kibbutz where we are staying in the Upper Galilee, I can see fascinating things. There are large mountains in the background unlike anything in the northeastern United States. The beautiful blend of trees, vegetation and bird songs appears almost exotic. From my window I have seen several people jog by, probably early birds from the tour. I cannot wait to see what lies beyond this narrow view of my window. I cannot wait to see Israel.

Later in the morning, we visited one of Israel's few nature reserves located hundreds of yards from the Lebanese border. It was difficult to believe that the small streams of water we walked along are the sources for the Jordan River and the Sea of Galilee, Israel's principal water suppliers. Water is a scarce and valuable resource in the middle east, and access to water is an important issue in Israeli security as border control.

Walking through the nature area, seeing plants and animals that were completely unfamiliar to me, I thought of friends at UMass who study plants and wildlife and would have appreciated and understood the uniqueness of what we were seeing.

After the nature reserves we visited archaeological ruins which were at the foot of the Golan Heights. A stone tablet mentioning King David had been found at the sight several years earlier.

The bus tour of the Golan Heights took us well into the pre-1967 border with Syria. Riding up the winding road through some of the most beautiful mountains and hills that nature offers, it was hard to believe we were at the same place where the latter stages of the 1967 Six Day War was fought. We stopped for a while and walked around an abandoned Syrian military bunker from that war. The bunker had underground passages which were fed by water pipes and would be secure from most conventional bombs, and therefore had to be conquered hand to hand.

This is the stuff that makes great stories, an off-road jeep tour through the Golan Heights, taking us through herds off cows and within feet of signs which read, "Danger — Mines." Later I found out that since some of the land is deemed infertile, many of the mines that drove by have not yet been decommissioned. Our tour guide gave us a brief history of the Golan Heights, which illustrated why Israelis are so divided to whether to return it to the Syrian government.

Our jeep driver was a retired army officer who was driving jeeps more for fun than economic need. I was in the same car as Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, and was fascinated and clueless listening to him talk to the driver in Hebrew, a language which I once knew dimly, but now remember nothing. The rabbi told me that the driver had recently lost a son who was serving in Southern Lebanon. He knew the strategic importance of the Golan Heights and would like the government to return the land as a gesture of peace. This was a puzzling answer, considering his position in life would most probably have led to the opposite conclusion. Again I am amazed how complex and passionate the feelings and motivations are behind the political and social forces in the area.

Bryan Schwartzman is a Collegian columnist and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

Visiting the Wall

Day 4
December 27, 1996

You know, there's nothing like seeing the major of Jerusalem, Ehud Olmert. Israeli breakfasts consist of mostly olives, cucumbers and honey. Delicious! Anyway, we were all seated humbly awaiting the presence of a man who, to tell you the truth, I had never even heard of before. There was a greasy air of tension floating in our baklava-filled stomachs. We all expected a distant gray-suited man with the hanger still stuck in his coat, fully loaded with a posse of similarly dressed men packing heat and sporting curious headphones. Cameras were cocked and ready to flash. Some guy in what appeared to be a Members Only jacket and a shirt that tasted like fruit stripe gum sat down in front of me. I thought nothing of the man until he went up to the podium and began talking about the future of Jerusalem. Apparently, most of the Israeli parliament wears khakis, but why still Members Only?

His great vision for the city of Israel was that, "We will all be here some day." When he said "we" it was understood by the group that he meant the Jewish people. When he referred to past, present and future generations, he emphasized the concept the we, the jews, are all one. I do feel that the Jewish are one in their own body, but also that all life, the universe and everything in it is also one with G-d.

Everybody wants a piece of that city. The problem is that there's not much there to go around. On our next tour, entering the old city of Jerusalem was a bit overwhelming. We were surrounded by a sea of limestone, which is made of dead, crushed ancient shellfish. The sounds of everyday life from before year one seemed to echo with our voices off of the high limestone walls of every alley. I felt like a child in ecstatic joy to be in a place that we had all been singing and reading about since we were kids. There was a definite glow about the group that proved not to be the usual camera flashing tourist's reaction. Everyone who lived there seemed to be riding the same wave of excitement. At one point, we stopped to eat Israel's age old answer to the fast food crave: spicy, crisp, delicious falafel.

Sightseeing was great, but we all knew that the main attraction would be tonight's Sabbath at the Wailing Wall. There, Jews of every sector and type stand to pray. The Western Wall surrounds the area that used to be the great Jewish temple of Jerusalem thousands of years ago. Before approaching the Wall we separated into groups and discussed what really makes the Wall holy. Some Jews are disgusted by the idea of the Wall and cursed it as an idol that people worshipped. Idol worshipping is a direct offense to the ten commandments. How could one worship something physical that is not eternal? The answer is that the Wailing Wall is not an idol by any means. It is a symbol of the struggle and strength of the Jewish people. The Wall has been set on fire, blown up, showered with bullets and G-d knows what else, yet it still stands strong and proud. Many larger people have attempted to get rid of us, but we always seem to last and retain our faith.

The sun was getting low in the sky, and our tour guide Giora was becoming even less legible with his thick German/Israeli accent. He sounded like he had peanut butter stuck to the roof of his mouth. Yes, Shabbat was on its way. We walked to the outskirts of the old city where an Israeli a cappella group sang beautiful arrangements mixing early Baroque counterpoint harmonies with traditional Kabalat Shabbat songs. It was impossible not to feel the energy of the group as the Sabbath sun set over the ancient city of gold and the voices of song summoned the eternal spirits of our people.

After that, I truly felt in the spirit of Shabbat. The ideal of letting go of all work and constrictive troubles of the week and embracing a 24-hour celebration of life. By the time we reached the prayer section of the Wailing Wall it was already filled with hundreds of people singing and praying. It really "baked my cookies" to think that the women were separated from the men, but as I got closer to the whole scene, I could feel the brotherhood and sisterhood from each section. It felt good to sing and dance with my fellow men. There was a schmorgesbord of different types of Jews each with their own podium and prayer group. At first, I felt a bit inferior of the Chassidic Jews with their black suites and hanging side burns, but one quick look at the Islam golden dome of the rock towering above the Wall, and I was reminded that we all wanted the same thing. Me, the Chassidim, the Muslims and all the people of the earth. We were all on our own personal path to find more out of life spiritually, and there is no right or wrong way of achieving this. Every single person has their own special religion unto themselves, and we all must follow the path that feels right.

As I approached the Wall I felt energized. I walked over to it, found my favorite stone, and rested my forehead up against it like a newborn nestled in his mother's breast. There, I was a thousand miles away from America clinging to a limestone block, and yet I was home. Every single prayer of desperation and joy ever made at that spot surged through me. Different songs being sung from every direction all weaved into a perfect harmony that danced on my soul. Time seemed as if it didn't really exist. For a moment I became aware that a part of me had been there before I was born. Now I know what the mayor meant by the oneness of the Jewish people that transcends time, which only seems to separate the generations. It was then that I decided to kindle that spark, to contribute to the eternal flame that I new feel more a part of. This religion may seem old and outdated, but when you realize that time does not change the wisdom of our ancestors, you can discover a whole new world in yourself that seemed once unattainable.

Aaron Philmas is a UMass student and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

The opening of my eyes

Day 3
December 26, 1996

We just visited the Nazareth Illit Absorption Center. Absorption centers are places set up by the United Jewish Appeal to assist new immigrants in adjusting and integrating into mainstream Israeli life by learning Hebrew as well as israeli history and culture. Here, we learned how this system works and met some of the residents of the center.

The five residents we met were 16 and 17-year-old men and women from the former Soviet Union who had immigrated to Israel three months earlier. They told us about how they came from Russia and the Ukraine, leaving their families behind. They planned to study in the center for about a year, and go to college the following year.

I was struck by how these people seemed both so youthful and so adult. At times I was amazed that they were only two years younger than me. They appeared awkward and uncomfortable; they shifted their weight around when they talked, kept their eyes averted, giggled nervously and shrugged their shoulders. Yet they had done something that many adults could not do. They had come to Israel all by themselves, without any support from their families. They expressed strong opinions and had made clear decisions about courses of study and why they were there — to get out of their countries. The strength and clarity of their views and actions made me realize that Judaism is something powerful that we often take for granted in the United States. People from other nations who don't have the freedom to practice their religion will go to drastic measures, even uprooting themselves from their young sheltered lives, in order to pray in peace.

Later we shifted gears by going to a Seminar Center for a debriefing about Arab-Israeli relations. A woman whose work dealt with getting Arab and Israeli youth together talked to us. She said that her goal was to get the young people together so that they could discuss the situation and reach some kind of understanding. She told us that the Arab and Israeli students may not leave the sessions arm in arm, but they often did leave together. She went over some geographical and historical issues surrounding the problem so we would have a better understanding of the situation before we met with Arabs for discussion.

A bus took us to the home of an Arab-Israeli. About 20 of us went to meet and talk to a young Palestinian Arab woman named Abeer. She is a 21-year-old junior high school English teacher. We sat around her living room on low couches while her mother graciously brought us refreshments. Her mother had 13 children, the oldest is 37, the youngest is 17, and many more grandchildren playing in the house.

We asked Abeer her perspective on Arab-Israeli relations. First, someone asked if there was discrimination against the Palestinians. She answered yes, that the budget for the Arab communities was low, that her school does not have the same resources that a Jewish school might have. Also, she said, that on job applications it is asked if you have served in the army, and if you have not then you are at a disadvantage. I asked her if Arabs could be in the army. "Yes," she said, "but I don't want to because I have friends and relatives in Arab countries that I would be fighting against."

We discussed many issues surrounding Palestinian- Israeli relations, American policy, Muslim beliefs, Jewish beliefs and customs. Abeer did not convince me of her position; I disagreed with a lot of her beliefs. It was a start though. It was interesting to meet an Arab woman who was about my age and hear her point of view. It shed some insight on just how complicated and multifaceted the whole struggle is.

After this, we went to an ancient synagogue in Jerusalem for a short prayer service. Later we signed the Jerusalem 3000 scroll. At night we spent time in downtown Jerusalem. It was a great day: informational and educational. The day, and the whole trip, was an incredible experience. It strengthened and affirmed my identity as a Jew and a Zionist. It made me realize that these are things to be proud of, and if necessary, fight for. They involve loving Judaism and believing in the need for a Jewish homeland.

Caroline Sunshine is a UMass student and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

Bringing it all home

Day 5
December 28, 1996

We were able to sleep in today — 7:45 a.m.! My original expectation of the bike tour was that we would be traveling around Israel, meaning AROUND the actual city of Jerusalem, but it turned out differently. We kept driving and driving, into the mountains, past farms, cows, curves in the road and so on. It looked like we were really going to go around the entire city of Jerusalem. It was beautiful. This was the scene that I visualized when I thought of Israel, this is what I remember now. Eighty of us sped down the dirt paths trying to take in the picture while also avoiding the rocks ahead of us. Enduring only a few minor cuts and scrapes, a couple of flat tires and some broken chains, we finished the tour. I only stopped once, halfway through the expedition, because I was still feeling sick from the day before. We returned to the hotel at about...

At around 4 p.m. we were able to sign up for four different class subjects: "Shabbat 101," "Israeli Women," "Jewish Mysticism" and "Bringing Israel back to Campus." I chose this last one. It was a group of 10 students. There were four staff leaders, including UMass' own Kim Richman. Three of the six students were also from UMass. The other three were from small colleges. We began by expressing our feeling about the trip so far. Israel and how we would be able to connect these topics with our campus lives. Once again the passion for Israel circulated throughout the group. Each individual had their own way of saying that a piece of their heart was here in Israel. This mission was one of the staff members' eighth visit to the country. She said that each visit is different and that each visit becomes more intense. This being my second visit, I can share that feeling already. It's like a complicated drawing or prism of some kind, you see something new every time you look at it. This is something you really have to feel yourself, it can't even be explained. I know it sounds cliche, but it's true. The atmosphere was full of energy. Each moment of the trip, whether it was internal or external, the energy was there. I not only feel comfortable here, but I feel welcome and am continuously encouraged to stay or to revisit.

After exploring each others' thoughts on Israel, we talked about each campus. We discussed what Israel oriented activities and committees exist and what needs to be implemented. I learned that UMass already has several programs that involve Israeli-American relations: the Student Alliance for Israel (SAFI), the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC), an Israeli cafe night at least once a semester and Israeli folk dancing once a week. One of the women in the group was representing Curry College near Boston, which has about 12 students active in their Hillel, three of whom do most of the work. There was a lot of motivation in the air and the ideas were flowing. Two of the group leaders, both post graduate workers of Hillels, gave us a lot of suggestions, numbers to call for summer, winter, undergraduate and graduate programs in Israel. They suggested that we start up a UJA committee, hold more movie nights and maybe even have a Jewish film festival.

Following the seminars was a light dairy dinner and a havdalah service to end the Shabbat. All 360 of us were sitting on the floor of a big, cold room with the six person a capella group who had been accompanying us during meals while in Jerusalem. Again, that same warm, comforting feeling energized the room. We were singing together with our arms around the people next to us. Hatikva, the song Israel owns as its national anthem, topped off the feeling. I love that song. It was the perfect way to close the day and Shabbat.

Kim Denniss is a UMass student and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

Israel, 27 University students join 360 others abroad

Catching my attention

Day 6
December 29, 1996

Although I went to bed late Saturday after a night on the town, I awoke early. I quickly used the bathroom to prepare for the day's main event — quite possibly the most exciting part of the trip, second only to the Wailing Wall.

As I ran out the door to breakfast, I grabbed my reporter's notebook because I wanted to try to write as much as possible while he spoke. I rushed through breakfast, eating simple and fast foods like croissants. I spent little time talking because I wanted a good seat. I left the dining room about 15 minutes after arriving, and headed for the hall.

I stood in a long line with other anxious students, and a few apathetic ones. However, the few unconcerned souls could not resist the electricity the others felt. The excitement was almost as high as the moment our plane left Newark when students in the back began to clap and cheer.

Finally I reached the entranceway to the hall where Israel's equivalent to the Secret Service ran us through metal detectors. I breezed right through, and I entered the hall filled with 400 chairs. I surveyed the room, and spotted a lone seat near a few other UMass students in the third row. I went over and took a seat — luckily it wasn't reserved.

I started talking with the students around me. We all wanted to know how the United Jewish Appeal (UJA) picked the 30 students who got to meet him. No one from UMass knew, but a URI student behind me ventured a guess that later turned out to be close to the truth. However, I was more disturbed with the UJA's staging of a Q&A period. Three students, none of which met him, got to ask him one question from a list of pre-approved questions. This left a bad taste in my mouth. Why only three? Why not one from each bus? Who were these three people? Why did they even tell us about these staged questions? Ironically enough I was told later in the day that one of those three students decided to ask the big guy his own question, but what this student did not know was it was the third person's question.

Before we could finish our discussion, the lights dimmed and rose again to grab our attention. Everyone quieted down. Finally, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu entered the hall, and took to the platform. A UJA spokesman took the stage and introduced the prime minister.

Netanyahu welcomed us and began to speak about the history of the Jewish people and the nation of Israel. "We have undergone the greatest odyssey of any people," he said in perfect American English.

He was referring to tragedies such as the Inquisition, pogroms and worst of all, the Holocaust. About 50 years ago we, the Jewish nation, had no control over our destiny. However, "Israel is the guarantor of the future of Judaism," he told 360 American college students. Netanyahu commanded our attention better than most professors.

He briefly discussed the anti-Semitism that ran rampant in Europe for centuries. Then he paused, and asked us "are you familiar with Theodore Herzl?" A person outside the hall probably heard a resounding yes. He smiled and asked us if we were familiar with the other founders of Zionism, but there were less yeses. While talking about Herzl he briefly touched upon the Dreyfus Affair. A group of officers in the French Army framed Alfred Dreyfus, a Jew who was an officer in the French army, for selling secrets to the Germans in an attempt to cover up their covert operations. This case led Herzl to realize that unless Jews have their own nation, we will forever remain at the whim of other nations hence the birth of Zionism.

Herzl argued that there was a race between anti-Semitism and Zionism, and Zionism was losing, explained Netanyahu. The reign of international anti-Semitism culminated in the Holocaust. Before the Shoah, there were 18 million Jews worldwide, so the Nazis succeeded in wiping out a third of the population, he told us. Conservative estimates in the late 1940s suggested that today hudaism would be 24 million strong, but the truth is we remain at 12 million. He implored us to marry Jewish and continue the future of hudaism.

Then he changed the subject to aliyah, emigration to Israel. "I want the new immigrants to come from you," he said. He proudly pointed to the economic statistic that Giora, our tour guide, always mentioned. Israel's economy has the same GDP per capita as England, but with a smaller labor force because all men between 18 and 21 and all women 18 to 20 are in the army.

"Israel is the Silicone Valley of the Eastern Hemisphere," Netanyahu said. "We have the second most computer start ups in the world — only behind the United States."

He segued from economic development to the threat of international terrorism. Terrorism threatens the staggering growth of the Israeli economy. "This is the end of an era where Israel gives and Arabs receive," Netanyahu said. "We are under a huge propaganda campaign where we are vilified as those who are against peace. We must bring the truth out because a lie told often enough becomes a 'truth.'"

I took heed of this, and realized he was right. Every day the American press vilifies Netanyahu and Israel ignoring the abuses that authoritarian regimes in the Middle East commit against their people. From magazines like Time, to television like CNN, one can always find a biased story masquerading as straight news about Israel.

He concluded his speech by telling us to "take possession of your future" whether you choose to make aliyah or simply live a Jewish life in the Diaspora.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

UMass students, Aaron Philmas and Cheryl Alper, celebrate in the desert.

Happy New Year's, Tel Aviv

Day 8
December 31, 1996

The Hyatt, a memory of glamour and richness, beachlined on the Dead Sea, balconies, exquisite rooms, sizzling warm tropical pools and overflowing tables filled with food your stomach only dreams about. We were leaving our cuisine of ecstasy. First though, we traveled in the early hours of day to the lowest point on earth, the floatable water of the Dead Sea. Those of us that were brave enough to bare the cold waters instantly bobbed to the top of the salty liquid like inflatable toys. We leisurely floated around in absolute amazement. The salt is a healing power for open wounds and therefore there is excruciating pain when even the tiniest scratch comes in contact with it. Breakfast was excellent, you never wanted to stop eating. We then left the Hyatt and headed off to Masada.

There she stood, high and mighty, a fortress in her own statue. A quick glance and she resembles all the other rocky mountains of the Judean Desert. But she is different. Surrounding her are military camps and paths traveling to her summit. We traveled in fashion, cable cars carried us to the top so that we could discover the mysteries and truths of Masada. There at the top was a magnificent view of the Dead Sea and Judean Desert. King Herod's deserted kingdom spread out over the summit and is where the Jews, who once inhabited the mountain, lived. The Jews numbered slightly less than a thousand, a small pittance to the 10,000 Roman soldiers hovering along the hill. The Jews had the advantage of fighting from the summit. They also had the hearts of faith and spirit and would fight to the end. The Romans had their slaves build a trail, the Roman Path up the side of Masada. The Jews worked endlessly to resist the power. After three long years of fighting, their defeat was approaching as the Romans had catapulted their stone fortress walls and burnt down their wooden wall. As the 10,000 soldiers climbed up Masada to victory, the 1,000 untrained and unarmed Jews decided the next step of action. They knew that once conquered, the women and children would be raped and beaten and all would become slaves to the Roman empire. They decided collectively that they would rather die collectively as sovereign people. When the Romans finally reached Masada they found 966 Jews dead. The Jews had lived and died as free people. The Romans were amazed at their enemies' courage and were silent in respect for these people who had died for freedom.

After seeing the endless dryness of the desert, we traveled to the beautiful oasis of Ein Gedhi. This is one of the most beautiful national parks in the world. Water whistled through walls of stone and waterfalls tumbled over the hot rocks. Animals, from ibes to otters, roamed their havun in the desert. After capturing the tranquility, beauty and wetness of Ein Gedhi, our group took a break to discuss the trip so far. We shared our feelings and thoughts of how we have grown through our trip. The group was really able to communicate and share with one another our individual impressions and experiences.

A couple hours later, we arrived in Tel Aviv to celebrate New Year's Eve. We chanted a tune, "New Year's Eve in Tel Aviv, Alcohol we will receive." Our trip had been so great that everyone thought that New Year's would top it off before we had to return to the States. To our dismay, the Israelis didn't celebrate New Year's, since they celebrate the Jewish New Year. We finally found a group dancing and singing in the street and we joined in and began shouting with glee, "Happy New Year!" They didn't like us and asked us to leave. We found out later that it was an anti- New Year's party because America's New Year also falls on Sylvester's Day, a day when Jews were burned at the stake in Turkey. Later, as midnight approached, several of us stood at a major intersection and shouted the countdown. We ran through hundreds of people screaming a welcome to the New Year. The Israelis just looked at the obnoxious Americans and shook their heads or laughed. We tried to go to many bars but most of them had private parties, kicked us out or were filled with junior high school kids. The night was filled with visiting random bars, traveling the shore of the Mediterranean and just doing crazy things. It was different than the common New Year's, but it was a memorable adventure.

Rachel Kobey is a UMass student and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

Jerusalem's mayor, Ehud Olmert, speaks to the 360 students who are part of the UJA mission.

Digging for history

Day 7
December 30, 1996

We are back on the bus. I settled into my seat next to the window. Mr. Tour Guide starts to tell us a story about the land we are driving through. My mind is blocking him out as I observe the grass-covered mountains.

We are headed toward Bet Guvrin National Parks and Caves. I had never participated in an archaeological dig before. Then again, a girl from New York City usually doesn't get that chance.

When we arrived at the park, all we could see was these enormous mountains covered with rocks and patches of grass. We are further south now and that must account for the decline in grassy areas. We met our guide for the dig and he told us about the history of the caves we would be exploring. They are 3000 years old and were occupied since 100–200 C.E. The caves were used as a burial site, housing and places of refuge.

First, we climbed down into a cave where we assisted the resident archaeologists. We learned the basics on how to dig for pottery and bones that are buried in the damp dirt. Using a tool, we each took a spot in the cave and started to dig. I found some neat pieces of pottery and a bird's leg. I liked the fact that we were participating in a big project to learn about the past. It was fitting to learn about that in Israel, since I was there to learn about my ancestors.

When we went back up into open air, we learned how to sift out all of the dirt and dust and separate the pieces of pottery that we dug up. Next it was on to our exploration of the caves.

In order to enter these caves, we had to crouch down and slide on our butts. Then, we had to twist our bodies around so that we were lying on our stomach, face first. It was after five minutes of this that we arrived in the center of the cave.

It was a dark, damp room. I took it upon myself to do some exploring on my own. What I found was that we were in a huge cave surrounded by clay. I tried to imagine what it would have been like to spend a good portion of the day underground in the cave. When we moved to the exit I stayed behind a few people and listened to the silence that surrounded us. It was amazing. I guess that is one of the reasons why this trip was so personal to me. I did what I wanted to and interpreted each situation so that it had more of a personal feel to me.

Upon leaving, we were able to take some souvenirs with us. Since my brother wanted something ancient, I dug through piles of pottery until I found some interesting pieces.

We ate dinner at a Bedouin tent. The Bedouins are nomads who live in the desert. They travel from place to place following their livestock. All of the buses met there.

On the ride to the tent I fell asleep, but when I woke up I was in complete amazement. I had never been to the desert before. I always pictured it to be flat land with sand blowing across it. This was different. Although it was dark I was still able to make out the outlines of the mountains that covered the land. They were like nothing I had ever seen. When I got off the bus, all I could to was stare up at the stars. There weren't any lights from a nearby city to overpower them. Millions and millions of stars shone perfectly in the sky.

The path to the tent was lit up with candles. Ahead of me were these huge tents and all I could hear was drumming and cheering.

When I entered the tent I was greeted warmly and sat down at a low table. The chairs were low and not very comfortable, so I opted to sit on the floor. We were served traditional foods. The table was adorned with dishes of humus, tahini, cucumber salad and the greatest pita bread I have ever tasted. The main course was chicken and rice. As we were being served, we were told of the Bedouin eating customs. In their culture it is customary to eat with three fingers. If a person doesn't, it's considered rude by their host. We were entertained by a group of really good musicians and after we finished eating we were allowed to go up and join them. I picked up a bongo and started jamming with the band. On the other side of the tent, a few men and some students were dancing.

At the same time that the dancing was going on, coffee was being served. Coffee also has a large role in Bedouin culture. When a person comes to ask something from a member of another tent they are served 3 cups of coffee. The first 2 are served while there is some light talk going on. By the time that the third cup is served, the visitor must state their reason for their visit.

I had a really fun day. I love being able to search for things from the past. I also enjoyed the time that I spent with the Bedouins. It was a great experience being part of another culture, even if it was only for one night. I can't wait to wake up tomorrow morning and see the mountains and the desert under the sun. I will probably be up for a while because of all the coffee that I drank, but it was definitely worth it.

Cheryl Alper is a UMass student and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

The first day and the last

Day 9 & 10
January 1 & 2, 1997

It is the first day of the New Year, but it is also the last day of our mission to Israel. I went through the normal motions today that have been prevalent throughout the trip. I got up, took a shower, ate breakfast. I even got on another bus for another tour. Hovering over this normality was a great sense of closure to our time here in the state of Israel. I guess at the end of all trips this feeling is personified in the actions of getting ready to go home. In addition to the time I spent hearing from more tour guides and Israeli professionals, I also packed up some of my clothes, looked over my plane ticket and went to a discussion that summed up our final thoughts on this fantastic experience.

This last day began with one final tour, this time of Tel Aviv. We all piled on the bus and looked out the window as we were told about this city, which is filled with brothels and embassies. Compared to the other places that we went to, Tel Aviv was certainly the least holy and most run down. Even though it is set on the beautiful Mediterranean coast, the buildings are falling apart and some have even been destructed by bombings. There is also an eerie feeling when passing near a train with yellow stars. This is where Yitzhak Rabin was killed more than a year ago. This area is marked quite obviously with a chalked portrait of the former Prime Minister and several other tributes marked in Hebrew graffiti. This particular site was most interesting to me because of the differences in the origins of it. The other places were built out of necessity, commission or earth indolence. This was the first place that was made by the people who loved their martyred leader.

The rest of the day went as most final days of trips do. We ate our final meals, went on our final bus trip and had one last conversation with our tour guide. We got on our planes and left the land of milk and honey to re-enter the land of hamburgers and fries. Although some of us stayed to enjoy more of paradise, I had to go home. I left quite satisfied, knowing that I had truly felt the grasp of Israel.

Dan Friedman is a UMass student and was a participant on the UJA mission to Israel.

Her outstretched hand

Our path resting in broken rubble under layers of our lives,
sifting for what they can't find of civilizations forced behind.
Growing within watching a still wall,
crying inside that forces your lap to fall.
The sunsets watched and the rises we missed,
friends became closer, some even kissed.
Searching for reasons, happiness or content
we put it aside, and giggled under a Bedouin tent.
The crash of the sea settling below,
the impact Israel had — there was no way to know.
No way to expect realizations of life to be made or conclusions to be spoken.
This awesome emotion causing promises to loves
at home to be broken Feelings this strong wrapped around B-52's.
our current events making daily world news.
History revisited no less than 50 years before, hurting and isolation at the Yad Vashem tour
so I write of Israel as a change in my life promising now to become only a Jewish man's wife.
We laugh, we pray, we teach, we hope some more
that our generation of next will know not to ignore
when battles are fought in a far off land remember that Israel offers us
her outstretched hand.

J. M. Horowitz is a UMass student and was a participant of the UJA mission to Israel.

Rodman returns, Strem threatens banishment

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dennis Rodman, suspended by the NBA since kicking a cameraman on Jan. 15, was reinstated by the league yesterday and will return to the Chicago Bulls on Feb. 11.

However, NBA commissioner David Stern warned that the Bulls star could face banishment from the league if he persists in such conduct.

Rodman's agent, Dwight Manley, said that his client, as a gesture of appreciation to his fans, will play his first 11 games after the suspension "for free, and donate the money on behalf of himself and the Bulls to 11 assorted charities."

The suspension will have lasted 11 games, costing Rodman more than $1 million in salary and incentives. Rodman is eligible to play against the Charlotte Hornets, the Bulls' first game after the All-Star break.

Manley, speaking from his office in Newport Beach, Calif., said the donation by Rodman will total more than $1 million.

He added that Rodman will probably watch tonight's Bulls-Lakers game at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif. — the 11th and final game of the suspension — on television at Manley's house. Rodman, who had been ordered to undergo counseling during his suspension, met Stern last Friday to make his case for reinstatement.

"I am satisfied that Dennis recognizes that his conduct in the Minnesota game was unacceptable," Stern said.

"Dennis told me that while he does not plan to change the way he plays the game, he will conform his conduct on the playing court to acceptable standards, and he knows that any further incidents of this nature may end his career in the NBA."

Also at the Jan. 31 meeting was Dr. Lloyd Baccus, medical director of the league's player assistance program.

"What the commissioner wanted was professional input in reaching his decision and the doctor was able to provide that," NBA spokesman Brian McIntyre said.

It was not clear whether Rodman had actually undergone the counseling ordered by Stern.

"I'm glad that the meeting proved fruitful with the commissioner last week, and that we can put this incident behind us," Manley said.

When asked why Rodman decided to make the charitable donation, Manley said, "Because he'll be the first person to say, 'I deserve more money and pay me more money,' and when he makes a mistake, he'll be the first person to say, 'I don't deserve the money,' and he wants to thank his fans for sticking with him.

"It's a first," Manley added. "Whereas sports is so wrapped up in money all the time, he wants to make a statement that Dennis Rodman plays from his heart and not from his wallet, and he's out there with one intention, and that's to win.

"The best way to show that is giving up money not by order, but by choice."

Manley said Rodman will donate his regular-game salary, not his deferred money, and that the suspension plus the donated money will total "well over $1 million."

"He's chomping at the bit" to return to the Bulls, Manley said.

Rodman, whose body piercings, tattoos, rainbow hairstyles and crossdressing have drawn as much attention as his rebounding prowess, has been suspended nine times since 1992 and three times since last March. During this suspension, the Bulls had an 8-1 record.

Rodman, who has led the league in rebounding the last five years, had been fined and suspended without pay after he kicked courtside cameraman Eugene Amos during a game between the Bulls and Minnesota Timberwolves.

After he was suspended Jan. 17, Rodman reached an out-of-court settlement with Amos, agreeing to pay him $200,000.

Tyson–Holyfield rematch set for May

By Ed Schuyler
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Same name, different fighter, same result. That's how Evander Holyfield views his May 3 rematch against Mike Tyson.

"I don't look for the Tyson I fought Nov. 9," Holyfield said Monday. "But don't look for the same Holyfield either. I'll be better. I'm confident that I can go out and do the same thing."

"I hope to do better next time... I promise," Tyson said in a seven-second address at a news conference that formally announced the rematch at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas.

During a question-and-answer session later, however, Tyson said, "I'm going to win the title for a third time. I just had a bad night. I'm the best fighter in the world. If he beats me this time, he'll beat me at the best I've ever been. I'm looking for a knockout."

Tyson was a 3-1 favorite at the MGM Grand sports book to regain the WBA heavyweight title. He was a 7-1 choice when he was stopped in the 10th round by Holyfield at the Grand in November.

One of Tyson's problems in preparing for the first fight, co-manager John Horne said, was that most saw Holyfield "as no real threat to Mike Tyson. Nobody took him seriously."

Richie Giachetti has since replaced Jay Bright as Tyson's trainer.

There was a lot of trash talk by the Tyson camp at a New York news conference before the first fight. Everyone was respectful Monday.

"This is the type of atmosphere a Tyson-Holyfield fight is supposed to bring," promoter Don King said.

Tyson thanked Holyfield for giving him the chance. Holyfield thanked Tyson for having given him a chance so that he could give Tyson a chance.

"The Sound and the Fury" is what King is calling the rematch. At times Monday, it seemed a better name might be "Hearts and Flowers."

Whatever anyone chooses to call it, it's a major fight. The 34-year-old Holyfield, who got $11 million in November, will get at least $35 million in May. Tyson, who made $30 million in the first fight, will get at least $20 million for the rematch.

A Tyson victory in the pay-per-view match would set up a lucrative rematch.

The most intriguing aspect of the fight, however, is what happens to Tyson's career should he lose.

"You tell me," Tyson said.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

crossing the line

FEB. 8th
PAULY SHORE
comedy CONNECTION
(617)248•9700
"Encino Men," "Bio-Dome," "Jerry Buty," "Son-in-Law" & MTV's "Totally Pauly"
EVERY THURSDAY!
FRANK SANTOS
"The R-Rated Hypnotist"

THE BOLTWOOD PROJECT™
A Student/Comminity Service Learning Program*
(*an RSO and Dept. of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning sponsored program)
You Can Earn 1-2 Credits
Recruitment Nights
(Attend one session - Required for all Applicants!!!)
SPRING SEMESTER '97
6:30 PM
(Note: Prompt starting time)
• Feb 3 Mon Campus Center Aud. or
• Feb 4 Tues. CC Room 163 or
• Feb 5 Wed. Campus Center Aud.
Assignment notification, Feb. 6th (Thurs.) at Boltwood table on Campus Center Concourse.
Volunteer while earning credit
Come and Learn How!!!
Your life will NEVER be the same!

DESIGN INVENT CREATE
Use your EDUCATION in ways you never thought possible. DESIGN a new software program. MARKET the next remote access product. CREATE products that fit in the palm of your hand. U.S. Robotics gives entry-level sales professionals MEANINGFUL experience. (You may be new, but your VALUABLE contributions are encouraged, and expected.)
U.S. Robotics is the LEADER in information ACCESS. We make PRODUCTS that connect people with INFORMATION — anytime, anywhere. We hire SALES PEOPLE — with DEGREES in marketing, business, sciences and liberal arts.
Now that you know more about US, we'd like to know more about YOU.
Come see us at the
Career Fair
February 12
If you are unable to stop by, send your resume to: U.S. Robotics, College Relations, 7770 N. Frontage Rd., Skokie, IL 60077, or e-mail: resumes@usr.com We are an equal OPPORTUNITY employer m/f/d/v.
There are NO limits.
U.S.Robotics
The Intelligent Choice In Information Access
HTTP://WWW.USR.COM

How To Get Ahead Faster
Join the growth at Standard Register, a leader in providing information management solutions to businesses around the globe. As a $900 million Fortune 1000 leader, we seek energetic college grads with a drive to succeed to join our growth in New England.
Opportunities in the New Hampshire and Maine area
• Sales Reps - New Hampshire: Excellent earnings potential, valuable business experience, opportunities for advancement. Bachelor's degree required, sales experience a plus. We offer salary plus incentive. Recent grads encouraged to apply!
• Customer Service Reps: Interact with customers and provide responsive service to enhance sale of SR products. Prefer Associate's degree or equivalent experience; proficiency with Windows for PC and excellent communication/interpersonal skills.
• Forms Designer: We seek a self-starter with excellent interpersonal skills for forms design, composition and graphics work. Proficiency with Windows design tools a must. Associate's degree or formal training/certificate or equivalent work experience preferred. Pre-press and F3 experience preferred.
Other Sales Opportunities Throughout the NE Area
We offer excellent compensation and comprehensive benefits package in a team-oriented environment. Please send resume and cover letter indicating position and geographic preference to: Human Resources Dept., Attn: John Brennan, 600 Albany St., P.O. Box 1167, Dayton, OH 45408. Equal Opportunity Employer, m/f/d/v. Visit our web site http://www.sdreg.com
STANDARD REGISTER
INNOVATIVE DOCUMENTS & SYSTEMS

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs, it's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5ea. after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, FEB 9

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT...
SHAB
Gain Experience in Administrative Aspects of Health Care
Sponsor Health Promotion Events
Come join the Student Health Advisory Board
Informational meeting:
Wed. February 5, 5:30 -6:30pm
University Health Services Rm. 304
For more info call Tamara at the Health Education Office 577-5181

Take a Free Test Drive
GMAT GRE LSAT MCAT
If you took the test today, how would you score? Come find out.
• Take a 2½- or 3-hour practice test that's just like the real thing.
• Receive a computer analysis of your results.
• Get proven test taking strategies.
Call today to reserve your seat!
Saturday and Sunday Classes Forming Soon!
KAPLAN
Bring a friend and win a prize

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA • 253-3539
!! TREADMILLS !!

WANTED
WIRED, CRAZED, PASSIONATE, CREATIVE
MULTIMEDIA PROGRAMMERS
NETWORK ENGINEERS, HACKERS, PHOTOGS, VIDEOGRAPHERS
LEAN & MEAN 3 YEAR OLD FIRM SEEKS FULL & PART-TIME HELP, EVENING
PASSION. But NO EXPERIENCE? CONTACT US!
VISION MULTIMEDIA
http://www.visionmm.com
please include: resume, letter of interest, work, reel
VISION MULTIMEDIA
P.O. Box 776
Amherst, MA 01004
attn. Tom Bellew
benning@visionmm.com

■ Sox

continued from page 12

I don't know about you, but, being a local boy, if I had the chance to play baseball for the Red Sox for $750,000 or to play for the Pittsburgh Pirates for $1.2, I would definitely take the first choice. But why don't other people think this way?

Shaquille O'Neal had something great going for him in Orlando, yet he chose the money in Los Angeles over the potential dynasty with Penny and the rest of the Magic.

John Wetteland was the best closer in baseball last year and played for the World Champion New York Yankees, statistically the best baseball organization to ever have the pride to wear pin-striped pajamas on the diamond, and yet he leaves to join Chuck Norris and the rest of the Texas Rangers.

So, to change my tune, maybe Jim Corsi made the right decision. He took less money to play for the Red Sox (a team he has been waiting to play for since he was old enough to wear the leather and spit on the rubber) instead of resigning with Oakland.

My problem with this whole thing is that the Red Sox will make such a big deal about this guy, when the man he is supposed to set up for in the final innings, Heathcliff Slocumb, needs at least a three run advantage everytime he comes into the game to make a save. I mean how many times did Slocumb either blow a save opportunity or just get by with a save after allowing a run or two, because the lead was big enough when he came into the game?

Even though help is needed in the closing position, Corsi is no spring chicken. Here is a little history about our new soon to be hall of famer. He was signed back in 1982 by the Yankees. The Red Sox had him twice but didn't like him at that time and released him (Bill Ranford ring a bell?) Then finally the Marlins acquired him for the '92 season, when he went 4–2 with a 1.43 ERA.

Wonderful, he's the best! No one has ever pitched better! He will save the Sox, right?! Wrong! In the last four seasons he has been plagued with injuries. What else is new? First, a shoulder injury with the Marlins which took two surgeries to correct. Then, he hurt a more vital area, the groin, last year and spent much of the year rehabilitating.

So the Red Sox have newly acquired pitchers in Steve Avery and Jim Corsi, who both have proven to be quality players to stick on the mound, but have had their share of injuries. Why do I get the feeling that every veteran baseball player ever to have an injury will play at least one game for Boston in their career, then eventually get traded because they can't produce for us, and then go on to another team and have great years? Where are Danny Darwin and Mike Boddicker when you need them?

Maybe I have the wrong attitude. Maybe this is all a bunch of hogwash and the Red Sox will be fine. Maybe Steve Avery (a southpaw) won't allow Juan Gonzalez to hit a few round-trippers over the Green Monster. Maybe Ted Williams will go down to Fort Meyers this Spring and fix all of the Sox's hitting problems. Maybe the bathrooms in Baker will be sparkling clean for me when I return today. Anything can happen.

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian Staff Member.

Parcells Jets off to New York, questions still remain

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO — At least Pete Carroll, the Patriots new coach, knows Bill Belichick won't be his defensive coordinator. That was one of the few certainties yesterday as the intrigue intensified in the New York Jets' machinations to slip Bill Parcells into their coach's job next Feb. 1, if not sooner.

While New England hired three assistants, the Jets announced that Belichick, the Patriots' assistant head coach last season, would be their interim coach until Parcells becomes available. That could happen any time Patriots owner Robert Kraft and the Jets agree on compensation. If they don't, Parcells won't be free to coach another NFL team without New England's permission until next Feb. 1.

The Jets' announcement yesterday that Parcells would be a consultant until becoming coach raised eyebrows, and the NFL announced that NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue would review the dispute if asked by the Patriots.

The Patriots issued a statement yesterday, saying "The 'so-called' consulting agreement is a transparent farce and the latest in a series of actions by the New York Jets and Bill Parcells, which further demonstrates it has been their intention all along to have Bill become head coach of the Jets for the 1997 season.

"We will immediately ask Commissioner Tagliabue to review this agreement between the Jets and Bill Parcells to determine if there has been a violation of Parcells' agreement with the Patriots and the Commissioner's ruling last week, which prevents him from serving in this de facto coaching position for another NFL team," it said.

The league had said last Wednesday that Tagliabue ruled an amendment to Parcells' contract with the Patriots giving that team "an exclusive option on Parcells' services for the 1997 season." Tagliabue's ruling also cited a provision in that January 1996 amendment that if Parcells wants to continue as "an NFL head football coach or other comparable position" between Feb. 1, 1997 and Jan. 31, 1998 and the Patriots want him, then both sides agree to extend the contract, which expired at midnight last Friday, through next season.

Jets president Steve Gutman said at a news conference in Hempstead, N.Y., that the ruling allowed Parcells to serve as a consultant. Parcells had announced last Friday he didn't want to stay with the Patriots and was replaced Monday by Carroll, San Francisco's defensive coordinator.

Kraft, who insisted the top pick in April's draft must be part of any compensation, had no comment on the Jets moves.

He has said the Patriots would benefit from not having Parcells coach a division rival next season even if it meant New England would get no compensation if he became coach next Feb. 1.

Kraft said he was concerned Parcells would take to the Jets several Patriots assistant coaches familiar with New England players.

■ NHL

continued from page 12

So, we'll see...

• I hate to tread over stomped upon ground, but the 'Lanche ain't realin' too badly from the loss of last season's Conn Smythe award winner, Joe Sakic. The All-World star took a skate in the back of the leg against Philadelphia, ripping through all of his gear and consequently, knocking him out of the lineup.

Truthfully, I'm surprised that these kind of skate accidents don't occur more in the game. The skate can be a dangerous thing. You know, it is also called a blade?

When I was around 11–12 years old, me and my defensive linemate Malachi Crunch–ed one guy, and I ended up with a bloody gash from one side of my chest to the other. Needless to say, my coach almost puked after I stumbled back to the bench, and showed him my Monty Python–ian "flesh wound."

In the big league, some years back, one of the most gory sights in sports history evolved before a nationwide TV audience. Then–Buffalo goalie Clint Malarchuk collided with an opposing player, and took his skate across the jugular vein in his neck. If you can imagine the scene in The Holy Grail, where Graham Chapman bodily dismantles the Black Knight, then I really don't have to describe that horrible accident. Once again, needless to say, Malarchuk was never the same after his close brush with death.

All I know is that Sakic is lucky, and it'll be good to see him back in the Colorado lineup after a potentially career threatening accident.

• Why am I not surprised that Theoren Fleury wants to get out of the Calgary Flames lineup? They're on the playoff bubble, but truthfully, they stink as bad as the paper mills that surround their area. Sometimes, an administration can offer the shirt off their back to a player, and that player still wants to get out of town.

But what ever happened to team loyalty? Theo's gone with the wind...

Jorma Kansanen is Collegian columnist.

Place a safe bet with Collegian Classifieds

7pm, Feb 7th at the MULLINS CENTER University of Massachusetts Amherst
Division 1 Hockey East
UMass Hockey
VS
HOCKEY EAST
BOSTON UNIVERSITY
Pick up your tickets at:
☞ Curry Hicks Cage
☞ 'TIX' in the Student Union
☞ Hockey Table in the Campus Center
☞ At the Game
Be a Part of the Action

COME SEE WHAT THE FRATERNITIES OF UMASS HAVE TO OFFER YOU COME TO THE 18 Fraternities Will Be Present
FRATERNITY FORUM
Answering All of Your Questions About Greek Life at UMASS
Wednesday, February 5, 1997
7 - 9 pm at the Newman Center

Right Here Right Now!
The perfect opportunity has arrived for you to begin a career unparalleled by most other industries!
We're Ames. One of the dominant discount store chains in America, with more than $2 billion in sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the Northeast. And, we've recently been named the Connecticut Retail Merchants Association Retailer of the Year!
Assistant Buyer Training Program
Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where farsightedness and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 7-week training program for you, that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on-the-job training with a successful Buyer.
And because we're so dedicated to this program and your success, senior-level management will participate in the classroom training; and experienced Buyers and Divisional Merchandise Managers will work closely with you throughout all phases of your training.
Upon successful completion of the 7-week program, you will become an Assistant Buyer. Then, you'll work alongside a Buyer, assisting in the management of a $20 to $100 million business!
As an Assistant Buyer, you will continue to participate in ongoing developmental seminars, Business Analysis Group Workshops, and other training support programs...all designed to ultimately prepare you for a career in Buying.
We're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills.
If that's you, please come talk to us!
We'll be participating in the Career Fair at your college on:
Wednesday, February 12th
10am - 3pm
Contact your placement office for more detailed information or to schedule an interview.
Ames
Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian
fresh & fruity every day we've got it covered online

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

RUSH Theta Chi Feb. 3,4,5,6,10-12, 8-10pm. 549-9252

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton 1 bedroom apartment for rent starting the second week of Feb. Partially furnished. Take over lease Call Melissa 549-1081

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Jeep Grand Wagoneer runs great, needs minor repairs $1500 or B/O. Call Colin 256-8480

Mustang looks good, runs good $500. Call 665-9068

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers Wanted Apply in person between 3-5pm Pinocchio's, Amherst.

Summer Opportunities at Jewish Residential Camp One hour from Washington D.C. Spend your summer with a great bunch of Jewish teens. Positions available in Drama, A&C, Life guarding, Video/Photography, Sports, Ropes and Music. To arrange an interview, E-mail us at: capcamps@aol.com or call (301)468-2267. http://members.aol.com/capcamps

EMPLOYMENT

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a researching and publishing company)

Appointment Setters Hadley office has several openings in its calling center. No selling involved. Fun atmosphere. On bus-line. Up to $7-$10/hr Start work immediately Call 584-7696. Ask for Mr. Boone or Mr. Ball

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info. send resume and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188.

Teaching Substitute $6.25/hour. Hampshire Franklin Day Care Center, Route 63. Near Amherst-Leverett town line. 548-3674

PUBLIC RELATIONS/MARKETING STAFF

If you seek an ever-changing high-energy workplace, this may be the job for you. Hinsdale/Greyhound Park's simulcast betting capital of the Northeast, is looking for enthusiastic individuals experianced in Public Relations/Marketing/Promotions. Exciting work atmosphere, competitive salary, and benefits. Send confidential resume to Ron Algeri, GM, Hinsdale /Greyhound Park, Route 119, Hinsdale, NH 03451. F/PT Equal Opportunity Employer.

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krakow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680 ext. K50011

Wanted: Tour guides. Summer Counselors, Student Admissions Representatives. Applications available at the Admissions Center.

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available. Benefits. Summer or year round. (612)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

EMPLOYMENT

Outside Jobs- Now hiring National Parks, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting CO's benefits and Bonuses! Nationwide openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180 Eastern Europe/Asian Jobs- Live in Prague, Budapest, Tokyo, etc. Teaching simple conversational English. No languages/teaching exp. required (919)918-7767 ext. W180

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-9200

Sugarloaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus-line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery.

FOR SALE

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition. $200 Sean 546-5734

4 Jeep Tires- 30x9.50 R15LT Kelly Tires. Very good condition. $200 or B/O. Call Jennifer 548-8770

FOR SALE

Word Processer: Brother Whisper Writer WP-7550, Ink Jet Printer. Asking $299 or B/O. Bill 582-9175

MAC Plus excellent condition. CPU, monitor, keyboard, mouse, lots of software. $175. John 8-6358

Smith Corona WP compact, great condition. $150 or B/O Call 256-5470

Snowboard w/bindings 148GNU Dukester, brand new. 665-8680 CHEAP!

486 New Laptop $585, VGA Color Monitor $175, 105 Hard Drive $110 Steve 566-3324-2

FOUND

Found- Grey Fleece Pullover at Egan's ept. Saturday night, 2/1/97. May have been switched with mine by accident. Please call Keith at 546-4266 or Egan.

INTSRUCTION

Performing Arts Division offers group and private instruction in Music, Theater and Dance. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass (413)545-0519 for info.

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)668-4793

GORILLAGRAMS Valentinas, Birthdays, Roses, Balloons, Poems. Send the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call ahead for Valentine's Day. 256-0287

PERSONALS

"Wild Thing, I Think I Love You"- The Troggs, Sam Kinison, Free Love and Valentines at www.mainquad.com

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in two bedroom apt. On bus route. Available immediately $220 + utilities. Call 665-2197

One bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Available immediately On bus route. Sugarloaf Estates. Rent $263/394-1335. Females Only

One bedroom for rent in two bedroom apt. Call Taryn (508)682-5607

ROOMATE WANTED

Roommates wanted to share house in Ocean City, NJ for the summer. Call Sue at 546-0407

SERVICES

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs.

TRAVEL

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations. Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Intercampus Representatives. (800)327-6013. http://www.icpt.com

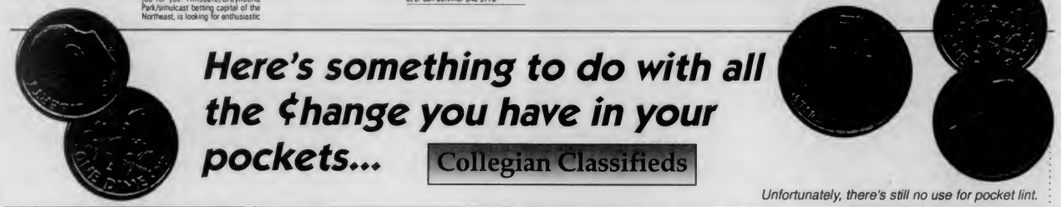
Best Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company. Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more. Call 256-8724

Jamaica- Spring Break Stay in beautiful Negril. Includes roundtrip airfare, hotel transfers, 7 nights lodging from $519. Don't take chances with other companies, go with the UMass Ski Club. Call 545-3437

TRAVEL

Europe $150. Caribe/Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations. Airhitch 1m. (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.isicom.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel. Free lowest price guarantee from $39. (800)426-7710. www.sunsplashtours.com



Spring Break- Nassau/Paradise Island, from $378. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize small group- earn free trips plus commissions! Call (800)9-Beach-1

WANTED TO RENT

Six bedroom house for the fall. Willing to take over summer lease Call 549-5362!

WANTED

Conservative students interested in starting a conservative student newspaper. Good writing skills and familiarity with Pagemaker software a plus. Call Paul at 6-0183 for more information.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order.
9. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
10. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates

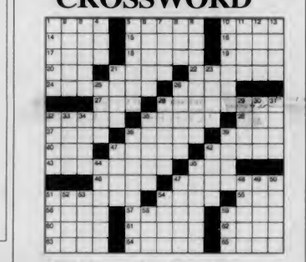
$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day



NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

T	E	E				J	O	I	N			B	A	M
R	E	D	D		G	E	S	T	E		W	A	R	Y
O	L	I	O		L	E	A	S	E		A	L	I	T
D	Y	E	S		I	R	K		D	A	N	I	S	H
			E	S	S		A	M	E	N	D
C	L	O	S	E	T	S		A	D	D	E	N	D	A
E	L	F		T	E	T	O	N		A	R	I	E	L
D	A	T	A		N	E	W	T	S		S	E	L	L
A	M	E	N	S		E	L	E	C	T		C	I	O
R	A	N	K	L	E	D		L	E	A	N	E	S	T
		L	A	S	S	O		N	N	E
A	C	C	E	P	T		H	O	T		W	A	V	Y
F	O	O	T		A	G	A	P	E		E	L	E	E
A	M	O	S		T	I	R	E	D		R	A	I	L
R	E	P		E	L	A	N			I	L	L

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Hankering
5. Cessation
10. Dragon from Hyrtacus
14. Sounds from the bleachers
15. Admiral Byrd book
16. Edom
17. Kin of Huh?
18. Syracusan pardoned by Dionysius
19. Comic Foxx
20. Process suffix
21. Potato features
22. Put away
24. Got dotty
26. Winter's Tale lord
27. Gerbil
28. Motivating
29. Muggy
30. Actor Eastwood
31. Tin Tin
32. Musical composition
35. Boutiques
36. Barrie's canine nursemaid
40. Distress signal
41. Calculus discoverer
42. Actor Robert
43. Recorders
46. Wrath
47. Prepared to golf
48. Climbers
51. Dresser-drawer nicety
54. Embarrassment for a host
55. Palach's antonym
56. Honolulu bowl
57. "__ a Gershwin tune..." (2 wds.)
58. Gerrit-banging word
59. Sun god
61. Study aids
62. New Year's Eve author
63. Nimrod
64. Poet Edgar
65. Creates edging

DOWN

1. Rich Man, Poor Man author Shaw
2. Lake near Donner Pass
3. Detective Charlie and family
4. White House monogram
5. Chatterley and Windermere
6. Large African antelope
7. Jones and Sawyer
8. __ due, the
9. Retirees' concerns
10. Eva and Juan of Argentina
11. Employee
12. Loss treatments
13. Bugs Bunny's dupe
21. Rap
23. All (French)
25. __ Spinal Tap (Rob Reiner film)
26. Spigot leaks
28. At __ (puzzled) (2 wds.)
29. Tetrarch's land
30. Girl (Spanish)
31. Annoying fly
32. Engine lube
33. Above
34. "Night __ Tall"
36. Augmented sixth, for one
37. Raining ice
38. "Joyeux" follower
41. For nothing
42. Mild expletive
44. Clear gas
45. Meat stick
46. Oriental rice liquors
48. __ Gay
49. Fired up again
50. Jerky creations
51. Food fish
52. Seldom, e.g.
53. Chickadee sound
54. Quick meal
56. "Hello Mary __"
59. Collection

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Powerful influences urge you to attempt something beyond your sphere of expertise. Avoid the temptation to overextend yourself. You'll make a bigger impression if you tread quietly and stick to a simpler course of action.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Listen to a loved one's advice to make the most of one of your talents. A seemingly talkative nature could be the key to solving a mystery. Listen quietly to discover a new solution to an old problem.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

Focus on elements of your environment this week—if something's been irritating you, now is a good time to alter it for the better. You could be due for an overhaul in the wardrobe department as well.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

You're a master of workable achievements this week, which may leave you feeling underappreciated. Treat yourself to a special indulgence. A solo afternoon or evening could yield a real piece of wisdom. Re-examine your priorities.

LEO
July 23-August 23

Give your creative streak room to run this week, and you could be surprised at the results. Don't allow yourself to be roped into a commitment you're not ready for— the fallout will be worse than you anticipate.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

Although domestic issues may seem pressing, it's more important that you keep up the good work at the office. A time of transition looms, and you need to be prepared. It could open up a whole new world.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

A difficult problem seems to solve itself—with a little help from you. Take credit where credit is due. An entertaining evening offers an unusual opportunity.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

Tie up loose ends before embarking on a new project—you won't be able to handle distractions in the near future. Escape from the pressure of an irresistible situation by staging a small getaway for you and a close friend.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

Use the phone to handle some important affairs this week. It will help you maintain a professional distance without seeming irresponsible. An experienced advisor offers an unorthodox solution to a nagging problem.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

Try out a piece of equipment that's designed to help you accomplish more. The time you spend learning how to use it will be well invested. Committee work yields a step-by-step plan to achieve an important goal. Don't be afraid to speak up.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18

A relationship could be suffering from stress this week. Give solace rather than adding retorts, and you will be seen as a hero. On the other hand, don't be unusually silent. Just speak your mind—after counting to ten.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

A shallow person could be making your life unpleasant. Don't settle for less than the best—you deserve to be happy, and you're capable of seeing to it that you are. Ask the counsel of an older, wiser friend.

Daily Listings sponsored by: Your Ad Could Be Here. Call 545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 Laser Video
28 The Learning Channel
30 Comedy Central
31 Popcorn Channel
32 Satellite Programming

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 5, 1997

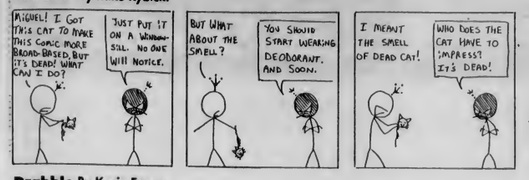
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Business Rpt.	Women's College Basketball: Connecticut at Seton Hall. (Live)			Living Edens (In Stereo)		Mark Russell		Jack Lemmon (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Nanny	Pearl	Miss USA Pageant (In Stereo Live)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Pearl	Miss USA Pageant (In Stereo Live)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Nick Freno	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Menace"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Reel TV	Seinfeld "Light My Fire"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News		H. Patrol	Reel TV
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Menace"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "M*O*B"		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News		Inside Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Menace"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Living Edens (In Stereo)		Mark Russell	Great Performances: Gospel Music			Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Sentinel "Light My Fire"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Martin	Mad Abo. You	Reel TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball: Utah Jazz at Seattle SuperSonics. (Live)						NBA Basketball: Bulls at Lakers
A&E	11	Quincy		Equalizer "Solo"		Biography: Douglass		American Justice (R)		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "Vengeance"
CNN	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Inside Politics	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	39	Tick	Dreem On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Comedy Viewer's Choice		John Leguizamo: Epic		John Leguizamo: Mambo		Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC	42	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings at the Red Star (R)		Wild Discovery: Crocodile		Discover Magazine (R)		Wildest of Tribes (R)		Wild Discovery: Crocodile
ESPN	21	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Pittsburgh at Miami. (Live)				College Basketball: Duke at Wake Forest. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Come Die With Me" (1994,		Chantal Strange Maladies		Living	Mysteries
MTV	31	Ren & Stimpy	House of Style	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Babyface Presents (R) (In Stereo)				Real World 3	Real World 3	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	46	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doog	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Love Lucy	Monsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	44	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax "Split Image"		★★ "Warning Sign" (1985, Suspense) Sam Waterston. (In Stereo)				Sightings (In Stereo)		Time Trax "Split Image" (R)
TLC	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Sea Tek		Pop Science	Zoku Wars (R) [Part 3 of 3]			Ghesa Jungle: Life on the Edge	Sea Tek (R)	Pop Science
TNT	55	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		★★★ "Mr. Hom" (1979, Western) David Carradine, Richard Widmark
USA	43	Renegade (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote (Part 1 of 2)		★★½ "As Good as Dead" (1995, Suspense) Crystal Bernard, R.				Wings	Wings
HBO	33	★★★ "Peggy Sue Got Married" (1986) Kathleen Turner. 3:10-5				★★½ "Rebound—The Legend of Earl 'The Goat' Manigault" (1996)				Larry Sanders	Tracey Takes	Comedy Hour: Damon Wayans
MAX	35	★½ "Time Trax an Angel" (1987, Fantasy) Michael E. Knight. 7:10				Children of the Corn III (1994, Horror) Christa Sauntara. (In Stereo) (R)				★½ "Sins of Desire" (1992,		Lena Roberts (N/R)	Hitcher
SHOW	37	5:40) ★★½ "Quiz Show" (1994, Drama) John Turturro. 9:10-12				★★★ "Othello" (1995, Drama) Laurence Fishburne, R. (In				★½ "Red Corner" (1994, Drama) Ellen Barkin. (In Stereo) (R)

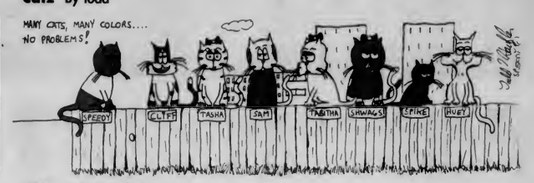
I've had some great teachers but I had this English teacher who thought he was the smartest guy in the world. He was always telling us how lowly and stupid we all were.

At first I thought maybe I liked him but I think I was just afraid.



Personally, I think he had a piece missing.

I wrote a paper that was so good he accused me of stealing ideas. He didn't think my little poems were any good.

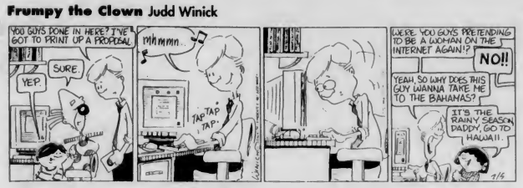


He showed our class one of his own poems and boasted,.... "This one will be read and enjoyed for a thousand years to come."

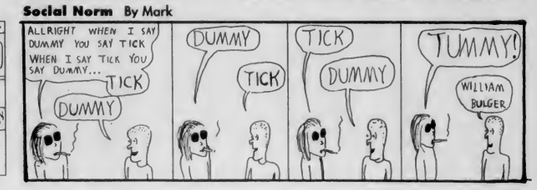
"Well, you could be right, but we're going to have a hard time keeping an eye on that, fish face."

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Catz By Todd



Drabble By Kevin Fagan



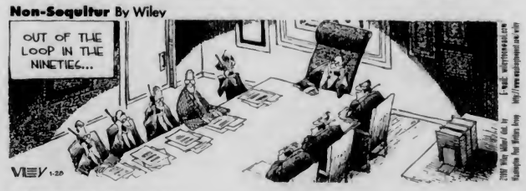
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

Social Norm By Mark

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

University² By Frank Cho



Close to Home By John McPherson

Bruno By Chris Baldwin

Non-Sequitur By Wiley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Today's Staff

Mark "Anger" McGrath
Night Editor

Lisa "Lust" Oliveri
Copy Editor

Lauren "Envy" Kosky
Photo Technician

Marc "Sloth" Dionne
Production Supervisor

Dan "Pride" Bodah
Mark "Greed" Hohengasser
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Puck
Corned Beef on Rye
Ravioli
Veg. Ravioli

DINNER
Roast Pork
Turkey Divan
Veg. Pocket
Quarter Pounder

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Puck
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Roast pork
Turkey Divan

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Puck
Fettuccini and Sauce
Veg. Lo Mein

DINNER
Roast Pork
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Korean BBQ Tofu
Tortellini

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Chicken
Fettuccini/Sauce
Ratatouille

DINNER
Roast Pork
Turkey Divan
Spicy Veg. Pasta
Tortellini

Quote of the Day

"We are all here to create the Illusion of competence"

–A UMASS Professor

Joke of the Day

What does a mathmetician do when he is constipated?

He works it out with a pencil.

"Order anything from our dessert cart and get this 'Joy of Liposuction' video absolutely free."

SPORTS

Wednesday, Febuary 5, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Streaking madness

Fan support has boomed as the Minutemen have won five of their last six games...

Win streak sparks return of fans

In the press conference following his team's win over the Massachusetts men's basketball team, Virginia Tech coach Bill Foster made a reference to the somewhat sparse attendance at the William D. Mullins Center.

When his turn to meet with the media came, UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint just shook his head.

Fan support is always a important element in sports. Consider the three or four fans that dress in those ridiculous costumes and bang a drum in the movie Major League. Consider also how fast the attendance at those Indiana games grew when the team was on a roll.

Such has been a similar case for the UMass men's hoop team this year.

ON THE KANE

After beating the top team in the Atlantic 10 East, Rhode Island, in dramatic fashion two weeks later, Flint did more than just shake his head, he made a call for support.

"We need some more guys out there," Flint said. "We represent this school very well and the guys deserve better than that."

Flint's statement is not surprising considering the attendance figures for the month of January. Of the four games the Minutemen played at the Mullins Center in the month of January, not one filled the 9,493 seats in arena.

A 77–64 win over Davidson on Jan. 2 was listed as a sellout, but the number of fans who witnessed the win was far fewer than that.

The following two games (St. Joseph's and Virginia Tech) were also listed as sellouts, but the box scores listed 2,686 and 2,675 no shows respectively.

But that situation changed when the Minutemen returned home after a two-game road trip to host the first place A-10 East Rams. The fans returned to Mullins and returned to support UMass.

That was just the beginning. Last Saturday, UMass fell to Xavier in an overtime thriller that was indeed a true sellout. Even the maroon-backed seats in the upper corners of sections T and Y were filled.

And that wasn't all. The fans who packed the arena to see the Minutemen face off against the A-10's only ranked team were honestly excited to see the team.

When a Xavier player stood at the foul line, the UMass fans waved their hands and tried to distract the Musketeer, as if another Final Four berth hung in the balance.

When a UMass player took his position at the charity stripe, hands everywhere went up in anticipation of bringing them down with that beloved "swoosh" sound.

"That's what we need in Mullins," Flint said afterwards. "[The fans] were great. That's what we needed today. That was the Mullins Center today on national television, against a tough team."

The increase in attendance has two possible sources: first, that the students returned to school after the winter break, and second, the Minutemen have been winning.

During the rough stretch of January home games, UMass students, one half of the primary fan base (the other being season ticket holders) were at home for the winter break. With classes not in session, there was no rush to attend games.

But there also wasn't a rush because of the Minutemen's record. Before the team's game against Davidson, the Minutemen stood at 4–7, injured and worn down after a harsh non–conference December schedule.

By the time UMass' game against URI rolled around, the Minutemen were riding a two–game win streak that included a huge victory (score–wise, morale–wise) over intrastate rival Boston College.

But for the Massachusetts players, the fan support is needed no matter what the current record is.

"We need them to be there whether we're up by 10 or down by 10," senior guard Carmelo Travieso said.

Things are looking up for the Minutemen. The tough loss to Xavier was followed by a crushing romp at Fordham.

But the answer to whether or not the fans are back to stay remains to be seen. The answer will come Thursday.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Fair weather fans

... However, when the Minutemen struggled early, Mullins Center fans failed to support the team when they needed it most.

Patriots and Jets looking for deal

Midway through Bill Parcells' four–year stay in New England, the common joke was to refer to his team as the New York Patriots due to the number of former Giants he had on the team.

Two years after that, the line between the New England Patriots and the New York Jets seems more blurred than ever. The Patriots have what the Jets want. The Jets have what the Patriots would like. And now the Patriots have something the Jets didn't want a couple years ago.

ON THE NFL

Perhaps the teams should just take a clue from the Canadian Football League's Roughriders and both rename themselves the Patriot Missiles or Air Force Ones.

The Patriots made the widely–expected announcement that former Jets head coach Pete Carroll would be their new guy. At the same time the Jets announced former Patriots assistant head coach Bill Belichick would be the interim head coach until Parcells is free from his contract with the Patriots.

The Jets did sign Parcells to a "consultant" job, though it will be up to NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue to determine whether that job is kosher with his previous ruling.

What the Jets really want is for Parcells to be on the sidelines as a head coach. And all it would take for them to get it is the number one draft pick; Aaron Glenn, Hugh Douglas and Keyshawn Johnson (three of their last four first–round picks); or maybe enough money to build Bob Kraft a new stadium.

In this high stakes game of chicken, it's hard to see who's coming out ahead. If Tagliabue rules that the Jets' agreement with Parcells is allowed, the Jets are the clear winner. They get Parcells and don't have to give up anything. If not, it's hard to decide who wins.

Two second round draft choices can be pretty valuable. But is it worth playing a coach who been to three Super Bowls twice a year, especially on a team that has a lot more talent than their record indicates.

The next biggest question now becomes what will happen with the assistant coaches. The Patriots have won the first battle by signing strength and conditioning coach Johnny Parker. Parker was the reason why the Patriots have been relatively injury–free over the last few years and their health was one reason they were in the Super Bowl. Parker, who has worked under Parcells for 11 of his 13 years in the league, was reportedly unhappy with Parcells' recent actions.

The Patriots have apparently lost defensive coordinator Al Groh, due to their signing of Steve Sidwell to take that position. Sidwell is a good choice though. He held the same position in Houston prior to this year and was responsible for the strong defense there.

The other coordinator position may go to quarterbacks coach Chris Palmer. He is not Carroll's first choice, but he has a good relationship with Drew Bledsoe and knows the team's current style. Jacksonville also reportedly wants Palmer as their offensive coordinator. Current OC Ray Perkins doesn't seem to be wanted by either team.

Other coaches that both teams would like include defensive line coach Romeo Crennel, who is also interviewing with the Chargers; running backs coach Maurice Carthon, who played for Parcells with the Giants and will probably follow him; Mike Sweatman, the special teams coach; and wide receivers coach Charlie Weis, who has expressed an interest in staying in New England.

No matter what happens, the Patriots should be a team to watch next year. They have a core of young talent on both offense (Bledsoe, Curtis Martin, Terry Glenn and Ben Coates) and defense (Willie McGinest, Ted Johnson, Ty Law and Lawyer Milloy). They also have very few prime– time free agents.

Chris Slade is their most valuable guy, especially with the way he played throughout the playoffs, and will probably demand a lot of money. Fortunately for the Patriots, Slade was one of the few who was not that close with Parcells (who benched him midway through the season) and the coach's departure may help the team retain the linebacker.

They should also try to resign CB Ricky Reynolds, who probably won't command much money, and hope he returns to pre–injury form and takes back his job from Otis Smith.

Assuming the team signs Slade, they can then use the draft to upgrade the offensive and defensive lines, their weakest areas.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

Ulf a punk on ice, Sakic cut to shreds

There is one NHL–er who I would like to send to a dark, fiery place:

• Why hasn't anybody truly hurt, maimed or extremely physically debilitated the ultimate goon of them all, Ulf Samuelsson, yet?

I hate to sound like Nancy Kerrigan, but "whhhyyy?"

ON THE NHL

No, the current N.Y. Ranger defenseman was not the one who belted the ultimate whiner with a tire iron a few years back, but it could have been just as well. Couldn't you see it, though? The tabloids would have had a field day...

Headline: "Ultimate Goon Pumps Kerrigan Up, And Possibly Out Of The Olympics."

The man who ended the career of Bruins legend Cam Neely with a cheap leg shot at it again, and against the same team. In the Bruins' 3–2 win over the Wayne–gers last Sunday night, Ulfie pasted second–year defenseman Kyle McLaren with a vicious hit, separating his shoulder and knocking him out of the lineup. By the replay, it did look like a clean hit, but still...

I hate this man.

I want this man to suffer Tantalus–like torture from the hands of the immortal hockey gods.

Ulfie has received a few rights to the mush over the years, but that is not enough. I can sense that the hockey gods are visiting their golden sticks in sublime praise to me with this one. When I was able to play the game, I liked sending messages with good body checks, but I never wanted to send somebody into premature retirement — even at 7–years–old.

• I knew that the start of the Hartford Whalers successful season was an evil apparition. There was no way that the Mail Rats could keep up their early hot streak, and now they are plummeting down into Bruins territory.

The battle for the seven and eight spots in the playoffs are real tight in the Eastern Conference with four teams within two points of each other (from top to bottom: Washington, Hartford, Montreal, and Boston). And I know, it is easy to forget about teams like Ottawa, Tampa Bay and the N.Y. Islanders, but if they get hot, they can jump some teams.

Did I just say that? Somebody get me a doctor... I just said that a Rick Bowness team had a living chance in hell. You know, the new coach of the team with the stupid, look– like–he's–tripping, Islander on the front? Ugh.

• The Pacific Division is the same as it ever was, and the 'Lanche are taking care of some serious business with their NHL–leading 72 points. It is not the Avalanche that are surprising, but some of the teams in the rest of the division.

Almost 20 points behind Colorado are the Edmonton Oilers, and the more–than disappointing Vancouver Canucks are 22 points behind. What? 22 Points!

How can a team that boasts the likes of Pavel "The Russian Rocket" Bure, Alexander Mogilny, Trevor Linden and Esa Tikkanen be only four points better than the Providence Jr. I mean, Boston Bruins? I can see Edmonton being in that realm of mediocrity, but please Vancouver, get some freakin' consistency. If the team stumbles in the stretch, look for the fire sale of the Canuck stars, and for that, maybe the whole lineup. Speculation has surrounded the possible shipping of Mogilny to the Wayne–gers, but the key in the deal was another Russian, Alexei Kovalev, and he has been out of the lineup for most of the season.

Turn to NHL, page 9

Corsi in bullpen, Boston sports fine?

He had a record of 6–0 with three saves, 10 holds and held a 4.03 ERA in 57 appearances last season. Those are the big statistics that are illuminated around the mug of the recently acquired Red Sox pitcher and savior of the town, Jim Corsi.

How many times have Boston sports fans read the papers, and watched the television and seen the hype about some Massachusetts native who is supposed to come back to the Hub and be the next Larry Bird?

IN THE PLACE

With the Bruins, it was Kevin Stevens, who had astronomical years with the Pittsburgh Penguins, but could never find his spot with the black and gold. Could it be because on Pittsburgh he had guys like Mario Lemeiux, Jaromir Jagr and Ron Francis passing to him, and on the Bruins, he had Brent Hughes and Ted Donato?

As far as the Celtics are concerned, it has been numerous players like Dominique Wilkins, who are washed up, but are supposed to be revived once they come to play for a quality team such as Boston.

And what about New England? Well, they are still recovering from being the only Boston team to do anything productive in the '90s, so I'll leave them alone.

So now we are left with the Boston Red Sox. (Don't you just love it, Florida isn't even warm enough for spring training and already we've given up on the B's and the Celtics. What happened to Boston sports?!!!) They have released the top pitcher ever to put on a Red Sox cap, who not only won a few Cy Young Awards, but surpassed ol' Cy in every possible statistic. Jose Canseco has trotted back to the land of the Athletics to join up with his bash brother, Mark McGuire to try to prove that two DH's are better than one.

And on top of all that, rumors are spreading that Mo Vaughn, the greatest thing to happen to the Red Sox since Tony Pena, wants to leave. Pretty soon, Dan Duquette will be asking players like Bob Stanley, Dwight Evans and Jim Rice to come out of retirement and play again. That's not such a bad idea.

Isn't it bad enough that Major League Baseball has become so saturated, due to expansion teams, that there just aren't quality players out on the market anymore? Then, when finally, some team does put together a franchise and win a championship (i.e. Yankees), the players want more money and leave (i.e. Wetteland).

So if John Popper of Bluestraveler fame is right, "Time is the beauty of the road being long," because sooner or later the Red Sox, a.k.a. Duquette, will get out of their pathetic funk and start putting together a team worth following and not a team that we all fault for making a last month run for the championship come August. Because we all know what the outcome will be in the first series of the playoffs.

What Duquette must try to do is not pinch his pennies but take his time and make some serious changes in the program. The team has had the last few years to put something together, yet they are still in the same predicament that they were in then.

Why? Why is it so hard for them to understand? Why is it so easy for us to figure out? Why are we all talking about this instead of doing something about it? And why do I keep asking why?

The answer is that Major League Baseball is an intricate business that involves primadonnas just as bad as the ones in the NBA, and we don't like it.

When the players went on strike two years ago and Wade Boggs said, "The sky's the limit," I knew baseball was going to fall Roman Empire style. At this point the director hasn't decided who is going to be Brutus, it's between the players or the owners. But either way Julius is going down.

Let's face it, free marketing has ruined the professional level of sports. No more will there ever be dynasties like the ones we saw with Bird, McHale and Parish, or Magic and Kareem, or Troy, Emmitt and Michael. Maybe once a decade will we see a team compile players that will realize that staying together in a successful organization is better than money.

Turn to SOX, page 9

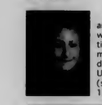
The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 77 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, February 6, 1997

Sexism in the media

While women have made some tremendous steps towards ending sexism there are still some people in the media holding them back (see Arts & Living, page 6).

The future is now

Betsy Colucci and the rest of the women's gymnastics team's sophomores have been a driving force for UMass this season (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

Earthquakes in Iran kill at least 72 people

BOJNURD, Iran (AP) — Earthquakes and aftershocks rocked northeastern Iran yesterday, a day after two powerful jolts flattened villages of mud homes, killing at least 72 people and injuring more than 200.

The death toll on state–run Tehran radio has been climbing since two earthquakes shook the city of Bojnurd and surrounding villages Tuesday afternoon, hitting about 40 minutes apart.

Relief workers rushed to most of the stricken villages, but landslides and knee–deep snow blocked roads to some hamlets. Even with the aid of mountain climbers, relief workers were unable to reach the most inaccessible villages, they told The Associated Press.

There was no word on casualties from those villages. About 400,000 people live in Bojnurd and the 700 villages and hamlets around it.

NATION

America Online hit with another outage

NEW YORK — America Online Inc. was hit with a new technical snag yesterday, frustrating customers just a week after the online service agreed to issue refunds for poor service.

Customers nationwide were unable to log on beginning shortly after 5 p.m. EST due to an outage at the company's Vienna, Va., equipment center, an AOL spokeswoman said. The problem was cleared up by 7:30 p.m.

The trouble began as technicians were upgrading computer software as part of AOL's drive to accommodate the recent surge of members that has overwhelmed its network, said spokeswoman Tricia Primrose.

During the overhaul, the system stopped accepting log-ins from customers, urging them instead to call the company's toll-free help line. A recorded voice said customers should try logging on again in an hour.

America Online has been undertaking a huge refund program as part of a settlement announced last week. Threatened by lawsuits across the country, AOL agreed to give millions of dollars back to customers who frequently couldn't sign on.

The system delays have been caused by a new pricing plan — $19.95 a month for unlimited usage — that attracted a surge in online demand and extensive bottlenecks in a network that serves eight million customers.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Making jewelry...

Lee Phelan, a first year history major, buffs a silver ring that he made at the Craft center.

Tirrell announces his candidacy for trustee

By Victoria Groves and Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Two candidates for next semester's elections, a decrease in tuition and President Maurice Caston–Powe's goals for the spring session were announced last night at the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association's (SGA) first Undergraduate Student Senate meeting of the semester.

Current Senate Speaker Brian Tirrell announced his intention to run for Student Trustee for next semester, and Rob McDonald, secretary of administrative affairs, declared he will run for SGA President for the fall of 1997.

Tirrell, whose past SGA positions include senator and associate speaker, said his platform for the March elections would include, "combating racism and maintaining affordability of the University."

Current student Trustee Sean Carter reported that at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Trustees, the governing board for the entire UMass system, a $105 (5 percent) decrease in tuition for the Amherst campus will take effect for the fall of 1997.

Carter also announced that a maximum increase in student fees was set at $24 — resulting in a likely overall student savings of $81 on next semester's bill.

In his report, Carter declared that "it is up to us as student leaders to keep fees as low as possible."

UMass Boston SGA President John Okray, however, feels that Carter is not representing his constituency because of Carter's support of UMass President William Bulger and Chancellor David K. Scott's proposal, which set the maximum student fee increase on the Amherst campus at $24.

"We [UMass Boston SGA] don't support fee increases, and when Carter does, it makes us look like we're sticking out in the crowd," Okray said.

"We have a problem with student trustees who find their personal agenda more important than their constituency," Okray said.

Carter said he supported the increase because this semester, "the SGA will have a greater say on where the money is going to go."

UMass Lowell did not have an increase or decrease in fees and UMass Dartmouth will have a maximum increase in fees of $121.

In his president's report, Caston–Powe said that the SGA should work harder this semester than in the past.

"Last semester, we made important groundwork... but overall I give last semester a B/C," Caston–Powe said. "We didn't push hard enough."

Cher and Sonny's daughter to speak on gays in media

By Amy Risley
Collegian Staff

Chastity Bono, daughter of singers Cher and Sonny Bono, will be making her first visit to the University of Massachusetts as a part of an ongoing campaign to promote gay and lesbian visibility in the public eye.

The lecture, a part of the Stonewall Center's guest lecturer program, will be held in the Campus Center in room 917 at 4 p.m.

The lecture will focus on the expanding representation and coming out of gays and lesbians in Hollywood, such as television's "Ellen," as well as more than 20 gay and lesbian characters already out on television.

Bono, a writer and former spokesperson for the Human Rights Campaign, a national lesbian and gay political organization, currently holds the position as Entertainment Media Director for the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD).

GLAAD was formed in New York in 1985 to combat the offensive and discriminatory attitudes of many local media organizations. Since its inception, the group has expanded across the country making a commitment to monitor and pro–actively approach a respectful portrayal of gays and lesbians on television and in film.

In 1992, Entertainment Weekly spoke of GLAAD as "one of Hollywood's most powerful entities." Its success at lobbying for media inclusion and respectful representation has not gone unnoticed in the entertainment industry, which is actively working to create more accurate and realistic portrayals of gays and lesbians.

Bono has personally dealt with the complications and intricacies of coming out within the entertainment industry. After signing her first record contract in 1990, Star Magazine outed her as a lesbian. In 1995, Bono publicly came out in an acclaimed Advocate cover story. Bono's exposure has since become a vehicle that has lead her into becoming one of the nation's most visible advocates for lesbian and gay rights.

William Waybourn, Managing Director of GLAAD, said that Bono's lifetime of experience in the entertainment industry is a beneficial tool in that her "personal experience as a lesbian in Hollywood gives her firsthand knowledge of what it takes to promote fair and accurate images of lesbians and gay men in the media."

Together, Bono and GLAAD have mobilized lesbian and gay communities to respond to positive and negative media portrayals, and have worked to improve the understanding among media professionals.

Springfield College offers CPR course as part of annual Valentine's Day event

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Each year, approximately 300,000 people die from heart attack related conditions before attaining medical help. Adults are the most common victims of CPR–requiring incidents like drowning, electrocution and heart attack.

Because of stats like these Springfield College (SC) and the American Medical Response will hold the second annual "Be a Heartsaver for Valentine's Day" program — a free CPR training program open to the public — on Feb. 8.

"Holding it around Valentine's Day encourages people to become heartsavers. You could save a loved one," said Nancy Morrissey, manager of Corporate Development at AMR.

Robert Hopkins, the director of Springfield College's department of emergency medical services, created this program after witnessing what he felt were too many occurrences where bystanders did not know proper life enduring techniques.

Under the supervision of volunteer CPR instructors, emergency medical technicians and trained first responders from SC and AMR, all participants will be exposed to the basics of one–man CPR and choking prevention techniques.

"It won't be a full CPR course, like the two–man CPR," said Morrissey, who is also a paramedic and teacher at Springfield College.

"It's the type of course that offers the basics of everything, so it gives a base for participants to pursue learning more in the future," Morrissey said.

Participants in the two–hour program will be shown a brief film about lifesaving and be taught the fundamentals of saving a choking victim. They will also learn how to sustain a victims breathing and properly take a pulse through the use of mannequins.

Each person who successfully completes the lesson will receive a course completion card from the American Heart Association.

According to Morrissey, last year was a major success, with the program running smoothly despite the large turnout of over 400 participants.

This year, the program will have additional instructors to help speed up the program "so you are in and out," Morrissey said.

According to a press release, Hopkins designed the program to be free of barriers which have made CPR certification less approachable in the past.

"This program is free of charge, conveniently located, requires only two hours of time and there are no written exams," Hopkins said.

Adding to the benefits of this barrier free program are the availability of two times, noon and 2 p.m. for participants to choose between. The program will be held at the Springfield College Fuller Arts Center and is open to anyone who pre– registers by calling (413) 783–5108.

UMass Public Relations office now hiring for three programs

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Undergraduate Admissions Office is currently hiring for its summer and fall 1997 Public Relations positions, which include Student Admissions Representatives, New Students Program Summer Counselors and University Tour Guides.

As a Student Admissions Representative, the individual is expected to conduct informational interviews and counsel prospective students, as well as perform other duties in the Admissions Office.

The New Students Program Summer is an eight–week orientation program during June and July for incoming students. Counselors live in dorms, leading and planning a number of activities for students and working with faculty.

Tour guides leads tours around campus and address large groups on various aspects of the campus.

Richard Toomey, assistant director of Undergraduate Admissions, and Jeanne Horrigan, associate director of the New Students Program, who are in charge of hiring for these positions, explain that these jobs offer valuable benefits which "you can't learn in the classroom."

"Employers make positive assumptions if they see you've done these jobs," Toomey said.

"After you've had one of these jobs, you can stand in front of any group," Horrigan said.

According to Horrigan, student public relations employees are a valuable asset to the Undergraduate Admissions Office.

"We couldn't do our job without these individuals — they are our out–reach," Horrigan said. "The public relations jobs put students in contact with thousands of prospective students and their families."

Toomey feels that one of the most rewarding aspects these jobs offer are "knowing you've made an impact on someone's life."

The qualifications for the three public relations positions are similar since all three are closely related. Student employees should have an enthusiasm for the University, strong interpersonal skills, good academic standing and involvement in campus life.

Toomey and Horrigan explained that these jobs offer challenges to the employee in reaching out to the students and parents they are in contact with. The goal of these jobs is to educate both interested and non–interested individuals about the University.

"We're not looking for a hard–sell UMass, just a walk through of what college life is like with information up front, so that students can identify their importances and see what college is," Toomey said.

Some students are able to travel to high schools to recruit and conduct interviews in order to get to know the students.

Turn to PUBLIC RELATIONS, page 2

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Study break...

Jean Elysse, a junior bio–chemistry major, studied quietly in the Campus Center yesterday afternoon.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 40	HIGH: 40	HIGH: 35
LOW: 25	LOW: 25	LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword.....page 14
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 16

For Your Information

PI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Feb. 6

Lecture — Keith Boykin, author of One More River to Cross: Black and Gay in America, graduate of Harvard Law School and Executive Director of the National Black Gay & Lesbian Leadership Forum, will speak at 8 p.m. Location to be announced. Contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824 for more info.

Lecture — An informal discussion on Spirituality and Identity will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 803, co-sponsored by the Office of Human Relations and the philosophy department. For more info, call 546-5174.

Religious — Rosh Chodesh, a Jewish ritual celebration for women meets at 8:30 p.m. in the Hillel House downstairs.

Friday, Feb. 7

Dance — A Welcome Back UMass Ball will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium from 7 p.m.–1 a.m. Cost is $4 per person. Semiformal requested. Dance instructions from 7–8 p.m. Refreshments included. For info call Kevin Murphy at 549-4036. Sponsored by the Ballroom Dance Club.

Lecture — Chastity Bono, writer and former spokesperson for the Human Rights Campaign (a national lesbian and gay political organization), and current Entertainment Media Director for the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD) will speak at 4 p.m. in Campus Center room 917. For more info, contact the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Service — A very special Faculty, Staff and Student Shabbat Service will be held at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House.

Social — Kick off the Korean New Year with the Mount Holyoke Korean American Students Association from 10:30 p.m. – 2 a.m. at the Blanchard Campus Center, Mount Holyoke College. $1 for MHC students, $2 for all others. Cash bar, all drinks $2. Two forms of ID required. All are welcome. For further information, call Ji Lee at 493-4598.

Religious — All Christians are invited to fellowship, pray and worship together at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. For more info, call Mark at 253-0361.

Saturday, Feb. 8

Concert — The First Annual Folk Festival to benefit Jessie's House and The Grove Street Inn will be held at 7 p.m. at the Northampton Unitarian Church. Performers include Annie Wenz, Michael Ferry, Christina McCarthy and Kevin Hodgson. In addition, there will be a speaker to address the local homeless situation. Tickets are $5.

Fundraiser — Womanshelter/Companeras will be selling "Have a Heart" Admission tickets. "Have a Heart," a charity fund raising event for local non–profit charities sponsored by JC Penny's, will take place at all JC Penny locations from opening to closing. The store wide celebration will include door prizes, free makeovers, raffle drawings, a fashion show in the afternoon, and more. There will also be free gift wrapping for Valentines Day gift purchases. With the purchase of a $5 admission ticket, you will receive a coupon for 25 percent off all regularly priced merchandise and 5 percent off all sale merchandise.

Meditation — An introduction to meditation according to the Sahaj Marg System (The Natural Path) will be offered at 7:30 p.m. at the SRCM Meditation Center in Sunderland. Discussion and short video presentation. There is no fee, all are welcome. Call 665–8080 for more info.

Program — A free adult C.P.R. program called "Be a Heart Saver for Valentine's Day" will be held at Fuller Arts Center Auditorium at Springfield College at noon and 2 p.m. American Heart Association course completion cards will be issued. To register, call American Medical Response at (413)783–5108.

Social — The Hillel House Dining Room will hold an Israeli Cafe at 9 p.m. Come enjoy Israeli food, music and dancing. Donations of canned food goods appreciated. Sponsored by the Hillel House Social Committee and the JLC.

Notices

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Auditions — Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's Spring production of Fame will take place Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 8 at 1 and 7 p.m. in room 101 of the Campus Center. You only need to attend one audition. Callbacks will take place Feb. 9 at 10 a.m. No need to prepare, come as you are. All are welcome. For more information call the UMTG office at 545-0415.

Dance — Cajun Dancing and Appalachian clogging beginner lessons will be offered on Sunday evenings from 6– 7 p.m. at 132 Elm St., Westfield. Partners are not needed and all ages are welcome. No prior dance experience is necessary. Classes are instructed by Maple Run, and non–profit dance group that performs at fairs and community functions. For more information, contact Jo Sarnelli at (413) 746–9067.

Film— The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Filmstudies — Interested in earning a certificate in film studies? Take 18 credits in film and video courses and receive a film studies certificate (equivalent to a minor). Sign up at the beginning of the spring semester in the interdepartmental program in film studies office, 101 South College. Call 545–3659 or see webpage: www.umass.edu/film for more information.

Language — Casa Latina, the Center for Community Education and Culture, will conduct an 8–week Functional Spanish course, beginning Feb. 18 at 7 p.m. in Northampton. Tuition is $260. Students will be divided into three small groups: beginners, intermediate and advanced. Classes will be taught by experienced language instructors who are also native Spanish speakers. For more information, contact Janet Gonzalez at 586–1569.

Outdoor program — Women Exploring the Outdoors will be conducting a series of outdoor adventure programs for women who are survivors of abuse. The focus of these day trips is to provide a comfortable environment within which women can increase their self–confidence, establish safe boundaries and experience their strength in the company of other survivors. All ages, abilities and levels of experience are welcome. Programs scheduled are: A Day Hike in the Pioneer Valley on Sunday, April 13, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $20; and Low and High Ropes Course on Sunday, May 4, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $50. The cost for all three programs is $85. For more information, contact Adventures Unlimited at (413) 774–3131x1293.

Jury prepares to punish Simpson

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — It's already branded O.J. Simpson a killer and ordered him to pay a surprising $8.5 million. Now as the jury prepares to add to the punishment, it must determine: Does he have anything left?

The jury that found Simpson liable for the slashing deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman returns today to hear accountants calculate the football great's fortune and plaintiffs' lawyers argue he should have to cough up every Hertz dollar he's ever earned for the pain he caused.

Simpson's lawyer, who must face a jury that has unanimously rejected everything he has said, will probably plead fiscal mercy, arguing his client has nothing left to give.

The best estimates are that Simpson is now worth no more than $6 million — and probably much less — with nearly all of his worth in the form of his estate, which has been mortgaged to pay legal bills.

"He's going to tell the jury that they've already sent a message, that his client heard the message, that his client is broke, that he has no way to pay that $8.5 million verdict, let alone respond in punitive damages," civil lawyer Larry Feldman predicted.

The $8.5 million in compensatory damages Simpson has been ordered to pay to Goldman's parents represents the value of their son's funeral and the loss of his companionship.

Ms. Simpson's family did not seek compensatory damages.

Any money awarded in punitive damages in Ms. Simpson's death goes to the children she had with Simpson — Sydney, 11, and Justin, 8.

In awarding punitive damages, the jury must consider how reprehensibly Simpson acted, whether the damage awards "bear a reasonable relation" to the nature of the killings and how much the award would hurt Simpson financially. California law sets no limits on punitive awards but advises juries to take the defendant's financial status into consideration.

"Punitive damages are not supposed to bankrupt. They are supposed to punish," said Myrna Raeder, a law professor at Southwestern University.

Legal analysts said Simpson attorney Robert Baker will probably argue that any money that Simpson must pay to Goldman's relatives comes out of the pockets of his kids.

Tact — never a strong suit for the combative Baker — will have to be used at every turn, analysts said.

"Hopefully he's learned his lesson because he was certainly gratuitously cruel in his attack on Ron Goldman's ability to hold a credit card," said UCLA law professor Peter Arenella. "I don't think he'll take that tack now that this jury has repudiated everything."

A key witness for the plaintiffs will be a forensic accountant who has been poring over what they have complained is the scant financial data submitted by Simpson. It's not known yet what the accountant will say.

The plaintiffs also intend to call an expert in licensing and marketing of famous names and faces to discuss how Simpson can still make a few more bucks. Under California law, creditors can garnish up to a quarter of future wages.

The defense may call its own accountant and perhaps even Simpson's business lawyer to offer a contrasting opinion.

Key battles will be waged over not only Simpson's future earnings potential but money he claims can't be touched by a civil jusigment — pension and life insurance funds.

According to published reports, Simpson has $2.5 million saved in two pension and retirement funds. The funds were established in the early 1980s and he can get cash from them for his own use before his retirement. The pensions begin paying off in annuities when Simpson turns 55 in five years.

That's when Simpson also will begin getting $2,000 a month in pension checks from the National Football League and the Screen Actors Guild, and $500,000 destined for his children's estate, also untouchable by plaintiffs, reports say.

Simpson also can take any number of court actions, from filing for bankruptcy protection to appealing the verdict and seeking to get the damage award reduced.

That means more legal papers, more hearings, more Simpson legal battles.

Said Loyola University law professor Stan Goldman: "This case isn't going away yet."

■ SGA

continued from page 1

Caston–Powe also expressed the need for more student involvement in activities such as voting on campus and representation in administrative decisions which affect the entire student body.

"We need to stay at the pulse of student's needs," Caston– Powe said.

In other matters, Sen. Bill Ramsey (Commuter Area) withdrew his motion to override Caston–Powe's veto of his December 1996 motion on convicted sex offenders living on campus.

Ramsey's original motion called for the Amherst Police and the University to register all convicted sex offenders on campus for the purpose of community awareness, relative to the Massachusetts Sex Offender Registry Act.

Ramsey withdrew because he was "very satisfied with the Administration's decision about the convicted felony policy."

The University now requires that all students answer whether or not they have been convicted of a felony on their Housing application.

Other motions which passed unanimously included the SGA allocating funds to pay for the purchase and installation of a safe for Tix Unlimited, creating a committee to research and evaluate Dining Service operations and requiring the Honors Program to inform students about graduation with honors requirements as soon as they reach a 3.0 G.P.A.

■ public relations

continued from page 1

Jeff Chapdelaine, a senior political science and philosophy major who was hired as a freshman, has worked in all three job positions and finds that as a result he has developed communication skills in large group settings and on a one–on–one basis.

"The personal fulfillment from this job has been the ability to speak in front of large groups, as well as the interpersonal skills," Chapdelaine said.

Chapdelaine was able to do a co–op for Walt Disney World last summer, which he said he feels was made possible due to his experience in the public relations jobs.

Toomey and Horrigan said they are looking for a diverse group of individuals of various years and majors to fill these jobs, which they refer to as "the front door of the University."

Applications for these positions are available at the Undergraduate Admissions Office or at their table on the Campus Center Concourse. The deadline is Feb. 7.

Change Lanes NEW ROUTE OPENED 40 Some U-Turns THE UMASS CAREER CENTER Where the Present Meets the Future RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS 30 No Limits NO ONE WAY 20 CONSULT MAPS

Huge Campus-Wide Career Fair!

sponsored by the University Career Center
EDS and Digital Semiconductor

Wednesday, February 12 10am - 3 pm
Campus Center Auditorium
PLUS rooms 162, 174 & hallways

We've got it covered from A to Z

Abercrombie & Fitch..... Amerinex applied Imaging..... Air Products

Business Data Systems.....Baystate Health Systems..... Bright Horizons

C-Grams..... CIGNA.....Clean water Action.....C.W. Costello(consulting)

Data Viz..... Digital Semi-Conductor..... Dow Jones..... Dun & Bradstreet

EDS.....E&J Gallo..... Executive Risk Insurance..... EF Education

Filene's..... Fugro East..... Ferguson Enterprises..... Fastenal Company

Genetics Institute.....GE..... Grocery Manufacturers..... Gould Farm

Hamilton Standard..... HBO& Co..... hygienetics Environmental..... Hilton(NJ)

IBM.....Investor's Bank & Trust.....Info Cellular..... Ikon Office Solutions

Zee you at the Campus Center February 12 for the full list!!!

University Career Center 545-2224

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.- Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692

Shop Scott's & Save Lot$! THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE

Corona 12-packs bottles $8.39 +dep.
Petes Wicked all flavors; 6-packs $4.99 +dep.
Molson Golden & Molson Ice 12-pk. bottles $7.99 +dep.
Busch & Busch Light 30-packs $11.79 +dep.
Milwaukees Best reg. & light; 30-packs $9.99 +dep.
Bud, Bud Light & Bud Ice 1/2 Kegs $39.99 +dep.

Check out our Other Great In Store Specials

xXx Vodka 1.75 liter $9.99
Bacardi Silver Rum 750ml $7.49
Alize 750ml $11.49
Southern Comfort 750ml $7.99
Absolut Citron 750ml $13.99
Hornsbys Cider 6-packs $4.99

Go Ahead

MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check

Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst

STUDENT SPEAKER
UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible:	Graduating Amherst campus seniors (Class of 1997).
Subject Matter:	Substance should concern higher education and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Format:	Submit up to three word-processed or typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Selection Process:	Authors' names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. 3-5 individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 12, 1997, 4:30 p.m.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

Mail, bus ticket store to open in CC

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Soon students will be able to mail letters, packages and buy bus tickets all the in the same location.

On Feb. 19, the "Campus Sender" is scheduled to open on the Campus Center concourse where McGregor's Travel was once located.

The shop will offer expanded hours Monday through Friday until 8:30 p.m. However, services will not be provided on the weekends for at least the first few months.

"Students have been telling us they would like to have access to mail services after 5:45 pm [the time the Student Union Post office closes]," said Elizabeth Dale, director of business and facilities services in the Campus Center.

Dale also added that comments from students regarding the new service will be welcomed.

"We want to check with students and see where the demand is. If we need to be open on Saturdays then we will look into it," Dale said.

In addition to the longer hours, a new service will allow package shipping via United Parcel Services (UPS) will be available.

"Students want access to package shipping, especially at the end of the semester when they want to ship their belongings home," Dale said.

The reason UPS was never available on campus before was because of limited space in the former Student Union post office as well as lack of accessibility to the loading dock, where UPS picks up their packages, from the Student Union lobby.

"There is a freight elevator right behind the new office, so it will be very easy to get the packages to the loading dock," Dale said.

In an effort to help make shipping packages easier for students, Campus Sender will also have packaging supplies for sale. A limited amount of greeting cards will also be available.

In addition to these services Peter Pan bus tickets will also be sold.

"Now students can send letters, packages or themselves on a bus," said Dale. "Eventually we hope to get a phone line in the office so we can send faxes out too."

Last spring Dale said the idea for the Campus Sender was proposed to the Campus Center Student Union Commission.

"We started conversations with students over the summer and we discussed the concepts of the shop last fall," she said.

According to Dale, a ribbon cutting ceremony will eventually be scheduled, but not before "everything is operating fully."

JENNIFER ZUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Volunteer Fair

Ilsa Meyers, community service coordinator, talks with Christina Marchand, a sophomore biology major, about the Center For Extended Care in Amherst at the community service fair yesterday in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Woman tried for shooting alleged rapist

By Joseph B. Frazier
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — She says she shot to stop the assault of a would-be rapist. The prosecution claims she invited the attack by enticing her aggressor.

Both sides make final arguments tomorrow in the murder trial of Claudia Rodriguez, whose prosecution for killing her alleged attacker has women's groups complaining of injustice from a macho society that holds women to a different standard — even in court.

Rodriguez, 30, has been in jail since the night a year ago when she went out with a woman friend and the woman's lover for an evening of drinking and dancing at a bar just outside Mexico City. The two women left the bar together well after midnight, apparently offended by something the man, Juan Miguel Cabrera, 27, had done.

He followed them. Rodriguez claims he made lewd comments and suggested the three go to a hotel. She says he attacked her and tried to rape her, ripping her clothing. Her friend confirmed the account.

Rodriguez shot Cabrera once with a pistol she had with her. He died hours later in a hospital.

She was charged with murder and could face 15 years in prison. The defense says the charges are baseless and indicative of the double standard women face in Mexico. Rodriguez is married and the mother of five. Cabrera was also married, though not to Rodriguez's friend.

In a July ruling dismissing a defense motion to drop charges, Judge Gustavo Aquiles Gasca wrote:

"Instead of avoiding the sexual attack, by her attitude in remaining in the company of her aggressor despite his propositions to her, she provoked him to attack her so she could shoot him in some vital part of his body."

"The judge said she should have foreseen the attempt, but the aggression was unexpected," defense attorney Ana Laura Magaloni said yesterday. "Claudia said 'no' and suspected she was going to be raped."

Magaloni told The Associated Press that in Mexico, a shooting is considered a legitimate defense if someone enters your house to try to rob it. But "in the case of rape, it is very subjective about what is rape and whether the woman was inviting it or not."

Yesterday, about 15 women protesters put themselves behind bars in a mock jail set up outside the Interior Ministry building. They paced inside a cage with black metal bars, vowing to remain there until Rodriguez is released.

"If Claudia is a prisoner, we are too," one sign said.

Integral Health for Women, one of a number of feminist groups to rally behind Rodriguez, considers the case significant because it symbolizes the "machismo that is entrenched in our society," according to spokeswoman Ana Maria Hernandez, who joined yesterday's protest.

"That Claudia could spend 15 years in prison sends a message to society that women can be raped — and if they defend themselves they can go to jail — and a message to men that they can do what they want and nothing will happen to them," she said.

Religious freedom at work bill delayed in Boston

By Martin Finucane
Associated Press

BOSTON — A bill intended to protect religious freedom in the workplace disappeared suddenly from the radar screen yesterday in the Massachusetts House.

While proponents were expecting a vote, debate on the bill was delayed until Monday, causing consternation among the two women whose case had inspired the proposed law.

"I'm so shocked. I just can't even believe it," said Kathleen Pielech.

Pielech and Patricia Reed had a particular reason to be concerned: the two Roman Catholics have sued Raynham-Taunton Greyhound Park, alleging they were fired for not working on Christmas Day in 1992 because of their religious beliefs.

Their lawsuit against the track expires Monday — and the proposed legislation applies retroactively only to those people who have a pending lawsuit or discrimination complaint.

The bill's supporters include Republican Gov. William F. Weld, Democratic Senate President Thomas Birmingham, civil rights groups and religious groups. But some House lawmakers from the area near the racetrack have criticized the retroactivity provisions.

The Commerce and Labor Committee gave the bill a favorable vote early this week after a hearing where no one spoke to criticize the bill.

Rep. Robert Koczera (D-New Bedford), the committee chairman, said he sympathized with Pielech and Reed and was "concerned" by the House delay.

"I had hoped we would be able to act on it and bring it to a vote," he said.

Koczera said the House leaders who were running yesterday's session put off a formal debate because Rep. Walter DeFilippi (R-W. Springfield) had proposed amendments and had been unable to attend the debate because of "some illness" in his family.

The debate was rescheduled "out of courtesy" to DeFilippi, Koczera said.

DeFilippi's aide, Brian Mahoney, said DeFilippi had attended a medical appointment with his wife and had returned to the Statehouse, but was unnoticed by members of the House leadership, who adjourned the day's session at about 3:35 p.m.

DeFilippi was rescheduled as voting, however, in the last roll call vote of the day, which took place about 10 minutes before the session ended.

Attention potential news writers

There will be a meeting tonight at [illegible] to [illegible] Laura Sh[illegible]

MULTILEX
The World's Largest and Most Powerful English/Russian Language Tool Available on The International Market Today!
ORDER TODAY!
By INTERNET http://www.profit-russia.com (click MEDIALINGUA)
Or Call toll free USA/Canada: 1-(888) 717-3159
ONLY $39.95

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
$2 GA ADM. WITH STUDENT I.D.
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
I-91 North exit 16 turning right onto Rte 9 • 4 miles left at Staples onto Rte 116N. Exit right to right, left to Center 1-91 S take exit 20
Buy at wholesale prices right at the show from up to 60 companies (150 exhibit tables) featuring the IBM/PC compatible market. From full systems to libraries of CDs. It's all here. Adm $7 ea. with ad $5 ea after 1:00 pm $4 ea w/ad only.
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, FEB 9

TOC Bar & Grill

Munchie Specials Mon - Fri 4 - 7 PM

Thursday Feb. 6 at 7:30pm
UMASS vs. Duquesne
A-10 Conference Game

Free Popcorn Draft Beer Drink Specials & Micro Brews

UMass basketball

11th Floor Campus Center
Mon.-Fri. 4pm - 12:30am
Sat. 5pm - 12:30am

Mental Health Groups Spring 1997

MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY
Mindfulness-based Stress Management Group — Learn to live fully in the present moment. Mindfulness meditation will be used as the foundation for all stress management exercises. This group is appropriate for both general stress management as well as for assistance in managing stress related medical disorders. Group runs for 8 weeks. Mondays, 3:30 - 5:30 p.m.	Self-Discovery Groups — Learn to develop better social skills; improve relationships; become more assertive; improve connections with others; feel more in control of your life; and cope with sadness, lonliness, or isolation by talking with others who share your concerns. These groups run for 10 weeks. Group I - Tuesdays, 3:30 - 5:00 p.m.	Self-Discovery Groups — Learn to develop better social skills; improve relationships; become more assertive; improve connections with others; feel more in control of your life; and cope with sadness, lonliness, or isolation by talking with others who share your concerns. These groups run for 10 weeks. Group II - Wednesdays, 3 - 4:30 p.m.	Ninos Adultos de Familias Disfuncionales — This is a therapy group for individuals who would like to understand how their upbringing continues to influence relationships in the present. Issues such as exploring/expressing feelings, developing self-esteem and breaking dysfunctional patterns are central. Group is held in Spanish. Group runs for 8 weeks. Wednesdays, 3:30 - 5:00 p.m.	Men's Group - If you are a man who has difficulty with self-confidence, friendships, romantic relationships, or expressing anger you're not alone. This weekly discussion group can help you understand and overcome these problems as group members talk with and learn from each other. The group is co-led by a man and woman and runs for 8 - 10 weeks, Thursdays, 4:00 - 5:00 p.m

All groups require a pre-group interview. For more information, or to sign up for an interview, please call the Mental Health Division of University Health Services at 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North, M - F, 8:00 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Campus Activities at the University of Massachusetts presents

"Something Every Friday"

A Touch of Reality

This three-person group uses poetry to express important issues like AIDs; gang violence; and day-to-day reality. This powerful trio has opened for the Fugees, the Lost Boys, and the Last Poets.

Bluewall Cafe
February 7, 1997
8:00pm
Free

For more information check our website: http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/sef.htm
This series is made possible by a grant from UMASS Auxiliary Services, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the Daily Collegian.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Black History Month

Editor's note: The following two pieces are the second and third part of a series dedicated to Black History Month that will run throughout the month of February on this page. Future topics include the influence of W.E.B. Du Bois, Ebonics and the Nation of Islam.

Black History's untold history

Sure, we all know when Dr. Martin Luther King was born, who Crispus Attucks is and why Eddie Murphy made Beverly Hills Cop III (well, maybe not that last one).

Yet, unbeknownst to most, there is a plethora of information all–too–conveniently left out of the history books — and as we all know, a half–truth is nothing more than a white lie.

There also exists a number of notable moments in black history to which even the most well–informed pundits could not have access — the facts relegated to mere myths as their legend spreads only by word of mouth.

Thus, for Black History Month, I have unearthed some of these pivotal events for the general education and reading pleasure of the community at large.

• The first interracial boxing match, between Greek heavyweight champ Whiteus Hopeus and a Moroccan pugilist known as Cassius, takes place off the coast of Greece circa 1000 B.C. The bout, publicized as "The Hypus in Cyprus," draws the largest attendance for any Greek sporting match in history.

Sadly, several Greek bookies are found slain after this event, one at which the majority of the Greek population bet against Cassius in favor of the Italian–born Hopeus.

• Though scholars previously toyed with the notion of Christopher Marlowe or Francis Bacon having ghost–written the works of William Shakespeare, the brilliant plays and sonnets were in fact penned by one of his contemporaries, a struggling Elizabethian hip–hop artist named Bard Dogg.

Dogg sold his words to Shakespeare to finance his independent label, Stratford Row.

C. Taylor Conner

Ambitious though his genius may have been, his efforts were an exercise in futility since recording devices wouldn't be invented for a few more centuries.

• Don Cornelius is selected as the original host of "American Bandstand" over thousands of applicants. However, a melee ensued on the program when, on the kick–off show, both Little Richard and Pat Boone are scheduled to appear — and both are planning to perform "Tutti Frutti."

All hell broke loose when Boone's bassist musses Little Richard's do, which results in what is later described by a hospital physician as "the worst slashing and scratching damage I've ever seen done by a man to a man."

Cornelius is unceremoniously fired and replaced by some Dick.

• Historians find that nefarious editing practices by the Nazis, coupled with the U.S. national teams' jealousy and racism, obscured greater acheivements by Jesse Owens in the 1936 Summer Games. In actuality, Owens competed in — and won — every event in the Olympiad, making him the highest scorer in the Games' history.

When asked in a long–lost interview if he had any trouble garnering every first place for the American team, Owens earnestly remarked, "Well, to be honest, I really can't stand that pansy running crap."

• The complete diaries of George Washington Carver are found in a broken desk drawer at Tuskegee in 1991, but professors at the school unanimously decided to keep the findings a secret, believing many of the inventions too dangerous for public knowledge.

Included in the pages are peanut–based recipes to make tennis shoes, microchips, small nuclear arms and the DNA sequence necessary to create human life. Fearing the worst — a rash of war–happy computer geniuses who sport Stan Smith copies and smell strangely of Butterfinger — the profs hide the diaries in a vault.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian Columnist.

BMCP: Falling on deaf ears

No matter how many times people in positions of power say they're listening to our needs and concerns, they're usually not. It's always been a struggle for black people to get their voices heard amongst the constant hum of prejudice and the frequent roar of flat out racism.

It's kind of like trying to hear that one, lone Reggie Miller fan at a Knicks game. Particularly on a college campus where the voices of blacks and all ALANA members aren't heard unless university money is threatened, the lie that diversity and multiculturalism is welcomed gets questioned when those same diverse and multicultural groups are finding it hard to be heard.

The ability to vocalize and express the needs of the black community here on campus has always been a concern of all members of African descent. It doesn't end or begin with just African–Americans, but extends to Cape Verdeans, Haitians, Dominicans and all members of the ALANA community.

When discrimination and oppression tries to limit the means of expression for our people, where do you turn?

In the 1970s, when black students were feeling that very kind of oppression, they formed the Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP) as a means of using communications (i.e. television, newsletters and particularly radio) to get their voices heard.

"We're about education. We're about political movement. We're about music. We're about culture," said Bannet Endale, general manager for BMCP. "Basically, communicating to our community is what's important. That's what BMCP is about."

In earlier years of BMCP, there was a newsletter (NOMMO News) and an underground radio station that aired out of New Africa House.

Now, due to funding cuts, there is no longer a newsletter and the idea of getting another one hasn't gotten past the brainstorming stages.

When it first began, BMCP was created to give black people the opportunity to express their voice, but the powers that be still remain in the way. Now, many black students aren't quite sure what BMCP is here for, other than throwing big parties (Jeans and Tee Shirts and Funk–a–thon) and getting musical acts to come and give out free stuff.

BMCP does serve a greater purpose, but if the people aren't aware that it's there for them to use, then we may lose it. It's already happened to the newsletter and it could happen with radio if we're not careful.

The quickest way to kill a black organization on campus is to let it appear that no one is interested in helping it grow. Lack of interest will put the brakes on a lot of up–and–coming black organizations and even cold stop an established one, such as BMCP.

"In the 1970s, when black students were feeling that very kind of oppression, they formed the Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP) as a as a means of using communications (i.e. television, newsletters and particularly radio) to get their voices heard...In earlier years of BMCP, there was a newsletter (NOMMO News) and an underground radio station that aired out of New Africa House."

Humphrey brown III

When you talk of giving power to the people, organizations like BMCP should come to mind. Everything we do involves communications. It's way past time for us to get on the ball as far as that goes.

We've always used music to voice our needs, but there are so many other ways to get people to listen. We should be fighting to get that newsletter back and rally for another radio station, strictly geared towards the voice of our people.

The World Wide Web is definitely the next frontier and blacks should be right in the thick of. You know everything is being done over the 'net and if you didn't know, you do now.

That's what power is all about. When you have the means to get a lot of information out to a lot of people at any given time, you have much power and you get 'nuff respect.

We're due for a little power and respect on this campus and using the resources that organizations like BMCP have is a step in the right direction. Use the little that we have, or lose a lot that we don't.

Peace and God bless.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

"I SEE AMERICA ONLINE IS STILL GRIDLOCKED!..."

Ratings do not remove responsibility

The following column is rated M-14. It contains several three syllable words, a couple of impolite ones, a reference to a bodily function and a snide comment directed at Lionel Ritchie.

I realize that the semester just started, but I thought I'd interrupt your daily perusal of the paper with a short, multiple choice quiz regardless. Eyes on your own paper and no looking ahead.

Q: Name the most blatant display of public masturbation in the past decade.

a) A Ross Perot campaign
b) The premiere of Last Action Hero
c) Any Grammy telecast where Lionel Ritchie won anything
d) The introduction of the new television ratings system

Bob Dunn

Pencils down. The correct answer is, of course, "d." Grade yourselves accordingly.

The debate over the content of television shows has been raging for at least the last four years. Everything from magic boxes that would automatically screen selected programs to the V–chip which would do the same thing but couldn't be tampered with without destroying the set were presented as viable solutions to the evils that ooze out of the dreaded box on a daily basis.

Ideas were kicked around and just as television manufacturers looked like they were about to install the chips someone realized that an ad sent to a television which is blocking the signal, is a lost ad. Presto! Faster than you could say "lost revenues" the chip was scrapped in favor of the new ratings system.

Make no mistake, the ratings system serves the television industry and no one else. Not families, not kids, not teachers, no one except the people who run networks. It does so in two ways.

One, it makes the networks look good. "Look how much we care about you and yours; we've rated our programs! Now you'll know at a glance how much sex and violence you can expect for paying your cable bill on time."

This, as you probably have guessed by now, is a load of crap. Slapping an arbitrarily selected coded rating in the corner of the screen during the opening credits of a show is not "concern," it's compliance. If the networks "cared" (as if anyone is going to believe that in the first place) why not produce better shows instead of the usual drek? Rating abysmal television like "Family Matters," "The Single Guy," "Dark Skies" or anything on UPN is akin to putting perfume on a pig. It's still a pig, spritzing Polo Sport on the critter won't change that.

Two, the networks get to mass produce their usual drivel without having to cut back ad rates on controversial shows. For example, if the V–chip were the censorship method du jour, then sponsors of shows like "NYPD Blue" and "Millennium" would probably be less likely to shell out money for a show that will be physically blocked from a home than one that has a largely ignored icon shoved in the corner.

The networks win on both fronts. They present the illusion of giving a tinker's damn about the furor over content and they don't lose a dime of revenue. The losers, of course, are Joe and Jane Public, but the viewer's concerns rarely enter into decisions made by networks.

How did things get this far in the first place? How has television existed and functioned for over 40 years without an organized ratings system setting vague standards of behavior and morality?

I hate to say it but it seems to me that it's another indication of the unwillingness of the public to take responsibility for themselves and the families that they claim to be protecting.

Does anyone else find it odd that the people who cry "family values" the most are usually the first to fob off their family responsibilities onto another institution such as schools, television, etcetera?

"I want my kids to pray more. Damn it, we ought to have prayer in the schools!" "I want my kids to watch better television. Damn it, the networks ought to decide what's appropriate."

Why don't the people who claim to endorse family values value their families and help decide what to watch instead of letting some faceless executives who couldn't care less worry about it. As much as people would like to pass the buck, schools and television networks don't and shouldn't raise children, parents should. Parents ought to remodel their roles as role models and dispensers of advice and help, before the stereotypical notion of a child raised by television becomes an all too common reality.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

A 'not very smart' move

To the Editor:

My four year–old saw my copy of this past Friday's Collegian (Jan. 31) and he pointed out that in both pictures on the front page there were people smoking. He said they were "not very smart 'cuz they are smoking." I agreed with him that it is not very smart to smoke.

And this made me think that the Photo Editor is "not very smart" because he or she choose two obviously "not very smart" people for the front page of the paper. I'm not asking you to censor photos, but wouldn't one "not very smart person" be enough for the front page?

Dickie Wallace
Amherst

Why you should care...

To the editor:

For much of this school year, the Graduate Employee Organization/UAW Local 2322 has been presenting the issues that face graduate student employees on campus. Often in our stories and our letters, we have mentioned what undergraduates and community members could do to support our union's cause. Many people have responded with tremendous efforts to help our effort to make the university a more diverse and open institution, and I want to personally thank everyone of them.

Still, every day people ask GEO/UAW members two very important and honest questions. What can I do or why should I care?

The most important thing that students and community members can do is also the easiest. Talk to your friends, classmates, professors and TA's about all of the goods about UMass and about the things that need improvement on campus. Talk to a parent and ask them what it takes to be a full–time student and full–time parent. Ask a TA how hard it is to live on $6,900. Ask your friends if they know anyone that had to drop out of school because they couldn't afford it anymore. Ask a worker how they feel when they are faced with having to give back their raises to pay for an increase in parking fees. Ask yourself, could I find myself in their shoes one day?

If someone were to do these things, the answer to the second question, why should I care, will be answered for them. Every day on this campus, people are struggling just to stay in school, just to make ends meet, just to pay the bills, just to get by. We can change this. GEO/UAW has already made a great deal of progress in improving the lives of workers and students, but there is still a long way to go. With your help, and with all of us working together, we can change the University for the better.

Stop by the GEO/UAW office in the Student Union building and talk with a union member. Challenge us to prove why our issues and concerns are important to the whole community. Simply by talking about our lives can begin the process of creating a climate for positive social change.

Patrick Crowley
GEO President

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five–College Area.

Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.

Anonymous submissions will not be printed.

The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.

Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mike Burke, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003. Faxes can be sent to (413) 545–1592.

Arts & Living

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Volume CVI Issue 77 Thursday February 6, 1997

Sexism In the Media

To be seen or heard?

Gwen Stefani of No Doubt steps to the front. COURTESY CAPITOL RECORDS

Alanis Morisette and No Doubt are sitting pretty on top of the billboard charts. Sure, we have come a long way since the '80s when every video on MTV depicted a ton of scantily clad girls being sprayed with water. We also have Ani DiFranco, Tori Amos, and bands like Hole representing the feminist opinion in the "alternative" scene. Yet I wonder how far we have really come.

Take a peak into the latest copy of Rolling Stone or Spin and notice how all the female artists are pictured wearing really tight pants and crop tops. The two famous female rap artists today — Foxy Brown and Lil' Kim — are known for the sexual scenarios they describe in their songs rather then for any actual skills they may have. Think about how the lead singer of No Doubt sings in a child like voice and is constantly looking submissive, blurring the lines between child like innocence and sexual desire.

Adam Dlugacz

While I agree we have come a long way we still have quit a bit to do. The first problem is that female artists are considered a rarity. Every female–fronted band — Luscious Jackson, Throwing Muses, Cranberries, Mazzy Star — are lauded for the fact they have females rather then based on their musical ability. No one ever stops and says "wow, he's an excellent male vocalist" or "his manly vocals really set his band apart from the rest".

The other thing I have noticed is that it seems to be a pre– requisite that female artists must be attractive. The lead singers of any of the aforementioned bands all have attractive singers. Furthermore they are always in the forefront of the band's album covers, pictures, or videos. This rule obviously does not apply to men as John Popper of the Blues Traveler or Adam Durewitz of the Counting Crowes would indicate. I'm not saying that female artists are hired purely based on their looks, as they are all talented. I'm just saying that they are being advertised based on their looks.

I also wonder why female artists who put politics and career first don't act feminine are labeled as angry. Courtney Love is portrayed as an angry artist and the spotlight on her is on the heroine habit she kicked and the fact her husband was Kurt Cobain. Furthermore people accused her of marrying Cobain for her career! I doubt those same accusations would be hurled at a man. Furthermore because she screamed rather then sang, because she wore torn clothes, it was insinuated that she was a whore or at least not very feminine — if there is something wrong with that. It is taken for granted that men are angry or might want to dress weird but as soon as a female makes those decisions it is the headline for Rolling Stone.

So next time you see a No Doubt video or hear a Jewel song ask yourself why their singers are practically naked. Think about the fact that most popular female vocalists have child like voices. Think about the images they are portraying and ask yourself if you really want to support that.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian Staff member.

What's really being Advertised?

Michelle Hillman

The need for good women's magazines is one that plagues high school girls looking for empowerment and college women wanting to expand knowledge of women's issues occurring in the United States and internationally. Go into your local CVS or bookstore and look at the array of magazines offered to young and adult women. Upon first glance the consumer will notice scantily clad women, breasts abound and air brushed until the model almost looks human. Most often her hair is styled perfect, her skin glows and her nails have not seen a hard day's work in a long time.

The queen of this magazine gang, which can only be referred to as oppressive to women, is Cosmopolitan, which has a circulation of about three million. Cosmopolitan offers women nothing but ways to please a man; ways to sexually please a man; how to turn on your man; and let's not forget how to play dumb and never have a career that challenges your man.

There is a slew of other magazines which are just as damaging and just by examining their covers the reader may conclude, she has just wasted her $2.50 on something Dionne Warwick could have told her — it's trash.

For instance, this month's cover of Glamour, which has a circulation of 2,081,121, features such well researched, socially conscious articles like "Secrets of Seduction, Sexual Health Survey, and Six Critical Mistakes Women Make," but that's not it — it's also the "Great Hair Issue."

Other magazines, which appear to be a little more trendy and not as insulting to a woman's intelligence, also offer the same type of stories. Marie Claire, a fairly new publication, features such journalistic works as "Look Best Undressed: Max your body potential" and "Two Hundred New Looks." Mademoiselle is one magazine that veers away from men for a moment and realizes that women do indeed have other friends. Their stories include "Your friends and You," "Want him back?" and "Making Love Stick the Second Time Around."

Basically, the market is telling women though you are now a successful, intelligent woman who holds down a career and family and owns her own business you still must be concerned with your appearance and present which includes must dress for success which includes daily beauty rituals and special diets in order to be successful, maybe not in the real world, but in the fantasy realm that the magazines allow women to escape into.

These magazines damage a woman's self image and assume that all women are alike and want their lives to revolve

Turn to MAGAZINES, page 6

What are the actresses' REAL assets?

Courtney Love shines bright and shows a little leg. COURTESY GEFFEN RECORDS

Penelope Ann Miller runs to you. COURTESY PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Nicollette Sheridan strikes a provocative pose. COURTESY RICO TOWNS

Adam Levine

A few days ago I went to review an awful new film called Beverly Hills Ninja. I left the theater feeling shocked about what I had just witnessed. I could not recall a time ever feeling as disappointed with a character's representation before. The female lead had one purpose throughout the film's narrative: to remain an object of male sexual desire. The character, played by Nicolette Sheridan, provided the role of fueling Chris Farley's masculinity and also that of the male audience. Everything about her character was completely sexual. I couldn't believe how blatantly sexist Hollywood was for allowing this representation.

I later began to ponder this situation further and realized that almost every film I could recall also treated female characters unfairly. My main concern was the image that Hollywood intentionally gives to the public that actors are individuals we can all identify with. Whether it was Marilyn Monroe and James Dean, or more recently Julia Roberts and Tom Cruise, audiences look up to these celebrities.

However, Hollywood portrays women in film as dependent on the male characters. This unfortunate portrayal is unwarranted and unfair and for some reason unchanged for over a century.

As far back as silent film, women have continuously been the victims of male heterosexual desire. One example is the 1919 German psychological thriller The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari. The female character has come between two male friends who each intend to win her affection. Her sole purpose in the film's text is to represent this tension and later as a sexual possession of Dr. Caligari himself.

In the '30s and '40s, the emergence of film noir also elevated negative female stereotypes. The female characters in these films were referred to as femme fatales. They were strong sexual women credited with committing betrayal and seductive evil.

Hollywood's representations were no better than other countries. In the 1950s, Marilyn Monroe became the quintessential sex goddess and an object of male desire. Although she may have used this power to control men in order to achieve whatever she wanted, the fact that the situation existed in the first place is what I feel to be controversial.

In Howard Hawks' 1955 comedy Gentlemen Prefer Blondes, every male in the film tries to buy Monroe's affection with gifts. She uses this to her advantage, but the fact that these male characters still perceived her in this way is wrong. Hollywood was telling its audience that it is acceptable to exploit women with expensive gifts in the hope of securing their love. This mentality is expressing that women are no better than material goods.

Modern day Hollywood is as irresponsible as ever. Female characters exist in storylines as either the aforementioned sexual objects or dependent individuals who exist to support the male leads. Even a film with a female main character such as Crossing Delancy still portrays the

Turn to ASSETS, page 6

Layout & Design by Josh Sylvester & Adam Dlugacz

White Mountains offer winter fun

New Hampshire ski resorts a short ways away

You don't have to head for the Rockies to enjoy packed powder ski conditions when you can enjoy New Hampshire's majestic White Mountains. Thanks to Tuesday night's seasonable snowfall New Hampshire is experiencing a fantastic winter full of shredding, gliding, sliding and plowing through powder. Hop in a car heading north on interstate 91 and watch the dismal gray slush of western Massachusetts turn into New Hampshire's sparkling banks of snow.

Located in central New Hampshire, in a 3 1/2 hour car drive one can easily transcend to Waterville Valley's winter playground. Surrounded by the White Mountains, Waterville Valley is not just a place for alpine skiers and snowboarders, but it is also a great place for Nordic skiers, snowshoers, and skaters.

Tuesday night's snowstorm continued well into Wednesday and added over a foot of new snow to Waterville Valley's packed powder snow conditions.

All of Waterville Valley's 50 alpine trails are open to the public, including its Backcountry section, as well as over 100 km of cross country and snowshoe trails.

Just north of Waterville Valley sits Loon Mountain, carved out of the heart of New Hampshire's White Mountain National Forest. An adventure center for all winter enthusiasts, Loon Mountain not only entertains alpine skiing and snowboarding, but also hosts Nordic skiing, snowshoeing, tubing and ice skating.

Reporting a 50-76 inch base, Loon Mountain offers the public a 100x300 foot half pipe, an exclusive Eastern US Learning Site for the new Atomic CarvX parabolic skis, evening snow tubing, a wild life theater, ice skating and 55 km of combined groomed and ungroomed cross-country ski trails.

Although Waterville Valley and Loon Mountain are both intermediate mountains full of gentle slopes and terrific vistas, the combination of February's recent heavy snow fall and mild temperatures have lead to challenging fields of moguls.

Don't be daunted by February's changing terrain; instead be aware and ski with care. Relax and let moguls facilitate your turns by following these helpful tips.

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

(1) Position yourself above a "line" of small moguls in a row, facing your body downhill with your hands up in front of you as if you were holding a cafeteria tray.

(2) Aim your skis for the top of the first mogul and start your turn.

(3) Reach down the hill with a solid pole plant and turn on the top of the mogul.

(4) Transferring your weight to the new downhill ski look ahead for the top of the next mogul.

(5) Starting with four moguls at a time continue this procedure linking moguls in a "line" with an "s" type of turn.

Fly with snowflakes through the air at Waterville Valley and Loon Mountain winter resorts over moguls, powder and ice on skis, tubes, skates and snowboards. Head for the White Mountains with a group of winter playmates and enjoy New Hampshire's packed powder conditions.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

■ assets

continued from page 1

woman as determining whether or not she needs a man to be happy. Of course, by the film's conclusion she has found a suitable partner and can know go about living her life properly. A supposed feminist picture like Jane Campion's The Piano is not all that much better. Holly Hunter's character must also choose which man she truly loves. Although she may be a strong lead, my point is, why must film portray women in such a circumstance in the first place? Why do female characters have to be in the situation where they must be dependent on men?

One brilliant exception to this dilemma is last years independent feature Girlstown. The film contained strong female characters in situations where males were irrelevant. They did not depend on their boyfriends or strive to win the affection of anyone. I hope a film such as this sets an example to Hollywood and for the future of the film industry in general. Only time will tell if film could help destroy negative existing stereotypes, but it sure seems we have along way to go.

Adam Levine is a Collegian columnist.

■ magazines

continued from page 5

around shopping, make-up and hair styles. They also say that even though this thing they call the "women's movement" is slowly catching on, women still want to romp around the house lying on their bed or the couch all day in something that resembles dental floss.

It is not only these magazines that prey on women; there are also entertaining magazines available to young women, which prime and condition them into believing acceptability centers on looks, clothes and boys. Seventeen offers nothing but "The Love Issue," featuring mind stimulating articles like "Does he like you? — seven ways to tell," and a quiz entitled "Is he crush worthy?"

What is wrong with this picture? The diet industry is one of the largest in America, young women have esteem and confidence problems, eating disorders remain a large problem in the United States and yet American women are still purchasing the junk that perpetuates women's oppression. It is not as though there are not any feminist magazines on the market, but that women are not buying them, because if they were, magazines like Cosmo would not be in business.

Perhaps the problem lies in women wanting to feel feminine, something that feminist publications like Ms. tend to leave out. Instead they include thoughtful editorials, feature stories about women around the world and leave out the cheesy sun tan oil advertisements and Virginia Slims ads insisting "You've come a long way baby," when we haven't.

The answer lies in marketing strategies. Think about it — if all the fashion magazines were more like Ms., refusing advertisements that degrade and display women, what would happen to the market? Women would no longer have to buy wrinkle creams or those ridiculous "virtual boobs" that feel just like your own to insert into your bra. They would have no one to convince them to buy useless beauty tools in order to complete with the women featured in ads.

Don't get me wrong — it is not a woman's fault that they are purchasing these magazines. Not everyone wants to be a feminist and some feminists may enjoy reading these magazines. I feel, however, if women had more of a choice, perhaps something in between a fashion magazine and one from a feminist perspective that talked about real issues in a young woman's life and left out ads of perfection, things would be a lot better.

Michelle Hillman is a Collegian columnist.

'Hercules' & 'Xena' at the front of the fantasy pack

By Dennis Anderson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery — and in television, imitation can sometimes be darn near the whole show — the heroic fantasy series "Hercules" must be getting a swelled head.

In recent months, such fantasy adventure shows have popped up faster in television syndication than "Friends" clones hit the networks.

Following the path of "Hercules: The Legendary Journeys" are new offerings drawn from such staples of the old cliffhanger genre as "Robin Hood," "Tarzan," and "Sinbad," each circulating in the off-peak hours of the 50- or 60-channel TV spectrum that syndication serves.

How much mythical traffic will the system bear? Well, any show survives only on its ability to pull an audience and hold it. On the successful side, "Highlander," a heroic predecessor of "Hercules," recently wrapped its 100th episode, and its global audience can order from a catalog of licensed goods that range from 10-buck T-shirts to lethal "Highlander" swords that cost hundreds of dollars.

In audience pull and popularity, "Hercules," in its third season, and its companion spin-off, "Xena: Warrior Princess," already have shown their rippling muscles.

The shows, both rated TV-PG, are vying with "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" for pride of place in syndication popularity. Rob Tapert, the executive producer of both series, describes his creations as "a guilty pleasure for professors, relevant for kids" and populated with scantily clad females "for the guys who can't find the keys to the pickup."

"We knew we could make a better show than 'Baywatch,'" Tapert said.

The popularity of Herc & Xena isn't related to nostalgia for corny 1950s gladiator movies or the "Conan The Barbarian" mold. They just don't look, or sound, like a bunch of stuff that happened on television in an earlier life.

The Hercules character played by Kevin Sorbo talks like a surfer guy and makes his heroic warrior move with the ease of quarterback Joe Montana.

Lucy Lawless, who plays Xena, is a kind of she-hunky leather queen who sails through the air like Bruce Lee and could be a dream date — as long as you surrender the car keys.

"We wanted action, we wanted monsters and, for those who catch on, they'll find it funny," Tapert said.

Shot in the lush, forested locale of New Zealand, Hercules and Xena offer a fantasy universe populated with dragons, harpies, cyclops and sandworms. The special effects created by Flat Earth productions rival those of the big screen.

Tapert and his colleague, executive producer Sam Raimi, vaulted into the mythic countryside of Hercules from the universe of action

When they were approached to create an action television movie derived from the Hercules legend, they hooted.

"Nobody cares about Hercules,' we said. 'Give us Conan.' They told us Conan's not available," Tapert recalled in an interview. Antecedents of "Hercules" and "Xena" were uncool even as camp. Gladiator movies? Ugh. Barbarian flicks with leaden dialogue. But in a recent Xena episode, the warrior princess gushes, "Don't hate me because I'm beautiful!" Then she tosses a bad guy with a full-arm twist and sends up the old hair-coloring commercial in the same instant.

Hercules regularly dispenses lines like "Come on, guys!" or observes sagely, "That's a big dragon."

The tone delivers a show adults can laugh with and kids can revel in.

"I just wanted to make the kind of show that I would have watched," the boyish Tapert said. "The kind of show I would have fought my parents to watch."

But adults are watching, too. A fan convention in Burbank drew 4,000 people on a recent weekend. Plenty of adults, many in costume, turned out to see their heroes, test their steel and swarm for autographs from Sorbo and Lawless.

Patricia Winston, a systems analyst who says she plans to get her black belt before she's 50, turned out wearing harem pants, a gold vest and a nasty-looking whip.

Working in a technology-intense environment, she noted, makes the Xena fantasy therapeutic.

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St Northampton

ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME

thursday, february 6 • 10 pm
lettuce
& VIPER HOUSE
10 piece psychedelic orchestra from Burlington, VT & Happy Valley's funkiest • $5 adv.

friday, february 7 • 10 pm
CHUCKLEHEAD
major funk • $8 adv.

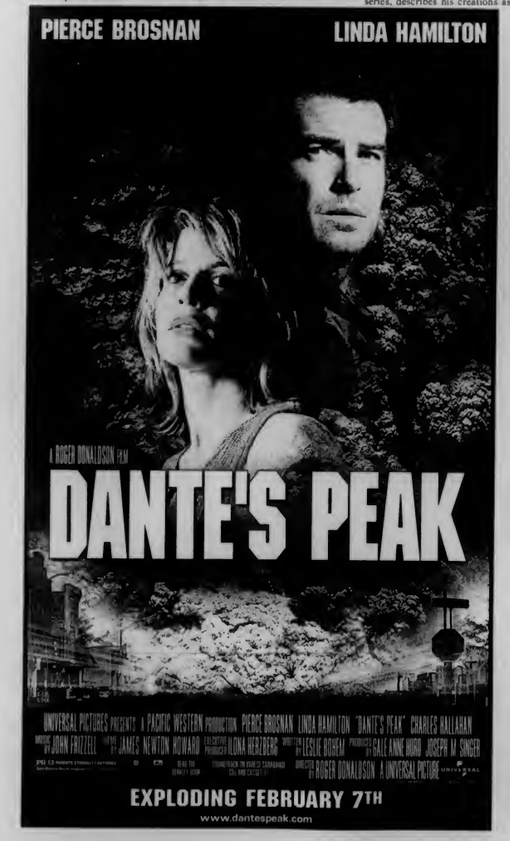
saturday, february 8 • 10 pm
JAZZ MANDOLIN project
groovy acoustic improv. • $6 adv.

sunday, february 9 • 7&10 pm
MADELEINE peyroux
billie holiday meets patsy cline!! • $10 adv.

tuesday, february 11 • 7 pm
CHARMAINE NEVILLE BAND
new orleans mardi gras party •$10 adv.

wednesday, february 12 • 7 pm
ANSON funderburgh & THE ROCKETS featuring SAM MYERS
Ripping Texas Blues • $8 adv.

thursday, february 13 • 10 pm
ominous seapods & YOLK
double your pleasure, double your fun • $5 adv.



friday, february 21 • 7&10 pm
BO DIDDLEY
be knows. $20 adv.

MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK

Coming: Ronnie Earl Valentine's Day Party, The Connells, Treble Charger, Nathan & the Zydeco Cha Chas, Poncho Sanchez, Tarika Sammy, Gillian Welch, Marcus Roberts Trio, Galactic, Tommy Fletcher

TICKETS: At the door, For the Record in Amherst, at the Northampton Box Office, or call 586-8686 to charge by phone.

24-hour Concert info:
413.584.0610

Fax from sarajevo
joe kubert
The true story of a family and their struggle to escape a war ravaged city
February 6th - April 6th, 1997
February 8th
10:00am:
Museum opens to members only
10:30am:
Members only tour by Joe Kubert
12:00pm:
Museum opens to public
1:00pm-4:00pm:
artist signing
6:00pm-9:00pm:
reception $5.00 admission
Or become a member and enjoy a full day of events for FREE!
140 Main St.
Northampton
MA 01060
(413)-586-8545

Wide World of a cappella comes to Valley

Local favorites "The Doo Wop Shop" will represent UMass in the Silver Chord Bowl. COURTESY DOO WOP SHOP

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

The Northampton Arts Council and the Generators of the Greater Northampton Chamber of Commerce follow up the second week of the Four Sundays in February series in Northampton with a double whammy — the second annual "A Cappella Fest '97: 100% Pure and Unplugged." On Feb. 8 at 8 p.m., the Council presents the "Wide World of A Cappella" and the 13th annual Silver Chord Bowl" on Feb. 9 at 2 p.m.

The "Wide World of A Cappella" show is an evening combining three groups which shows the wide range that a cappella can cover. Three Native American women — Pura Fe Crescioni, Soni Moreno and Jennifer Kreisburg make up Ulali. Critically acclaimed, Ulali comes to Northampton after an impressive performing schedule, including the opening gala of the Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian and adding to the "Cultural Olympiad," a component of the 1996 Summer Olympics at Centennial Olympic Park in Atlanta.

Joining Ulali in the "Wide World of A Cappella" are the Yale Whiffenpoofs — at 88 years the oldest collegiate a cappella group in America. The Whiffenpoofs have become an institution unto themselves, with an impressive group of American musicians having joined their performances in the past, including Cole Porter and Ella Fitzgerald. Closing the show on the 8th is The Chosen Few, an a cappella group that performs religious hymns, by combining sweet melodies with fiery messages. The Chosen Few are regulars 10 the Pioneer Valley, with shows at both Springfield Technical Community College and UMass under their belt.

Founded by the Northampton Chamber of Commerce, the Silver Chord Bowl is the annual competition that brings together a cappella groups from various colleges. Area groups include last year's Silver Chord Bowl champions the Notables from Smith College and the Amherst College DQ. UMass will be represented by both The Doo Wop Shop and Meanwhile...

The Wide World of A Cappella will take place on Feb. 8 at 8 p.m. at the Academy of Music in Northampton. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door the night of the show. The Silver Chord Bowl will be presented on Feb. 9 at 2 p.m. at the Academy. All tickets are available at For the Record in Amherst and by credit card at the Academy of Music and the Northampton Box Office.

Stars shed pounds for roles

By Amanda Covarrubias
Associated Press

When Robert De Niro packed on the pounds to play boxer Jake LaMotta in Raging Bull, everyone thought he had gone off the deep end. That was taking method acting to the extreme, they said. Or was it?

Nowadays, actors think nothing of shedding 20 pounds here and putting on 30 pounds there for the right movie role... and, of course, the accompanying seven-figure salary.

It's not enough to merely play a character, they have to LIVE in that person's skin... even if that means expanding or shrinking it into unnatural proportions.

To achieve their physical goals, they hire high-priced personal trainers, rise at 4 a.m. for pre-call workouts and heed the advice of nutritionists, who will tell them how to do it in a healthy way... or as healthy as possible.

Think of Demi Moore toning up her already hard-bodied physique to bare it all as a nightclub dancer in Striptease. Dennis Quaid practically starving himself into gaunt cowboy Wyatt Earp.

Courtney Love, who plays a dying, AIDS-infected Althea Flynt in The People vs. Larry Flynt, lost 30 pounds in just a few weeks for the role.

Minnie Driver, on the other hand, gained some 30 pounds to make her ugly-duckling character more believable in Circle of Friends. Keanu Reeves went through grueling training to tone up for Little Buddha (though he was more than a little hefty in last year's box-office dud, Chain Reaction).

Chris Imbo, a personal trainer who runs his own studio in New York, helped model-turned-actress Elle MacPherson tone up for her swimsuit calendar, then quickly become "voluptuous" for her role in "Sirens."

The lanky MacPherson wanted to be toned and thin for the pictorial that had her posing in next-to-nothing swimsuits.

To achieve that goal, Imbo designed a 10-week workout for her that brought her into the gym two hours a day, five days a week. To get the sleek look, the former cover girl performed weight training focusing on heavy lifting and quick repetitions.

In addition, MacPherson and her trainer went for long runs in Central Park. She also followed a low-fat diet heavy on fruits, vegetables and grains, and light on carbohydrates.

After the intense slimming-down period, MacPherson had about two months to gain 25-pounds for her "Sirens" role that called for a more well-rounded woman.

"Basically, it just meant she didn't have to work out as hard," says Imbo, whose advice doesn't come cheap. He charges $150 an hour, which he says is reasonable by personal trainers' standards.

Billy Baldwin didn't hesitate to shell out the bucks to prepare for his role as the romantic lead opposite Sharon Stone in "Sliver." His goal was to look more muscular, toned and defined for his revealing love scenes.

"He wanted to look better than Sharon Stone," Imbo said. "It's not easy."

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
80 GA ADM. WITH STUDENT I.D.
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST
SUND, FEB 9

SUN. MAR. 2 • 8:00 pm
Chapin Music Hall
Mt. Holyoke College • South Hadley, MA
General Admission - $14.50 Adv.
Advance tickets available at B-Side Records in Northampton, For The Record in Amherst, Tix Unlimited at U. Mass, and all ProTix outlets. To charge by phone call (413) 732-0202

The Newest D.J. and Dancing in the Area AT KAI CH!
Introducing Klub Kai
Thursday, Friday and Saturday Nights 9:30 - 1:30 a.m.
YOU'RE INVITED TO OUR
GRAND OPENING PARTY!!
FRIDAY & SATURDAY-FEBRUARY 21ST& 22ND
FREE FOOD&GIVE-A-WAYS
1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS
LIMITED SELECTIONS
9:30pm-Close • Eat in Only
20% OFF
ALL FOOD ITEMS
THURSDAY NIGHT International NIGHT Everyone Welcome!
FRIDAY NIGHT Ladies NIGHT No Cover Charge for the Ladies!
SATURDAY NIGHT College HOUSE PARTY All 5 Area Colleges are welcome!
FRIENDLY • CLEAN • PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
DRINK SPECIALS • DRAFT BEER SPECIALS
POSITIVE I.D. AND PROPER ATTIRE REQUIRED

GOT THE WINTER "BLAHS", COME IN TODAY & SAVE!!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT $11.99 + DEP CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS
BECKS & BECKS DARK 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP
HARP LAGER 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
LITE, LITE ICE & MILLER BEER CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $15.49 + DEP
SAMUEL ADAMS DOUBLE BOCK & ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, LITE, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCK, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG $39.99 + DEP

CARLO ROSSI WINES ALL FLAVORS 4.0 LITER $7.49
JOLIESSE WINES MERLOT, CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML. $4.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF MERLOT, CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LITER $8.99
MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE 750 ML. $7.99
CIDER JACK 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99

POPOV VODKA 1.75L $9.99
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $7.49
MALIBU CARIBBEAN RUM 750 ML. $8.99
CLUNY SCOTCH 1.75L $12.99
AMARETTO DI SARONNO LIQUEUR 750 ML. $14.49

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/6/97 THRU WEDS. 2/12/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Thursday-Friday-Saturday
Drink Specials
Red Dog 16oz. Drafts 1.50
Captain Morgan & Coke 2.00
12 oz Rolling Rock Bottles $1.50
Appetizer & Nachos 1/2 Price
New Hours
3 - 5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11pm
Beat The Cover
Get in before 10 PM and No Cover
Dance Music by Pure Energy
D.J. Bob Paulin
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street

New tribute albums for Badfinger and the Misfits

THE SOFTIES
Winter Pageant
K Records

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Come and Get It: A Tribute to Badfinger
Copper Records

It would be relatively easy to dismiss Rose Melberg. The indie–pop heroine with the dreamy voice seems cursed with a legion of eerily dedicated followers more intent on turning her into a walking Hello Kitty than paying much intention to the actual music (or the actual person for that matter). Luckily pop connoisseurs have been taking notes lately and Melberg, with her two bands The Softies and Go Sailor, is finally being recognized as a songwriter of astonishing depth and skill.

Winter Pageant, The Softies' second full length, is a good place to start for those who have yet to hear Melberg's work. It's deceptively simple stuff — a handful of gently strummed chords and Melberg's whispered, sugary sweet voice are as gentle and wistful as falling snow. The other half of The Softies, Jen Sbragia, plays lead guitar like drops of rain and adds more angelic harmonies to the heavenly mix.

Trax On Trax Off

The startling beauty of this (and it is intensely beautiful) almost distracts from the substance of the songwriting underneath. Melberg's forte is the snapshot — the tiny explosions of intense happiness and sadness that occur every day. She writes clearly and simply, wrapping her tales of love won and lost in real humanity — adorable fairy tale crushes and bitter, dream–shattering disappointment.

Winter Pageant is a darker album than most of The Softies' earlier work. "Over" is easily one of the bleakest songs in Melberg's catalog. "Watching the insects devour the last of the summer flowers," it begins. Chronicling the disintegration of a relationship, it ends with the heartbreaking lines, "watching the ocean take back every wish I make... wishing the waves would take back me."

How the Softies jump from such terrible heartbreak to the jubilant daydreams of "Excellent" ("from here to Heaven or across any sea, it's true") and "The Best Days" ("waking for a moment to say that we'd be fine") is, perhaps, a little baffling, but it all rings true in the shimmering vocals and hushed, intimate setting.

If there is a flaw in the Softies' plan it's that 14 songs of quiet gentleness can be hard to swallow on the first listen, and only two songs feature anything beyond the two guitar/vocal arrangement (one song has a glockenspiel, one has a piano). Patience is repaid, however, as Melberg proves herself to be one of the more exciting and talented songwriters around — deserving of a respected place among pop's elite. A (Bradley Skaught)

Badfinger is the ultimate pop–geek band. Unable to shake off the deadly "New Beatles" tag in the early '70s, they remained relatively obscure, but they earned a reputation for constructing brilliant melodic masterpieces and lacing them with intelligent arrangements and a fair dose of heavy guitar crunch. They were, perhaps, the perfect '70s power pop band, influencing many much–revered bands like Big Star and The Replacements.

Some of the bands they influenced appear on Come and Get It: A Tribute to Badfinger. It's a hit or miss affair. Bands like The Plimsouls and 20/20 (both of whom took the Badfinger formula to exciting new heights in their heyday) give heartfelt, powerful renditions, but sound an awful lot like themselves and don't do anything particularly inventive with the material. Overall, straightforwardness is the main problem with the album. In fact, a reunited Knack play it so straight they might just have dubbed their own vocals on top of Badfinger's original "No Matter What."

There are some exceptions, of course. The Loud Family sounds spirited on "We're for the Dark" and Adrian Belew is positively inspiring on a rollicking "Come and Get It." Other artists turning in impressive performances are P. Hux, Chris Von Sneidern, and a wonderful track from the reclusive Dwight Twilley (let's hope the liner notes' promise of more new Twilley comes true).

In the end, however, one is left with a feeling of "so what?" Maybe it's a testament to Badfinger that the great artists here couldn't find anything to add to the originals. Or maybe it's true that tribute albums are the pet rocks of the '90s — they're completely useless, but everybody has one.

Sonic Youth and R.E.M. do not appear on this album, despite the odds. B– (Bradley Skaught)

THE STRING CHEESE INCIDENT
Born on the Wrong Planet
Whibble Tunes / BMI

What do you get when you combine some funky knock–kneed Egyptian line dancing, a dash of smooth–talking hip– hop/jazz, a bit of square dance doe–see–doe (swing your partner 'round you go), a ton of boogie–down–let–it–all–out–spin–into–space–Snoopy–nose–in–the–air noodles, a tad of slow motion wooden shoe swing and a splash of Irish jig? Invariably, you get the gleeful witch's brew that is the String Cheese Incident's new album, Born on the Wrong Planet. Self–described as "Funkalatino–afrojazzadelic bluegrass," the Incident is little–kid music for those with more sophisticated tastes. Or, simply put, Born on the Wrong Planet is an impressive conglomeration of tunes stuffed with complex musical arrangements and likeable words.

Though much of the CD has a pronounced country/ bluegrass edge to it, the Incident cannot be limited to just one or two genres. Some songs, like "Black Clouds," or "Johnny Cash" contain soaring Phish–reminiscent riffs and hilariously absurd lyrics, while others, like "Lester Had a Coconut," are imbued with Caribbean calypso rhythms guaranteed to make your feet move of their own volition. This Colorado band may not be number one on the charts, but their unique weirdness and ultra–fun, funky blend of styles have allowed them to sell out 600–plus venues easily.

If your face is in sore need of a pure, ear–to–ear grin, pop this new disc in, listen up and you'll soon take the String Cheese Incident (despite their silly name) quite seriously. B+

(Jean Sienkewicz)

COURTESY MARINA CHAVEZ

Redd Kross — a shadow of their former selves?

REDD KROSS
Show World
Mercury

The essence of power pop has been constant for over 30 years. The Who and the Kinks were the first to mix up a cocktail consisting of one part catchy melody, two parts massive guitar overload, and a finger of angst for good measure. From Cheap Trick and the Go–Go's right up through Weezer and Foo Fighters, the formu-

Turn to TRAX, page 10

Photography exhibit at Jones shows war from afar

By Julia Casson
Collegian Correspondent

"Zones of Separation: The Struggle for a Multi–ethnic Bosnia" is the title of the touching and moving documentary photography exhibit now open at the Burnett Gallery at Jones Library in Amherst.

These black and white photographs serve as a source of knowledge for those who did not experience this war first– hand and will be on exhibit until the end of February. The exhibit's photographs portray the scars of a war–torn country and the despair that is felt by so many of the survivors.

Glenn Ruga, Director of Friends of Bosnia, a Hadley– based relief organization, and Frank Ward, staff photographer at Amherst College, took the photos during a trip to Bosnia in 1995.

Other photos were taken by Ruga during a trip to Bosnia while delivering supplies. Barbara Ayotte contributed by writing the text to the exhibit. The photographs have been viewed at Northampton Center of Arts, University of North Carolina–Chapel Hill, Brown University, and will soon be on exhibit at Amherst College.

In these photographs, memories and pain are seen clearly in the expressions of men, women, and children. Over 200,000 Bosnians were killed in the government's plan to create a pure Serb Republic.

Others, however, lost their families and were expelled from their homes, while their villages were destroyed. The photographs showed the demolished buildings and homes of the survivors. Powerful pictures are displayed of 14 individuals crammed into a one room housing project and adolescents trying to rebuild their lives. The strength of these victims of war are evident throughout the exhibit.

The pictures were taken and are being shown so that the public is educated so that the faces of war are not forgotten.

The exhibit will on view Feb. 3 through Feb. 28. Hours are Mon., Wed., Fri., and Sat., 9 a.m. – 5 p.m. and Tues. and Thurs. until 9 p.m. For more information call 413–586– 6450.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

"Refugees, Hrasnica" is one of the photos on display at the Jones Library.

Two young pianists with new CDs share guitarist

Welcome back, everyone. That said, let's get right down to the matter at hand: jazz and blues. This, the first "J/B Weekly" of the semester has, as its featured new releases, two CDs from two young lion pianists.

The first artist is Stephen Scott. This 27–year–old New Yorker's new album, The Beautiful Thing (Verve), features many different line–ups all taking a shot at achieving some groove or another. Scott jumps around a lot on the CD, style–wise, allowing for a nice variety.

Latin rhythms and sensibilities permeate songs like the title track, and "La Mesha" (the latter by Kenny Dorham; "Blue Bossa" is also a Dorham song on The Beautiful Thing), while soft piano trio jazz takes over on the original "What Words Will Never Say," and a sweet rendition of the "I Love Lucy" T.V. show theme.

Jazz/Blues Weekly
BY JOSHUA BOYD

Scott also lets his collaborators show off, like saxophonists Kenny Garrett and Branford Marsalis on "Blue Bossa," and saxophonist Ron Blake on Wayne Shorter's "Oriental Folk Song." Here and there through the disc, guitarist Russell Malone drops smooth and then vicious guitar solos making him the MVP of this disc. Scott is a good composer, also.

After the March 1996 sessions that produced The Beautiful Thing, Russell Malone had another appointment for his guitar playing. This was for pianist Benny Green's new album, Kaleidoscope (Blue Note). This album is not as varied as Scott's, but Green is a more interesting pianist, if not as good a composer.

Most of this album is re–bop. A lot of it would have sounded great on Blue Note albums in the '50s, as there just isn't much imaginative stuff here. But, as I said, Green can keep you attentive with his playing, especially on the sweet ballads "Thursday's Lullaby" and "Patience" (no, not the Guns 'n' Roses song). He also brings in some stars to help him, such as veteran Ron Carter on bass and saxophonists Stanley Turrentine and Antonio Hart as well as Malone. Turrentine and Green play a duet on the gentle "You're My Melody" and Malone and Green take some upbeat riffs on the aptly–titled tune "The Sexy Mexy."

Besides issuing new releases from artists like Benny Green, the Blue Note label is mostly known for mining its vast archives. After a great run last fall with reissue highlights like Lee Morgan's 3–CD Live At The Lighthouse set, they bring out new titles to their "Rare Groove Series" once again. This series specializes in mostly electric jazz, but also dabbles in anything funky or soulful.

Donald Byrd, the Godfather of Acid Jazz, has one of these new "Rare Groove" discs, Street Lady. For those of you that completely dig '70s B–movie funk, here's your stuff. Although Byrd started out as a hard–bop trumpeter, he took jazz–funk to new heights, and Street Lady is a definite precursor to bands like The Brand New Heavies and Jamiroquai who are still trying to reach what Byrd reached in his '60s/'70s material. Keep an eye out, as in coming weeks, I will review more discs from this great re–issue program from Reuben Wilson and others.

MCA's jazz affiliate, GRP, has added the WWII–era Commodore Records catalog to its archives that also contain old Impulse! recordings. The Commodore Story tells the history and gives the highlights of the short–lived vision of the great independent record mogul Milt Gabler over 2 great discs.

The music is mostly Dixieland–influenced swing by artists like Wild Bill Davison, Jack Teagarden (with the romantic "Diane"), and Fats Waller (with Eddie Condon on "(You're Some) Pretty Doll"). One will also find blues by Hot Lips Page and Albert Ammons. Female vocalists highlight this set, although there are only two.

One is the little–known vocalist Lee Wiley with a sexy "Sugar" with Condon's band backing her up. The other is the famous Billie Holiday song, "Strange Fruit," sung by Lady Day on Commodore when Columbia wouldn't record the sorrowful anti–lynching song. Great liner notes by Institute of Jazz Studies director Dan Morgenstern grace a 54–page booklet.

The last quick item on blues: the House Of Blues' record label has just released a 2–disc set of Essential Women In Blues, but the material they chose is strange, as it is some of the worst I've heard from great women like Ruth Brown and Marcia Ball. Two great substitutes: Rhino's Blues Masters, Volume 11: Classic Blues Women and the low–cost Easydisc compilation Blues Women Today. Next week: Dave Hole.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY JOHN SANN

Stephen Scott releases an impressive album.

Bad Boy! Bad bad Boy!
Collegian Graphics
PHOTO - JOY SYLVESTER

great scores... LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT get a higher score
KAPLAN Call: 1-800-KAP-TEST

Come write for Arts.
Don't worry, it'll be fun.
TRUSTUS!

Academics and More!!!
UMass Division of Continuing Education
For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
Explore our web site and see how we can help you - http://www.umass.edu/contined/
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years
Tons of credit undergrad courses — in the evening!
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including
· Bartending,
· GMAT, GRE, LSAT, & MCAT Preparation,
· Magical Arts,
· Photography,
· ESL,
· EMT Training,
· Marketing,
and CHOCOLATE !

Treat yourself right.
Get a great style.
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
189 N. Pleasant St.
253-9526

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.
25 n pleasant st amherst 256 0733
145 main st northampton 586 0155

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers
• Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S. Amherst
• Fridge Rentals
295 West St. • South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brooks, & The Residence
253-7741

Something special for someone special... your Valentine
Calvin Klein
MANSILK available at
J·RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN
22 Masonic St
Northampton
586-6336 • Open 7 Days

CLUB METRO
START YOUR WEEKEND OFF TONIGHT AS
SLAM! Productions brings you
GONZO
(Digital Domain / Resident at Vinyl N.Y.C.)
with Previous Residency at NYC's LIMELIGHT
GONZO's ready to bring the valley down N.Y. style
Also Featuring
Representing UMass: Hush (N.Y. Hard house)
Representing Noho: Ian&Scorry (Mars Residents)
On the 2nd dance floor
Representing Smith College: Miss Meghan (N.Y. Hardcore)
Take off at 9pm $3 off B4 10
413-582-9898
Bring I.D. 18+
Special Guest: Milktoast Midas Tommy Gun (Empire Theatre New Hampshire)
492 Pleasant St.
Northampton,MA
The Only Place To Party On Thursdays!

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
Hurry Special Ends February 15th
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
"Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center"
•PVTA bus route to Rolling Green • pool • • aerobics • aqua-aerobics • steps • nautilus • • racquetball • free weights • jacuzzi • • sauna • massage • bikes • • indoor tennis & basketball • •rowers • treadmills •
30 Aerobic classes a week!
Join now for our 15 week Semester Special ($159) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Over ~500~ Microbrews
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines
MICROBREWS
Latrobe Craft Beers $4.99/six (American Pale Ale, Bohemian Lager, Bavarian Black)
Middlesex Brewing Co. $4.99/six (Raspberry Wheat, Brown Ale, Oatmeal Stout)
Harpoon I.P.A. 12 pack bottles $8.99
Cider Jack $4.99/six
BEER SPECIALS
Busch & Busch Lt. case bottles $9.99
Natural Light & Ice 12 pack cans $4.99
Genesee Cream Ale & Ice 30 pk cans $9.99
Bass Ale 12 pack bottles $11.99
1/2 KEG SPECIAL
Pete's Wicked Ale $75.00
SPECIALS
Sauza Gold Tequila $9.99/1.0L
Goldschlager $8.99/375ml
Mt. Gay Eclipse Rum $10.99/750ml
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99/1.5L
Glenlivet $20.99/750ml
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
253-5384
Rt 9 East College Street
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt 9E

BayBank
X 24
5412 3128 4567 8111
JANE WHALEN
Use it to buy a new CD.
(No, not a Certificate of Deposit. Duh.)
The Student Value Package™ gives you the freedom to get whichever kind of CD you're into. It comes with the BayBank Card with X-Press Check™ so you can make ATM withdrawals all over the place, and you can use it as a plastic check wherever MasterCard™ is accepted.* Like at Strawberries, where you can get big discounts on cool stuff just for showing your BayBank Card and your student I.D. For more information about the Student Value Package or to open an account, call 1-800-BAY-FAST™ or stop by any branch.
SIGN UP NOW AND YOUR FIRST ORDER OF CHECKS COMES FREE WITH YOUR STUDENT VALUE PACKAGE.
Big Discounts On Cool Stuff.
Hey, life's right outside your door. Don't miss any of it.™
BayBank
A BankBoston Company
Member FDIC
Visit our Web site at www.BayBank.com * X-Press Check only available to qualified customers.  For a limited time only.  Check offer good only through Feb. 28, 1997.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

■ trax

continued from page 8

la has remained the same. Countless bands have tried to pull off the perfect blend of pop hooks and rock kicks; only a tiny fraction have successfully done so. With Show World, their follow-up to 1993's Phaseshifter, Los Angeles' Redd Kross have reworked and customized this recipe to make a really, really good record.

Redd Kross have been making records since 1981, when the band members' ages ranged from 11 to 15. While Show World isn't overwhelmingly original, unlike many '90s alterna-hits it neither suffers from overblown studio excess nor are its influences overtly flaunted (thank you very much, Billy Corgan and Noel Gallagher). Instead, the focus is on the twin-guitar blitz of Jeffrey McDonald and Eddie Kurdziel and the layered vocal harmonies of McDonald and bassist brother Steven, with some nifty effects and gloriously cheesy synthesizer thrown in for good measure.

However, Redd Kross' main strength lies in their songwriting. Like Nevermind and Dookie, Show World is an album where about 75 percent of the songs are potential singles. "Pretty Please Me," the lead-off track, sets the tone of the record with its persistent beat and maddeningly catchy chorus. "Follow The Leader" is Stoney's roots-rock belter it explodes into squalls of distortion; "One Chord Progression" is pure sonic bubblegum; "Secret Life," the final word in power ballads, sounds like the bastard offspring of Harry Nillson and Stone Temple Pilots. In short, this album rocks — chock full o' goodies from start to finish. Treat yourself to some fun. Get this album. Now. B+ (John Hendrickson)

VIVA SATELLITE!
Nishma
Teenbeat

Only on occasion does an album break with traditional standards to present a completely unique musical statement. Arlington Va.'s Viva Satellite! have just released Nishma, a self-described "experiment in modern narrative." Nishma is one of those rare works that pushes the tired boundaries of indie rock, creating a sporadically successful but always interesting listening experience.

Don't let the power-trio line up deceive you — Vocalist/guitarist/drummer Rob Christiansen (also with Eggs and Grenadine), vocalist/bassist Lauren Feldsher from Air Miami, and former Canine Bastard Dan Morrissey (guitar/keyboards/vocals) create a quirky sonic stew that definitely focuses more on talk than rock.

The traditional verse-chorus-verse format is almost totally abandoned; instead, the band members double as actors, spinning tales which rely more on conversational, rather than musical, interplay. On "The Legend of How Salt Water Taffy Came To Be" and the hilarious "Supreme Courting," this formula gels smoothly. However, "Detente In Four Movements" and "Timebomb" are aimless, often irritating diversions into musical masturbation — self-serving drivel that goes nowhere.

Nishma's last two tracks, though, are strong enough to overshadow such misfires as "Detente." "The Great Bird of the Galaxy," the only traditionally structured song on the album, is Morrissey's tribute to the late Star Trek creator Gene Roddenberry. This ballad is an exercise in restraint; the sparse instrumentation and hushed vocal result in a touching tribute to the sci-fi visionary.

"Moses," the album's closer, is a bizarre operetta reminiscent of The Who's "A Quick Orie (While He's Away)." Featuring an "actual recording" of the man himself, the vignette follows Moses' exploits crossing the Red Sea, dropping innumerable Biblical references the whole time. The triumphant reprise of "Get on the boat!" could be straight out of Hair, closing the album with a touch of divinity.

Although Nishma is by no means perfect, the amount of talent and creativity possessed by Viva Satellite! is undeniable. In experimenting with new song structures and concepts, mixed results are inevitable. The more Viva Satellite! continue to record and refine their craft, the better they're gonna be. B- (John Hendrickson)

Violent World — A Tribute To The Misfits
Various Artists
Caroline Records

The Misfits were one of the greatest punk/hardcore bands of all time. Snapcase, Pennywise, Bouncing Souls, Sick Of It All, NOFX, 108, and Deadguy are some of the great punk/hardcore bands today who appear on this compilation. However for the most part this compilation is hit and miss.

The problem with covering a great band like the Misfits is that the songs are amazing to begin with, so unless you are adding something interesting or doing a different version of the song, you're going to fall flat on your face. Most bands on this compilation don't deviate very much, which is why bands like Sick Of It All, 108, Deadguy, and Bouncing Souls don't stand out. Those bands try too hard to sound like the Misfits without adding the nuances of their own to the songs they cover.

On the flipside Earth Crisis destroys "Earth A.D." because it sounds like another Earth Crisis song and nothing like the Misfits. Similarly, Tanner brings "T.V. Casualty" down by making it sound too much like one of their songs.

Snapcase does a brilliant version of "She" with Darryl's vocals adding a bite that represents the true spirit of the song. Shades Apart, Goldfinger, and Pennywise also do delightfully good versions of "20 Eyes," "Ghouls Night Out," and "Astro Zombies," respectively.

The worst cover award goes to Therapy? for murdering "Where Eagles Dare." They suck all energy and life from the classic song and should be locked in the London Dungeon for their transgressions.

NOFX does a brilliant take on "Last Caress." They stamp their trademark NOFX sound on the song but it only adds to the track. NOFX managed to meld the best aspects of their sound with those of The Misfits to produce a stellar version of "Last Caress." B- (Adam Dugacz)

Hawke proves his worth in debut novel

By Teresa McCarthy
Collegian Correspondent

ETHAN HAWKE
The Hottest State
Little, Brown, And Company

There is no need to look again — Ethan Hawke is indeed the author of this novel, and it must be said that this review is not written by an ardent member of his fan club.

The Hottest State is truly entitled to the praise it has received since its publication in 1996. Because its author happens to be a famous actor, this work has gained a great deal of notoriety. It is impossible to absolve oneself of one's influences, but let it be repeated that this is about Hawke the writer and his first novel.

The Hottest State is a sensual romance, a "boy meets girl" story set in present day New York City. The voice of the novel is that of a 20-year-old actor named William. His occupation is the sole point of skepticism that a reader can expect to encounter, for the word "fiction" adorns the inside flap of the book's jacket. Even if this is an autobiographical account in disguise, it is nonetheless most enjoyable and begs to be read.

It starts off quite predictably, but this was probably the intent. William and Sarah meet at a bar and are swept into a whirlwind relationship, becoming lost in love itself. Obviously, the basic structure is neither unfamiliar nor complex, a point many critics have used to instantly denounce The Hottest State. On the contrary, this only contributes to the effervescence of the novel. This variety of "love story" is utterly conventional and terribly improbable, but Hawke manages to refreshen it and make it very believable.

Exactly how Hawke ensnares the reader remains a mystery. He has a talent for describing the way William feels and how Sarah responds. There are voyages to distant lands, references to prevailing yet unhealthy things, from Tang to unprotected sex, as well as to nuisances like commitment, confusion, and contact lenses.

Another characteristic of the novel which makes it so available to the reader lies in Hawke's precise depiction of the depth and caprice of emotion. Since William is an actor, his cycles are far from mild. Since Sarah has other things on her mind besides William, her emotions are shown to be much more subdued and controlled. Hawke's pace is irregular, but it slows and quickens and widens and narrows smoothly. The result is a very realistic portrayal of humanity.

The Hottest State never becomes boring. William holds nothing back from the reader. He privately explains everything he says, ponders, and does throughout the story. His insecurities are enthralling, as is his outward confidence. The reader is left wanting nothing. Hawke takes care of this all-too-frequent shortcoming nicely by creating a voice that is familiar, and undoubtedly fragile.

The Hottest State is also chock-full of sensory detail. Eating before, during, or after reading is not necessary, for everything William puts into his mouth can be tasted. Everything he touches one can feel the texture of. The sights and smells described in the book become both vivid and pungent, respectively. Hawke is also good with a simile, infusing both the abstract and the humorous into the work. His language is profane and always explicit, bringing the characters' frustration and elation near.

It is no secret that dramatic, romantic tales can be alluring. They can also serve as a potent salve for boredom, depression, and all other unfulfilling conditions. The Hottest State will lift the potential reader out of any of these. Real love is altogether too difficult. With this surrogate, there is nothing to lose but a few hours. Within that time you will also lose some laughter and, possibly, you will cry. You can live safely and vicariously — instead of destroying your own life and the lives of those around you. B

URL of the day: www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Saw a shark today...
Collegian Grafix.

Wanted: Graphic Artist Assistant
Contact: Lynne Thompson For A Portfolio Review
With Graphic Design Skills And MAC Experience
University Health Services
Graphics Dept. 577-5181
(QUARK, PHOTOSHOP & FREEHAND)

Win a trip to Sunset Beach!
Enter the 1-800-COLLECT "Anything Can Happen" Sweepstakes
IT'S EASY TO WIN!
Simply complete a 1-800-COLLECT call between February 3 and February 28, 1997 and you are automatically entered! Plus, 1-800-COLLECT saves up to 44%.
FIVE grand prize winners will win a trip for two to the set of SUNSET BEACH in California and a tour of the NBC Studios!
So use 1-800-COLLECT. The more calls you make, the more chances you have to win!
Tune in to Sunset Beach Weekdays on NBC
ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN AT SUNSET
1-800-COLLECT
Save up to 44%

7pm, Feb 7th at the MULLINS CENTER University of Massachusetts Amherst
Division 1 Hockey East
UMass Hockey
VS
BOSTON UNIVERSITY
Pick up your tickets at:
☞ Curry Hicks Cage
☞ 'TIX' in the Student Union
☞ Hockey Table in the Campus Center
☞ At the Game
Be a Part of the Action

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
Hurry Special Ends February 15th
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
"Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center"
•PVTA bus route to Rolling Green • pool • • aerobics • aqua-aerobics • steps • nautilus • • racquetball • free weights • jacuzzi • • sauna • massage • bikes • • indoor tennis & basketball • •rowers • treadmills •
30 Aerobic classes a week!
Join now for our 15 week Semester Special ($159) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

Mizzou foils KU's bid for perfect year

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

COLUMBIA, Mo. — When Kansas coach Roy Williams pushed aside talk of his No. 1 Jayhawks going through the season unbeaten, it may have been because he knew Missouri was on the schedule. Missouri and Kansas had met four times in the 1990s when Kansas carried the No. 1 ranking, and three times the Tigers had pulled off the upset.

Missouri shrugged off its season-long troubles Tuesday night and did it for the fourth time, winning a 96-94 thriller when Corey Tate picked up a loose ball and hit a 15-footer with 5.6 seconds left in the second overtime.

Kansas, which escaped three close calls in a row before running out of heroics, had been the nation's last unbeaten team in Division 1. And now the Jayhawks have lost their shot at becoming the first team to go through the regular season undefeated since UNLV in 1991.

"I've said a million times it was unrealistic," Williams said. "I never talked in those terms, never wanted to think about that, because I knew it wouldn't happen."

Williams wasn't complaining after Kansas ran into Missouri's best game — by far — of the season. Williams is 8-9 against Missouri and 226-47 against everybody else, so he discounted the Tigers' so-so showing this season.

"If you look at their record, they've struggled," Williams said. "But they didn't struggle tonight."

The Jayhawks (22-1, 8-1 Big 12) play at No. 11 Iowa State on Sunday. And Missouri coach Norm Stewart says he's certain Kansas won't lose many more games this year.

"I've seen all their games since 1952," he said. "This team ranks with any of them."

The game was a wild battle of attrition. Five players fouled out, three from Kansas, which already was without injured Scot Pollard (broken foot).

Kansas lost even though its strategy in the extra periods worked perfectly. Missouri's Derek Grimm fouled out in the first overtime and Kelly Thames fouled out with 1:15 to go in the second overtime. Kansas took advantage of the Tigers' inside troubles, feeding Raef LaFrentz repeatedly.

LaFrentz was 1-for-6 and had two points in the first half. He had 12 points in the two overtimes and finished with 26 points and 16 rebounds, tying a career high.

Thames led Missouri (12-10, 4-6) with 24 points and 11 rebounds, and made all 10 free throws. Grimm had 20 points and Jason Sutherland 18.

Kansas tied it for the last time when Jacque Vaughn scored on a drive with 40 seconds to go, then Tate hit the biggest shot from the line.

"Games turn on big plays like that," Williams said. "They made more big plays than us down the stretch."

Kansas failed to get a shot off after the final inbounds pass. Missouri lost against Oklahoma State in a similar situation this season and against eventual NCAA champion UCLA in the 1995 tournament.

Slade signs deal to play for Pats, Carroll

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Chris Slade, the pass-rushing linebacker who probably would have left New England if Bill Parcells stayed, signed a five-year contract yesterday to remain with the Patriots.

Slade, who could have become a free agent, was upset that Parcells made him a platoon player after 3 1/2 years as a starter. But he smiled broadly when new coach Pete Carroll said he would rush from the corner, his favorite spot.

"My man," Slade said, pounding his new boss on the left shoulder at a news conference at which his $13 million deal was announced.

Parcells, however, was not Slade's man.

But now his ex-coach is a consultant with the New York Jets — unless NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue rules that violates Parcells' last contract with the Patriots — and Slade is a cornerstone of Carroll's defense.

"If Bill would have been back here this year as a coach," Slade said, "it probably would have made my decision a lot tougher to come back, just not knowing what my situation was going to be, not knowing my status with him, because it was so shaky and up and down all year.

"Pete's my coach now and I'm sure he and I will work something out and I'll be used properly," he said.

Carroll, the coordinator of San Francisco's strong defense the past two seasons, said he wasn't about to lose an outside pass rusher — something all teams covet.

"This commitment tells you that we want him to be an every-down player," Carroll said. "Last year in free agency in San Francisco, this was the first guy that we wanted to get."

Slade, a second-round draft pick out of Virginia in 1993, had 22 1/2 sacks in his first three seasons and added seven last season, second on the team only to Willie McGinest's 9 1/2. He also was fourth on the team in tackles and forced a team-high three fumbles.

"Outside pass rush guys are the biggest factor in creating problems for the offense," Carroll said. "When you've got two guys, you've just got to keep them.

McGinest had a better relationship with Parcells than Slade did but said, "I'm happy. We have a new coach coming in and I just want to win."

Slade started eight of the first nine regular-season games last season but just one of the last seven. Dwayne Sabb, who Parcells felt was a better defender against the run, replaced him.

Slade said he wasn't satisfied with the explanation for the change.

"I didn't agree then and don't agree now and probably never will agree with it," he said. "At that time, Bill was making all the decisions as far as coaching's concerned."

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
Karaoke returns to the TOC this Friday
HOURS: M-F 4:00-12:30AM
SAT 5:00PM - 12:30

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
8 UMass' Best! 1996 9
Bigger Is Better
• All Sporting Events
Good thing we all brought our Daily Collegians!

Hurry! Get Your Senior INDEX Yearbook Photo
NOW!
This will be the Final Sitting!
February 3 - February 28
Campus Center Rm. 177
Call Now To Schedule a sitting.
There is a $5 sitting fee.
the INDEX
(800) 836-0558

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
Munchie Specials - Every Week!
Tuesday after 10 20ç Mozz. Sticks
Wednesday after 10 15ç Wings
Thursday after 10 $1 Personal Nachos
Friday after 10 $1 Spicy Fries
Monday after 10 $1 Hamburger Tacos
This Friday only D.J. Phil
18 and over Dance Party 10 pm
Drink Specials Through Feb. 28
Blue Kamikaze Shots - $2.25
70oz Bud Light Pitchers - $5.75
We Accept All Major Credit Cards!
Member O.C.M.P. - Call Delivery Express for Takeout
Open 7 days/week 11:30 am - 1am
Full menu all day/all night
253-4040

■ gym

continued from page 16

"That's what you get with top athletes," Kuzara said of Johnson's forwardness of pride. "They won't settle."

Sonyal has also stepped it up in the recent meets. Her clutch performances at important times have been key to the Minutewomen's success, but she is continually emphasizing the importance of the team aspect of gymnastics.

"[College gymnastics] is a lot more team oriented rather than individual and it makes it a lot more fun and upbeat," Sonyal exclaims. "It's louder and more exciting."

Kuzara is pleased with Sonyal's progress.

"Anita is now training and doing all four events," Kuzara said. "Anita anchors our balance beam line-up and [fits in on the team] the same as Michelle. We're going to be able to utilize them in their best spots."

"I think we work very well together and everyone compliments each other," Sonyal said.

LoPresti's involvement in the team's emergence is similar to Sonyal's. Having not practiced the entire week, LoPresti stepped into the Michigan meet with taped-up injuries and stepped out with career-best scores. Kuzara praised her effort after the meet, citing her as a hard worker who delivered a "gut-check performance."

LoPresti also concurs with Sonyal on the volume issue.

"I think college gymnastics is really fun because everything is loud. It's pretty cool because teams used to get deducted points [for being loud at club meets] and I think that makes it more fun to watch."

Similar to LoPresti in spunkiness and loquaciousness is Colucci. She is talkative, outgoing, and optimistic about the team's future.

"I think when we came in everybody had high hopes for us because we were like the freshmen seven or something," Colucci said. "They put a lot of hype on us and we really clicked in our own way."

Caputo, Madore, and Kelly are expected to fill larger roles in the coming meets. Caputo's career best 9.4 on the beam came against Bridgeport, a team the Minutewomen host in a tri-meet with Rhode Island at Boyden Gym at 1 p.m. on Sunday.

Just as each sophomore adds to the diverse composition of the class, the enthusiasm of the class adds to the mix of the whole team. They recognize the importance of their upperclassmen, and delight in the idea of leading a national championship team in the near future.

■ hoop

continued from page 16

record that has included six National Invitational Tournament appearances and 14 NCAA berths.

But it is for that 1966 title that Haskins is best remembered. At that time UTEP was called Texas Western, an unlikely school to make it to college basketball's ultimate game and a heavy underdog against Adolph Rupp's Kentucky team.

Haskins succeeded with a formula that created quite a stir in sports. He started five black athletes against Rupp's five white starters, and dismanled the myth that black athletes could only play undisciplined basketball. The Miners, which started three players 6-foot–1 or under, cruised over the Wildcats 72-65.

Pete Carril on the other hand, is not known for a national championship, but instead for steady, consistent play (and for being named by Sports Illustrated as the separated at birth twin of Yoda).

Carril spent all of his tenure at Princeton, except for his first year in the business, when he coached Lehigh.

During his time in the Ivy League, Carril led the Tigers to a 525–273 record that included 11 trips to the NCAAs, a pair of berths in the NIT and an NIT Championship in 1975.

Under Carril, Princeton was famous for its almost–wins in the NCAA Tournament, coming close to knocking off top teams in the first round but never getting the job done. Until Carril's curtain call in the 1995 tourney when a last second effort pushed the Tigers past defending NCAA champ UCLA.

Haskins and Carril will always be remembered for making their mark on the college basketball world. Now they each have a mark set in stone.

As Utah coach Rick Majerus put it, referring specifically to Haskins, "If he doesn't belong in the Hall of Fame, who does?"

Quiet and consistent work by Colorado's Chauncey Billups has gotten the sophomore rave reviews from national media now that the Buffs have woke a few people up.

Colorado vaulted into the polls for the first time in 29 years two weeks ago, led largely in part by the surging sophomore guard. But the high level of play that Billups has exhibited — many sports writers have tabbed Billups as midseason Big 12 Player of the Year — has many guessing on whether or not a possible jump to the professional ranks is in the not–so–far–off future.

Billups has repeatedly said no to any and all questions about his going hardship, but too many college fans know that this is almost always the case, and not often enough the result.

The Jan. 31 update of Dan Leventhal's NBA Draft Report projects that four Big 12 underclassmen will go in the first round of this year's draft: Tony Battie and Cory Carr of Texas Tech, Brian Skinner of Baylor and Billups.

• From the Where–are–they–now Dept: Ryan Minor, the 1995 Big Eight Player of the Year out of Oklahoma is now playing baseball in the Baltimore Orioles minor league system.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Rodman to return from suspension Tues.

By Ken Peters
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Dennis Rodman will be back in the spotlight — and under a microscope — when he returns to the Chicago Bulls. NBA commissioner David Stern has warned him that another incident, such as the episode when Rodman kicked a courtside cameraman last month, could end his NBA career.

Rodman, 35, has been suspended nine times since 1992 and three times since last March.

Chicago coach Phil Jackson said Rodman must realize he has to behave.

"Dennis has to understand that the league is watching him. He has to be on his best behavior," Jackson said.

The Bulls' Scottie Pippen said he's glad Rodman is returning, although he doesn't approve of his teammate's antics.

"I have a problem with it," Pippen said. "It's pretty stupid... But he's not going to change for me. He's just going to have to deal with the consequences whenever he gets caught."

Stern, who lifted Rodman's suspension on Tuesday, effective after the All-Star break, said he was satisfied that Rodman recognizes that his behavior in the cameraman-kicking incident on Jan. 15 was unacceptable.

"Dennis told me that while he does not plan to change the way he plays the game, he will conform his conduct on the playing court to acceptable standards, and he knows that any further incidents of this nature may end his career in the NBA," Stern said.

Rodman also was ordered to undergo counseling during his suspension, but Manley reportedly said he had not.

Rodman, whose aggressive play has made him the NBA's top rebounder for the past five seasons despite the fact he's only 6-foot-8 and 220 pounds, said he doesn't intend to change his style.

"I just live life day-to-day. I'm not going to change the way I am. My goal is still to contribute and be on one of the greatest teams of all time," Rodman, sporting dark nail polish and sunglasses, said Tuesday night as he sat courtside at halftime of the Lakers-Clippers game at the Anaheim Arena.

Rodman, who is eligible to play next Tuesday night against the Charlotte Hornets at the United Center, is eager to go back to work, even if he's going to be giving away his paychecks. He's donating his salary for his first 11 games back to charity.

"I could say I'm sorry until I'm blue in the face, and it wouldn't prove anything. But I'm going to play for free. That shows that it isn't all about money," he said.

"I wanted to do something to thank the fans who have been so supportive of me... I think it's unfortunate for the fans and everybody else that it [the incident] occurred. I'm glad I can come back and play like I do again," he said.

Manley said that his client will donate his pay from each of the 11 games to a different charity, on "behalf of the Chicago Bulls, myself, and Dennis."

When Rodman's suspension ends, it will have lasted 11 games. The salary lost for those games plus the donated money will total some $2 million. Rodman also paid the cameraman $200,000.

Asked why Rodman decided to make the charitable donations, Manley said: "Because he'll be the first person to say, 'I deserve more money and pay me more money,' and when he makes a mistake, he'll be the first person to say, 'I don't deserve the money,' and he wants to thank his fans for sticking with him."

The charities cover a broad spectrum, from the Y-Me Breast Cancer Awareness to March of Dimes to the Magic Johnson Aids Foundation.

■ briefs

continued from page 16

Intramural action

The UMass intramural and recreational program has started its program for the spring semester. There are over 120 entries in the basketball league alone. Games are held every Monday–Thursday evenings starting at 6 p.m. in Boyden Gym.

• The wrestling and Wallyball tournaments are still accepting rosters. Singles interested in playing Wallyball, but still in need of a team should attend the meeting tonight at 5:30 p.m. in 251 Boyden.

• It'll soon be spring, and that means intramural softball and soccer will soon be starting. Entries are now being accepted. For best selections, turn in your entries by March 10. There will be singles meetings for those interested in these sports. Stop by 215 Boyden or call 545–2693 for info.

• You can catch broadcasts of the fall 1996 intramural championships on UMass cable channel 17. The games will be shown through Feb. 16 at 11 p.m. Soccer, flag football, track and field, and field hockey are now being shown.

Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staff member Casey Kane.

Goodbye, tax forms. Hello, TeleFile!
This year, millions will file their tax returns by phone — using TeleFile, a free service from the IRS. The call is easy and refunds are fast. Check your mail for a TeleFile booklet.
Department of the Treasury Internal Revenue Service http://www.irs.ustreas.gov
TeleFile
It's free. It's fast. It works.

Rear Street Nightclubs
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY TUESDAY
GAY NIGHT
19+
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA 1 BIGGEST MEN ENERGY
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00PM
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 • 6:00 - 10:00 PM
EVERY SATURDAY 10PM-2AM
PARTY
Hosted by Dom Jones of Today's 99.1
BEST DANCE CLUB MUSIC
SAT. FEB. 22 • 9:30PM
U.S. Club Tour 97
Special Guest MC The Styles
DJ Just In Time
(Live Video Shoot for MTV)
SAT. FEB. 8 • 9PM-2 AM • 21+
INTERNATIONAL NIGHT
sponsored by BACARDI
DANCE PARTY!
DISCO FROM AROUND THE WORLD
LIVE MUSIC
Thu. Feb. 6 @ 9 pm
THE FIGGS
Chick Graning From Scarce
SERPICO/STOMLO LOYOLES
Fri. Feb. 7 @ 8:30 pm
MAX CREEK
Wed. Feb. 12 @ 7:30 pm
THE REVEREND HORTON HEAT
N.Y. LOCUST/ ANGRY JOHNNY & THE KILLBILLIES
Thu. Feb. 13 @ 9 pm
WICKED GARDEN
STONE TEMPLE PILOTS TRIBUTE
ALICE IN CHAINS TRIBUTE
Fri. Feb. 14 @ 9:30 pm
THROWING MUSES
THE MITCHELLS
Sun. Feb. 16 @ 9:00 pm
THE LILYS
NEW RADIENT STORM KING SOLO PUBLISHING PROJECT
Sun. Feb. 16 @ 7:00 pm
OVERCAST
Mon. Feb. 17 @ 7:00 pm
MATHEW SWEET
FAST BALL
Tue. Feb. 18 @ 7:00 pm
FACE TO FACE
HEADING SOUTH ON THE HIGHWAY
UPCOMING
Mon. Feb. 24 - 18+ Fri. Feb. 28 - All Ages
Sat. Feb. 22 - 18+ Tues. Feb. 25 - 18+
Thu. Mar. 6 - 18+
BANNISTER LOTZ
CANNIBAL CORPSE
THE EXALTATES
LEFTOVER SALMON
THE ROCKET TO UR
TU DA MOON
Sun. Mar. 9 - All Ages
Wed. Mar. 26 - All Ages
AGNOSTIC FRONT
THE DESCENDENTS
Advance tickets available at the Rear Hampton Box office, Side Walk, 1 800 THE TICK, Strawberries Record Stores. For The Record in Amherst, Music in Greenfield, Tix Unlimited in Ct. Music, Plainsman Records in Westfield, Music Outlet in Enfield & 8 Side Records in Northampton 586-9555
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.rearstreet.com
413-584-7771

Winter SALE.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

WANTED
WIRED, CRAZED, PASSIONATE, CREATIVE
MULTIMEDIA PROGRAMMERS
NETWORK ENGINEERS, HACKERS, PHOTOGS, VIDEOGRAPHERS
LEAN & MEAN 3 YEAR OLD FIRM SEEKS FULL & PART-TIME HELP. INTERNS
PASSION, But NO EXPERIENCE? CONTACT US!
VISION MULTIMEDIA
http://www.visionmm.com
please include: resume, letter of interest, work, reel
VISION MULTIMEDIA
P.O. Box 776
Amherst, MA 01004
attn. Ben Ballou
benning@visionmm.com

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN • NASSAU • MONTEGO
Student Travel Services
$299
10
CALL NOW! GET A FREE T-SHIRT!
http://www.takeabreak.com
1-800-95-BREAK
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL

great scores...
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
get a higher score
KAPLAN Call: 1-800-KAP-TEST

DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS
VISA DISCOVER MasterCard
ICE!
10 lb ... $1.29
50 lb ... $5.99
100lb ...$9.99
Micro Kegs!
Sam Adams, Harpoon, Saranac, J.W. Dundee, Plus More!
Kegs!!!
natural LT.....1/2 BBL
$ 34.99 + dep
Bud, Bud. LT. Bud ICE, Red Dog, Lite, Lown Brau, Michelob, Michelob LT, M.G.D. Michelob Dk.
$ 39.99 + dep
Keg of the Week!
Ice House
$ 38.99 + dep
Not responsible for typographical errors
WE DELIVER!
BUSH & LT "30 pks" $11.99 +dep
MILWAUKEES best "30 pks" $10.49 +dep
BUD DRY 24-12oz bott. $9.99 +dep
M.G.D. & LT 24-12oz Bar bottles $9.99 +dep
NATURAL LT/ICE 24-12oz cans $8.99 +dep
MALIBU RUM $9.69 .750ml
POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75l
BECKS 24-12oz. botts. $17.99 +dep
CIDER JACK 24-12oz. bott. $17.99 +dep
ABSOLUTE VODKA $19.99 1.75l
PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS $6.99 .750ml
4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75l
WOOD-BRIDGE CAB&CHARD. $5.69 .750ml
R.H. PHILLIPS NIGHT HARVEST wines $7.49 1.5l
CARLO ROSSI WINES $7.99 4.0l
DIAMOND LAKE WINES $6.99 4.0l
OREGON ale/beers 24-12oz Bott. $18.99 +dep
SARANAC 24-12oz Bott. $17.99 +dep
CORONA 24-12oz Bott. $16.99 +dep

Bruins, Bucyk pay tribute to Bourque

No. 77 passes legendary friend as all–time top scorer

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Ray Bourque shares a moment with Bruins great John Bucyk in a pre–game ceremony honoring the new all–time leading scorer.

Whether the Boston Bruins are on a winning or losing streak, I always enjoy taking the ride up to the North End and catching a hockey game. Last Tuesday night, I got a chance to see my first Bruins game at the not–so–state–of– the–art FleetCenter, with thanks to the gift that keeps giving from a fellow puckhead — tickets.

I loved everything about the old, smelly Gah–den: the trip into Boston, stopping at my favorite pub off of Causeway Street, and the sterile confines of the Fleet turned out to be at best, uninspiring, but you can't change the experience of the North End. A game against the Ottawa Senators is something I usually wouldn't pay for, especially $30 tickets in nosebleed territory — any day of the week, month or year. All things considered, though, on a normal day this would have been a normal night out. But, au contraire...

What our travelling contingent had to look forward to was the Gah–den faithful, I mean, the Fleet un–faithful giving tribute to the most underlooked athlete in Boston history — Raymond Bourque. He has been the B's only hope this season, and an example of the best in a defenseman since 1979.

La Capraine, this past weekend, against the Tampa Bay Lightning of all teams, took the Bruin's all–time scoring mark for himself (1,342 pts). From Sullivan's Tap to Paddy McGann's, on this evening the Northies would be raising their pint glasses high in the air for the 36–year–old from, of all places — Montreal.

Now, you can officially put No. 77 in the NHL, Bruins, the city of Boston, and any other sport known to mankind's Hall of Fame list. But, when I sat back and thought what the 17–time All–Star (12 first team selections, 5 second team), 5– time Norris Trophy winner has done in his career, I also had to think about the man he passed on that scoring list — Johnny "The Chief" Bucyk.

Bucyk was the epitome of old–time hockey, durable and broken–nosed, while being a 50–goal scorer before there were 50–goal scorers. Up to the early '70s, 25 goals was a great year for a player. He took that mark and set the precedent for what great goal scorers are still judged by in our day and age. In Bucyk's days as captain, he must have been a pretty good role model for his players, too, because he specifically took rookies under his wing. One good example — a man named Bobby Orr.

And, what is the best thing out of this deal? The top two Bruin all–time scorers are best of friends in real life.

JORMA KANSANEN

Since Bourque's first year in the league in 1979, Bucyk has seen every game Bourque has played in... Now, let's get this straight people, not watched on TV, but actually seen in person. Bucyk watched his new friend score his first points in the NHL 17 years ago against the Winnipeg Jets (aka Phoenix Coyotes), and last weekend saw his old friend break the 20–year old scoring record.

Almost more than that, the Chief knows the tradition of the Black and Gold, bleeds it, and to add high praise to recognition, has also seen every Bruins game in the last 38 years in person.

So, emceed by Bucyk, the tribute to Raymond would make it an unbelievable night, and three of my friends and I hit the Pike. We started a little late from Amherst, but our driver was tremendous, and I think he set a new speed record from Amherst to Boston — unofficial time; 1 hour, 27 minutes, and 36.5 seconds, but don't quote me on that one. But our speed record gave us time to find a free parking spot on a side street (can you believe it?), and get to our seats before the start of the festivities.

This evening, the Force was with us.

It was a teary–eyed tribute to Raymond. If the two wins for UMass on Jan. 18 didn't happen — a 90–78 basketball win over Boston College, a 4–3 OT hockey win over Northeastern — my misty–eyed memory would already be written with this one.

He received an early retirement present from assistant captains Don Sweeney and Adam Oates (a golf cart), the jersey he wore Saturday night autographed by his teammates, and a crystal trophy commemorating the event. Not since Raymond gave up the No. 7 years to honor another Bruin legend, Phil Esposito — on the eve of Espo's number being retired — can I recall seeing La Captaine so close to tears.

Then, with Bourque ending the ceremony with a choked up, "Let's play hockey," the game started up.

What was truly appropriate was him scoring the first goal on a power play a little over five minutes into the game, on a textbook Bourque slapper from the point.

What was truly inappropriate was the B's losing 4–3 to the Senators, powered by two goals from Ottawa un–sniper, and awfully unjust No. 1 star of the game, Tom Chorske.

But being there for the legendary handshake between Bucyk and Bourque was enough for us. After the game, we had our customary sausage grinders in North Station, and got back on the Pike.

Unfortunately, the easy ride in was not as smooth as the snowy ride back to Amherst. After a white water rafting accident last summer, where I spent almost a minute trapped under a rock on the upper Penobscot River in Maine, I have had my share of death–defying feats this past year.

But, after a miraculous escape out of the ditch we crashed into, and the radio DJ's curious choice of "Touch of Grey" by the Grateful Dead on the radio, we made it home safe and sound.

The Force was truly with us this evening, and I believe it was not Obi–Wan that was our only hope, but Ray–Mond.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ NBA

continued from page 16

for Mike. Maybe we really do need to import some monsters from outer space, like the movie, to play against him and Chicago.

All joking aside, MJ is putting in work out there, despite of all the skeptics. With all the young guns pointed directly at him, you have to feel for him. How would you handle Grant Hill, Jerry Stackhouse, Allen Iverson and a slew of other super youngsters trying to prove that your best years are behind you?

To all my boys who doubted me when I said that Michael was still the best player in the league, let his consistent play as of late be a reminder to you. I hate to say I told you so, but...

Play, Lose, Cheer

Why is it that every team in the league, except for Chicago, has someone on the injured list for this week? Does winning do something for the body that doctors and scientists have yet to discover?

If so, how can Boston, Vancouver, Toronto, San Antonio, Phoenix and Philadelphia players still stand? You would think that with records that bad, these guys would barely be able to walk on the court. I guess it's just a testament to the wonders of Power Bars and Gatorade.

Of all the suck teams in the league, I can't help but feel the sorriest for the Boston Celtics. The reason being that every time Boston loses a game you all smile.

Tell me you don't love it? Celtic fans all want those first round picks and will fake the funk to get 'em.

You have to feel for a squad like that and I hate Boston, but they're the only team I know that'll have a FleetCenter full of screaming fans, all frontin' like they really want the win. My heart pains for a team whose fan base consists of a bunch of liars and fakes.

Celtic Pride. You have to love it.

Role Model

You've got to give love to eight–time NBA All–Star and Hall of Famer, Bob Lanier. USA Today recently ran a piece on Lanier and his work with children in the NBA Stay in School Program and, most recently, the NBA TeamUp Program, which encourages teens to get involved in their local communities.

For the past nine years, Lanier has traveled to schools across the nation, encouraging kids to not give in to pressure and finish their education. Big–Up to Bob Lanier for truly keeping it real and being an example to other black players in and around the league.

And a special nod to "The Worm," Dennis Rodman, for his contribution to the spirit of Black History Month with his full moon (I ain't talkin' stars) at a west side night spot last week. Rodman has been spotted at several clubs and parties this past week, letting it all hang out, in the midst of his 11–game suspension.

If there's ever a time we've missed Dr. King...

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian columnist.

■ football

continued from page 16

"The best we can do is win as many games as possible to create a positive football feeling around here, and leave the rest up to [the administration]."

A rundown of this years class are as follows: three offensive linemen, two quarterbacks, two defensive linemen, two linebackers, one defensive back/quarterback, one running back/safety, one place–kicker and one safety.

The Minutemen have snagged Worcester Academy's starring quarterback for the second year in a row. Current UMass starting quarterback Jeff Smith, who will be just a sophomore, will be joined by 6–foot–4 Levar Stockton, who threw for 1,100 yards and six touchdowns in his one year of prep ball last season.

The most highly touted recruit seems to be Zambelli, who was a first team All–State selection his senior year in Dunellen, N.J., and an All–East selection by Blue Chip Magazine before his senior year.

"Greg is a great athlete who has the ability to play on both the offensive and defensive lines," said UMass offensive line coach Stanley Clayton. "He is a great addition to our football family and has the potential to make some immediate contributions."

UMass kicks off the 1997 season with a home date against Richmond on Aug. 31 in the first weekend of Atlantic–10 football, which has replaced the Yankee Conference.

Collegian Graphics

What racer–boy Thang Yo the Phone guy does in his free time.

PHOTO - KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/PHOTOSHOP JOSH SYLVESTER

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA • 253-3539
!! TREADMILLS !!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
NOW THE ONLY AREA ENGAGEMENT THRU FEB.13
CURTAIN DAILY 7:00 & 9:15 (TICKETS FROM 6:30)
NOTE: NO SHOWING SAT. EVE (FILM RESUMES SUN.)
"THE BEST MOVIE WOODY ALLEN HAS EVER MADE."
Woody Allen has succeeded brilliantly...absolutely wonderful!
Roger Ebert, CHICAGO SUN-TIMES
EVERYONE SAYS I LOVE YOU
Alan Alda, Woody Allen, Drew Barrymore, Lukas Haas, Goldie Hawn, Gaby Hoffman, Natasha Lyonne, Edward Norton, Natalie Portman, Julia Roberts, Tim Roth, David Ogden Stiers
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8435

Spring Break Fever we've got it...
Bahamas 7 nights land only $336
Grand Cayman 7 nights land only $394
Jamaica 7 nights land only $346
Aruba 7 nights land only $479
you catch it!
Prices are based on double occupancy. U.S. and foreign departure taxes are not included. Prices and availability are subject to change.
Council Travel
44 Main Street, Amherst
Tel: 413-256-1261
http://www.ciee.org/

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring Bud & Bud Light 16oz bottles $13.99 /case
Pilgrim "growlers" -your choice- $4.49
S.S.P. Vodka $8.99 1.75 Liter
Genesee 30 PK CANS Your Choice - $9.99 case
"MICRO MADNESS" CONTINUES!
Pete's - 10 different flavors including the new "Mardi Gras"!
Catamount - All flavors including "New Anniversary Ale"!
Harpoon - Ale, Pilsner, Ale, I.P.A., October, & "Winter"!
Red Hook - E.S.B. I.P.A., Porter, Rye & "Hefe - Weizer"!
Smuttynose - Old Brown Dog Ale, Shoal Pale, & "Chuck Wheat"!
Mix & Match "TWO" 6/PKS ... $9.95
"Micro Brews" 7 flavors $3.99 6/PK -your choice-
Bud Dry $9.99 case bottles
•All Beers Plus Deposit• OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

How To Get Ahead Faster
Join the growth at Standard Register, a leader in providing information management solutions to businesses around the globe. As a $900 million Fortune 1000 leader, we seek energetic college grads with a drive to succeed to join our growth in New England.
Opportunities in the New Hampshire and Maine area
• Sales Reps - New Hampshire — Excellent earnings potential, valuable business experience, opportunities for advancement. Bachelor's degree required; sales experience a plus. We offer salary plus incentive. Recent grads encouraged to apply!
• Customer Service Reps — Interact with customers and provide responsive service to enhance sale of SR products. Prefer Associate's degree or equivalent experience; proficiency with Windows for PC and excellent communication/interpersonal skills.
• Forms Designer — We seek a self-starter with excellent interpersonal skills for forms design, composition and graphics work. Proficiency with Windows design tools a must. Associate's degree or formal training/certificate or equivalent work experience preferred. Pre-press and F3 experience preferred.
Other Sales Opportunities Throughout the NE Area
We offer excellent compensation and comprehensive benefits package in a team-oriented environment. Please send resume and cover letter indicating position and geographic preference to: Human Resources Dept., Attn: John Branson, 600 Albany St., P.O. Box 1167, Dayton, OH 45408. Equal Opportunity Employer, m/f/d/v. Visit our web site http://www.stdreg.com
STANDARD REGISTER
INNOVATIVE DOCUMENTS & SYSTEMS

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

RUSH Theta Chi Feb. 3,4,5,6; 10-12; 8-10pm 549-9252

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Pulthue 1 bedroom apartment for rent starting the second week of Feb. Partially furnished. Take over lease. Call Melissa 549-1091

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Jeep Grand Wagoneer runs great, needs minor repairs $1500 or B/O. Call Colin 256-8480

Mustang looks good, runs good $500 Call 665-9068

EMPLOYMENT

Work Study students needed. Teaching positions in a multicultural after-school program for children 5-12. Some experience desirable. $6.00/hour. Men and people of color encouraged to apply. Call Capezicated at 253-5859

Counselors needed for Co-ed Northeast PA. overnight Jewish Fellowship camp (2 hours from NYC) general: sports, drama, H20 and arts (800)973-3866

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Job! Camp Somoset is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama and woodworking. Also hiring secretaries, kitchen and maintenance workers. Call or fax resume to: Wimer Dillice, Wellesley, MA. Phone: (617)237-3017 Fax: (617)237-7269

Drivers Wanted Apply in person between 3-5pm Pinocchio's, Amherst

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N5007 (We are a research and publishing company)

Appointment Setters Hadley office has several openings in its calling center. No selling involved. Fun atmosphere. On bus-line. Up to $7-$10/hr. Start work immediately. Call 584-7696. Ask for Mr. Boone or Mr. Baril

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people, previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info send resume and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188.

Teaching Substitute $6.25/hour Hampshire Franklin Day Care Center, Route 63. Near Amherst-Leverett

EMPLOYMENT

town line. 548-9674

PUBLIC RELATIONS/MARKETING STAFF

If you seek an ever-changing high-energy workplace, this may be the job for you. Hinsdale/Greyhound Park/simulcast betting capital of the Northeast, is looking for enthusiastic individuals experienced in Public Relations/Marketing/Promotions. Exciting work atmosphere, competitive salary, and benefits. Send confidential resume to Ron Algeri, GM, Hinsdale/Greyhound Park, Route 119, Hinsdale, NH 03451 F/T Equal Opportunity Employer

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krahow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680 ext. K50011

Wanted: Tour guides. Summer Counselors, Student Admissions Representatives. Applications available at the Admissions Center.

Cruise Lies Entry level on-board positions available. Benefits Summer or year round. (612)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

EMPLOYMENT

Outside Jobs- Now hiring National Parks, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting, CO's benefits and Bonuses! Nationwide openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext R180 Eastern Europe/Asian jobs- Live in Prague, Budapest, Tokyo, etc. Teaching simple conversational English. No languages/teaching exp. required (919)918-7767 ext W180

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

Sugarloaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus-line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Laptop/Notebook $99. Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 566-3324-2

Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo Video Exchange, 256-0941

Snow Tires Two pair, Firestone and Vredestein, 185 70 Call 586-1087

FOR SALE

Mac Laptop Duo 230, 12Mb RAM, System 7.5.1. Really fast, comes with lots of software and accessories. $1200 or B/O. Call Noel 323-9692. Willing to negotiate. Please call.

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition. $200 Sean 546-5734

4 Jeep Tires- 30x9.50 R15LT Kelly Tires. Very good condition. $200 or B/O. Call Jennifer 548-9770

Word Processor: Brother Whisper Writer WP-7550. Ink Jet Printer. Asking $799 or B/O. Bill 582-9175

Smith Corona WP compact, great condition. $150 or B/O. Call 256-5470

486 New Laptop $585, VGA Color Monitor $175, IDE Hard Drive $110. Steve 566-3324-2

FOUND

Found- Grey Fleece Pullover at Egan's apt. Saturday night, 2/1/97. May have been switched with mine by accident. Please call Keith at 546-4266 or Egan.

MISCELLANEOUS

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1988, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)668-4783

MISCELLANEOUS

GORILLAGRAMS Valentines, Birthdays, Roses, Balloons, Poems. Send the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Rates. Call ahead for Valentine's Day. 256-0287

PERSONALS

"What's so funny 'bout peace, love and understanding?" Curtis Stogers, Free love and Valentines at www.mainquad.com

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in two bedroom apt On bus route. Available immediately $220 + utilities. Call 665-2197

One bedroom in 2 bedroom apt Available immediately. On bus route. Sugarloaf Estates. Keira (203)294-1336. Females Only.

SERVICES

Foreign Students Visitors. Greencard programs available (800)773-8704 Cost $29. Applications close 2-24-97

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016 (We are a research and publishing company)

SERVICES

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH... CALL TODAY. (800)700-0790. www.vagabondtours.com

Spring Break/Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Panama City, South Padre. Lowest prices. Reliable company. Asta Iatan member. Contact Matt 253-8473

Pompano Beach, Florida March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133 Parrial kitchen

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Inter-campus Representatives (800)327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Best Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company. Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more. Call 256-8724

Jamaica- Spring Break Stay in beautiful Negril. Includes roundtrip airfare, hotel transfers, 7 nights lodging. From $519. Don't take chances with other companies, go with the UMass Ski Club. Call 545-3437

Europe $155. Caribo/Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations Airtrtch Im (800)326-2009. airtwtch@mexcom.com or www.isr-com.fr/airtvtch

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations-free parties!!! Organize group and travel. Free lowest price guarantee. From $99. (800)426-7710. www.sunsplashtours.com

Spring Break- Nassau/Paradise Island, from $378. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize small group- earn free trips plus commissions! Call (800)9-Beach-1

WANTED TO RENT

Six bedroom house for the fall Willing to take over summer lease Call 549-5362!

WANTED

Photographer needed. Local band needs photo for press kit. For info call Phil 549-5636

Conservative students interested in starting a conservative student newspaper. Good writing skills and familiarity with Pagemaker software a plus. Call Paul at 6-0183 for more information

Here's something to do with all the change you have in your pockets... Collegian Classifieds

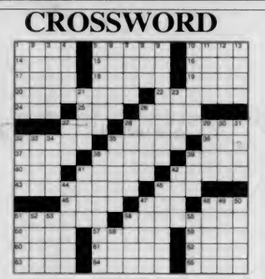
Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad listed in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order.
9. Use of false identification or misrepresentation in order to personals orders the law.
10. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates



$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Flit
5. Phobic's plethora
10. Patron saint of artists
14. Garfield's pal
15. Open, as a bottle
16. What's ___ for me? (2 wds.)
17. Ilgna
18. Cosmetician Lauder
19. Entertainer Eartha
20. Captain Hatteras's craft
22. Singer Franklin
24. Tiny taste
25. Busy one
26. Similar
27. Sailmat Ward
28. Kings and knights
32. Justice Frankfurter
35. ___ Jacques"
36. Samuel's ox.
37. Actor Julia
39. Greyhound riders
39. Time in office
40. Aquatic bird
41. Barked at the moon
42. Excessive
43. Respected
45. Quantity (abbr.)
46. Dan
47. Telepathy (abbr.)
48. Tarnish
51. Minnesota city (2 wds.)
54. Body rub expert
56. Mansud
57. Furious
58. Winged youth
60. Primo
61. Sea duck
62. Kiddor movie role
63. Ran, as colors
64. Consumed
65. Lot

DOWN
1. Spackled horses
2. Stevenson of Illinois
3. ___ and late notice (2 wds.)
4. Gypsy moth or autograph hound
5. Provided power for
6. Result
7. NT book
8. Field portrayal
9. Stereo parts
10. Compares
11. Military body
12. Partner of kin
13. "___ Ken"
21. Asian goat
23. Move upward
29. In the tore
27. Zip
28. Nicaine, for one
29. TV horse (2 wds.)
30. Light color
31. Application request
32. Independent
33. Aural appendages
34. Affect of the stage
35. Philadelphia shutter
36. Groups of relatives
38. Blasting letters
41. ___ Brummal (1954 film)
42. Parts' kin
44. In high spirits
45. State confidently
47. Ingested
48. Wall painting
49. In unison (2 wds.)
50. Embroider again
51. Hurs
52. Before box or shed
53. Dixie cloth dish
54. Constructed
55. Grigs
58. ___ Van Winkle

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

I	T	C	H		L	E	T	U	P		P	U	F	F
R	A	H	S		A	L	O	N	E		E	S	A	U
W	H	A	T		D	A	M	O	N		R	E	D	D
I	O	N		B	I	N	S		S	T	O	R	E	D
N	E	S	T	L	E	D		D	I	O	N
			H	E	S		A	R	O	U	S	I	N	G
H	U	M	I	D		C	L	I	N	T		R	I	N
O	P	U	S		S	H	O	P	S		N	A	N	A
S	O	S		F	L	O	S	S		D	O	N	A	T
E	N	T	E	R	E	R	S		I	R	E
		T	E	E	D		S	C	A	L	E	R	S
S	A	C	H	E	T		B	A	I	T		N	E	O
H	U	L	A		I	L	I	K	E		S	O	L	D
A	T	O	N		N	O	T	E	S		E	L	I	A
D	O	P	E		G	U	E	S	T		T	A	T	S

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Fast thinking and good judgment may enable you to come out of a sticky situation unscathed like a true Brewer-though—if you get cocky, things could just as easily go completely wrong. Don't underestimate the complexity of the problem.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Your irritability level is high this week, especially when confronted by a chronic griper. Encourage them to come up with solutions and then help three channel their ideas to the appropriate people. You'll both appreciate the results.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
A clever approach to problem solving and an ability to communicate that knowledge with others makes you a very popular person this week. Don't be afraid to take on a little extra troubleshooting—it could be noticed by someone you'd like to impress.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
If there are decisions you've been putting off, now is the perfect time to finish gathering information and make a choice. Give yourself a deadline so you don't procrastinate further. Time is of the essence.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Adding a new ingredient to an old recipe for success could be just the ticket to snapping out of an old habit. Share your results with other people, but don't be surprised if they don't appreciate the significance of your discoveries.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Small delays this week mean huge setbacks later on, so be punctual and respect your deadlines. Take full responsibility for what happens, and you'll reap the rewards later on. A group effort leads to increased productivity.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Use all your tact in explaining your way out of a difficult situation. The possibility exists for you to make a dangerous enemy this week. Clear communication of your expectations and perceptions could be the key to wiping the slate clean.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
With the flick of your hand, you could cause big changes in someone else's life. Work to make this change a positive one. A domestic catastrophe offers you a great opportunity for a laugh if you give your sense of humor a chance.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
A stress and neat work space frees you from flagging through clutter and inspires you to bouts of productivity. Sometimes it's just a matter of having the right tool for the job. Turn over a new leaf and surprise a friend with a thoughtful gesture.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Make the extra effort to get something right the first time, rather than fixing it later. You might make a big impression on a key person with your industrious example. You'll be startling them a valuable lesson.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
What seems like chaos could actually be a beneficial situation for you if you're willing to get your feet wet and wade on in. Show your willingness to be a team player. When things settle down, you could find that you've made one or two powerful allies.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Paying close attention to details enables you to get your life back in order. Clear yourself some leeway to become engrossed in work. Something that seems like a distraction could be the inspiration for some of your best work.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

I	T	C	H		L	E	T	U	P		P	U	F	F
R	A	H	S		A	L	O	N	E		E	S	A	U
W	H	A	T		D	A	M	O	N		R	E	D	D
I	O	N		B	I	N	S		S	T	O	R	E	D
N	E	S	T	L	E	D		D	I	O	N
			H	E	S		A	R	O	U	S	I	N	G
H	U	M	I	D		C	L	I	N	T		R	I	N
O	P	U	S		S	H	O	P	S		N	A	N	A
S	O	S		F	L	O	S	S		D	O	N	A	T
E	N	T	E	R	E	R	S		I	R	E
		T	E	E	D		S	C	A	L	E	R	S
S	A	C	H	E	T		B	A	I	T		N	E	O
H	U	L	A		I	L	I	K	E		S	O	L	D
A	T	O	N		N	O	T	E	S		E	L	I	A
D	O	P	E		G	U	E	S	T		T	A	T	S

Daily Listings sponsored by: Your Ad Could Be Here. Call 545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 BET
5	ABC/5	Boston	28 BET on Jazz
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 Laser Video
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28 The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	30 Comedy Central
9	Weather Channel		31 Popcorn Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32 Satellite Programming
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 6, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	7	(11) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Grand Duy Du&A Close Shave		Mystery! "Inspector Morse"		Wait for God	Take s Letter	T. Old House	Ancestors
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Diagnosis Murder		Moloney "Herniated Nick"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder		Moloney "Herniated Nick"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	High Incident "Black and Blue"		★½ "Beverly Hills Cop III" (1994, Drama) Eddie Murphy.				News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★½ "Pyrogoyle" (1984, Suspense) Clint Eastwood.				News		News	Late Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "Whose Apply Now?"		News	Tonight Show
WTAX		(8) Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Cape "Hurricane" (In Stereo)		Baywatch Nights		News	(LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT		(10) News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "Whose Apply Now?"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	(3) Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Martin	Living Single	New York Undercover		News		Coach	Deep Space
WWLP	9	(22) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "Whose Apply Now?"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	(57) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		T. Old House	Dra. on Call	Mystery! "Inspector Morse"		Dangerfield		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29 News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	High Incident "Black and Blue"		★½ "Beverly Hills Cop III" (1994, Drama) Eddie Murphy.				News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)	Seinfeld	NBA Basketball	Boston Celtics at Orlando Magic. (Live)				News	Martin	Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★½ "Toy Soldiers" (1991, Drama) Sean Astin, Wil Wheaton.					★★ "The Principal" (1987, Drama) James Belu
A&E	69		Quincy		Equalizer "A Place to Stay"		Biography Betty Grable-Pinup		Ancient Mysteries (R)		Unexplained (R)	Law & Order "Skin Deep"
CNN	30	22	WorldView		Monayline	Crossfire	Prime News	Inside Politics	Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	53	96	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	★½ "Moving Violations" (1985, Comedy) John Murray.				A-List (R)	Dream On	Daily Show
DISC	67		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Luftwaffe (R)		Wild Discovery: Australia		Movie Magic	Next Step	Gorilla Remembers		Wild Discovery: Australia
ESPN	51		Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball	Michigan at Wisconsin. (Live)			College Basketball	Tulane at Cincinnati. (Live)		Sportscenter
LIFE	52		Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"The Littlest Victims" (1989, Drama) Tim Matheson, Lewis Arlt.			Living	Mysteries
MTV	59		Ren & Stimpy	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prima Tims (In Stereo)		Yal (In Stereo)			Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	55		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret-of Alax	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Odd Couple
SCIFI	61		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax "The Lottery"		★★ "Scanners" (1981, Horror) Jennifer O'Neill, Stephen Lack.					Sci-Fi Buzz (R)	Inside Space
TLC	97	26	Furniture	Renovation	Homelina (R)	Homelina (R)	Real America: 48 Hours			History of Rock 'n' Roll (R)	Glass Jungle: Feat		Real America: 48 Hours
TNT	63		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		★★½ "The Shootist" (1976, Western) John Wayne.				★★★ "Cowboys" (1991, Western)		Sam Elliott, Katharine Ross.
USA	62		Renegade "Sheriff Reno"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote (Part 2 of 2)		★★½ "K2" (1992, Adventure) Michael Biehn. (In Stereo)				Wings
HBO	91		★★½ "Trapped in Paradise" (1994) Nicolas Cage. "PG-13"				★★★½ "Braveheart" (1995, Drama) Mel Gibson, Sophie Marceau. (In Stereo) "R"						Crime and Punishment
MAX	92		★★ "The Break" (1995, Drama) Vincent Van Patten. "PG-13"				★★ "The Babysitter" (1995) Alicia Silverstone. "R"		★★½ "Ricochet" (1991) Denzel Washington. "R"				"The Crossing Guard" (1995) "R"
SHOW	50		(4:30) "World"	★★ "Carry On Columbus" (1992) Jim Dale. "NR"			★★½ "Color of Night" (1994, Suspense) Bruce Willis, Jane March. (In Stereo) "R"			★½ "Body Count" (1996) Brigitte Nielsen. "R"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My friend, Isaiah, has a lizard.

It stares at me. I think it's about as smart as a box of rocks.

It has strange green science fiction skin.

It doesn't know right from wrong. It has no ethics.

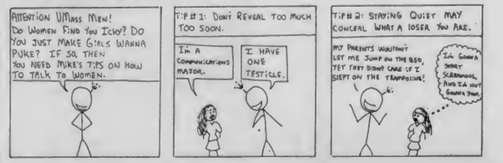
It would eat me if it could fit me into it's mouth.

It has no sense of past or future. It lives only in the present.

I don't think it has any feelings whatsoever about anything.

I want to be a lizard.

University² By Frank Cho



Generation X By Chris Lehman

Duh By Maura and Micaela

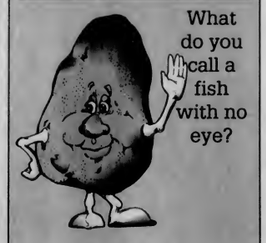
LEEDEE By Mike Rybilki

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Non-Sequitur By Wiley

Close to Home By John McPherson



"It says in gigantic red letters on page one of the manual: 'DO NOT USE THE SNOWBLOWER ON GRAVEL SURFACES!'"

Quote of the Day

"Horrifying Vegetarians since 1980"

–Post House
(NYC steak house)

Joke of the Day

What do you call a fish with no eye?

–A Fish

Today's Staff

Jacob "Frozen Mudslide" Michaels
Night Editor

Rhaguram "Fuzzy Navel" Vadarevu
Copy Editor

Jennifer "White Russian" Jutras
Photo Technician

Josh "Tequila Sunrise" Sylvester
Production Supervisor

Sam "Long Island Ice Tea" Smullin
Leon "Sex on the Beach" Latino
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Breaded Chicken Tenders
Cheesy Pizza	Jamaican Beef Patty
Vegan Falafel Sandwich	Bean/Corn/Tom. Casserole
	Grilled Sneeze

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger	Breaded Chicken — Tenders
Grilled Chicken Pucks	Jamaican Beef Patty
BBQ Beef on Bun

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Hot Turkey Sandwich	Breaded Chicken Tenders
Elbow Mac./Tom. Sauce	Mexican Vegie Stew
Lentil Chili	Pastabilities

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hot Turkey Sandwich	Breaded Chicken Tenders
Pizza	Jamaican Beef Patty
Elbow Mac./Tom. Sauce	Mexican Vegie Stew
Lentil Chili

Minutemen look to send erratic Duquesne reeling

CHRIS CLEVNER / COLLEGIAN

Carmelo Travieso and the Massachusetts men's hoop team face Duquesne tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Mullins Center.

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Tonight's men's basketball (7:30 p.m. at the William D. Mullins Center) game against Duquesne would make an excellent topic for a whiny Jerry Seinfeld monologue.

"What's with the Dukes?"

In the last two weeks, Duquesne managed to knock off No. 20 Xavier 78–70 and then, less than a week later, lost to Fordham 60–59. How does a team beat a nationally ranked opponent by eight points and days later, fall to a team that was 0–6 in the A-10?

Inconsistency is the name of the game for Duquesne, which, on occasion, has banged with the big boys (coach Scott Edgar's squad nearly beat Rhode Island 85–83) but has struggled more often than not.

"We want to stay on the track that we're on now, the winning pace and keep things the way they are going," UMass guard Charlton Clarke said. "Duquesne probably did what we didn't want to do against Fordham, took them nonchalantly."

"We are not going to approach the Duquesne game like that. We are going to play them as hard as we can to try to get them out of the game early and once that happens, they know they have no shot at winning, the game will run smoothly," he said.

The Dukes have a bright spot in senior guard Tom Pipkins. Despite coming off a poor outing against Fordham (with nine points, one of his least productive games of the year) Pipkins is averaging 18.9 points per game. In addition, the Dukes have been able to count on Pipkins for consistent points from the line, where he is averaging 77.5 percent this season and 75 percent career-long.

"We are going to play him as hard as we can. Carmelo [Travieso] is going to smother him, make him do things he doesn't want to do, make him put it on the floor, then we are going to take charges and try to get him out of the game," Clarke said. "We want to use the same game plan that we've been using, do it on the defensive end so we can get baskets on the offensive end."

—Pipkins is joined with backcourt mate Mike James (12.1 ppg) and Kevin Price (16.5 ppg) in shouldering the weight of the Dukes' scoring.

While no team has had a cakewalk through conference play, the Minutemen have won six of their last seven games and have turned on the jets since coach James "Bruiter" Flint implemented a three-guard lineup.

With Edgar Padilla running the point, Travieso lighting it up downtown, and Clarke slashing inside, UMass has opened up its game since the early part of the season. With the three-guard set up, they can set themselves up well, or look inside to the consistent play of center Lari Ketner and power forward Tyrone Weeks.

Battling the boards could be a key factor in putting the Dukes away tonight. Where the Minutemen hold a plus 3.9 rebounding margin, Duquesne has a minus 4.0 deficit. With Weeks averaging 10.7 rebounds per game in his last seven games and Ketner bigger than anyone on the Dukes' bench, the Minutemen have a chance to work them inside and out.

Travieso has been UMass' scoring machine as of late, putting up 18 points against Fordham on Monday. The senior has led the team in scoring in three of the last five contests and leads the team in scoring on the year (15.2 ppg). He's also been deadly outside the arc connecting on 19–of–37 3–point attempts (51.4 percent).

"We've just been feelin' it," Clarke said. "We have a lot of confidence in one another. Me, Edgar, and Carmelo, we realize that if the outside game isn't going, get the ball inside to Lari and let Lari and Tyrone do their individual thing.

"We don't have a problem with that. If we score two points and play great defense, we're proud of that because we know it was Lari and Tyrone's turn to carry us. We feel that as a team right now, we can make a lot of noise."

MASSACHUSETTS BASKETBALL

Duquesne
vs.
Massachusetts
William D. Mullins Center — 7:30 pm

G	Edgar Padilla	Tom Pipkins	G
G	Carmelo Travieso	Mike James	G
G	Charlton Clarke	Kevin Price	F
F	Tyrone Weeks	Nick Bosnie	F
C	Lari Ketner	Terrell Bridges	C

on air: WHMP FM, WMUA FM
A-10 television

Sophmores key to gym's present and future

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

Dressed in their street clothes, four sophomore members of the Massachusetts women's gymnastics team sit in a circle on the gym floor.

One speaks about their successes and anticipations of their days in the maroon and white while the others show why they are at home at UMass, each a unique and integral part of a finely-crafted gymnastics machine.

They each bring something different to the team. Each calmly explains their reasons for coming to UMass in spite of its lack of history as a gymnastics powerhouse.

Anita Sonyal, whose grace and fluidity earned a 9.85 beam score to secure a .5 point win over George Washington in the season opener, expresses her excitement about the team's improvement towards national prominence.

Denise Johnson listens intently as she relaxes on the mat to Sonyal's right, with the same poised focus she displays in her near–perfect vault and floor routines. When the microphone is passed her way, she quietly responds that Anita has said it all, she wishes to add nothing.

Betsy Colucci, the energetic bars and vault specialist doesn't hesitate to speak on any topic, happy to accommodate, like the true team player she is. Colucci's excitement can be attributed to her return to the line–up after spending much of last year injured. Already she has contributed to the team scoring, after adding so much spark to the team's chemistry during her time out.

The last card in the deck is the joker, the 5–foot tall bundle of enthusiasm Michelle LoPresti. Each gymnast adds certain traits and characteristics to the conversation, all of which are present in their routines. None of the sophomores have been competing in all four events, but each is a major contributor to at least one event per meet, and together they are regarded as the future of a Massachusetts gymnastics program which is quickly emerging as a new kid on the national gymnastics block.

"We are only as good as the sophomore class will allow us to be. That's a big impact class," Minutewomen coach Dave Kuzara said. "They'll carry us."

The squad breaks down to two seniors, Lianne Lang and Tara Swartz, two juniors, Penny Lebeau and Karen Maurer, two freshman, Rene Franklin and Mandy Mosby, and seven sophomores. Rounding out the group of second–year competitors are Rokia Madore, Sara Kelly, and Amy Caputo, in addition to the above mentioned four.

"The majority of the team is sophomores, so we're young and they have a lot of enthusiasm... that's an understatement," Kuzara said.

The group refuses to let their relative youth bring them down. Throughout the interview, every athlete expressed her determination and confidence in her abilities to bring UMass gymnastics into the spotlight on the national stage. They have embraced the challenges of competing with the best in the country, as shown in the record–setting performances at the William D. Mullins Center meet against No. 11 Michigan. The Wolverines edged the Minutewomen by fewer than two points, while UMass set the school scoring record by almost two points. They have decided they will not back down.

"I think we are all excited about the chance to be the ones to take this program to the next level," Colucci said.

Johnson took over for her teammate. "It's really great to come into a program and know you're making a difference, and that we're actually taking this program somewhere, and we will go somewhere."

The sophomore class is expected to be the coming–out recruiting class by those playing and coaching the Minutewomen, and it is a very colorful group.

Johnson has already made a huge impact for Massachusetts. This lead–by–example hard worker has already scored 9.9 on both the floor and the vault. Johnson won numerous accolades as an all–arounder from Gaithersburg, Md. Last year's Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year is known for her incredible athleticism, and her quietly direct disposition.

"Denise is a rock for us," Kuzara said. "She never misses. Denise is always someone you can count on in competition."

Johnson's stoic leadership does not set her apart from the others in terms of her confidence level. Kuzara is confident in her, her teammates expect her to shine, and she knows she will perform.

"My personal goals?" she said. "Well, I guess I'd have to say, I've already gotten the 9.9's so I want to get a perfect 10."

She talks the talk and any of the 2,435 Mullins Center fanatics at the Michigan meet will swear she backs it up. Her solid vault performance in the first rotation sent the Mullins faithful into a frenzy, and showed Michigan that the Minutewomen would be no pushovers.

Turn to GYM, page 12

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Anita Sonyal is one of the seven sophomores making an impact on UMass women's gymnastics this year.

Two legends now have place in Hall

Visit the college basketball wing of the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield and you will find one of the most colorful and elaborate displays honoring the sport.

An engaging area that packs a lot of punch without being gaudy or overdone, the wing has seen quite a bit of the names Haskins and Carril.

The plaques that hang in honor of the Hall's inductees on the opposite side of the floor will now have those names as well.

Don Haskins and Pete Carril, two of the most legendary coaches in NCAA history, were inducted as members of the Hall of Fame's Class of 1997 last week.

Haskins has been a quiet figure in the annals of coaching, receiving most of his attention for winning the 1966 NCAA Championship.

But his coaching distinctions reach much farther than that. Since beginning his career at the University of Texas–El Paso, Haskins has compiled a 687–322

CASEY KANE ON COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Turn to HOOP, page 12

Can anyone stop Michael Jordan & the Chicago Bulls?

Nearly 31 points per game and a big fat 50 cent piece dropped on the Knicks.

Is it just me or is Michael Jordan truly a better player now than he's ever been? Is that even possible?

The Bulls are cruising to another Finals berth, obviously, and there's no question as to why. MJ is finally the player that every coach in the NBA fears the most. No longer will he just drop 35 on your squad, but he'll also let Pippen, Kukoc, Harper and the rest of the team do their thing, making the Bulls an all around better team. Scary, isn't it?

HUMPHREY BROWN III ON THE NBA

What kills me is that the man retired, swung lumber for a hot minute (we love you Mike, but don't ever go there again) and came back after a year of not even touching a basketball to reclaim the titles of MVP, scoring leader and NBA Champion.

On the side, the guy hocks shoes, hotdogs, underwear, his own fragrance (is anyone wearing that stuff?) and anything else he feels like messing with. With all that and a movie, he somehow finds the time to lead the Bulls to a 41–5 record.

I'm beginning to wonder if it's just all a little too easy

Turn to NBA, page 13

Intramural hoop starts off spring

Editor's note: Sports Briefs is a relatively new column to the Collegian*, but so far it has been very successful. The column is designed to give attention and credit to the athletes who don't play at the collegiate varsity level, but instead on club, intramural and recreational teams.*

The feature runs every Thursday, and is comprised of information sent in from these teams and athletes. Submissions for Sports Briefs should be sent to the Collegian offices, and are due each Wednesday at noon. Submissions can be sent, brought down to the offices at 113 Campus Center Basement or faxed to 545–1592.

If there are any questions call co-sports editors Casey Kane or Chris Stamm at 545-0719.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Turn to BRIEFS, page 13

Football signs 12 recruits for next season

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Yesterday was like Christmas Day for the Massachusetts football team and coach Mike Hodges.

It was National Letter of Intent Day, and Hodges could finally announce the signing of 12 new recruits, with six more to be officially inked by the end of the week.

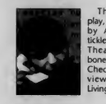
Hodges has recruited a class that he feels will fill some of the holes left by the graduation of 15 seniors, a class with one central theme—speed.

"This is a very satisfying day," Hodges said. "This process started a long time ago, and there were a lot of hours [spent] getting these recruits here... I like this group a lot .We needed more guys that could run, athletic guys that could run and make plays. That's what we went after."

Included in this new class are some players who can play a lot of positions and, according to Hodges, have the athleticism to help out where needed. Only three of the new recruits are natives of Massachusetts, highlighted by 6–foot– 7, 305 pound offensive lineman Christian Erhartic, a two sport star at Chelmsford who is averaging double figures in points and rebounds as a center for the basketball team.

UMass continues its trend of recruiting mainly from the New York–New Jersey area, with eight recruits from that region, including Temple–transfer Greg Zambelli, an offensive lineman who will be expected to contribute immediately to a Minuteman line that lost four of five starters to graduation.

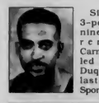
Two Florida players round out today's list of recruits, which should be filled out by tomorrow.



Much of the talk about UMass football recently has been the proposed move to Division 1. The task force commissioned to look into the feasibility of the move released its report to Chancellor David K. Scott last month, but Scott has said that certain "kinks" have to be worked out before any decision can be made.

"It's so complicated," Hodges said.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 13



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 78 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, February 7, 1997

Coming up "Blank"

The new comic play, The Blank Page, by Adam Langer tickles the Hampden Theatre's funny bones this weekend. Check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 5).

From way, way downtown

Sinking a 3–pointer with nine seconds remaining Carmelo Travieso led UMass over Duquesne 73-71 last night (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Helms pushes for CNN news bureau in Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, urged President Clinton to approve CNN's application to open a news bureau in Cuba. He said the move would hasten the demise of President Fidel Castro's government. In a letter sent yesterday to Clinton, Helms said he supported the proposal provided the "opening is completely unconditional and that the Castro regime will be granted no quid pro quo."

Helms, R–N.C., also said all U.S. news organizations that make similar applications should be permitted to establish a presence in Cuba.

"I am persuaded that the spotlight of a free press focused on Castro's tropical gulag will only hasten the day when the Cuban people are free of his brutal communist tyranny," Helms said in the letter. He said U.S. news bureaus would benefit the Cuban people by making news organizations less dependent on Castro's government "for access to the island.

NATION

New budget proposes college tax credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Who would qualify for some of the proposed tax changes, and how, in President Clinton's budget:

•College tax credit: Families would get a $1,500 tax credit for each student in post-secondary education for one year. If at least a B average is maintained by the student and he or she is not convicted of a drug crime, the family would qualify for a $1,500 tax credit a second year.

Families not earning enough to pay $1,500 in income tax would not get the full credit. Credit would be phased out for taxpayers filing a joint return with adjusted gross income between $80,000 and $100,000. Taxpayers with incomes over $100.000 would not qualify at all.

•College tax deduction: As an alternative to the tax credit, or when the credit expires, families could deduct tuition and fees for post-secondary educationor job training. Each family could qualify for only one deduction each year. The maximum deduction would start at $5,000. rising to $10,000 in 1999.

•Child tax credit: For each child under 13. Worth $300 a year in 1997-99 and $500 in 2000.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	day	day
HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Amherst businesses petition for proposed downtown parking lot

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

A petition posted on the entrance door of the Black Sheep Cafe reads in bold print: "The Undersigned Businesses of Amherst strongly urge that Amherst Build a downtown parking garage."

Approximately 100 area businesses signed the petition to advocate the construction of a parking garage or improved lot that would eradicate the parking problems that have plagued Amherst center for over 25 years.

Although numerous approaches have been taken to address these problems, extra parking in Amherst still remains to be found.

"The town of Amherst has it all — gas, food and lodging. Now, we want customers," said Nick Seamon, manager of the Black Sheep Cafe.

Seamon is also one of approximately 10 business owners who serve on the Amherst Downtown Business Action Committee — one of the driving forces behind the petition.

To determine the severity of traffic problems in Amherst center, various analyses have been done to determine the exact source of Amherst's parking problems.

"According to the surveys, it's been determined that there's a 500–900 car parking space deficit," Seamon said. "Obviously, the need is there for increased parking."

Town planner Jonathan Tucker agreed that the town has been working approximately 30 years to solve the problem of Amherst center parking.

"Back in 1989–90, a parking task force was formed to address downtown parking problems," Tucker said. "A consultant was hired and three different sites were chosen as possibilities.

"Money, though, wasn't to be found back then, so the plans were put on the shelf."

In 1992 the town of Amherst formed a standing parking commission to replace the meager parking task force. The goals of the group, according to Tucker, revolved around improving, tightening and controlling town traffic congestion. Yet, the problem still existed. There weren't enough parking spaces to accommodate everybody.

One proposal last fall estimated the cost at $15,000 to re– design the present CVS lot. The town decided to put the project on hold, much to the dismay of area businesses.

"It's a fact of society, people don't enjoy traveling to places and finding that they can't walk around. From the business perspective, parking is an absolute necessity," said Adam Lussier, manager of Zanna clothing boutique.

Good–news came for the Amherst commission last spring when the Massachusetts State Transportation board and Senator Stanley Rosenburg passed a $20 million allotment designated strictly to resolve traffic and parking problems in Massachusetts.

Amherst is now one of three towns eligible for a $3 million grant to improve area parking problems. If approved for the grant though, the town of Amherst would have to supply an additional 33 percent ($1 million) in funding to support the enterprise. However, area residents and businesses consider it a wise investment.

"The simple issue is we have an opportunity to build a downtown parking garage. This would be the most opportunistic and optimistic time for the parking problems to be solved," Lussier said.

"We've had 25 years of exhaustive studies and renderings all of which claim the need for the addition of parking spaces, growth vitality and stabilization. Growth has to be maintained to insure additional activities and customers for business."

The town planners and parking task force as well as the Downtown Business Action Committee must now focus the next few months designing a precise proposal to the Massachusetts Senate that would include the site and design of the project.

According to Tucker, it is not determined yet as to whether a parking garage or just an improved lot will be proposed.

Three sites have already been submitted for consideration. They include: the CVS parking lot site, the Boltwood Walk parking lot site and the Amity Street parking lot site.

"The last town meeting served more of as a hearing sponsored by the Selectmen's Board. People addressed their concerns about the project and voiced their opinions about the possibility of designs," Tucker said.

"Now the Selectman's Board and Parking commission have to meet to decide the direction of the project. They have to hire a consultant and get information on the sites and deal with the legal aspects as well," Tucker said.

At this point, it's up to the committees of the town of Amherst to direct the project towards its goals — specifically, new and increased parking for the town of Amherst.

Crasson promotes Harvey to be new assistant provost

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Provost Patricia H. Crosson made several announcements regarding new appointments at yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting.

Bryan C. Harvey, director of the UMass Office of Academic Planning and Assessment, has been promoted to the position of Associate Provost for Planning and Assessment.

Crosson said that Harvey will continue to direct the Office of Academic Planning and Assessment, as well as working on academic program approval, student assessment programs, the University's reaccreditation next year and enrollment planning.

"I'm very excited about it," Crosson said. "[Harvey] is a valued staff member in the Provost Office now, and this title will make it easier for him to work together with academics on assessment of our academic programs."

Harvey said that he was looking forward to taking on his new position.

"I feel great about this. I've been at UMass for a long time, and these are exciting times for the University," said Harvey. "It's nice to be a part of it."

Harvey also said that he felt that the accreditation process which will begin next year will be a good opportunity for the University.

"In general, UMass tends to get less credit than it deserves," Harvey said. "This is a chance for us to showcase the important things that are going on here at UMass."

Harvey will also supervise the student assessment program, which has produced a new standard course evaluation form.

He said that the student assessment program has tried to make the course evaluations more useful by changing the type of questions on the form.

"A lot of work has gone in to making sure the questions result in better student learning," Harvey said.

Crosson also announced the appointment of Kevin H. Aiken as director of the Division of Continuing Education. Aiken has been acting director of the division since 1995.

Crosson said Aiken's appointment is part of the program to revitalize the University's outreach mission.

In addition, Crosson announced the creation of a new position, Vice Provost for University Outreach. The new vice provost will be responsible for expanding the outreach effort of the university.

Crosson has received the recommendations of the search committee, and is ready to initiate a nationwide search for a vice provost.

She is hopeful that the position will be filled this spring, and that the new vice provost will start this summer.

Movie remembers the Holocaust

Hillel House is beginning "Holocaust Remembrance Week" a few months early with a free brunch, movie and discussion at 11:15 a.m. on Sunday, Feb. 9.

The Holocaust Commemorative Committee is sponsoring a free screening of To Bear Witness, a documentary about Holocaust survivors and the American soldiers who liberated the concentration camps.

The film is approximately an hour long, and an hour–long discussion about the film and the Holocaust in general will follow, said Josh Grey, Chair of the Holocaust Commemorative Committee.

"The discussion is really open," said Grey who interned at the Holocaust Museum in Washington D.C. "I'll answer questions about different areas of the Holocaust."

Although the discussion is slated to be an open forum about the Holocaust, Grey will moderate it.

"The discussion basically is about why we must remember the Holocaust and how," said Grey.

Areas of consideration include the proposal of opening similar museums to remember the plight of African– Americans and Native Americans, said Grey.

The purpose of the brunch and movie is to get people to discuss preparations for Hillel's plans to commemorate University of Massachusetts Holocaust Remembrance Week in May.

"We are looking for people who are interested in joining the committee," said Grey.

This is the committees first event this semester, said Grey. They hope to screen other films and produce other programs before May, but it depends upon Sunday's turn out, he said.

Students unable to attend Sunday's meeting can call Grey at Hillel, or attend the committee's next scheduled meeting on Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House.

— Matthew Wurtzel

CHRIS CLEVNER / COLLEGIAN

Give me steam!

In the midst of a brisk February night a steam vent located in Central spews into the night sky.

South Africa relives bitter past in riots

By Angus Shaw
Associated Press

ELDORADO PARK, South Africa — Images reminiscent of South Africa's bitter past reappeared yesterday when mixed-race rioters looted, burned tires and fought police to protest alleged discrimination by the black-led government.

At least one person died and more than 100 were injured, including six policemen, in the worst racial unrest since President Nelson Mandela defeated white leader F.W. De Klerk and came to power in 1994.

But those who once fought the white-led government now run it, and the protesters were mostly poor people of mixed-race descent who say they have been treated unfairly by the new black leaders.

"The government is neglecting us. They talk about equality but there isn't any for us," said Nevi Brinck, manning a barricade of blazing tires in this sprawling mixed-race township about 30 miles south of Johannesburg.

"We're only doing what they did to fight for their rights," he added. "I am fighting for my people."

The fight cost a teen-age boy who was shot in the chest his life, and it resulted in chaos in several squalid townships once reserved for people of mixed race under the former apartheid regime.

Most people treated at the trauma center in Eldorado Park were protesters hit by birdshot, rubber bullets and live ammunition fired by police.

Police spokeswoman Olta Stapelberg said a half-dozen policemen also were injured, three seriously, including one burned by a fire bomb tossed at an armored vehicle. The policeman inside clambered out, his clothing on fire.

The protests were called by a group fighting for equal rights for people of mixed-race descent, known as coloreds in South Africa. The ANC called Basil Douglas, leader of the group and a member of the local governing council, an "unsound anarchist" and accused him of inciting violence.

Organizers had promised peaceful demonstrations, but clashes erupted early in the day when police tried to clear burning barricades of tires and tree limbs. In the afternoon, police opened fire on rioters who threw stones and shot back with handguns. A crowd of protesters looted a gas station in Eldorado Park, carrying off armfuls of beer and food until scores of police in armored vehicles fired buckshot and tear gas.

The crowd stopped one taxi van, forced out the occupants, broke the windows and ripped off the sliding door before a police helicopter lowered on the scene, scattering people with its downdraft.

For the most part, though, police watched from a distance or videotaped the unrest.

"It would inflame the situation if we made any immediate arrests," Sgt. Mark Reynolds explained."

Protesters targeted taxis and buses to keep people from going to work. But service to several townships was suspended for the day. Rashid Evans, a protest organizer, said his community was tired of paying more money for electricity and water service than blacks in other townships.

He claimed blacks pay only a flat fee of $7 to $9 a month, while coloreds get charged for use even though their meters rarely get checked. In some areas, power and water service has been cut for nonpayment.

"We're paying for rotten houses," Evans spat. "We're not black enough and we're not white enough."

Etienne Phillips, an Eldorado Park businessman, stood on the roadside with neighbors watching the rioting.

"I'm sorry it has come to this. We wanted a peaceful demonstration," said Phillips. "The world will see us looting, not our real problems."

Mixed-race people long have been caught between more powerful forces in South Africa. Descendants of interracial coupling, they were poor stepchildren to dominant whites under apartheid who gave them their own chamber of Parliament but little real power. That status, however, spawned hatred from blacks who considered the coloreds sell-outs and as racist as apartheid leaders. Now, with Mandela's African National Congress in power, mixed-race people fear trampling by the black majority.

Previous efforts to stir unrest largely have failed, but yesterday's protests were the biggest in mixed-race settlements since Mandela's election.

"We are tired of waiting," said Goodwin Aldren, a community leader. "The government has called us the children of adultery and they ignore us, but we are South Africans with rights."

US youth dying more by murder, suicide

By Tara Meyer
Associated Press

ATLANTA — American youngsters are 12 times more likely to die by gunfire than their counterparts in the rest of the industrialized world, the government said yesterday.

The gun deaths are part of an overall surge in murders and suicides among the nation's youth, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said.

"Our children are getting killed or killing themselves at higher rates than any other country," said Dr. Etienne Krug, a CDC medical epidemiologist. "No child should die a violent death in the most industrialized country in the world."

American children are five times more likely to be killed than those in the rest of the industrialized world: The homicide rate is 2.57 out of every 100,000 children under age 15. That compares with an overall rate of .51 in the 25 other countries surveyed, the CDC said.

Youngsters in the United States also are twice as likely to commit suicide. The U.S. rate is .55 out of every 100,000 children, compared with .27 for the rest of the industrialized world. And deaths caused by firearms amount to 1.66 out of every 100,000 children in the United States, compared with .14 in the other nations.

"We are a more violent society," said Holly Richardson, a spokeswoman for the Washington-based Handgun Control Inc. "When you add firearms, which are by far the most lethal means of injury, what you're going to see is an increase in death rates."

From 1950 to 1993, murder rates have tripled and suicide rates have quadrupled among U.S. children under age 15, the CDC said. In 1950, 0.8 per 100,000 U.S. children under 15 were killed, compared with 2.57 in 1993. And the suicide rate was 0.2 per 100,000 children in 1950, compared with 0.9 per 100,000 in 1993.

The CDC study reflects figures for 1990 to 1995. Each country surveyed had more than 1 million people, similar economies and a system that recorded death rates.

Working with a total estimate of 2,872 child deaths, including homicides, suicides and gun-related deaths, for all of the countries in a given year, the CDC noted:

• 73 percent of the 1,995 homicides were among U.S. children.

• 54 percent of the 599 suicides were among U.S. children.

• 86 percent of the 1,107 deaths caused by guns were among U.S. children.

Guns were the primary cause of homicide among children in Finland, Israel, Australia, Italy, Germany and England. No children died from guns in Hong Kong, the Netherlands, Singapore, Japan and Kuwait, the CDC said. The main cause of the deaths wasn't specified in those countries.

The CDC now plans to study the countries more closely to find similarities between them and the United States.

"Do they have a high divorce rate, a large gap between the rich and poor? How do they store their guns? What laws do they have?" Krug asked.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Feb. 7

Dance — A Welcome Back UMass Ball will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium from 7 p.m–1 a.m. Cost is $4 per person. Semiformal requested. Dance instructions from 7–8 p.m. Refreshments included. For info call Kevin Murphy at 549–4036. Sponsored by the Ballroom Dance Club.

Lecture — Chastity Bono, writer and former spokesperson for the Human Rights Campaign (a national lesbian and gay political organization), and current Entertainment Media Director for the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD) will speak at 4 p.m. in Campus Center room 917. For more info, contact the Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Service — A very special Faculty, Staff and Student Shabbat Service will be held at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House.

Social — Kick off the Korean New Year with the Mount Holyoke Korean American Students Association on from 10:30 p.m.–2 a.m. at the Blanchard Campus Center, Mount Holyoke College. $1 for MHC students, $2 for all others. Cash bar, all drinks $2. Two forms of ID required. All are welcome. For further information, call Ji Lee at 493–4598.

Religious — All Christians are invited to Fellowship, pray and worship together at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. For more info, call Mark at 253–0361.

Saturday, Feb. 8

Concert — The First Annual Folk Festival to benefit Jessie's House and The Grove Street Inn will be held at 7 p.m. at the Northampton Unitarian Church. Performers include Annie Wenz, Michael Ferry, Christina McCarthy and Kevin Hodgson. In addition, there will be a speaker to address the local homeless situation. Tickets are $5.

Concert — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will host The Slip–On Unit, a creative electric quartet that blends the warm tones of blues, funk and fusion into their own original sound at 9 p.m. Free of charge.

Fundraiser — Womanshelter/Companeras will be selling "Have a Heart" Admission tickets. "Have a Heart," a charity fund raising event for local non–profit charities sponsored by JC Penny's, will take place at all JC Penny locations from opening to closing. The store–wide celebration will include door prizes, free make–overs, raffle drawings, a fashion show in the afternoon and more. There will also be free gift wrapping for Valentine's Day gift purchases. With the purchase of a $5 admission ticket, you will receive a coupon for 25 percent off all regularly priced merchandise and 5 percent off all sale merchandise.

Meditation — An introduction to meditation according to the Sahaj Marg System (The Natural Path) will be offered at 7:30 p.m. at the SRCM Meditation Center in Sunderland. Discussion and short video presentation. There is no fee, all are welcome. Call 665–8080 for more info.

Program — A free adult C.P.R. program called "Be a Heart Saver for Valentine's Day" will be held at Fuller Arts Center Auditorium at Springfield College at noon and 2 p.m. American Heart Association course completion cards will be issued. To register, call American Medical Response at (413) 783–5108.

Social — The Hillel House Dining Room will hold an Israeli Cafe at 9 p.m. Come enjoy Israeli food, music and dancing. Donations of canned food goods appreciated. Sponsored by the Hillel House Social Committee and the JLC.

Sunday, Feb. 9

Brunch/Film — Holocaust Commemorative Committee will sponsor an event to foster discussion on "The Study of the Holocaust on College Campuses" with movie To Bear Witness. Ideas for events during the UMass Holocaust Week of Remembrance in May are welcome. Meets at 11:15 a.m. in the Hillel House Dining Room.

Concert — "Toccapsody, Rapsodie, Suite and Variations," music for solo and four–hand piano will be held at in Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College at 3 p.m. Dana Muller (Amherst College music faculty) and Gary Steigerwalt (Mount Holyoke College music faculty), pianists; music of Franz Schubert, Maurice Ravel, Lewis Spratlan (Amherst College music faculty), Helen Hopekirk to be featured. Free and open to the public.

Religious — The Interfaith Service Council of Amherst invites the public to the 22nd International Sunday Interfaith/Multicultural Service and International Supper at 4 p.m. at the First Congregational Church, 165 Main St. Hatsumi Moss will speak on the theme, "Love Promotes Peace." Everyone is encouraged to wear the national dress of their own country. Though no donation is necessary, a special offering will be given to the UMass Foreign Student Emergency Fund. A potluck supper at 5:30 p.m. will honor those foreign countries. Anyone is invited to bring a favorite dish as follows, according to the first letter of your last name: A–G, salad; H–R, main dish; S–Z, dessert.

Workshop — The UMass Pagan Students are presenting a workshop on "Paganism 101" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check at the desk for the room number. Come have your questions answered about Wicca, Magick, Earth religions and the old Gods and Goddesses. Contact Melissa at 546–0476 if you have questions.

Notices

Comedy — The UMass improv comedy show Mission Improvable, will perform every Saturday in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Chemical exchange — The UMass Reuse/Exchange inventory is now available at http://www.unix.oit.umass.edu/~safety/rex1.html. The items on this list are available free of charge and will be delivered on a first–come, first–served basis. Call 545–2682 for more info.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Auditions — Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild's Spring production of Fame will take place Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 8 at 1 and 7 p.m. in room 101 of the Campus Center. You only need to attend one audition. Callbacks will take place Feb. 9 at 10 a.m. No need to prepare, come as you are. All are welcome. For more information call the UMTG office at 545–0415.

Karate — The UMass Shotoran Karate Club is now accepting new members. No prior experience necessary. Come watch and join our daily training in a traditional Japanese martial art. For more info, contact Loukia at 549– 8058 or Ian at 549–5485.

Orientation — Orientation tours for the W.E.B. Du Bois Library will be held today and Feb. 4–7. The tours will leave from the Entrance lobby at 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. daily. We encourage you to come, visit and get to know the library.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage

Feb. 4

An individual reported that his vehicle was struck on University Drive by a vehicle passing on the right. The vehicle left the scene.

Annoying Behavior

Feb. 3

An individual reported threatening behavior by individual at the Fine Arts Center.

There was a roommate dispute in James Residence Hall.

Feb. 5

There were reports of intoxicated individuals entering a vehicle on Windmill Lane.

Assist Citizen

Feb. 4

A resident of Moore Residence Hall was provided transportation to court for a restraining order.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering

Feb. 4

A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

A vehicle was broken into and others were damaged in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

Health/Safety Hazard

Feb. 3

Sanders were called to sand icy roads on Clark Hill Road.

Feb. 4

Odors coming from heaters in Pierpont Residence Hall was determined to be dust in the heating coils.

Larceny

Feb. 3

A tray of rings was stolen from a booth on the Campus Center concourse.

An individual from Coolidge Residence Hall reported a mail order was stolen from the mail and cashed.

Patterson Residence Hall staff reported a television and VCR stolen from the classroom.

There was damage to a security box and a telephone was stolen in Gorman Residence Hall.

Tires were stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

Restraining Order Service

Feb. 3

A restraining order was served to a resident of Emerson Residence Hall.

Vandalism

Feb. 3

A parked vehicle was struck and damaged by snowplow.

There was damage to a construction site at Mahar.

Feb. 4

A window was smashed on a vehicle in parking lot 49 on Windmill Lane.

A sunroof was broken off of a vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

A rock was thrown through a window in Cashin Hall.

Feb. 5

Damage occurred to a vehicle in lot 12 on Forestry Way.

Warrant Service

Feb. 4

Matthew E. McGrail, 18, of 108 Winthrop St., Winthrop MA was arrested in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Four new hostages seized in Tajikistan

By Umed Babakhanov
Associated Press

DUSHANBE, Tajikistan — The Red Cross suspended activities in Tajikistan and the United Nations told many of its workers to stay indoors yesterday after rebels seized four more hostages, bringing the total to 16.

The four U.N. refugee workers were abducted in broad daylight in Dushanbe, the capital of this former Soviet republic in Central Asia, according to a statement from U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Sadako Ogata.

The UNHCR employees included a Nigerian, a Tajik security guard and two Tajik drivers. They join 12 others being held — five Russian and Tajik journalists, two Red Cross workers and four U.N. military observers and their interpreter.

Rebel warlord Bakhram Sadirov, whose forces are holding the captives, is demanding that a guerrilla force led by his brother be allowed to return from neighboring Afghanistan. A Tajik official has been negotiating with the rebels since Wednesday night. U.N. personnel were forbidden yesterday from moving about within the capital and only essential staff were told to report to work, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said.

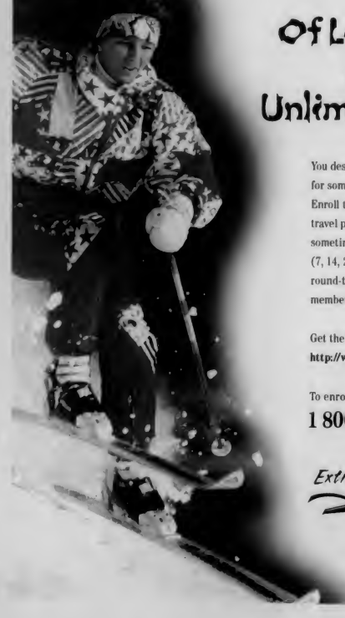
The Red Cross suspended its activities in Tajikistan, evacuating most of its foreign staff yesterday to neighboring Uzbekistan, a spokesman in Dushanbe said.

The UNHCR, the U.N. Security Council and the Red Cross condemned the rebel actions; the Security Council demanded the hostages be released immediately.

In Dushanbe, soldiers wearing fatigues and toting assault rifles patrolled the dusty streets. Additional guards were posted at all official buildings.

Sadirov's group kidnapped 23 people, including seven U.N. military observers, in December. The hostages were released unharmed, but Sadirov's brother, Rizvon, remained in Afghanistan. Rizvon Sadirov is a former rebel military leader who switched his loyalty to the government last year. According to Bakhram Sadirov's men, the government broke a promise by blocking Rizvon's return.

Bakhram Sadirov promised to release five hostages, including four Russian journalists and a Red Cross worker, perhaps as early as today, the Interfax news agency reported. There was no word about the rest.



Tajik President Emomali Rakhmonov held urgent meetings with security officials, the Russian ambassador, Red Cross mission chief and U.N. envoy Gerd Merrem, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported. The chief of the Tajik presidential guards, Gen. Gafur Mirzoyev, has been negotiating with the rebels since late Wednesday.

Captive Russian journalists used Sadirov's satellite telephone to report that all hostages were safe and well-treated at the rebel base in Kalainav, 52 miles east of Dushanbe. They called on Tajik authorities not to use force.

Sadirov's rebels began their hostage-taking spree Tuesday, abducting five U.N. workers driving from the central town of Garm to Dushanbe in the west.

Two Red Cross staffers were seized Wednesday when they arrived to provide medical care for one of the hostages. The rebels then captured four Russian journalists and a Tajik driver who went to the area.

Delta Air Lines Opens Up The USA To College Students With A Year's Worth Of Low Fares And Unlimited Fun.

You deserve some fun. Get ready for some with Extra Credit.™ Enroll today in Delta's new college travel program. Save up to 50% — sometimes more — off normal (7, 14, 21 day) advance purchase, round-trip coach fares. Hurry, membership is limited.

Get the whole scoop on the Web at http://www.delta-air.com/college

To enroll, call 1 800 335-8218 or 1 800 DELTA 18

Extra Credit™ Delta Air Lines

©1997, Delta Air Lines, Inc

Hurry! Get Your Senior INDEX Yearbook Photo

NOW!

This will be the Final Sitting!

February 3 - February 28

Campus Center Rm. 177

Call Now To Schedule a sitting.

There is a $5 sitting fee.

(800) 836-0558

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Mark McGrath • Photos by Thang Vo

How do you feel about the O.J. Simpson verdict?

"Personally, I think it's about time he has to pay."

Mandi Edgerly
freshman, biology
Andover

"It made no difference. Yes he's been fined, but it's going to be in court for years. The same questions will still exist. It's a waste of time on television."

Ayo Fagade
sophomore, biology
Springfield

"I feel it's a shame he wasn't found guilty in the criminal case, because any other person would have been sent to prison for life. I think that money isn't as valuable as time to him. Losing $8 million isn't as detrimental as loosing the rest of his life."

Lamar McKay
sophomore, psychology
New York, N.Y.

"If he did do it, this is his way of suffering, but if he didn't then he'll have a tough life. In that case, I'd feel bad for him."

Kathy Spinney
junior, nutrition
Malden

"I'm really glad they found him guilty and I'm even more glad that we won't have to hear about it anymore."

Josephus Housey Jr.
junior, comunications
Springfield

"I think that the justice system needs to be re-organized. If someone's found not guilty of a crime they should not be able to be found liable in another court."

Harris Kaplan
sophomore, economics
Leicester

"I'm a little shocked, but not altogether surprised. It was inevitable... bound to happen at one point or another. Whether he did it or not, it's going to be hard for him to crawl out."

Dominic Torano
junior, economics
Waynesborough, Penn.

Pascale Martineau
senior, communications
Mattapan

Correction

In yesterday's edition of the Collegian, gymnast Anita Sanyal's name was spelled incorrectly. The Collegian regrets the error.

TOC Bar & Grill
11TH FLOOR • UNION IN CAMPUS CENTER
(413) 549-7577

Karaoke Tonight
@ 9:00 pm
HOURS: M - F 4:00 PM - 12:30
SAT 5:00 PM - 12:30 PM

Women's Issues is looking for new writers! If interested come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement and talk to Michelle Hillman or call 545–1491.

SKI & Snowboard from $239

SpringBreak '97
Mont Sutton, Canada
◆◆5 DAY LIFT TICKET
◆◆5 NIGHTS LODGING
◆◆5 NIGHTS PARTIES
55 Slopes, Walk to Lifts from the condos
23 Black Diamonds, Happy Hour every Day

1-800-848-9545

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
50 EA ACRE WITH STUDENT I.D.
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-6:00PM

MULLINS CENTER AMHERST
SUND, FEB 9

O.J. Simpson claims to be in debt

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — O.J. Simpson is more than $9.3 million in debt, his attorney says, but plaintiff lawyers claim he's worth $15.7 million and urged jurors yesterday to impose a hefty award to punish the former football star and ensure the future of his children.

Simpson's wrongful death trial resumed yesterday with arguments and testimony about how much the six-man, six-woman jury should assess in damages to punish Simpson for the June 12, 1994, deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Defense attorney Robert Baker said Simpson's net worth in December 1996 was minus $836,000. Add to that the $8.5 million in compensatory damages awarded by jurors Tuesday and Simpson is $9.3 million in the hole, he said.

"He owes lawyers. He owes mortgage payments. ...He is in effect without assets. He has no equity in his home... no savings... a pension plan he cannot access," Baker said.

Simpson has little more than a house and a car, Baker said of his client, who lives in a mansion once valued at $5 million and drives a Suburban.

Plaintiffs, who were given financial information from Simpson under orders from the court, estimate Simpson's worth at $15.7 million. But that relies heavily on the assumption that Simpson's name and likeness are worth about $24 million. The plaintiffs subtracted projected taxes from the $24 million and came up with the $15.7 million.

The defense did not include name and likeness value in its estimate.

The plaintiffs also contended — but did not calculate in the estimate — that Simpson is hiding more than $3 million — a $1.25 million stake in a Honey Baked Ham chain and a $1.75 million insurance payout to cover the cost of his civil case. Sources have said insurance will pay for Simpson's defense, but not for any awards.

"I don't understand where the cash went," plaintiff accountant Neill W. Freeman testified.

In his testimony, Freeman said Simpson still owed about $1.5 million in criminal and civil costs, plus an additional $1.3 million in what was listed as just civil costs.

Simpson also listed custody dispute costs at $188,333. Although plaintiff attorney Daniel Petrocelli didn't tell jurors how big an award to give, he told jurors, "It takes a lot less to punish a poor man than it does a rich man."

In addition to punishment, Petrocelli said it was up to the jury "to make an example to make sure something like this never happens again."

"We don't have the power... to take away a person's freedom or liberty. ...All we can do is make him pay money," he said. John Q. Kelly, the attorney for Ms. Simpson's estate, told jurors: "This is going to be your one opportunity to act on behalf of Nicole's estate. One thing I'm going to urge you people to do is not let Mr. Simpson hide behind his children.

"It will be the only protection these children have for the rest of their lives," he said.

Under California law, any punitive award is supposed to bear some resemblance to his financial state: It's supposed to hurt him but not destroy him.

Ecudorean president removed from office

By Carlos Cisternas
Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador — Congress voted yesterday to remove President Abdala Bucaram for "mental incapacity," exasperated by a six-month stint in office in which the president sang and pulled political stunts while Ecuador fell into economic crisis.

Congress voted 44-34 to oust Bucaram, with two congressmen abstaining. Bucaram, a showman who cheerfully referred to himself as "El Loco," called the vote on his mental incompetence a "coup by Congress" and said he would not recognize it.

"The national government condemns this attitude," he said. Congress named its leader, Fabian Alarcon, as interim president pending new presidential elections within a year.

Minutes after the vote, caravans of honking cars roared down the main avenues of Quito, celebrating the vote to dismiss Bucaram.

Heinz Moeller, a member of the opposition Social Christian Party, said it was the security forces' responsibility to carry out the congressional decision if Bucaram refused to step down.

As the session opened, the armed forces issued a call to national authorities to use "dialogue and cooperation" to resolve the political crisis.

The debate comes on the heels of a nationwide strike Wednesday in which up to 2 million people marched through the streets of this Colorado-sized South American country demanding the ouster of a leader they call corrupt and incompetent.

In his third television address to the nation in as many days Thursday, Bucaram (pronounced boo-kah-RAHM) said he would seek every legal recourse to stay in power.

"We are on the verge of a very dangerous confrontation that we must avoid," he said

He told reporters later that the government will "vigorously apply the Constitution and the law to legally identify those trying to carry out a coup by Congress."

Opposition lawmaker Cesar Verduga called Bucaram's remarks a "veiled totalitarian threat."

Bucaram also announced he was firing four top Cabinet members, including his brother, Social Welfare Minister Adolfo Bucaram, and presidential aide Miguel Salem.

He said he planned "important" wage and salary increases for government and private sector workers but provided no details.

MAKE A DIFFERENCE AS A PEACE CORPS VOLUNTEER

We have a unique opportunity for someone very special.

The person we're looking for might be an accountant, a forester, or a teacher. Or maybe a retired nurse, a farmer, a mechanic, or a banker.

We need someone to join the 6,500 people already working in 91 developing countries around the world. Someone who can help others to help themselves.

Someone who would like to spend two years in another country. To live and work in another culture. To learn a new language, acquire new skills and sharpen existing ones.

We need someone special. And we ask a lot. But only because so much is needed. If this sounds interesting to you, maybe you're the person we're looking for. A Peace Corps Volunteer. Find out. Call us at (413) 545-2105 or visit us on campus:

INFO. MEETING: FEB. 10, 7 PM ROOM 905-909, CAMPUS CENTER

PEACE CORPS
The toughest job you'll ever love.

Wanna drive on the sidewalks with this really cool van...deliver for the Collegian.

If interested, call Alycia Hines @ 545-3500 or stop by the Collegian at 113 Campus Center Basement

Must Be Available Between 8:00am to 11:00am Monday - Friday

Drivers Wanted for Morning Paper Delivery

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief
Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager
Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Craig I. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Laura Stock News Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A matter of faith

Sarah J. Kimmel

For many people, religion plays a major part in life. It helps to determine moral beliefs and culture, and sculpts experiences and traditions. In this day and age many people are ruling religion out of their lives completely. It is one of those things that can bring you peace of mind or turn your whole world upside down.

Madeline Albright is an individual who has made a significant impact on the United States and the world. She was named United Nations delegate in 1992 and was most recently sworn in as Secretary of State on Jan. 23 of this year. Albright is not only the first female to hold this position, she is also the 14th woman to ever hold a Cabinet slot. These achievements may make her one of the most accomplished women in America.

Fifty-nine year old Albright was born in Czechoslovakia. Her father, Josef Korbel, was a Czech diplomat in Yugoslavia prior to World War II. When she was two years old, her parents fled to England. Albright was raised there until she moved to the United States at the age of 11. Brought up Roman Catholic, Albright celebrated Christmas and Easter with her family. In the New York Times (2/5/97) Albright recalls her parent telling her about their childhood. "My parents talked about how they met... They talked about getting ready for various holidays, for Christmas and Easter." When she married she converted to her husband's religion, Episcopalian.

What Albright's parents never told her originally was that they were Jewish, and that between world wars they decided to protect themselves against the rise of the Nazis and convert to Catholicism. All of those memories of holidays were fabricated by her parents in order to maintain Albright's identity. The truth was that dozens of Albright's relatives were murdered in the Holocaust, including three of her grandparents. Prior to the discovery of her Judaism, Albright believed that they had just been killed in the war, as her parents had said.

So, why the converting of religions during the time of the world wars? Many Jews in Eastern Europe realized that the only way to remain safe was to be part of the dominant culture. It was seemingly the only way for the Jews to keep their families alive. Yet, as many times converting beat the Nazi system, it also was revealed and those Jews were not lucky enough to live through the 1940's.

Albright's family opted to keep her true identity a secret throughout her entire life. This may have been because it would have been too confusing to explain to an 11-year-old child. Maybe they were fearful that there would be another reign of Hitler's followers and that the secret could save her again.

Perhaps the decision was not even conscious. The decision to hide the past in silence could be just an example of Darwin's survival of the fittest. The Jews of Eastern Europe were murdered because of their Jewishness and their first instinct was to avoid the object of their persecution.

The scary part is that even now, half a century after the war, there are thousands of hidden Jews — some whose parents have passed away without revealing the truth. These people have been lied to their whole lives, not in deception, but in safety, but nonetheless, they do not know the truth. There are families that they don't know or know about. It is as if all you know about your relatives, your background, your existence, has been erased with one large sweep of a rubber eraser. A new history book has been written totally out of your control.

Albright recalls that she never asked questions about her deceased grandparents. Children accept what their parents say as the truth. Albright tells the New York Times that these new revelations will take time to absorb. "It is that duality that I will have to live with for the rest of my life."

Now Albright has a new obstacle. Many people are questioning whether she really didn't know the truth earlier. People are focusing on her personal life rather than her life as the Secretary of State. She is feeling the weight of the public and the media. It is questioned if such a personal shock will detract from her ability to perform her duties on the Cabinet.

It is also questioned whether her newly found history with affect her liaison work in the Middle East peace process. Regardless of whether Albright is Roman Catholic, Episcopalian, Muslim or Jewish, peace in the Middle East would be her goal. It isn't her religion that affects her desire for peace, it is her human nature.

It is not news that the Holocaust was a terrible event in history and that it destroyed families and thousands of lives. The war has been studied and analyzed yet there is always something new surfacing pertaining to the terror of the time. Self-defense is justifiable in many cases, including this one. People all over Europe tried all kinds of methods to save themselves and those they loved.

These new discoveries that are being made by former-Jews all over the world are both wonderful and disturbing. It is phenomenal that these individuals have the ability to find their true history and culture. It is unsettling that the horrors and repercussions of the Holocaust are still affecting people today.

Sarah J. Kimmel is a Collegian staff member.

Viewing America from afar

Americans.

What a swell group of people, eh?

Or so you may think — if you're one of them. Sadly, the rest of the world doesn't exactly see us that way.

Our lack of swellness in the eyes of our earthmates is not news to you, I'm sure. We all know how filthy rich, power hungry, loud, spoiled, pushy, evil, wasteful, arrogant, polluting, presumptuous and stupid many of our friends abroad presume us to be.

Before this year's winter break, I had only heard and suspected that negative generalizations like these existed about We the People of the good ole U.S. of A. The only less than flattering comment on my nationality I had heard first hand from a non-countryman was the term "septic tank" ("sepo" for short), used by an Australian friend Susan who studied here last semester. (Why "septic tank?" Because it rhymes with "Yank," silly).

Well, in late December and early January, I got to hear some interesting stereotypes right from the foreign horse's mouth. I spent a month on tour with about 30 people from all over the world: Canada, Europe, Africa, India and Australia. The five Americans on board hardly made up a majority. Perhaps that is why many of my newly-made foreign friends felt comfortable telling me (some in the course of friendly conversation and some not) a few of their observances of and preconceived notions about the nature of the American people.

Here's what I found out:

1) Americans talk too much, are obnoxious and watch too much T.V.

By the end of the trip, this Australian woman had become a good friend to several of us Yanks and admitted that "all Americans aren't that bad."

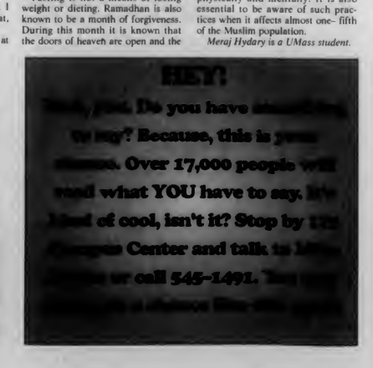
Nicole Cournoyer

This I heard from an Australian woman, 27 years old. Of course, like most stereotypes, there is some grounding in reality here. I know many Americans who like to hear words come from no mouth but their own. But anyone who knows me knows that all Americans don't talk endlessly. And yes, the majority of us do watch way too much T.V., when there are so many better ways to spend our time. I took special offense to this generalization, though, because laziness is one of my biggest pet peeves. I don't want to waste my life in front of the television when I'm there, and I don't want to be lumped into the same category as people who do. What a horrible image of America! Land of the Zombies.

By the end of the trip, this Australian woman had become a good friend to several of us Yanks and admitted that "all Americans aren't that bad." But she also confided in us what her initial reaction to our presence on the tour had been. As soon as she'd heard our accents as we boarded the bus on the first day of the trip, she'd turned to her mother and said with a frown and a growl, "There's bloody Septic Tanks on board."

2) Americans are fat.

A 21-year-old Dutch girl told me that when she'd visited the United States she hadn't been able to get over the number of overweight people here. I believe that some studies have shown the percentage of overweight Americans to be somewhere around half. That's crazy. Obviously, obesity is a serious health problem in the States, but what this stereotype fails to acknowledge is that American culture is also obsessed with weight loss. Thinness is the ideal and many people risk their health, even their lives, to achieve it. Despite these extremes, there are people who have found a happy medium. We just need to get more people to that point.



3) Lastly, Americans are wimps.

The tour guide, a 25-year-old Kenyan, came running to the tent I was sharing with four other girls after we told him we'd seen a four-inch long centipede crawl across one of our sleeping bags. After he told us the animal was extremely dangerous, we got a bit nervous and evacuated the tent. Standing outside on the desert floor in our p.j.'s, peering into the dark tent with wide eyes and flashlights, we were, I'll admit, semi-frightened. Upon failing to find the critter, Mr. Macho Man (who was too scared to actually go into the tent) told us to go back to bed. When we objected, on the grounds that it may still be in there, he told us to "stop being so American."

Mid-sentence, I had expected him to say "girlish" or something sexist like that in the place of "American" (in which case I would have been forced to whack him), but the "American" caught me off guard and I did not react. American? Yeah. Okay, Buddy. Ignoring the overlooked fact that there were both an Italian and a Dutchwoman present, what did he think was in the American psyche that would make it any more afraid or less equipped to deal with a dangerous situation than members of other nationalities? I don't know. I guess it just goes along with the idea that we're fat, lazy good-for-nothings.

Let's go, folks. Shape up. The world's looking at us. Don't you want to make a good impression?

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Symptom of the sickness

Andrew Trodden

In mid December the school board in Oakland, Calif. unanimously passed a resolution recognizing Ebonics as a distinct language. Ebonics, (derived from ebony and phonics) for those of you who might not know, is the form of standard English that tends to be spoken predominantly by low-income, inner city blacks. Such is the way one could say Buckwheat spoke.

The purpose of this resolution is not, as originally thought by many, to teach the children in Ebonics but rather to educate the teachers in Ebonics. Thus the teachers will have a better understanding of Ebonics so that they can properly communicate with their students and therefore properly correct them with standard English.

The hope is that by correcting these children's speech patterns the students will be readied for the competitive world, both now and later in life. While this reasoning may hold some truth, it is absurd to believe that this is the main reason these young children do not do as well in school as their white counterparts.

They "fail" because of the lower value that their families and communities place on education. They fail because those who have succeeded around them have packed up and left for the suburbs taking with them their middle-class status. They also fail because they do not view their future as being very bright, they see no opportunity for their future and therefore see no reason to do well now.

It is equally absurd to believe that if these children were all to start speaking standard English that all of their educational problems will miraculously wash away. Such is not the case. The other problems which contribute to their ever declining educational levels will continue nonetheless. The inner-cities will still be in a sordid state. The money that the schools receive from property taxes will still be too low to effectively fund the school systems and with that the children's outlook for the future will most likely remain bleak.

There is nothing wrong with attempting to better these children's speech patterns. However to fully achieve the goal of resurrecting their futures, people in power need to realize that Ebonics is only a symptom of a larger problem and not the problem itself.

Such people in power might be for instance, U.S. Education Secretary Richard Riley who, in a nutshell, said that this Ebonics plan does not qualify for additional educational dollars. Mr. Riley does well to realize that Ebonics is only a minor problem not truly deserving of any government funding. However Mr. Riley should therefore be more openly aware to the other problems which do drag these children down and the problems that should be qualified for additional funding.

Simply put, there is nothing wrong with the children themselves, it's the community they're in and the situations they're faced with. If you were to take a newborn child out of the inner-city and place it in a middle-class suburban family, that child would grow up speaking standard English and would do equally as well in school as any other child. Nurture one, nature zero.

By labelling Ebonics as a cause of the children's inability to do well in school only makes it seem as though it is the child's fault for not doing well. Which, as we all know, would just do wonders for that child's self-esteem. Is there anyone is this country who has the guts to, for once, blame the parents and not the children?

If we can begin to make these parents realize how much they truly are affecting their children then maybe we can change something but if not then things will only get worse. I don't think any of us would like to see that happen, especially the children, who don't even have a choice in the matter.

It doesn't matter how you say things as long as you tell the truth.

Andrew Trodden is a Collegian columnist.

Sunrise to sunset

Meraj Hydary

Fasting is one of the most important articles of Islamic faith and the best means of purification of one's self. It has been an integral part of all major religions. The Prophet Jesus (pbuh) fasted for 40 days before he was called to prophethood (Matthew 4:2). Similarly Prophet Moses (pbuh) fasted for 40 days and nights before he was given the Law (Exod. 24:18). The Qur'an states "O You who believe! fasting has been made obligatory for you as it was made obligatory for the earlier people so that you may become pious" (Surah Baqarah 2:183).

Muslims all over the world fast during the month of Ramadhan from sunrise to sunset. Each year Ramadhan goes up by 10 days, this particular year it started on Jan. 10. The Muslim fast means a complete abstinence from eating or drinking between dawn to dusk. The word Ramadhan is derived from the root 'Ramad' which indicates the 'restlessness'. It is said that the month signifies the hardships which accompany a fast like thirst and a comparative sluggishness. "Ramadhan burns the sins and faults as fire burns wood" (Prophet Muhammad pbuh).

Fasting during the month of Ramadhan is obligatory for every Muslim man and woman. There are a number of conditions attached to fasting. The most important of these conditions is that one must not eat, drink, smoke, allow the dust and steam to enter into the throat, and refrain from having sexual intercourse from dawn till dusk. When a person fasts he, in a way, combats against his own self. During fasting the same person who usually eats delicious food and drinks cold beverages many times a day, suddenly forsakes all these things and exercises complete control over hunger and thirst. There is no distinction between the rich and the poor in the matter of fasting. This shows that the rich and the poor are equal in the eyes of God and the superiority of a person depends solely on piety and virtue. The same piety and virtue of which fasting, is a practical manifestation.

To make fasting acceptable in the eyes of God it is not sufficient to abstain from eating and drinking only. It is necessary for a Muslim who fasts to refrain from falsehood, back-biting and injustice with others. Fasting allows Muslims to experience the hardships which hunger and thirst entail. Muslims should help the needy and the poor and behave nicely with everyone. "One who, while fasting, does not guard his tongue from telling lies, does not refrain from doing bad deeds, is not respecting his fast and God does not approve of mere abstention from food" (Prophet Muhammad pbuh).

Islam does not subject any person to a responsibility which is beyond his competence or which causes him severe hardships. If a person is sick, traveling, and under medication, then fasting is not required or obligatory upon them.

Fasting is not a means of losing weight or dieting. Ramadhan is also known to be a month of forgiveness. During this month it is known that the doors of heaven are open and the doors of hell are closed for the Muslims. Muslims are required to pray five times a day regardless of whether they are fasting or not. However, for the fast to be accepted one should pray five times a day, just as one showers everyday to cleanse themselves from all the filth and dirt. It is the same concept for Muslims to fast and perform the ritual prayers. When Muslims are fasting they are just avoiding the desire of food but any action that is concerned sinful in the eyes of God. Muslims are cleansing themselves from all the sins that they have committed.

Ramadhan has another special significance for the Muslims, for it was in this month that the first revelation of the Holy Qur'an (The Holy Book) was made to the Holy Prophet. Muslims believe that the Holy Book was revealed during the last 10 odd nights of the month. Usually Muslims stay awake all night in worship of God.

According to the sighting of the moon the month of Ramadhan has come to an end. At the last day it is a celebration known as Eid-ul-Fitr. During this celebration Muslims gather in a congregation to perform special prayers for the Eid. It is obligatory for every sane Muslim who has attained the age of puberty to give Fitra (alms). It is usually given by the head of the family member for the entire family at the rate of three kilograms of food for each person. The money is to be distributed to the needy believers who cannot afford his/her living for one year. "The conception of Eid in Islam is not only confined to a celebratory extravagance, luxurious feasts and friendly embraces. The Muslims should rather devote this day to the worship of God and should ask for approval of their virtuous deeds and forgive their sins. This year the Eid-ul- Fitr will be either on Saturday or Sunday according to the sighting of the moon.

Muslims fast all over the world during this month. There are number of students on campus that are practicing this faith. I think that it is essential that fasting should be performed one's a year for the sake of God and it is good for once health physically and mentally. It is also essential to be aware of such practices when it affects almost one- fifth of the Muslim population.

Meraj Hydary is a UMass student.

Arts & Living

Friday, February 7, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Comedy satirizes the newsroom

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Blank Page, a play and soon-to-be film by Chicago playwright Adam Langer, explores the inner workings of a Generation-X magazine during a typical day before print. Beginning in the early morning, the audience walks through a day in the life of nine characters as they strive to produce The Alternative, by afternoon deadline.

Sponsored by the UMass Arts Council and the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund, and presented by Tabula Rasa and Residential Arts in association with the UMass theater department, The Blank Page debuts this evening in Hampden Theater.

The black comedy focuses on the working relationships of twenty-something journalists employed at a stereotypical Generation-X monthly magazine, The Alternative — a sort of faux-Rolling Stone. It focuses on pop culture, music, fashion, films, etc. and the eccentric characters and their odd quirks make the play both entertaining to watch, as well as easy to relate to, especially for the college student.

"I wanted to give young people a play that presents a real life situation that they can readily identify with," said Corey Pearlstein, director and producer.

Pearlstein, a UMass theater department alum, returned to the area to work on another play with a graduate student, but then stayed to help with The Blank Page. His enthusiasm about the play is in part because it serves the UMass community.

"It [The Blank Page] takes the experience of UMass people and localizes the action," Pearlstein said. "It's a cross section of a lot of different archetypes of the Gen-X community."

Nine students from UMass and the Five College area comprise the cast. Though it is a relatively balanced ensemble, the play centers mostly around Darren, the managing editor and G-Man, the publisher who sinks all of his money into keeping The Alternative, afloat.

When the play opens, it is morning and final edits are due that afternoon. Midway through the day Glen, an advertising representative and resident drug dealer, sells a one and a half page ad, for which there is no room. The conflict arises when Darren and G-Man must decide whether to keep an article and preserve integrity, or run the ad in its place and sell-out.

Each one of the characters is a metaphor for the various positions at a magazine. But the entertainment value lies in the fact that they each have one virtue which makes them likeable, and one which makes them disdainful.

Besides the three aforementioned characters, The Alternative employs Zilch, an angry jaded music reviewer who moonlights as a costume bunny at trade shows; Louise, the assistant to Darren who represents ethics and work value, but always gets dismissed by her superior; Nan, who considers herself a poet and prophet of the next millennium; Billy-Jay, a photographer and bike messenger who is concerned with preserving the lost art of black and white; Blake, an annoying and self-involved Yale graduate and Theo, a pompous graphic designer.

Keeping with the motif of Gen-X pop culture, singer Amy Fairchild will be performing for tonight's post-show reception. In addition, all of the music played in the production are from area bands.

The Blank Page will be performed at Hampden Theater tonight at 8 p.m. and tomorrow at 2:30 and 8 p.m. Tickets are $4 for students and $7 for the general public. For more information or tickets call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511

COURTESY MEANWHILE ... AT UMASS

The Silver Chord Bowl, an a cappella competition this Sunday at the Academy of Music, will host Meanwhile, consisting of (L-R): Jihyon Kim, Mary Welch, Naomi Lopin, Leah Hamilton, Jen Moss and Bonita Oliver.

"Hercules" races at front of fantasy pack

By Dennis Anderson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery — and in television, imitation can sometimes be darn near the whole show — the heroic fantasy series "Hercules" must be getting a swelled head.

In recent months, such fantasy adventure shows have popped up faster in television syndication than "Friends" clones hit the networks.

Following the path of "Hercules: The Legendary Journeys" are new offerings drawn from such staples of the old cliffhanger genre as "Robin Hood," "Tarzan" and "Sinbad," each circulating in the off-peak hours of the 50 or 60-channel TV spectrum that syndication serves.

How much mythical traffic will the system bear? Well, any show survives only on its ability to pull an audience and hold it. On the successful side, "Highlander," a heroic predecessor of "Hercules," recently wrapped its 100th episode, and its global audience can order from a catalog of licensed goods that range from 10-buck T-shirts to lethal "Highlander" swords that cost hundreds of dollars.

In audience pull and popularity, "Hercules," in its third season, and its companion spin-off, "Xena: Warrior Princess," already have shown their rippling muscles.

The shows, both rated TV-PG, are vying with "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" for pride of place in syndication popularity. Rob Tapert, the executive producer of both series, describes his creations as "a guilty pleasure for professors, relevant for kids" and populated with scantily clad females "for the guys who can't find the keys to the pickup."

"We knew we could make a better show than 'Baywatch,'" Tapert said.

The popularity of Herc & Xena isn't related to nostalgia for corny 1950s gladiator movies or the "Conan The Barbarian" mold. They just don't look, or sound, like a bunch of stuff that happened on television in an earlier life.

The Hercules character played by Kevin Sorbo talks like a surfer guy and makes his heroic warrior move with the ease of quarterback Joe Montana.

Lucy Lawless, who plays Xena, is a kind of she-hunky leather queen who sails through the air like Bruce Lee and could be a dream date — as long as you remember the ex-part.

"We wanted action, we wanted monsters and, for those who catch on, they'll find it funny," Tapert said.

Shot in the lush, forested locale of New Zealand, Hercules and Xena offer a fantasy universe populated with dragons, harpies, cyclops and sandworms. The special effects created by Flat Earth productions rival those of the big screen.

Tapert and his colleague, executive producer Sam Raimi, vaulted into the mythic countryside of Hercules from the universe of action movies.

They launched their careers with a cult horror flick called The Evil Dead. Together, they created macabre, action movies that included Darkman and Army of Darkness.

When they were approached to create an action television movie derived from the Hercules legend, they hooted.

"Nobody cares about Hercules,' we said. 'Give us Conan.' They told us Conan's not available," Tapert recalled in an interview. Antecedents of "Hercules" and "Xena" were uncool even as camp. Gladiator movies? Ugh. Barbarian flicks with leaden dialogue. But in a recent Xena episode, the warrior princess gushes, "Don't hate me because I'm beautiful!" Then she tosses a bad guy with a full-arm twist and sends up the old hair-coloring commercial in the same instant.

Hercules regularly dispenses lines like "Come on, guys!" or observes sagely, "That's a big dragon."

The tone delivers a show adults can laugh with and kids can revel in.

"I just wanted to make the kind of show that I would have watched," the boyish Tapert said. "The kind of show I would have fought my parents to watch."

But adults are watching, too. A fan convention in Burbank drew 4,000 people on a recent weekend. Plenty of adults, many in costume, turned out to see their heroes, test their steel and swarm for autographs from Sorbo and Lawless.

Play discusses turbulent history

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

HAVING OUR SAY
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Feb. 6, 1997

"I'd never thought I'd see the day that people would be interested in what two old Negro women had to say" — Bessie Delany.

Last night the awe inspiring Delany sisters came to the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall to share their journey of over one hundred and five years of history together called Having Our Say based on the co-authored book.

In 1889 Sarah Louise "Sadie" Delany was born in Virginia to the mixed-race Nanny Logan and slave born Henry Beard Delany. Two years later Annie Elizabeth "Bessie" Delany is born in North Carolina at a time when street cars in some southern states are segregated for the first time and there are a reported 112 lynchings.

The story of the two sisters who witnessed every type of discrimination, prejudice and social change whether just or unjust was told in an up front honest and humorous manner. They shared with the audience stories of a mixed race family and the effect that had on understanding segregation laws as young children, the importance of religion and education and frustration at racists white men whom they did not let break their spirit.

The two sisters lived to witness the very first Haley's Comet, "Jim Crow Laws," the first World War, prohibition, women's right to vote, atom bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Rosa Parks' refusal to give up her seat on a segregated bus, Martin Luther King's "I have a dream" speech, the assassination of JFK, passage of the Civil Rights Bill, Neil Armstrong's walk on the moon and several other phenomenal events too many to list.

The lives of these two outspoken, incredible women are portrayed by actress Micki Grant, who plays Sadie and Lizan Mitchell played Bessie. Sadie the eldest sister, quiet and reserved compared to younger sister Bessie, is still alive to tell her unbelievable life story while Bessie died in 1995 at the age of 104.

What made the performance of these two sisters special was the fact that the audience felt as though they had been invited into their living room. They shared pictures of family members, but also told stories of childhood memories while mixing in their own flair and spunk, which character Bessie had plenty.

The nearly three hour play spanned across years of accomplishment including Bessie's graduation from Columbian Dental School, Sadie receiving her Master's Degree from Columbia University and becoming the first African-American teacher in the New York City education system and Bessie's involvement with W.E.B. Du Bois to protest the showing of the racist film Birth of a Nation.

The sisters, who never married, addressed such subjects as political correctness, sex, religion, racism, slavery, loneliness and sorrow after the passing of their mother and father and at the very end of the play they even discussed gang violence that has plagued our society.

This play brings social issues from over one hundred years ago back into people's hearts and minds in the only way possible-truthfully. The sisters opened their home and photo albums to invite the audience to listen and watch their story of love, sisterhood and overcoming adversity.

Young actress wets her feet in Faulkner TV tale

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — On the set, says Jeanne Tripplehorn, they called her "Waterella."

There she was last August, like the rest of the cast and crew of Old Man, withstanding 5 1/2 weeks of Louisiana bayous and daily rainstorms and a special-effects flood, all for the sake of this "Hallmark Hall of Fame" production of the William Faulkner short story (airing at 9 p.m. Sunday on CBS).

But among those making Old Man, only Tripplehorn had been in that same boat before. Only she had weathered months in watery purgatory after landing the role of Kevin Costner's co-star in the 1995 epic Waterworld.

"I like to bring stories to life," Tripplehorn explains, "and Old Man's story is so beautiful I decided it would be a shame not to do it just because it was set on water.

"But when I got there outside of Baton Rouge to start shooting," she says with a what-was-I-thinking laugh, "I had flashbacks. Deja vu. It was exactly like Waterworld, only instead of being cold it was really hot, and there were snakes and alligators, and some of the water was polluted!"

Out there, she says, smiling, "I was the vet — the vet with the thousand-yard stare."

Old Man (the title refers to the Mississippi River) tells of the Flood of 1927, when a prison convict, played by Arliss Howard, is set loose in a small boat to locate and rescue a woman imperiled by the deluge.

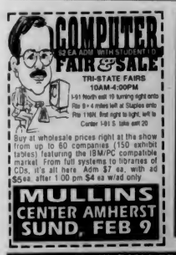
Through stubbornness and dumb luck, the dutiful J.J. does indeed find Tripplehorn's character Addie, who is clinging to a cypress branch, pregnant, on the verge of giving birth.

The rest of the film follows their journey to find their way back, as an odd but big-hearted attachment forms between the two, and, before long, the three of them.

There is lots to like about Old Man, but as gorgeous and evocative as the settings are ("we were in some serious 'Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom' country"), they defer to something even more special: the tenderly oblique relationship connecting J.J. and Addie.

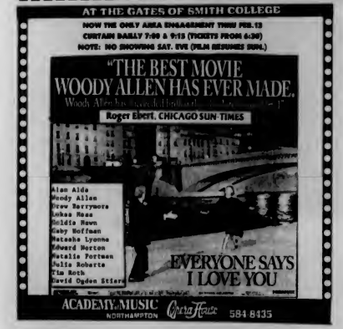
For all that may be going on between them, they don't say much, which means that viewers are called upon to do less listening than feeling as this sort-of love story unfolds.

Tripplehorn says she and Howard pushed to make the script's already sparse dialogue even more "pared-down and simple. These are country folk, from another era. They talk around things, with a lot left unspoken."



"By the end of the movie, everything catches up with the audience, because everything they thought is confirmed. But even then, it isn't said in an outright, forthright way. I think that makes things more powerful and bittersweet, yet very hopeful."

Clearly, Tripplehorn feels a kinship with the characters of Old Man. They remind her of who she is and where she came from, growing up in Tulsa, Okla., a place she's never really left.



"I go back all the time," she says. "I've got a place there, and it's really good to go back home."

In fact, as she talks, she drops hints of a down-home twang. "Yeah, I'm drawling," she says with a smile. "When I'm tired, I start to roll."

A freshly appealing young woman with wideset brown eyes, she doesn't LOOK tired. But if she is, it's because she's still getting her sea legs (so to speak) in a new Broadway production of Chekhov's Three Sisters, in previews with Amy Irving and Lili Taylor as the other title characters. Masha is only the latest of the diverse roles Tripplehorn has tackled in her young career.

WANTED
WIRED, CRAZED, PASSIONATE, CREATIVE
MULTIMEDIA PROGRAMMERS
NETWORK ENGINEERS, HACKERS, PHOTOGS, VIDEOGRAPHERS
LEAN & MEAN 3 YEAR OLD FIRM SEEKS FULL & PART-TIME HELP, INTERNS
PASSION, but NO EXPERIENCE? CONTACT US!
VISION MULTIMEDIA
http://www.visionmm.com
please include: resume, letter of interest, work, reel
VISION MULTIMEDIA
P.O. Box 776
Amherst, MA 01004
attn. Ben Ballou
benning@visionmm.com

Actors work to fit the role

By Amanda Covarrubias
Associated Press

When Robert De Niro packed on the pounds to play boxer Jake LaMotta in Raging Bull, everyone thought he had gone off the deep end.

That was taking Method acting to the extreme, they said. Or was it?

Nowadays, actors think nothing of shedding 20 pounds here and putting on 30 pounds there for the right movie role ... and, of course, the accompanying seven-figure salary.

It's not enough to merely play a character; they have to LIVE in that person's skin ... even if that means expanding or shrinking it into unnatural proportions.

To achieve their physical goals, they hire high-priced personal trainers, rise at 4 a.m. for pre-call workouts and heed the advice of nutritionists, who will tell them how to do it in a healthy way... or as healthy as possible.

Think of Demi Moore toning up her already hard-bodied physique to bare it all as a nightclub dancer in Striptease. Dennis Quaid practically starving himself into gaunt cowboy Wyatt Earp. And the king of pecs Sylvester Stallone transmogrifying into the antithesis of Rocky to play an overweight, pudgy sheriff in the recently released Copland.

Courtney Love, who plays a dying, AIDS-infected Althea Flynt in The People vs. Larry Flynt, lost 30 pounds in just a few weeks for the role.

Minnie Driver, on the other hand, gained some 30 pounds to make her ugly-duckling character more believable in Circle of Friends. Keanu Reeves went through grueling training to tone up for Little Buddha (though he was more than a little hefty in last year's box-office dud, Chain Reaction).

And who could forget Linda Hamilton's biceps in Terminator II? There's no doubt those sharply defined arms have launched more than a thousand biceps curls.

Whether these acts of body morphing reflect extreme dedication or just insecurity in one's acting abilities is an open question.

Whatever the motivation, no mountain is too tall, no dumbbell too heavy and no StairMaster too intimidating for these stars to maintain their million-dollar figures.

Chris Imbo, a personal trainer who runs his own studio in New York, helped model-turned-actress Elle MacPherson tone up for her swimsuit calendar, then quickly become "voluptuous" for her role in Sirens.

The lanky MacPherson wanted to be toned and thin for the pictorial that had her posing in next-to-nothing swimsuits.

"She was practically naked, so she wanted to look her best," Imbo said.

To achieve that goal, Imbo designed a 10-week workout for her that brought her into the gym two hours a day, five days a week. To get the sleek look, the former cover girl performed weight training that focused on heavy lifting and quick repetitions.

Star and trainer also went for long runs in Central Park, and macpherson followed a low-fat diet that was heavy on fruits, vegetables and grains and light on carbohydrates.

After the intense slimming-down period, MacPherson had about two months to gain 25-pounds for her Sirens role that called for a more well-rounded woman.

"Basically, it just meant she didn't have to work out as hard," says Imbo, whose advice doesn't come cheap. He charges $150 an hour, which he says is reasonable by personal trainers' standards.

Billy Baldwin didn't hesitate to shell out the bucks to prepare for his role as the romantic lead opposite Sharon Stone in Sliver. His goal was to look more muscular, toned and defined for his revealing love scenes.

"He wanted to look better than Sharon Stone," Imbo said. "It's not easy."

Some stars shun the personal trainer route, preferring to check into a health spa, such as the Golden Door and La Costa Resort and Spa north of San Diego, where actors and regular folks can get whipped into shape in a natural, rugged setting.

Oprah Winfrey checked herself into the Cal-a-Vie resort in Vista, Calif., several years ago during her infamous yo-yo dieting period.

Ultimately, the spa wasn't what finally got Oprah on the right track. The talk show host learned what Demi, Elle and Sly have known all along — that to change your body's shape takes continuous hard work and lots of sweat.

Schindler's List to air on NBC

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Schindler's List never quite fit into the standard boxes Hollywood builds for its movies. It was black and white. It was serious. It explicitly portrayed a topic — the Holocaust — that had been all but taboo in American films.

On Sunday, Steven Spielberg attempts to squeeze a slightly trimmed version of Schindler's List into a new kind of box — network television. It promises to be a departure from standard network fare.

The 1994 Academy Award winner appears on NBC from 7:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. EST, uninterrupted by commercials. The sole sponsor is the Ford Motor Company, which will offer a total of two minutes of messages at the beginning and end, plus an introduction by Ford executive Ross Roberts.

The airing of the film that won seven Academy Awards, including best picture and director, carries a rating of TV-M (mature audiences only), because of the horrible acts of the German concentration camp commandant and guards, as well as the nudity of some women victims. Spielberg spokesman Marvin Levy assured that the edits will be slight.

"The film is still being worked on, and the trims will be minor, perhaps a second here and there," he said. "Television viewers will see essentially what was shown in theaters.

"Nudity will be one of the areas to be trimmed. But there will be nudity. The film will be very graphic, very explicit. Steven has always felt that is part of its effectiveness."

Schindler's List surprised the film trade by its widespread acceptance: It grossed $95 million in the United States and Canada. The figure might have reached the even $100 million mark except that it was shown free to 2 million high school students.

The total gross worldwide reaches over $300 million; no specifics, because Spielberg doesn't like to put a dollar figure on the film. The television contract resulted from his desire to have Schindler's List seen by as many people as possible, Levy said.

"Arrangements are being made for the film to be shown in other major countries," the spokesman added. "It will appear in the same format as on NBC. Since most of the countries have state-owned channels, that should be easy to manage. There are no plans to show it theatrically."

NBC not being state-owned, there was the delicate matter of how to sponsor Sunday's showing. The standard run of TV commercials would clash preposterously — and tastelessly — with black-and-white scenes of concentration camps.

"It worked out very well," said John Agoglia, president of NBC Enterprises. "We were even more fortunate than we anticipated, in having a sponsor like Ford taking a higher sponsorship and foregoing commercial interruption."

He added that there will be rest breaks during the film. Instead of commercials, the audience will see a printed intermission-type message on the screen, accompanied by theme music.

As to the nudity and other matters that brought the TV-M rating, Agoglia observed: "You have to judge the content as it relates to the film as a whole. I can't talk about what editing might be done; that's entirely up to Steven. I can tell you it won't be anything substantial."

Under the contract, NBC has the right for further screenings of Schindler's List, the true story of how Oskar Schindler, a factory operator and Nazi party member, helped save the lives of 1,100 Jews during the Holocaust. Agoglia said no timetable for repeat screenings has been set.

Schindler's List was a departure for Spielberg, whose previous movies included Jaws, Raiders of the Lost Ark, E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial and Jurassic Park.

Spielberg has portrayed Schindler's List as a labor of passion and remembrance. He has used the returns to form the Righteous People Foundation to support Jewish art and culture and to explore the future of Judaism.

U.S. faces Brazil in Davis Cup today

By Michael Astor
Associated Press

RIBEIRAO PRETO, Brazil — Tropical heat, watered-down courts and fanatical fans are all part of Brazil's arsenal as it prepares for a heavily favored U.S. team on Friday in Davis Cup play today.

Even with the United States missing its top four players, Brazil is vastly mismatched, its highest ranked player 50 spots below the American team's lowest ranked player.

So the Brazilians are banking on an unconventional strategy that has kept them unbeaten at home in the Davis Cup the last 10 years.

"When you look at it realistically, there's very little chance Brazil can win, but as the hosts we can determine where the games are played, what kind of court and the like," said Ivo Simon, spokesman for the Brazilian Tennis Federation.

The meet, scheduled for 12 p.m., allows the best athletes in the region to prepare for the championship meets in the weeks to come. Assistant coach Jim Giroux thinks the meet is a more than adequate preparation for arguably the most critical part of the season.

"We'll be bringing our best athletes there," Giroux said. "It's not a scoring meet, but rather we're trying to get some personal bests out of it before the championship meets. The track is one of the fastest is the East, so we should get some seed times out of it."

Paul Blodorn (800m), Andre Roach and Alex Ampontuah (triple jump) and Ian Stevens (shot put) will be among the participants tomorrow. All four have already qualified for New Englands, with Stevens headed to the IC4As in New Jersey.

What's more, Stevens owns the No. 1 shot put throw in New England with a distance of 53-9 3/4 from a Jan. 25 at New Hampshire.

Also present in the state capital will be the 4x400m relay team, consisting of Dave Cahill, Tom Toye, Neil Concepcion and Scott Price, all of whom will be competing individually in the postseason.

"We're hoping they can drop a couple of seconds of their time on the fast track," Giroux said. "They could possibly beat the school record (3:18.1). Right now they've got a 3:19.59.

"Ideally, they could be New England champs and make the finals at the IC4As. Overall, it's going to be a good meet. There will be some stiff competition."

Price and Cahill are certainly ready for it.

"If we could improve our time in the relay that would be great," Cahill said. "The training's been good, and the track we'll be running at is too, so we'll have to see."

Price agrees.

"Everyone is hoping to do well, individually and in the 4x400," said Price, the track team's leading scorer with 56.75 points. "If we can give a good performance it should propel us into the championship meets."

Norweigians lead in world championships

By Piero Valsecchi
Associated Press

SESTRIERE, Italy — Kjetil Andre Aamodt and Lasse Kjus finished in the top three in the combined downhill in the World Championships yesterday, putting the Norwegian stars in great shape for the night slalom.

Austria's Franz Werner won the downhill in 1 minute, 37.20 seconds, but has little chance in the slalom portion of the event. Aamodt followed in 1:37.37, Kjus and Switzerland's Bruno Kernen tied for third in 1:37.62, and Jason Rosener of Breckenridge, Colo., was fifth in 1:38.20.

Kernen, like Werner, is primarily a downhiller, but is a much better slalom skier than the Austrian.

"I am good enough in slalom to shoot for a medal," Kernen said. "I didn't just run the downhill as a training run. I'm looking for a place on the podium."

Kjus, the defending overall World Cup champion, was the silver medalist in last year's world combined. He won gold medals in the event in the 1994 Olympics and 1993 worlds. He has been slowed by illness, but picked up a silver Monday in the super-G and is one of the world's top all-around racers.

Aamodt was the silver medalist in the 1994 Olympics and the 1993 worlds in combined and was the 1994 overall World Cup champion.

Marc Girardelli, the defending world champion in combined and the winner of 13 world and Olympic medals, did not ski in the event. Slowed by numerous knee injuries, he is expected to announce his retirement next week.

Guenther Mader of Austria, one if the favorites along with the two Norwegians, finished out of the top 10 in 1:38.64. He has four third-place finishes in the combined in world competition, including last year in Spain.

The two slalom legs were set for tonight under the floodlights — the second of four slalom runs staged at night. It marks the first time world ski officials have raced the combined on the same day in the world championships.

On Wednesday night, Deborah Compagnoni, who feared she might fall asleep skiing at night, instead thrilled a partisan crowd by capturing her second world title in her least favorite discipline — slalom.

Compagnoni beat teammate Lara Magoni by 1.27 seconds for an unprecedented 1-2 triumph by Italians in a world race. Karen Roten of Switzerland, who led Compagnoni by 0.05 seconds in the first run, was third, 1.60 seconds back.

Compagnoni, who will defends her world giant slalom title Sunday, said her second slalom run down the Kandahar course gave her "almost the same great feeling that only giant slalom usually gives me."

Recycle Your Collegian ! ! ! ! ! !

Drink Special
Camptain Morgan & Coke 2.00 16oz.
Red Dog 16oz. Drafts 1.50
Rolling Rock 12oz. Bottles 1.50
1/2 Price Appetizers and Nachos 3-5 and7-11 Friday & Sat.
No cover Before 10 pm
Smoking Section 10-1

Sunfood Cafe
THE PUB
amherst
15 East Pleasant St.

Kwan ready to defend nationals

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Michelle Kwan has a simple philosophy.

Someone has to be the best skater in the world, and she is much happier being that person.

She views the 1997 U.S. Figure Skating Championships this week, where she is the reigning champion, through the eyes of the fastest gun in town.

"I mean, everybody looking at me as the bullseye, everyone trying to, like, kill me," Kwan said with obvious glee. "I'm just trying to stay away and dodging everybody and firing back."

Fierce competitiveness is a prerequisite for any skater, no matter how petite the figure or bright the smile. For the 16-year-old Kwan, it started as a girl trying to outskate her siblings. She qualified for skating's senior level at age 12 without her coach's knowledge. Last year she became the youngest U.S. champion in more than 30 years, and the intensity hasn't eased with success.

Kwan followed up her national title last March by becoming the third-youngest skater to win the world championships.

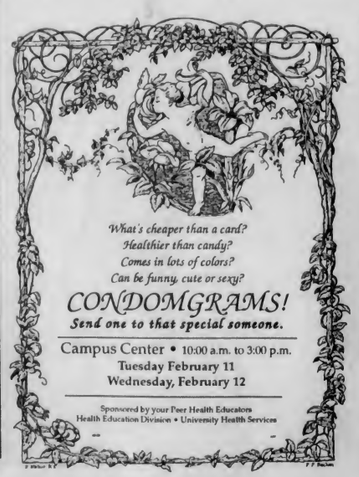
"The biggest competition is myself," Kwan said. "The only one that can beat me is myself. I just have to keep my head on straight and keep on working hard and keep concentrating."

Her turn at defending her U.S. title comes Friday, when the women's competition begins. The men get started Thursday at the championships, sponsored by State Farm.

Kwan first caught the spotlight with her athletic triple jumps. But she sometimes looked like a little girl playing dress-up in elaborate costumes and makeup.

Her transformation into a more mature skater was completed at the championships last year, when she vows she wants to go somewhere in Boston so that she can be close to her older sister, Karen, a freshman at Boston University.

Kwan comes into the nationals having won six events this season. She says she is completely recovered from the sore left ankle that forced her to withdraw from a meet in Japan in December.



Winning last year got easier when defending champion Nicole Bobek withdrew with an injury. Bobek is expected back, along with Tonia Kwiatkowski, Tara Lipinski and Sydne Vogel.

"Now it's stronger, more dramatic," Kwan said.

It's too early to tell if she'll keep that strategy for the Winter Olympics one year away. Kwan fends off questions, preferring instead to talk about her immediate goals of defending her U.S. and world titles.

"You can't look too far ahead because the Olympics are right around the corner. You just have to concentrate on what you're doing now because now is the future," she said.

Likewise, talk about the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City will be decided in the future, which Kwan has already determined will include college and a career away from the ice. A high school junior, she wants to go somewhere in Boston so that she can be close to her older sister, Karen, a freshman at Boston University.

Campus Activities at the University of Massachusetts presents
"Something Every Friday"

A Touch of Reality

This three-person group uses poetry to express important issues like AIDs; gang violence; and day-to-day reality. This powerful trio has opened for the Fugees, the Lost Boys, and the Last Poets.

For more information check our website: http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/sef.htm This series is made possible by a grant from UMASS Auxiliary Services, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the Daily Collegian.

Bluewall Cafe
February 7, 1997
8:00pm
Free

UM men's track travels to Boston to face the best in Valentine Invitational

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's track team will send some of the best it has got to Boston University tomorrow to compete in the Valentine Invitational.

So the Brazilians are banking on an unconventional strategy that has kept them unbeaten at home in the Davis Cup the last 10 years.

"When you look at it realistically, there's very little chance Brazil can win, but as the hosts we can determine where the games are played, what kind of court and the like," said Ivo Simon, spokesman for the Brazilian Tennis Federation.

So the Brazilians have chosen this sun-baked inland city 200 miles northwest of Sao Paulo, where temperatures are likely to reach 100 degrees during the matches.

They have also have chosen clay courts, hoping to slow the attack of the leading Americans, No. 22 Jim Courier and No. 24 MaliVai Washington, who replaced injured Andre Agassi.

And if the heat and the clay doesn't work. the Brazilians always have the fans.

More accustomed to the chanting at soccer games than the country club etiquette of the tennis courts, Brazilian fans have succeeded more than once in throwing a top player off his game.

In 1992, Germany lost to the Brazilians in Rio. when Boris Becker, worn out after winning a five-set singles and then losing in doubles, refused to play the tournament's final match, complaining about both the courts and the fans.

Last September, Austria lost after Thomas Muster walked off the courts accusing the fans of using mirrors to direct sunlight into his eyes. The charge was never substantiated.

"That's part of the excitement of Davis Cup, playing in countries where the fans are excited," Courier said. "From what I gather, Thomas didn't handle the situation as well as he could have."

But Richey Reneberg, ranked No. 30 who along with No. 35 Alex O'Brien will meet Brazil's Gustavo Kuerten No. 85 and Fernando Meligeni No. 90 was more cautious.

"The game looks easy on paper but it won't be that easy," Reneberg said. "These guys are good and in Davis cup anything can happen."

Which is exactly what the Brazilians are betting on. Washington opens the series against the top Brazilian player, Gustavo Kuerten and Courier plays the second singles against Fernando Meligeni, who placed fourth in singles at the Atlanta Olympics.

On Saturday, Meligeni and Kuerten will face O'Brien and Reneberg in doubles play.

In Sunday's reverse singles, Courier plays Kuerten and Washington faces Meligeni.

American coach Tom Gullikson said the heat of the South American summer won't be a factor.

"Jim and MaliVai live in Florida where it's hot and humid," he said. "All the players are in good shape and used to this kind of weather."

In other first-round Davis Cup pairings, it's Italy-Mexico, South Africa-Russia, Romania-Netherlands, India-Czech Republic, Spain-Germany and Sweden-Switzerland.

The meet, scheduled for 12 p.m., allows the best athletes in the region to prepare for the championship meets in the weeks to come. Assistant coach Jim Giroux thinks the meet is a more than adequate preparation for arguably the most critical part of the season.

"We'll be bringing our best athletes there," Giroux said. "It's not a scoring meet, but rather we're trying to get some personal bests out of it before the championship meets. The track is one of the fastest is the East, so we should get some seed times out of it."

Paul Blodorn (800m), Andre Roach and Alex Ampontuah (triple jump) and Ian Stevens (shot put) will be among the participants tomorrow. All four have already qualified for New Englands, with Stevens headed to the IC4As in New Jersey.

What's more, Stevens owns the No. 1 shot put throw in New England with a distance of 53-9 3/4 from a Jan. 25 at New Hampshire.

Also present in the state capital will be the 4x400m relay team, consisting of Dave Cahill, Tom Toye, Neil Concepcion and Scott Price, all of whom will be competing individually in the postseason.

"We're hoping they can drop a couple of seconds of their time on the fast track," Giroux said. "They could possibly beat the school record (3:18.1). Right now they've got a 3:19.59.

"Ideally, they could be New England champs and make the finals at the IC4As. Overall, it's going to be a good meet. There will be some stiff competition."

Price and Cahill are certainly ready for it.

"If we could improve our time in the relay that would be great," Cahill said. "The training's been good, and the track we'll be running at is too, so we'll have to see."

Price agrees.

"Everyone is hoping to do well, individually and in the 4x400," said Price, the track team's leading scorer with 56.75 points. "If we can give a good performance it should propel us into the championship meets."

Women's gym hosts Rhode Island–Bridgeport Sunday

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team will host Rhode Island and Bridgeport in its second home meet of the season Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Boyden Gymnastics Center.

With this meet the Minutewomen will take another step toward improving their Atlantic–10 standing and preparing for NCAA regionals.

"It's a very important weekend for us because Rhode Island is an A–10 opponent and this year, even though we were A–10 champions last year, they've picked us to be No. 2 behind GW, who we've already beaten," coach Dave Kuzara said.

Massachusetts will see its first action in two weeks, having dropped a close decision to Michigan in the first–ever meet held at the William D. Mullins center on Feb. 2. The No. 11 Wolverines edged the Minutewomen by 1.3 points, despite a best ever UMass score of 193.7.

According to Kuzara, it's important the team scores high this weekend, to send a message to Rhode Island and the rest of the A–10 that UMass is a force to be reckoned with.

"We need to hit our routines, we can't afford a let down after the Michigan meet," Kuzara said. "I think that with a good performance this weekend we can jump back into the top 25."

For sophomore Betsy Colucci, this meet will be the first time she will compete in three events since she was injured last year. She will likely compete on beam, floor and vault. According to Colucci, this meet hopes to be a big confidence booster.

"We got a big, big score last time out and we need to realize we can do better every meet. It's important even without all the crowd and all the hype we can stay focused and we can continue to do the gymnastics we can do," Colucci said.

Michelle LoPresti agreed, citing the team's chemistry as an important factor in coming out ahead.

"We showed that all last year we had a lot of major injuries and people stepped up from everywhere and in the end we did excellent as a team," LoPresti said.

With all 13 gymnasts healthy, Kuzara hopes to be able to score at least 194 tomorrow. And he has transferred that to his women, who know that when they are healthy and confident they will be hard to beat.

"If we stay focused and we keep our intensity level up, we can give anybody a run for their money," Colucci said.

Men's gym hosts league champs Temple on Saturday

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team faces its greatest challenge of the season this weekend when it hosts defending Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League Champions Temple at the Boyden Gymnastics Complex on Saturday at 7 p.m.

The Minutemen are currently ranked No. 10 in the nation, with rankings based on average team overall meet scores. They are 3–0 in dual meet competition, including wins over Navy, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Vermont.

The Minutemen also have placed well in two tournaments to open the season. At the UMass open held on Dec. 7 in the Curry Hicks Cage, Massachusetts came in first out of five competing teams with a score of 219.8. UMass' second meet this season was a third place finish at the West Point Open. Eight teams took part, the Minutemen scored 213.45 in the event.

The meet with Temple is a major benchmark for both this year's edition of the Minutemen, and for the history of the program. The Owls have won the conference title for six straight years, and the Minutemen have not beat them in the past 10 years.

"Temple is the team to beat in order to get to the conference championship," Coach Roy Johnson said. "They're the team to beat to get to the Nationals.

"This is a real rivalry in gymnastics," Johnson added.

The rankings have been kinder to the Minutemen over the course of this season. Their early success earned them a No. 5 ranking, and they levelled off at No. 10.

"We need a big score to get back to where we were before at tenth in the nation," Johnson said.

Massachusetts averages about 5 more points per meet than Temple, and it has the personnel to take care of business against the Owls.

Freshman Jeff LaVallee, who was recently named EIGL Rookie of the Week, is ranked No. 20 in the nation for his overall scores. Massachusetts' Russ Shupak is ranked second in the nation on the rings.

Ski teams to compete in BC tourney

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian staff

This weekend is a critical one for the Massachusetts women's ski team, as the Minutewomen join with the men's team to head to Ascutney Mt. in Vermont for the Boston College tournament.

The women are currently ranked sixth in the regional standings, with 36 points. In order to go to the United States Collegiate Skiing Association Regionals at the end of this month, they need to move into fifth place.

"They are at a critical phase because only the top five teams in our division go to the regionals," coach Bill MacConnell said.

Standing in their way is Brown University. They hold fifth place with 33 points.

"We've got to finish ahead of Brown this weekend," MacConnell said.

Boston College leads all teams in the standings, with only six points, followed by a distant Smith with 17, Babson with 19, and Plymouth State with 18.

Heather Schay, who has missed every race so far this season with a sprained ankle, is slated to return this weekend, and should be a boost for the Minutewomen.

If the Minutewomen don't move into fifth place this weekend, they'll have one more shot in the Smith College Tournament on the 15th and 16th of this month.

The men's ski team is a virtual shoe-in for the USCSA Regionals this year. After a sensational race last weekend, the Minutemen are tied with Boston College for second place in the standings with fourteen points. The Plymouth State Panthers lead the way with 8.

The men have been led this year by the two Toms — junior Tom Schaefer and sophomore Tom Holden. Last weekend Holden claimed the individual title in the giant slalom, and Schaefer took the slalom.

"They're getting more competition from each other than anyone else in the league," MacConnell said.

The ski teams will take to the slopes on Saturday for the slalom, and on Sunday for the giant slalom. The races begin at 9 a.m. on both days.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

Having previously defeated Temple, coach O'Brien said they know what to expect from the Owls.

"Temple is a team with very good pure players, Alkanease Garrett being our biggest problem inside," O'Brien said. "They also have [Claudrena] Harold at guard who is a very solid player. They have a nice inside-outside combination."

The Minutewomen have had troubles with teams such as George Washington who have strong all-around offenses, but are not without a game plan for dealing with them.

"We have to pressure them and take time off the clock, hopefully make them make some mistakes," O'Brien said. "We have to rebound and run the ball well.

"If we get ourselves going in the right direction early we may be able to get some easy shots and I think that's what we're looking for," O'Brien added.

St. Joe's currently holds first place in the A–10 East, and is two games ahead of Massachusetts with a 9–1 conference record. A Minutewomen win on Sunday would be a huge step towards first place in the East.

"It's going to be a war," O'Brien said. "[Our last meeting] was a very ugly game, though obviously very competitive."

The Hawks visited the Mullins Center on Jan. 23, escaping with a come–from–behind 2–point advantage over the Minutewomen. Crystoll Carroll scored 16 points and grabbed seven rebounds to lead UMass. Van Huisen added nine points and Beth Kuzmeski notched seven boards in the loss.

The Minutewomen led the game by eight points in the second half, but St. Joe's runs of 9–0 and 6–0 erased any hopes of an upset. The Hawks used 8–9 shooting from the line to edge UMass down the stretch.

"We have an outside chance of being able to tie St. Joe's for first place in the A–10 East," O'Brien said. "It could happen because they have to play some tough games."

Minutewomen Notes: Junior Tez Craft will undergo surgery on her left knee to repair cartilage damage. Craft was previously sidelined by a stress fracture in her right tibia, and will redshirt this season. Craft is joined on the disabled list by freshman Amy Garber, who has stress fractures in both feet.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

lack of a defenseman to trigger their powerplay like O'Sullivan and Kaj Linna have the past few years. This is not to say that the Terriers are chump change, but few doubt that this squad could beat last years.

"As good as they are — and they're very good — they still aren't as good as they've been in previous years. The return of Dan LaCouture and interduction of Tommi Degerman into their lineup make them stronger than they were. They look like they're back on line now."

The River Hawks (13–14, 9–8) have lost each of its last three entering tonight's game at UNH but have proven to be somewhat of a surprise under first–year head coach Tim Whitehead. Picked to finish dead last in the preseason coaches' poll, UMass–Lowell finds itself in fourth place in the league, but holding a narrow lead ovr each of the next four lower teams.

Gutsy performances by seniors Neil Donovan and Ryan Salsman have salvaged what was supposed to be a complete rebuilding year, along with the solid play of freshman Greg Koehler who has gone from the fields of Scarborough to third on the team in scoring.

The awarding of the Alumni Cup, given to the winner of the currently–tied season series, proved to be arguably the highlight of last year's campaign. The Minutemen will look to successfully defend their title tomorrow night.

"They've done a great job and deserve a lot of credit," Mallen said. "They're getting great senior leadership and scoring from Donovan, Salsman and Sandholm.

"They've been up and down and so have we, so with the Alumni Cup on the line, it's going to be a great game."

Minutemen Notes: After some juggling of late the UMass lineup should feature many of the same conventional faces this weekend. Rob Bonneau will return from a knee injury that kept him out of the UNH game. Judd Smith will also return to the team after serving a suspension for breaking an unspecified team rule. Tom O'Connor will likely be a welcome sight back on the blue line, for the first time since Jan. 18, after missing four games with a leg injury. One face out of the lineup though is Dean Campanale who suffered a shoulder seperation at UNH.

■ hoop

continued from page 10

free throws to give the Dukes the halftime edge, 40–37.

UMass made a run for the lead in the first seven minutes of the second half, twice reaching margins of four. But from the Duquesne bench, Edgar gave the green light to Pipkins, who poured in 16 points during a nearly nine–minute stretch. During that time (9:55–1:50), Pipkins was the only Duke to score.

Pipkins' run gave the Dukes thoughts of a win, and a lead of five with 1:25 remaining in the game. But a tip–in by Ketner and a pair from the line by Clarke set the stage for Travieso's heroics.

"Every game we play comes down to the end," Bosnic said. "They always make plays to beat us."

Travieso's shot, though, was one the Dukes just didn't anticipate.

"They didn't think I was going to shoot it from there," he said. "I'm just glad it went in. I didn't think it went in until Winston [Smith] came and breathed on me."

■ Travieso

continued from page 10

"When we walked out of the time out, he [Travieso] asked me, 'If I'm open for the three, can I shoot it?' UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "I said, 'Can you make it?'

"So I said if you're open shoot it then. But to be honest with you, he's your senior, seniors are supposed to make plays like that.

"If he says to me when he walks out of the time out, 'Can I shoot the three?' then obviously he knew if it comes to me, I want the shot."

Despite Tyrone Weeks' double–double (15 points, 11 boards), Lari Ketner's tied career–high 18 points, and Travieso's last second heroics, UMass did not play up to its potential last night.

A typically tenacious Massachusetts defense should never have let the Dukes' Tom Pipkins (28 pts) score 16 consecutive points in the game's final nine minutes.

While Duquesne has showed moments of brilliance, like its eight–point win over Xavier, it has repeatedly come up short in last second losses to Fordham (60–59), La Salle (79– 77) and Rhode Island (85–83).

On Saturday, the Minutemen (13–10, 7–3 Atlantic 10) face a URI squad with which it is tied for second place in the A– 10 East. While buzzer–beating treys are masochist fun to watch, they are no substitute for the team play UMass is capable of.

MIKARA'S
Saturday Feb 8
SKA Night
NYC SKA Masters
"The Toasters"
with
"Rustic Overtures"
9 pm 18 & up
Thursday Feb 20
The J.G.B. Band
Members of the
Jerry Garcia Band
9 pm 18 & up
Saturday Feb 22
Great White
80's Glam – Rockers
9 pm 21 & up
March 1
SKA night
BIM SKALA BIM
& Rustic Overtures
9 pm 18 & up

Need more publicity?
Advertise in the Collegian classifieds!

HAIR SKIN NAILS
STYLES BY DEBORAH
•HAIRCARE •WAXING
•FACIALS •MANICURES
•PEDICURES •TANNING
•FREE HAIR & SKIN CONSULTATIONS
549-5610
65 University drive, Amherst
$5.00 OFF Consultation Style HAIRCUT Shampoo + Dry
with Cheryl -Coupon expires 2/3/97
ONE FREE TANNING VISIT with Any Other Salon Service

MARKET RESEARCH EXPERIENCE
Abt Associates Inc., a leading Social Science Research firm, Telephone Center located in Amherst is currently seeking Telephone interviewers. The Phone Center conducts telephone interviews in the areas of Health and Well being, Financial Services i.e. customer satisfaction and product satisfaction, Market Trends, Forecasting etc... The job entails reading from a script and entering responses into a computer system. Computer skills and pleasant phone manner is a MUST. Abt offers a flexible schedule and congenial working environment in a corporate setting. Candidates must work a minimum of 20 hours per week starting salary $5.75/hour with the potential to earn up to $7.50/hour. Come gain ground floor marketing and market research experience.
Don't forget to come see us Tuesday, February 11th at 10:00- 4:00 on the Concourse!
Call (413) 587-1607 TODAY!
Abt
Abt Associates Inc.

Recycle Your Collegian ! ! ! ! ! !

COMPUTER FAIR & SALE
12 SALONS WITH DISCOUNT PC
TRI-STATE FAIRS
10AM-4:00PM
Buy any computer or peripheral from us or our competitors (150 vendor tables) featuring the BEST PC computers market from full systems to laptops at CDS it's all here. Add $7 to width and $5 to after 1:00 pm $4 to width only
MULLINS CENTER AMHERST SUND, FEB 9

FEB. 8th
PAULY SHORE comedy CONNECTION
(413) 748-9700
EVERY THURSDAY!
FRANK SANTOS
"The R-Rated Hypnotist"

Winter SALE.
ZAMA
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

RUSH Theta Chi Feb. 3 4 5 & 10-12, 8-10pm. 549-9252

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton 1 bedroom apartment for rent starting the second week of Feb. Partially furnished. Take over lease. Call Melissa 549-1091

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Jeep Grand Wagoneer runs great, needs minor repairs. $1500 or B/O. Call Cbin 256-8480

Mustang looks good, runs good $500. Call 665-9068

EMPLOYMENT

Work Study students needed. Teaching positions in a multicultural after-school program for children 5-12. Some experience desirable $6.00/hour. Men and people of color encouraged to apply. Call Capacidad at 253-5659

Counselors needed for Co-ed Northeast PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp (3 hours from NYC)- general, sports, drama, H20 and arts. (800)973-3866

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt! Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

Sommer Job! Camp Somoset is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama and woodworking. Also hiring secretaries; kitchen and maintenance workers. Call or fax resume to: Winter Office, Wellesley, MA. Phone. (617)237-3017 Fax. (617)237-7269

Drivers Wanted Apply in person between 3-5pm. Pinocchio's. Amherst.

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company).

Appointment Setters Hadley office has several openings in its calling center. No selling involved. Fun atmosphere. On bus-line. Up to $7-$10/hr. Start work immediately. Call 584-7696. Ask for Mr. Boone or Mr Barr!

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info. send resume and letter of interest to: Club Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188

Teaching Substitute $6.25/hour Hampshire Franklin Day Care Center, Route 63. Near Amherst-Leverett town line. 548-9674

EMPLOYMENT

PUBLIC RELATIONS/MARKETING STAFF

If you seek an ever-changing high-energy workplace, this may be the job for you. Hinsdale/Greyhound Park/simulcast betting capital of the Northeast, is looking for enthusiastic individuals experienced in Public Relations/Marketing/Promotions. Exciting work atmosphere, competitive salary, and benefits. Send confidential resume to: Ron Algeri, GM, Hinsdale/Greyhound Park, Route 119, Hinsdale, NH 03451. F/PT Equal Opportunity Employer

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krahow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680 ext. K50011

Wanted: Tour guides. Summer Counselors, Student Admissions Representatives. Applications available at the Admissions Center.

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available. Benefits. Summer or year round. (612)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

EMPLOYMENT

Outside Jobs- Now hiring: National Parks, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting. CO's benefits and Bonuses! Nationwide openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180. Eastern Europe/Asian jobs- Live in Prague, Budapest, Tokyo, etc. Teaching simple conversational English. No languages/teaching exp. required. (919)918-7767 ext. W180

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

Segarloaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apertments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus-line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Laptop/Notebook $99... Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 566-3324-2

Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo Video Exchange, 256-0941

Snow Tires Two pair, Firestone and Wredestein. 185-70 Call 586-1087

FOR SALE

Mac Laptop Duo 230, 12Mb RAM System 7.5.1. Really fast, comes with lots of software and accessories. $1200 or B/O. Call Noel 323-9692. Willing to negotiate. Please call.

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition $200. Sean 546-5734

4 Jeep Tires- 30x9.50 R15LT Kelly Tires. Very good condition. $200 or B/O. Call Jennifer 548-9770

Word Processor: Brother Whisper Writer WP-7550, Ink Jet Printer. Asking $299 or B/O. Bill 582-9175

Smith Corona WP compact, great condition. $150 or B/O. Call 256-5470

486 New Laptop $585, VGA Color Monitor $175, IDE Hard Drive $110 Steve 566-3324-2

MISCELLANEOUS

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1969, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers.

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-4783

GORILLAGRAMS Valentines, Birthdays, Roses, Balloons, Poems. Send the Crazy Gorilla. We'll go anywhere, anytime. Student Raises. Call ahead for Valentine's Day. 256-0287

PERSONALS

"What's so funny 'bout peace, love and understanding?"- Curtis Stigers. Free love and Valentines at www.mainquad.com

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in two bedroom apt. On bus route. Available immediately. $220 + utilities. Call 665-2197

One bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Available immediately. On bus route. Sugarloaf Estates. Keira (203)294-1336. Females Only

SERVICES

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available. (800)773-8704 Cost $29 Applications close 2-24-97.

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)253-6496 ext 150916. (We are a research and publishing company).

www.smarthomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY. (800)700-0790 www.vpgadventours.com

Spring Break/Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Panama City, South Padre. Lowest prices. Reliable company. Asta latan member. Contact Matt 253-5473

Pompano Beach, Florida March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations: Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Inter-campus Representatives. (800)327-6013. http://www.icpt.com

Best Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company. Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more. Call 256-8724

Jamaica- Spring Break Stay in beautiful Negril. Includes roundtrip airfare, hotel transfers, 7 nights lodging from $519. Don't take chances with other companies, go with the UMass Ski Club. Call 545-3437

Europe $155, Canbb/Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.isi.com.fr/airhitch

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel. Free lowest price guarantee. From $99. (800)426-7710. www.sunsplashtours.com

Spring Break- Nassau/Paradise Island, from $379. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize small group- earn free trips plus commissions! Call (800)9-Beach-1

WANTED TO RENT

Six bedroom house for the fall Willing to take over summer lease Call 549-5362!

WANTED

Photographer needed: Local band needs photo for press kit. For info. call Phil 549-5836

Conservative students interested in starting a conservative student newspaper. Good writing skills and familiarity with Pagemaker software a plus. Call Paul at 8-0183 for more information.

Here's something to do with all the change you have in your pockets...

Collegian Classifieds

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad listed in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order.
9. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
10. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards, in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

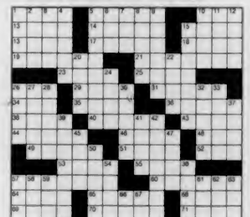
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students



20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Sour
6. Bring together
10. Govt. agcy.
15. "Render therefore ___ Caesar"
16. Confessional locales
18. Objective
19. Last part
17. Used money
18. Singer Fitzgerald
19. Sublease
21. Showed gratitude
23. Stagger
25. Anne who was married to Zeigfeld
26. ___ and the Art of Archery
28. Lock material
31. Slurries
34. Barcelona bravo
35. Like a bonechewer
36. Las Vegas game
37. Beast's abode
40. Supply
43. Breed
44. Reference book
46. Be bold enough
48. Family ___ room
49. Cosmetician Lauder
51. Dirt
52. However
53. Used the doorbell
56. Cradle and Pop's pal
57. Card game
60. Chess piece
64. Oil org.
65. "How do these? " (2 wds.)
66. Gargoyle's aid
67. Pegleg ___ of Steamboat Willie
70. Ascribe
71. Nag persistently
72. Feminine suffix
73. Politico Kefauver
74. Dr. Jekyll and Mr. ___

DOWN

1. Yosemite's founder
2. Pre-deal charge
3. Pun or fun ending
4. ___ and Jethro
5. Wobbly
6. Afternoon snooze
7. "___ Told Every Little Star"
8. Dime, to a dollar
9. Harriet's undoer
10. Section for Pete Seeger records
11. Shelley Duvall's "Fame ___ Theater"
12. Clothed
15. Sexes
20. Grape drink of the '50s
22. Kim Basinger's man
24. Caron film
26. Writer portrayed by Muni
27. Make jubilant
29. Diamond and Simon
30. Marsh grasses
32. Brownie
33. Shopping ___
35. Religious group
38. Marathon for the upwardly mobile (Pretls.)
41. Indochina region
42. Sofa
45. Sail the seven ___
47. Enthusiasm
50. Undivided
54. Duets
58. Slider or sinker
61. Manage
62. Gorillas
68. Packs up, after taxes
69. The Man in the Flannel Suit

63. Ganya
64. Frequently, to Keats
67. Neckline shape

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Social graces carry the week, and you could capitalize on an opportunity to really impress someone in charge. Follow the lead of someone you really respect to go even further.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A discussion with a stubborn Capricorn may have you reaching for your punching bag, but try not to let your frustration show. Calm reasoning doesn't work tactfully suggest outside arbitration.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Avoid the temptation to become distracted by a plethora of exciting developments. Although you want to dip your spoon into every pot, wash awhile. You may be better off focusing your energies on one area.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Indulge yourself in a little media consumption this week—a book or a movie will lower your stress level. You have the knack for picking up on complicated issues lately, so knock yourself out—you could happen into a new career.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Apply all your energy toward tying up some loose ends on a difficult project. Pay close attention to issues like supply and demand. Ignore a loved one's clamorings for an expensive toy—it could be a bigger sacrifice than it seems.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
When an intricate situation begins to seem overwhelming to you, call on the advice of a trusted friend, and don't be afraid to try an unusual solution. If it seems right to you, and you've thought it out clearly, then trust your instincts.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Social gatherings are bound for success with your charm at a seasonal high. Wake up to the undercurrents in a close relationship—it may be headed in a different direction than you thought.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Placing restraints on your emotions in favor of logic may be difficult, but you could reap huge rewards as a result. Communication offers a compromise for both your impulses: just count to ten before you speak.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Romance blooms with an unlikely companion. A group meeting or discussion could give you a whole new insight on an old problem. Don't be afraid to share your ideas for the future.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Follow through on a commitment you made last month even if you have to do a little legwork. A stagnant situation suddenly livens up—be prepared. Avoid overspending on a social occasion.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
You have a nagging feeling that you have forgotten something. Check out your important papers for clues to what it could be. Organize a group outing to put a new spin on your social life. You could meet just the person you've been waiting for.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Expert financial advice helps you make a move that will affect your future for the better. Invest in something new for the house that you've been wanting. Remember, comparison shopping is a valuable skill that pays off for you.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

R	A	S	P		F	E	A	R	S		L	U	K	E
O	D	I	E		U	N	C	A	P		I	N	I	T
A	L	T	S		E	S	T	E	E		K	I	T	T
N	A	U	T	I	L	U	S		A	R	E	T	H	A
S	I	P		B	E	E		A	K	I	N
			N	E	D		C	H	E	S	S	M	E	N
F	E	L	I	X		F	R	E	R	E		R	C	A
R	A	U	L		F	L	E	A	S		T	E	R	M
E	R	N		B	A	Y	E	D		U	N	D	U	E
E	S	T	E	E	M	E	D		A	M	T
		L	A	I	R		E	S	P		M	A	R
S	T	P	A	U	L		M	A	S	S	E	U	S	E
L	O	O	T		I	R	A	T	E		E	R	O	S
A	O	N	E		E	I	D	E	R		L	A	N	E
B	L	E	D		S	P	E	N	T		S	L	E	W

Daily Listings sponsored by: Your Ad Could Be Here. Call 545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 Laser Video
28 The Learning Channel
30 Comedy Central
31 Popcorn Channel
32 Satellite Programming

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 7, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH (2)	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	McLaughlin	Connecticut	Fourth Estate	First Flights	World at War
WFSB (3)	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Dave's World	Raymond	JAG "Trinity" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Knockout"		News	Late Show
WBZ (4)	4	News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Dave's World	Raymond	JAG "Trinity" (In Stereo)			Nash Bridges "Knockout"		News	Late Show
WCVB (5)	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Family Matters	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Clueless	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI (6)		Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★½ The Dead Pool (1988, Drama) Clint Eastwood.				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH (7)		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	★★★ Get REST (1962, Comedy-Drama) Nick Nolte, Eddie Murphy.				News		H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC (3)	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Simpsons	King of the Hill	Millennium "Force Majeure"		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP (2)	22	News		Newshour Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY (2)	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Frug. Gourmet	W.E.B. Du Bois – A Biography In Four Voices (In Stereo)
WGGB (2)	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Clueless	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK (38)		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	★★★ 48 HRS. (1982, Comedy-Drama) Nick Nolte, Eddie Murphy.		News		Martin		Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS (72)		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★★ Steel Magnolias (1989, Comedy-Drama) Sally Field, Dolly Parton.						★★★ 9 to 5 (1980, Comedy) Jane Fonda.
A&E (40)		Quincy		Equalizer "First Light"		Biography: The Astors		★★★ $ (Dollars) (1971, Suspense)		Warren Beatty, Goldie Hawn.		Law & Order
CNN (43)	23	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Inside Politics	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM (44)	39	Tick	Dream On	★★½ Top Secret!! (1984, Comedy) Val Kilmer, Lucy Gutteridge.				★½ Fatal Instinct (1993, Comedy) Armand Assante.				Police Squad	Police Squad!
DISC (42)		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Strange Planes (R)		Wild Discovery: Kangaroo.		Invention (R)	Beyond 2000	Wings "The MG Story"		Wild Discovery: Kangaroo.
ESPN (45)		Up Close	Sportscenter		Up Close Special		Winter Sports Festival			Superbouts (R)		Sportscenter
LIFE (47)		Supermarket	Debt	Dish	Fandom	Wire	3 Blind Dates	★★ Awake to Danger! (1995, Suspense) Tori Spelling.				Dish (R)	Pandora (R)
MTV (48)		Ren & Stimpy	Week in Rock	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos (In Stereo)				Beavis-Butt.	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK (46)		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI (49)		Twilight Zone	Darkside	She-Wolf of London		★★½ Phantasm (1979, Horror) Michael Baldwin, Bill Thornbury.				Friday the 13th: The Series		She-Wolf of London
TLC (52)	24	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Guest (R)	What a World	This Century (R)		Glass Jungle: Fam.		Guest (R)	What a World
TNT (50)		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night "Pilot" (In Stereo)				NBA All-Star Friday (Live)		NBA at 50 (R)
USA (51)		Renegade "Knockout" (R)		Highlander: The Series		★★½ Three Fugitives (1989, Comedy) Nick Nolte. (In Stereo)				La Femme Nikita "Charity"		★★★ Say Anything... (1989)
HBO (53)		5:30 ★★ Sleep Dog Sleep Liter (1995) Andy Garcia. "PG-13"				★★½ Dinoz Zone" (1994, Adventure) Wesley Snipes. "R"				Boxing: Lennox Lewis vs. Oliver McCall			Dennis Miller
MAX (54)		4:45) "Danger!" ★★ Bushwhacked" (1995) Daniel Stern. "PG"				★★ Mercy" (1996, Drama) John Rubinstein. "R"		★★ Tango & Cash" (1989, Drama) Sylvester Stallone. "R"					Erotic
SHOW (55)		★★ Iron Eagle III" (1998, Adventure) Louis Gossett Jr. "PG"				★★½ Dead Presidents" (1995, Drama) Larenz Tate. "R"				Outer Limits "Valerie 23" (R)		★★ Puppet

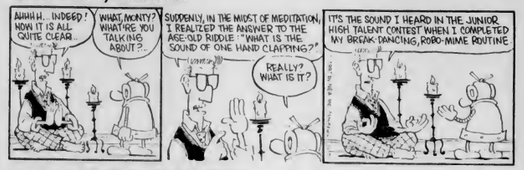
Bruno By C. Baldwin



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Non - Sequitur By Wiley

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My uncle Reggie flew into visit my family last yesterday. We were all pretty excited to see him... hadn't seen him in years.

We figured out his plane arrival time and all the other stuff so that he should've walked through the door around 1:00 p.m. Instead he walked in at 3:00 p.m. We were worried.

He said he arrived at noon but went to a motel and then went to have his nails done. He said he's not effeminate, it's just a nice thing to do. Then Reggie said he was tired. The night before he spent 4 hours in the emergency room. His ankles swelled up because he had a wicked sunburn on his neck.

He was so tired he fell asleep on the couch at 5:00 p.m.... while we were talking to him.

When I grow up I want to be like him... clean nails, sunburn on my neck, have doctors and nurses take care of me all night long and then fall asleep as soon as my relatives start to talk to me.

Perfect.

LEEDEE By Mike Rybicki

Social Norm By Mr. K

University¹ By Frank Cho

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Close to Home By John McPherson

"You don't suppose this has anything to do with you sending back the first three entrees?"

Quote of the Day

"Women who seek to be equal with men lack ambition."

– Random Bumper Sticker

Joke of the Day

Did you hear about the new restaurant on the Moon?

-The food is good but there is no atmosphere

Today's Staff

Seema "Miss Peacock" Gangatirkar
Night Editor

Lisa "Mrs. White" Chiu
Copy Editor

Chris "Col. Mustard" Cesnek
Photo Technician

Mark "Prof. Plum" McGrath
Production Supervisor

Elizabeth "Miss Scarlet" Brown
Sandi "the ROPE" Krauss
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Mesquite Chicken	Rotisserie Chicken
Hot Beef Sandwich	Stuffed Shells
Capt. Catch!	Quarter Pound Burger
Sesame Roll	Chedder Burger

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Rotisserie Glazed
Grilled Cheese	Chicken
Capt. Catch!	Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Sesame Roll	YUM!

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Rotisserie Chicken
Raditore	Vegetable Gumbo
Harvest Burger	Stuffed Shells
Vegan Falafel Sandwich	Half Time Deli

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Pineapple Ham Steak
Krabbycake Sandwich	Vegetable Gumbo
Raditore	Stuffed Shells
Harvest Burger	Rotisserie Chicken

Travieso's long range bomb staves off Duquesne

Game–winner overshadows play of Duquesne's Pipkins

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

When a game is on line in the final seconds, it is a team's seniors who are expected to shoulder the burden. When the Massachusetts men's basketball team needs a big shot at the end of the game, it is senior guard Carmelo Travieso who shoulders the burden.

Last night at the William D. Mullins Center, Travieso stepped up and made a huge 3-point shot with nine seconds left to lift UMass (13–10, 7–3 Atlantic 10) over Duquesne (7–12, 3–6) 72–70.

"He walked out of the time–out and he asked me, 'If I'm open for the three, can I shoot it?'" Minuteman coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "I said 'Can you make it?' and he said yes. So I said, 'If you're open, shoot it then.'

"He's a senior, he's supposed to step up and make shots like that."

Travieso didn't just take a shot, he dropped a bomb on the Dukes, firing the ball from about 25 feet out.

"After I shot it I said, 'What did I just do?' Because it took a long time for it to get there," Travieso said. "I was just thinking where the basket was at. I wasn't thinking about the shot when I took it."

The shooting guard wasn't the only one surprised by his bucket.

"Wow," sophomore guard Charlton Clarke said when asked his reaction. "He does that all the time in practice, but in a game like that, with the game on the line, I didn't think he would do it. He proved me wrong again."

Travieso's shot, which gave UMass only its seventh lead in the game, negated a tremendous effort from Duquense's senior point guard, Tom Pipkins.

The Dukes' leading scorer, Pipkins had been averaging 18.9 points per game coming into the contest in Amherst. But at the Mullins Center, he broke loose for a game–high 28 points.

Pipkins was backed up by Nick Bosnic, who was one point away from a season high with 17, and Mike James, who chipped in for 12.

But James only stands 6–foot–3 and Bosnic 6–foot–7, while the Minutemen start Tyrone Weeks (6–foot–7) and Lari Ketner (6–foot–10) and have Imus Norville (6–foot–8) and Ajmal Basit (6–foot–9) coming off the bench.

"Before Travieso hit his, I think size and strength won out," Duquesne coach Scott Edgar said. "They weren't making their first one but they were just pounding it, pounding it, and getting second chances."

The Dukes started the game strong, running out to a 13–4 lead with 14:08 remaining in the first half on the strength of Bosnic's play and a half–hearted effort from the Minutemen.

"We took this team lightly and they really took it at us," Weeks, who finished with 15 points and 11 rebounds, said.

But UMass chipped away, cutting the deficit and taking the lead at 23–22 with 7:48 before intermission.

The Minutemen reached their largest lead of the game with 2:48 left in the first, when a Travieso 3–pointer put the UMass advantage at 37–32.

But Duquense would not go to the locker rooms quietly, as James reeled off a jump shot and a pair of

Turn to HOOP, page 7

CHRIS CELNICK · COLLEGIAN
Carmelo Travieso scored 16 points, including a 3–pointer to win the game, in last night's

This year's Mr. Clutch gives UMass the win

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

If you were sitting in sections QQ or XX of the William D. Mullins Center last night, you probably didn't see what took place on the floor with nine seconds left in last night's 73–71 win over Duquesne.

Could you see the flicker?

For a split second, the number on Carmelo Travieso's jersey went from No 24 to No. 10.

Any true UMass hoop fan knows that in the early 1990's, when a certain No. 10 got his hands on the ball, trailing with seconds left on the clock, the shot was as good as gold. (Remember the '93–'94 season and 91–86 OT win over North Carolina and a 51–50 win over Temple, both courtesy of No. 10?).

Back then Travieso was a freshman, and as he related after scoring his 1,000 point against Xavier last week, unsure if he was even going to play. Unless you have been living under a rock for the past three–and–a–half seasons, you know just how much things have changed.

Last night was evidence of that.

With nine seconds left in regulation, Minutemen down by one, Travieso drains a 3–pointer from somewhere around the greater Hartford area.

"It was a throw–back play," Charlton Clarke said. "I pass to Edgar, and go under like I'm going across, but I stay underneath on the baseline and just hang out there.

"Carmelo was supposed to shoot that ball, but we didn't want him to shoot it from that far out. He just proved his range and that he's a clutch player.

"He does it all the time in practice. We joke around from out there, but in a game like that, with the game on the line I didn't think he would do it. But he proved me wrong."

Clarke was not the only person with doubts when Travieso released the shot last night. Would it go in? For UMass fans, it was deja vu.

Flashback: Hartford Civic Center, clock winding down, scoreboard reads Connecticut 64, Massachusetts 61. Travieso gets the ball downtown and with a chance to tie, it doesn't go.

And again: Mullins Center, last Saturday. Clock expiring, scoreboard reads Xavier 87, Massachusetts 84. Travieso gets the pill outside the arc puts it up and, no good.

But last night, Travieso was confident, had plenty of

Turn to TRAVIESO, page 7

Big hockey weekend includes BU & Alumni Cup

MASSACHUSETTS HOCKEY
Friday - 7pm
William D. Mullins Center
Boston University
vs.
UMASS
On Air: WHMP AM, Continental Cable

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

It's hardly going out on a limb to state that every weekend from here on out is crucial for the Massachusetts hockey team (11–16, 6–12 Hockey East). With playoff positioning on the line and momentum desprately needing to be built, UMass can ill–afford any major slip–ups in its final six contests.

Tonight a weekend that would be critical regardless of the Minutemen's league standing kicks off with a visit from No. 5 Boston University (15–6–5, 12–2–3) at 7 p.m. Tomorrow the Minutemen will likely play their final contest at UMass– Lowell's Tully Forum with the second annual Alumni Cup hanging in the balance.

"Its a real big weekend for us emotionally," coach Joe Mallen said. "We really need to get back on the saddle and get back at it this weekend.

"I shouldn't have to get anybody up for the BU game. Everybody in the locker room should be ready to play. Then with Lowell, the rivalry and the Alumni Cup should push or guys to play hard."

The blood always boils in the UMass locker room when coach Jack Parker and his scarlet–clad team hops off the bus at the William D. Mullins Center. The Terriers ran the score through the low roof of Walter Brown Arena in a Hockey East quarterfinal contest last year, something no one connected with the program will ever forget.

This has been a peculiar season for the Terriers who have proven to be the model of inconsistency in 1996–97. They took their trademark rocket–propelled start out of the gate before freshman forward Dan LaCouture walked off the team in November. BU went into a tailspin that included a dismal ECAC road swing at St. Lawrence and Clarkson and a dreadful series at No. 2 North Dakota, which helped vault the Fighting Sioux to its high mark.

Then Tommi Degerman almost literally came out of the woodwork. The freshman from Helsinki intended to come to BU next year, but with a severe lack of depth at forward due to the loss of LaCouture and the season–ending injury to John Hynes, Parker speeded up the process and unofficially set an NCAA clearing–house record by clearing the foreigner in five days.

Still suffering from jet–lag, Degerman tallied two goals and two assists in his debt Jan. 3 against New Hampshire. A week later LaCouture returned and things seem to be back to normal.

Regardless though, this year's Terriers are not the same as some of the past few. Three players from the 196 BU team are currently collecting NHL pay checks (Mike Grier, Edmonston, Jay Pandolfo, New Jersey and Chris O'Sullivan, Calgary), two of which (Grier and O'Sullivan) left after their junior years.

The end result is a relative lack of depth at forward and a

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

UMass hits road, faces Philly foes

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The time of the season when players prove their worth, showing their mettle in the clutch minutes of one of the most important games is upon the Massachusetts women's basketball team. Coach Joanie O'Brien's squad packs their bags and hits the road for a weekend double dose of down– the–stretch Atlantic 10 rivalry.

The unfriendly confines of Temple's McGonigle Hall will be the site of this weekend's first clash for 13–7 (7–3 A–10) UMass. Sunday the Minutewomen travel across town to St. Joseph's and the even less hospitable Alumni Hall, where UMass is 0–13 all–time.

The last meeting between the Owls and the Minutewomen was a convincing 61–45 UMass win at the William D. Mullins Center on Jan. 25. Senior guard Sabriya Mitchell scored 11 points and controlled the flow of the game. Mitchell was at home with the transition pace of the game in the second half, as was backcourt mate Kelly Van Huisen, who dished out six assists in the win.

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 7

COLLEGIAN FILE
Jaywana Bradley and the UMass women's basketball team are on a two–game road swing in Philadelphia this weekend.

UMass football alum Ingoglia signs with Bills

By Luke Meradith
Collegian Staff

Former Massachusetts running back Rene Ingoglia has signed a free–agent contract with the Buffalo Bills, according to sources within the Bills organization. Terms and length of the deal were not disclosed.

Ingoglia finished his UMass career in 1995 as the all–time leading rusher in Minuteman history. Ingoglia rushed for 4,624 yards in a four year career, and currently holds five UMass rushing records, including career touchdowns, 54 and career per game rushing average at 112.8 yards a game.

In addition, with 4,624 career rushing yards, Ingoglia ranks as the all–time rushing leader in the 50 year history of the Yankee Conference, which will become the Atlantic–10 football conference for the 1997 season. Ingoglia also finished YanCon play as the co–leader in touchdowns with 55, and was named to the Yankee Conference's All–Time team this past season.

Rene Ingoglia

Women's swimming bound for Big Apple

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

Last Saturday afternoon, the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team brought a smile to coach Bob Newcomb's face as it beat Rutgers, 184–107.

This Saturday the UMass team will look to continue that success as it travels to New York to face Fordam University on Saturday at 1 p.m.

If the Minutewomen bring a win back to Amherst that will give UMass 10 wins for the first time in 20 years. Newcomb is, "confident that [the Minutewomen] will come away with a win... if we stay focused."

Three of the Minutewomen were dual winners last weekend. Senior Jessica Farley, in the final home meet of her career, took a first in the 200 freestyle (1:58.04) and in the 100 freestyle, clocking a 54.76.

Sophomore Julie Alexander won both the 100 breaststroke (1:09.82) and the 200 breast (2:28.51). Her golden effort in the 200 carries her to fourth all–time on the UMass top– performance chart.

Freshman Andrea Spencer carried both the 100 butterfly in a time of 1:00.17 and the 50 freestyle in 25.22 for the Minutewomen. Both of these times were personal bests for Spencer and her time in the 100 fly ranks her fifth all–time on the UMass top–performance list.

Irina Kossenko, a junior, was a winner in the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:11.85, ranking her fifth on the UMass all–time list.

But UMass didn't just excel in the swimming events. Junior diver Angelique Rodriguez is on the top of the UMass all–time one–meter list and in the top three in every other diving category. Her ten dives against Rutgers gave her a finishing score of 258.075 and once again, gave her a first–place finish.

Other individual winners for the UMass team were junior Barb Hickey in the 100 free (10:33.89), freshman Lia Lansky in the 200 fly (2:11.88) and junior Karen Sontwald in the 500 free (5:12.92).

Newcomb claims that the 9–3 record that the Minutewomen hold is due to both a "strong team effort" and to the fact that they are "always having fun." But that fun is combined with the incredible amount of hard work and dedication that goes into becoming a winning team.

This weekend's meet will provide the Minutewomen with some tune–up time before the championship stretch of the schedule.

With the Atlantic 10 Championships in Buffalo coming up in only two weeks there are a few women who will rest at the Fordam meet. Freshmen Clare Maker, Trisha Argentina and Fleur Soltz will sit out on Saturday.

UMass is taking 17 swimmers and 3 divers to A–10s from its 31–member team. Among these 20 women are seniors, Kristen Schambach, Krystin Carpenter, Farley and Jodi Walters.

Following this weekend, the Minutewomen will head to the New England Open next weekend before heading to Atlantic 10s.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 79 · New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 · Monday, February 10, 1997

Figgs Newton

The Figgs blew the lid off Noho Thursday night. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

UM rams Rhode Island

Tyrone Weeks exploded in the second half to lead the Minutemen past A–10 foe Rhode Island Saturday (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Talks may begin Tues. in Peru hostage crisis

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru's president said yesterday that preliminary talks between the government and leftist rebels holding 72 hostages could begin as soon as Tuesday.

"There's a team working on this hostage problem and they are advancing," Fujimori told reporters in London, where he is attending a forum on British investment in Latin America. "Next week, probably on Tuesday, they will start preliminary conversations."

Fujimori said he was still hoping for a peaceful resolution to the crisis, which began when Tupac Amaru rebels stormed the Japanese ambassador's house on Dec. 17, 1996.

"We will exhaust all pacific measures so that the way out will not be using force," he said, adding that he would consider using force only if hostages are harmed.

Fujimori's announcement came just as some of the hostages' relatives were beginning to lose hope.

Relatives of one ailing hostage marched outside the ambassador's residence here Saturday evening, begging the armed rebels to let him go so he can get medical help.

NATION

Clinton implicated in new Whitewater deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted Whitewater partner Jim McDougal is now telling independent counsel Kenneth Starr that then–Gov. Bill Clinton knew about an illegal 1986 loan issued to McDougal's wife at the time, according to The New Yorker magazine.

ABC News reported last night that McDougal has told it the same thing.

Both McDougal and former President Clinton have testified under oath that Clinton did not know about the loan and was not present at a 1986 meeting where it was discussed, as alleged — also under oath — by David Hale.

Hale is now serving a federal prison term after pleading guilty to charges stemming from his issuance of the loan, backed by the federal Small Business Administration, to Susan McDougal.

Both McDougal's, along with former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, were convicted by a Whitewater jury in Little Rock, Ark., last year in a trial where Clinton's alleged involvement in the $300,000 loan was an issue.

Some of the money from the loan was used to purchase land for a real estate development near Little Rock that originally was purchased for the Whitewater Corp., in which Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton were equal partners with Jim and Susan McDougal. The development subsequently was transferred to a corporation owned solely by the McDougal's and The New Yorker says Susan McDougal took the lead role in attempting to sell and market the lots in a project called Lorrance Heights.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 40	HIGH: 30	HIGH: 35
LOW: 20	LOW: 15	LOW: 23

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Proposed parking increase sparks protest

By Victoria Groves and Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

The administration's attempt to balance the parking budget with a proposed fee increase for all students and employees who park on campus has resulted in a highly visible symbol of protest seen across campus — the letter "P" with a slash mark drawn through it.

Several members of the University of Massachusetts community have been seen recently signing petitions or wearing pins bearing the insignia since the start of the semester.

The proposed fee increases would range from 40 percent in Lot 71, located near Whitmore Administration Building, to up to 300 percent in the parking garage. The proposal calls for two increases over two years with a 2 percent annual fee increase thereafter.

The plan has solicited a reaction from the University community, which has drawn closer over this issue than any other in recent memory.

"We stand five unions strong, and have the support of the SGA [Student Government Association]," said Rosemary Riley, president of the University Staff Association (USA). "This is the strongest issue that has brought us together since our bargaining contracts."

Administrative officials feel they are taking necessary steps to level off the parking system, but certain students, faculty and staff members are taking the proposal as a slight against them.

The initial reaction

The parking fees have generated broad–based concern across the campus, and many groups have been working on campaigns to halt parking fee increases.

"Students and staff members on campus are seeing their parking fees go off the chart, so there definitely is enough support," said SGA president Maurice Caston Powe.

The Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) has been circulating a petition for students and faculty opposed to the fee increase and has set up a Student Union table with a hotline to the Chancellor David K. Scott's office for students to leave a message directly for the Chancellor.

Most students are unclear as to where the extra money will be spent and whether or not the increase will make parking spaces more accessible.

"I pay a lot of money to go here, and I understand the need [for parking fees], but we're already feeling the pinch," said Matthew Seradini, a senior hotel, restaurant and travel management major.

Amanda Briere, a junior English major, feels she pays enough on her semester bill already.

"I pay out–of–state tuition and fees, and I have no idea why parking isn't included," Briere said.

Associate professor of legal studies Peter D'Errico is also opposed to parking fee increases.

"The next thing I'll have to be paying is office rent," D'Errico said. "I see this as privatization, being able to collect taxes and at the same time cut what those taxes are going to be used for."

Financing the parking system

Like any other facet of this University, the Parking Services Department operates on a budget. Unlike other areas of the University, however, the Parking Services Department is self–sustaining, meaning that all of its revenue is provided by four sources: parking fees, metered parking, garage parking and assessments paid by departments who use parking space for their programs.

Parking violation revenue does not go toward this amount — state statute dictates that the money go toward scholarships for students.

Revenue is needed to support every expense generated by Parking Services, which includes employee salaries, uniforms, maintenance, snow plowing and renewal and replacement.

Over the course of the last 10 years, the University has experienced difficult times financially because of a lack of state funding. At that time, the administration did not see fit to further press the University community by raising the prices of the parking services.

Until that period, Parking Services had been making money, and had money put away for replacement and renewal. Over the course of the past couple of years, Parking Services has been operating in a deficit, using the stored money for survival. After a while the funds depleted and the parking lots and facilities did not get the attention they should have received.

Parking Services is now attempting to restore a balance to the parking situation. Deferred maintenance on the University's parking system totals $3 million, but because of the lessons of the past, administration realizes that it must keep up with the erosion of the facilities in order to ensure that such a situation will never happen again.

In order to keep up, Parking Services will have to pay $800,000 per year, necessitating a change of some sort.

"We are where we are," said Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page, commenting on the parking system dilemma.

Enter PTAB

As a response to the developing problems, Page set up the Parking and Transportation Advisory Board (PTAB) in order to have input from various areas of the campus community on the subject of Parking and Transportation.

Turn to PARKING, page 2

JENNIFER JUSTICE · COLLEGIAN
Lauren Phillips, a sophomore business major, signs a petition against the proposed parking price increase.

UMass tennis volunteers service

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's tennis team helped out this past Saturday at the Grove Street Shelter Inn in Northampton.

The nine members of the team, accompanied by head coach Judy Dixon, stripped wallpaper and cleaned out the basement of the shelter.

"It's a good chance for us to give back to the community, to give back when we can," said team captain Alex Aller, a junior finance major.

Dixon said that the team had decided to add community service to their program last year.

"We were sitting in the van talking about what was missing in our program, what were the things that would make us feel good out," Dixon said. "How do we make this a complete program?

"The piece that was missing was service, and so the seniors last year started to think about leaving something for the community."

According to Dixon, the team looked in newspapers and called ServiceNet to find a group that could use their help.

"The Grove Street Shelter Inn was the first place that responded," Dixon said.

She arranged to have the men's team go to the shelter this past weekend to strip the walls, while the women will go the first week in March to paint.

"This is not about us giving only, we also get a lot out of it," Dixon said. "Service is a way of learning, maturing and feeling more responsible."

Bob Navarro, a freshman sports management major and team member, said that doing service as a team helps bring them together.

"It's a good thing — it's only once in a while that we get to do something for the community," Navarro said. "Doing it as a team is a real positive factor for everyone."

Teammate Parsa Samii, a freshman sports management major, agreed.

"I think this is a really good experience for me and for the team. I think this is something that everyone should do," Samii said.

According to Richard Hendrick, director of the Grove Street Shelter Inn, the inn provides shelter to 20 single men, women and young adults.

"We assist guests in doing whatever has to be done for them to find a better place to live," Hendrick said. "We assist folks in the next step after they've found themselves without shelter."

Hendrick said that the Grove Street Shelter Inn is always looking for volunteers.

"I welcome any group of individuals who would like to come because there are always things that need to be done here, and we rely on volunteers to do them," Hendrick said. "It's a good thing for any team to do, to see that education transcends the classroom and to help the spirit."

Dixon addressed the same issue, explaining why she felt it was important for the team to do service regularly.

"I really believe that my job here is not just to make them better tennis players, but better human beings," Dixon said.

For information on volunteering at the Grove Street Shelter Inn, contact Richard Hendrick at (413) 586–6001.

Women's studies offering new graduate certificate

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

For its pilot year, the University of Massachusetts women's studies department is currently accepting applications for their graduate certificate in advanced feminist studies, which will begin next fall.

The certificate involves taking courses from four cores which offer a wide variety of interdisciplinary subjects. Most of these courses are from the humanities and social sciences.

Nancy Patterson, a graduate student in the school of education who is working on an assistantship and is involved in planning the women's studies programs, said that the program may eventually include the natural sciences as well.

The certificate includes attending a seminar on an interdisciplinary issue of feminist study offered in the women's studies proseminar lecture series, taking part in a study group and doing either a research project or a masters or doctoral thesis.

Ann Ferguson, director of the women's studies program, who also gives some of the lectures offered in the proseminar, described the certificate as "a free–stand program, especially if someone already has a masters in another field."

The credits earned from the certificate are retroactive so that courses taken in other fields which are related to women's studies may be included, which is what gives the program a global and national outlook on feminist studies.

As the program is still trying to get on its feet, Patterson explained the present limitations.

"There is not enough money for

Turn to PROGRAM, page 3

Slow change frustrates Weld's advisors

BOSTON (AP) — When Gov. William F. Weld created commissions to advise him on issues affecting minority communities in the state, many applauded the move.

But four years after the first group was established, the advisory commissions on Asian, Hispanic and African–American communities have been able to effect few changes.

Commission members and observers say the volunteer groups have highlighted problems in minority communities, including high unemployment, poverty, discrimination and limited education; and written reports and made suggestions on how to improve conditions for the state's minorities.

But the groups have little authority to actually solve these problems.

"The commission, which is just a group of uncompensated people without a staff and without power, cannot be the engine for change," said Deborah A. Ramirez, who headed the Hispanic–American Advisory Commission when it was created in 1993. "I'm not saying that having a commission is not a good idea. But it's not a good idea if it's your only idea."

The Hispanic–American commission proposed last month that the state create a Hispanic Affairs Division to work with state agencies and the Legislature to address the community's needs. There are no Hispanics in the Legislature.

"I think the governor has very good intentions," said Antonia Jimenez, the current chairwoman of the Hispanic–American committee and a special assistant to Weld. "But there is no vehicle to make this work."

Toye Brown, acting chairwoman of the African–American Advisory Commission, said getting staff is a top priority. The commission asked Weld for a full–time liaison in its 1995 report.

Brown, who also is deputy secretary of transportation, said the commission started out strong in 1993 but fizzled last year. M. Ilyas Bhatti, who co–chairs the Asian–American commission with Susan Roosevelt Weld, the governor's wife, said the group has talked about trying to make the commissions permanent through the Legislature.

"It's a labor of love that has kept us going," Bhatti told The Boston Globe.

But Jose Juves, spokesman for the Weld administration, said legislating minority affairs may not be the best response. "I think you have to be careful when you think the answer is setting up another organization, another bureaucracy or hiring more people," Juves said. "I don't think the solution is for state government to co–opt more people and have taxpayers foot the bill, when our communities have their leaders and we can go out and get their opinions."

According to the U.S. Census, Hispanics numbered 287,549 in Massachusetts in 1990 — a 103 percent increase from 1980.

In the same period, the number of African–Americans increased 28.5 percent, to 274,464, while the number of Asians tripled to 144,000.

The commissions have helped produce some change.

The Asian–American Commission, for example, lobbied for funds to start the Institute for Asian–American Studies at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

The commission has also held business seminars, which Bhatti said drew a couple hundred people.

The African–American Commission has been working with the administration to rework the state's affirmative action edict after a 1994 study found discrimination in state contracting.

And the Hispanic–American Commission convinced the Legislature to appropriate $250,000 in 1994 to establish a Latino Economic Development Center at UMass–Boston to coordinate small business development around the state.

Israeli, Palestinian leaders meet, discuss conflicts, prison releases

By Samar Assad
Associated Press

EREZ CROSSING, Gaza Strip — Benjamin Netanyahu and Yasser Arafat discussed outstanding Israeli–Palestinian disputes yesterday, and officials said Israel agreed to release female Palestinian prisoners soon.

Both leaders were upbeat after the two–hour evening meeting at the Erez Crossing between Israel and Palestinian–run Gaza Strip. "We worked in a constructive and productive atmosphere on the problems on the agenda... and the fulfillment of mutual obligations," said Netanyahu, the Israeli prime minister. Negotiators said they would meet again soon to resolve issues like Israel's claim that the Palestinians are illegally operating offices in Jerusalem, and the Palestinians' charge that Israel is stalling approval of a Palestinian airport and safe passage between the West Bank and Gaza.

"We agreed that in one week we will start discussing the details of all the points," said Arafat, the Palestinian leader. Netanyahu adviser David Bar–Illan said the release of women held in Israeli jails would be resolved imminently. "I presume that will happen [the] day after tomorrow," he said.

Chief Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat had said the Palestinians expected the women's release by Monday, but the issue could be held up by Israel's Supreme Court, which on Monday will hear an appeal against the releases by a group representing Israeli victims of terrorism.

At the summit, Netanyahu also had planned to complain that the Palestinians are keeping offices in east Jerusalem in violation of the peace accords, which bar Arafat's government from operating in Jerusalem before the final status of the city is determined. The Palestinians want east Jerusalem, which Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast War, as the capital of a future state. Israel says Palestinian offices in Jerusalem that had been ordered shut down were later reopened under different names. Asked whether he raised the issue at the talk, Netanyahu said only that he found "a sympathetic ear."

The Yediot Ahronot newspaper had reported that Netanyahu would present Arafat with a map detailing the next Israeli troop pullout from rural areas of the West Bank. Under the U.S.–brokered agreement reached by the two leaders last month, Israel is to withdraw from those areas in three stages, beginning March 1. But Israeli officials denied any maps were presented.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Monday, Feb. 10

Discussion — "Freedom of Expression Over the Internet," a talk by Dick Freije, will be held at 5 p.m. in Dwight 101, Mount Holyoke College. Sponsored by the Computer Science Club at MHC.

Meeting — UVC–TV 19 will host its first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in their studio located at 216 Student Union Building. All members are asked to attend and new members are always welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Italian Club will be having an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. in 301 Herter Hall. All are welcome. For more info, call Bill Cava at 585–7806.

Music — Special guests on the Neat–o Punk Rock Show: Just About Done. Listen to 91.1 WMUA from midnight – 3 a.m.

Tuesday, Feb. 11

Meeting — Students Helping Area Reach–Out Efforts (SHARE) is having its first general meeting of the semester at 6:30 p.m. outside of 504 Goodell Library. Free pizza.

Workshop — A Money Management & Financial Aid workshop will be offered by the Learning Support Services from 3–4 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545–5334 to register.

Wednesday, Feb. 12

Fair — The ALANA Career Fair, "A World of Opportunities at Your Doorstep," will be held from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, rooms 162–176. All students are welcome to meet with prospective employers and/or inquire about Co–Op/internship/Job opportunities. For more info, contact Dianna Dunn at 545–6266.

Forum — A public forum about services for people living with HIV/ AIDS in Hampshire County, sponsored by the Hampshire County Ryan White II HIV Consortium along with their Consumer Advisory Board, will be held from 4–5 p.m. at The Depot, 125 Pleasant St., Northampton.

Music — An Improv Jam Session (invited musicians) will be held at the Blue Moon Gallery Cafe at 7 p.m. Free.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Notices

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Comedy — The UMass improv comedy show Mission Improvable will perform every Saturday in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Chemical exchange — The UMass Reuse/Exchange inventory is now available at http://www.unix.oit.umass.edu/~safety/rex1.html. The items on this list are available free of charge and will be delivered on a first–come, first–served basis. Call 545–2682 for more info.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Karate — The UMass Shotoran Karate Club is now accepting new members. No prior experience necessary. Come watch and join our daily training in a traditional Japanese martial art. For more info, contact Loukia at 549–8058 or Ian at 549–5485.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in South Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617)641–2303.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will hold free public planatarium shows at 4 p.m. every Saturday in February at Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. Appropriate for all ages. Dates: Feb. 15 and 22. For information, call Tom Whitney at 256–6234.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full scedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Outdoor program — Women Exploring the Outdoors will be conducting a series of outdoor adventure programs for women who are survivors of abuse. The focus of these day trips is to provide a comfortable environment within which women can increase their self–confidence, establish safe boundaries and experience their strength in the company of other survivors. All ages, abilities and levels of experience are welcome. Programs scheduled are: A Day Hike in the Pioneer Valley on Sunday, April 13, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $20; and Low and High Ropes Course on Sunday, May 4, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $50. The cost for all three programs is $85. For more information, contact Adventures Unlimited at (413)774–3131x293.

Special Olympics — The North Valley Area Special Olympics is actively seeking special athletes for its spring sports teams. Athletes interested in candlepin bowling or basketball should contact the area office at (413)584–9377. There are roster positions available for special athletes ages seven and up. Newcomers are strongly encouraged to join, and parents are invited to call with any questions.

Support group — A Women in Relationships Therapy Group, an ongoing therapy and support group for women who want to improve difficult relationships with friends, parents, children and colleagues, lovers or partners, led by Rebecca Reid, will meet Mondays from 7:30–9 p.m. in Amherst. Sliding scale fee. For information call 253–5494.

Volunteer work — Womanshelter/Companeras, serving the greater Holyoke, Chicopee area needs volunteers to help battered women and their children begin to live lives free of violence. If you are interested in answering the hotline, advocacy, fundraising, working with teens, or our Legal Emergency Assistance program, call Edith Jennings, Monday–Friday, 8 a.m.–4 p.m. at (413) 538–9717.

Volunteer work — The Family & Youth Mediation Program of the Center for Human Development (CHD) is offering a 36 hour training for volunteer community mediators. The only cost to those accepted for training is a commitment to mediate a minimum of one case per month for one year for the program. Training will run several week nights and two consecutive weekends starting April 7. Those interested should contact Kathy Hall or Andrea Raphael at (413)733–6624 for an application as soon as possible. Deadline for application is February 15.

■ parking

continued from page 1

The board consists of 21 members, all from various ends of the University community, who together serve the vice chancellor in advisory roles recommending policy to be put forward.

Members of this board include undergraduate and graduate students, faculty, staff, parking and transit managers and the chair, Bill Rose, the associate vice chancellor for facilities and campus services.

In the first phase of its task, the board discussed, without getting into the financial matters, what the issues were, and how the present situation might be modified to better suit the needs of the community.

The board came up with a list of topics which would have to be addressed. Among the items were the parking system in general, revenue uses and sources, facilities access and the enforcement of the parking system.

These issues, when viewed in conjunction with established guiding principles — which include being fair and reasonable and being fiscally and administratively responsible — provided a framework for further discussions on the situation of parking.

PTAB's findings

After a series of discussions, PTAB came to a number of conclusions regarding the state of parking.

In evaluating the lot designation system, the color–coded system of parking distribution, the board found that the system compared favorably with others investigated and thus recommended that the system remain unchanged.

The system allows faculty and staff members to park in red lots; faculty staff and graduate students to park in blue lots; faculty, staff, graduate students and commuting students to park in green lots; and any University community member to park in purple and yellow lots.

Along with maintaining the current system, the board recommended that the designation of a few lots be changed. They recommend that lots 21 and 40 be redesignated from blue to red, and that lots 24 and 29 be changed from red to blue.

In addition, the board recommended adopting a "one color-one price" system that would ensure each holder of a colored permit would pay the same price for it — a system not currently employed — and expanding the campus shuttle system so that rides to distant parking areas would come more often.

PTAB also recommended that parking fines continue to be put toward the scholarship fund.

Parking fee increases

As a method of bringing parking services up to current standards, the board unanimously decided to increase revenue generation through an across–the–board increase in parking prices.

"It's a mathematical problem to figure out what you feel you have to do to maintain the system," Page said.

The increases include parking permits, garage parking, metered parking and assessments.

Many students and staff members are asking why the money is coming from their pockets, instead of money allocated by the state for use on deferred maintenance projects.

"This is a public institution, there should be public parking," Riley said.

On the prospect of using public funds, Page said, "We'd use those if we could, but other critical issues would not get done."

Page noted that there was a classic conflict between taxing the user or getting resources from everyone's sources, saying that it is a delicate issue, but that they thought their solution was "the best course of action."

"If people don't want to pay more for their parking, there exists the option of moving or switching lots so that prices will go down, and they can use the enhanced shuttle busses," Page said. "In a perfect world, we wouldn't have to charge anyone for parking."

A student–labor coalition

The Student–Labor Coalition Against the Parking Increase," which includes five on campus unions, has scheduled a rally against the parking fee increase at noon on Feb. 26 in the Student Union Ballroom.

Riley said the unions hope all employers, union and non– union, as well as students, will participate in the rally.

Social and economic justice for students, faculty, and lower–paid employees on campus is a goal of the rally, according to Riley.

"There is a need for parking to be taken care of. We don't dispute the need. We dispute where they're going for the money," Riley said.

Charlotte Coates, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 1776 (AFSCME), also agreed that money is needed for parking improvements, but it needs to be budgeted.

"Overall, the parking needs to be budgeted like all other campus needs so middle class families can send their children here or go here themselves," Coates said.

Coates also felt that, so far, students and staff have been very involved in organizing against the increase in parking fees.

"There comes a time when people have to say 'enough' and I think that's where they are," Coates said.

The increase is being considered by the unions as a pay cut which must be negotiated at the bargaining table.

"The majority of people this [fee increase] affects truly can't afford it," Coates said.

The Student–Labor Coalition Against the Parking Fee Increase is vocal about not disputing the need to "generate revenue for current and future upkeep of the parking system," according to a group statement. The disagreement lies in forcing students and staff to be the source of that revenue.

Page, however, said the amount of opposition was a shock to him.

"I think that it's surprising, given what I thought was a compelling and rational case, that there would be more understanding," Page said.

UMass among its peers

Of a sampling of similarly sized and structured universities, UMass would still compare favorably with other institutions after the proposed increase.

The University of Kansas, which has roughly the same amount of undergraduate students and graduate students as Massachusetts, charges its students an average of $50 per year parking fee.

At the University of California at Irvine, students pay $324 per year.

However, one point of comparison comes from within the UMass system. Critics of the parking system bring up the fact that students on the Lowell and Dartmouth campuses do not have to pay any parking fees.

Page explained that the situation at this University is quite different from the ones at Lowell and Dartmouth, in that the geography and size of the others are not comparable with Amherst.

Page said when people tell him that the faculty at Amherst College do not have to pay for their parking, he reminds them how much the students at that college have to pay, how much larger their endowments are and how wealthy the financial resources at their disposal are.

Some questions remain

A common question posed to the administration is where is the money going to go, and if it is needed for construction and maintenance, why isn't the money coming out of capital costs?

"I'd like to see an accounting of where the money comes from and where it goes, and how much goes towards enforcement," D'Errico said. "These are questions that deserve an answer."

Sandra Anderson, director of Campus Services, said that benefits of the new system include improvements from electronic gating to a heeled–up parking shuttle system. "We're going to have more money for gating," Anderson said. That keeps violators out... also enhanced shuttle service. The big one is improved safety."

Whether the proposed fees will take effect will ultimately come down to the Board of Trustees, and given the vocal opposition to the plan, there will be no easy answer.

ANNA FEDER/ COLLEGIAN

The circus comes to town

Kinko Bindlestiff (above) spun a plate and Philomena Bindlestiff (below) swallowed fire to promote their anarchist beliefs at the Raven Bookstore in Northampton Saturday night.

CLIMB HIGH FAST AS AN AIR FORCE OFFICER.

Bring your college degree to the Air Force. Then find out if you qualify for Officer Training School. You can become a commissioned Air Force officer following successful completion of Officer Training School. From the start, you'll enjoy great pay, complete medical and dental care and 30 days of vacation with pay per year. And as an Air Force officer, you can enjoy professional growth and management opportunities. Learn what it takes to qualify. Call

AIR FORCE OPPORTUNITIES
TOLL FREE
1-800-423-USAF

AIR FORCE

STUDENT SPEAKER
UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT

Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as Student Commencement Speaker.

Who is Eligible:	Graduating Amherst campus seniors (Class of 1997).
Subject Matter:	Substance should concern higher education and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Format:	Submit up to three word-processed or typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Selection Process:	Authors' names will be deleted (by a non-voting staff person) after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. 3-5 individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 12, 1997, 4:30 p.m.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

Holocaust film discussed at Hillel

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Yesterday at the Hillel House, several people screened To Bear Witness, a movie about Holocaust survivors and concentration camp liberators. The film was followed by a discussion about the Holocaust.

The screening and discussion was the first meeting of Hillel's Holocaust Commemorative Committee.

The hour–long film from 1981 about the survivors and liberators from Europe and North America also touched upon the establishment of the Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C.

The story of liberators and survivors

The film opened with news reel footage glamorizing U.S. victories in Germany at the close of World War II. It then switched to silent footage of prisoners staring blankly while soldiers liberated the camps.

Both survivors and liberators were interviewed including Ellie Wiesel, a Nobel Laureate. "I remember their eyes when they came to liberate us from Buchenwald," he said of the soldiers who emancipated the camps.

After opening with Wiesel and the news reel footage, the film discussed the Warsaw Ghetto and Jewish Resistance. Footage of the suffering and destruction of the ghetto was punctuated with comments from survivors.

"Your mind doesn't work," said one Warsaw Ghetto survivor. "All you can think about is food."

Footage of starving children was displayed as the woman spoke.

Alexander Donat, a Jewish resistance fighter, recalled the Nazis attack on the Warsaw Ghetto. The Germans set it aflame while Jews tried to defend themselves with pistols and crude bombs against the "well equipped Nazis."

The film segued from Ghetto Resistance to the Partisan movement during the war. Partisans were resistance fighters who conducted a guerilla war against the Nazis and lived in the woods of Europe, explained the film's narrator. Jews who escaped the ghettos or even the camps, often joined the movement.

"It was a choice between dying on your knees, or dying standing," said Miles Lerman, a Jewish Partisan.

From resistance in the outside world, like the efforts of Danes who smuggled over 90 percent of their country's Jews to safety, to the resistance in the camps, the film covered many aspects of the Holocaust.

The film included discussion about Allied knowledge of the camps — and their inactivity. The film cited the story of a Pole who risked his life to personally deliver the story of the camps to President Franklin Roosevelt.

The film also featured a section about the establishment of the Jewish Brigade in the United Kingdom's Army. The Brigade was primarily composed of Jews from British occupied Palestine.

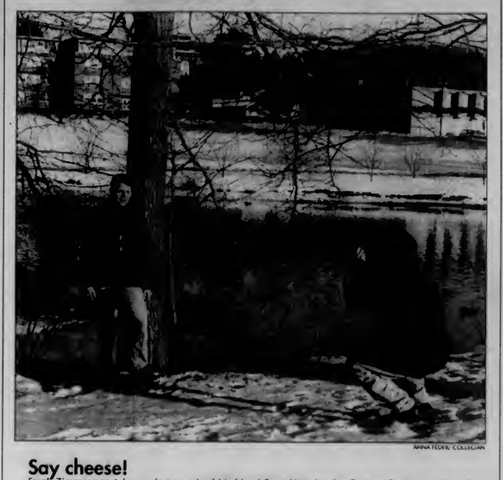
Witness concluded with Wiesel imploring future generations to never forget the atrocities committed against humanity, and the murder of 12 million people.

Discussing the Holocaust

After the film ended, Josh Grey, a senior history major and the chair of the committee, moderated a discussion about the Holocaust.

Students talked about why they came to the meeting. Some came because family died in the Holocaust, or fought in the war. Others, however, wanted to understand the Holocaust so they could refute revisionists.

Grey explained his view that many revisionists are uneducated and often anti–Semites because they usually focus on the six million Jews who died, and ignore the other six million non–Jewish victims.



The discussion on revisionism eventually led to a talk about books by Chris Browning and Daniel Goldhagen.

Browning's books argue that Germans were under extraordinary circumstance which led to the Holocaust, Grey said.

Goldhaugen's more controversial book, Hitler's Willing Executioners, suggests that Germans are inherently anti–Semitic, so they were willing to commit to Hitler's 'Final Solution,' Grey said.

After discussing the implications of the two works, Grey concluded the discussion by inviting students to join the Holocaust Commemorative Committee.

Students who missed yesterday's meeting but are interested in joining the committee can attend the next one on Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House.

ANNA FEDER/ COLLEGIAN

Say cheese!

Frank Zimmerman takes a photograph of his friend Peter Vogt by the Campus Pond yesterday afternoon.

■ program

continued from page 1

staffing so we have a tight shoestring, yet active staff," Patterson said.

Ferguson hopes to extend this teaching faculty in time, which may include some of the speakers of the graduate seminars, and would also like to develop an exchange program for the faculty as well.

There are plans as well to extend the program to the Five College community, Ferguson said.

"I definitely want to reach out and include the whole Five College community because there are many qualified women outside of UMass, and it's just a matter of paperwork," she said.

If the program succeeds the department will work towards developing a masters program in women's studies. Ferguson explained the need to have patience, as past attempts have pointed out the need to start slow.

"We need to start with UMass as a base to better work with building a Five College PHD," Ferguson said.

"Although we've got a limited outreach we are working with the graduate school over the Internet now and things have been successful so far," Patterson said.

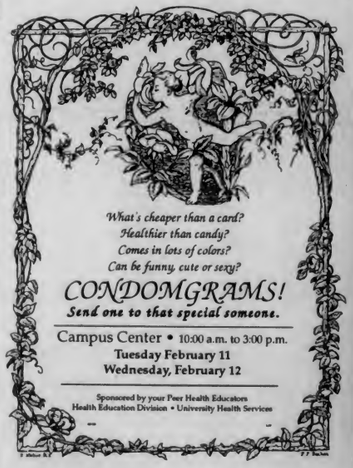
The proseminar lecture series will begin with its first speaker Carmen Diana Deere, a UMass professor of economics, on Feb. 12 at 3:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 804. Deere's lecture is entitled "Rural Women in the Latin American Neo–Liberal Counter–Reforms."

DESIGN INVENT CREATE

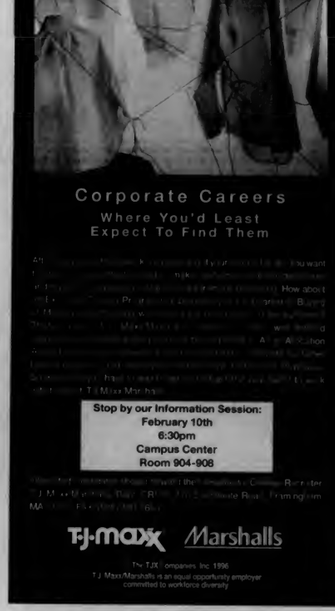
Use your EDUCATION in ways you never thought possible. DESIGN a new software program. MARKET the next remote access product. CREATE products that fit in the palm of your hand. U.S. Robotics gives entry-level sales professionals MEANINGFUL experience. (You may be new, but your VALUABLE contributions are encouraged, and expected.)

U.S. Robotics is the LEADER in information ACCESS. We make PRODUCTS that connect people with INFORMATION — anytime, anywhere. We hire SALES PEOPLE — with DEGREES in marketing, business, sciences and liberal arts.

Now that you know more about US, we'd like to know more about YOU.



Come see us at the
Career Fair
February 12



If you are unable to stop by, send your resume to: U.S. Robotics, College Relations, 7770 N. Frontage Rd., Skokie, IL 60077, or e-mail: resumes@usr.com We are an equal OPPORTUNITY employer m/f/d/v.

There are NO limits.

U.S.Robotics
The Intelligent Choice in Information Access

HTTP://WWW.USR.COM

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA • 253-3539
!! TREADMILLS !!

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Adorable Bouquet Florists
Order Early
120 N. Main St., Belchertown
323-8291
Valentines Day
Roses Start at $39.99
Major Credit Cards Accepted

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Black History Month

The following is a fourth part of a series dedicated to Black History Month that will run throughout the month of February on this page.

Race and the O.J. Simpson case

David G. DuBois

Despite the unanimous decision of the jury in the criminal trial, and for many white Americans because of it, there continues to be debate among blacks and whites throughout America over whether O.J. Simpson committed the murders. But what should really concern Americans, and particularly black Americans, is the racist and sexist viciousness in reaction to the criminal trial's "not guilty" verdict, openly expressed in press, TV and radio commentary at the time, and continuing up to this writing, condemning the predominantly black and female jury of 12 (including three non–blacks and two men). That commentary reflected what most white Americans felt and feel, but only express among themselves: the jury's intellectual inability to deal with the scientific evidence provided by the prosecution, together with its assumed pro–black, anti–white bias and "feminine emotionalism."

However, few commentators, white or black, want to deal with the extent of white male fear of black male retaliation for the rape and ravaging with impunity of black women by white men since the days of slavery, a hidden truth lurking in the background of the O.J. Simpson drama. On the national, white, underground information network the story goes: "If, before the whole world, black O.J. Simpson can marry a white woman, ravage that white woman and then toss that white woman aside for other white women, and get away with it, every black male in America will consider that road of retaliation, and many will take it."

This explains America's obsession with the continuing O.J. Simpson drama. This is the motivation behind the civil case in which the families of the murdered victims, and their supporters, thwarted in their attempt to have O.J. Simpson convicted in the criminal trial, and having lost their bid to have his children taken away from him, intend to ruin him financially. At the same time they want to discourage other blacks from following in O.J.'s footsteps.

The unspoken and, in America, the unspeakable truth about the O.J. Simpson drama is the white male guilt it engenders for the wholesale violation of black women by white men during the days of slavery and throughout much of America to this day. To know just how "wholesale," count the number of "cafe–au–lait" African–Americans you know or have seen on television or in films, beginning with O.J. Simpson and his family. Nearly a century ago, in 1906, sociologist, historian and activist W.E.B. Du Bois wrote that of the nearly 10 million blacks as recorded by the U.S. Census Bureau, he believed through study and wide observation that nearly one–third had "recognizable traces of white blood."

The number of indigenous U.S. families with interracial (i.e. black/white) sexual intimacies and issue–producing histories, has never been ascertained. But its prevalence is undeniable, particularly throughout the southern states, and nationwide as well. In colonial times before the creation of the nation, white indentured servants and black slaves and free black persons often married and created families until the practice was outlawed, allegedly because of the difficulty of determining the legal rights of the offspring.

With the creation of the nation, under slavery and beyond, the overwhelming number of cases of such relationships were between white males by coercion and threat and black women in no position to resist. Many such relationships were without overt coercion or threat but were consensual only in the sense that there was no overt resistance by the black woman. In some sections of the south, notably in Louisiana, well–to–do white males openly kept black and mulatto (mixed black and white) mistresses, and in some cases, two distinct families — one white, one mulatto. Then there were those relationships between marauding, reckless, devil–may–care white males and "loose" black women or black and mulatto prostitutes. The majority of today's African–Americans are the progeny of these several different kinds of interracial, intimate relationships.

The much smaller number of relationships between black men and white women were most often solicited surreptitiously by white women, fearful lest their men learn of the liaison. This practice, not uncommon throughout the nation, in the south was the justification for a wave of lynch mob murders of black males, most often falsely accused of rape of white women, that swept the nation from the 1890s through the 1950s. With the threat of a rape charge being made by a rejected white woman hanging over his head, the black male often reluctantly submitted to the solicitation. The issue of such liaisons almost always resulted in tragic consequences for both the mother and child. The true tragedies, however, were those of interracial relationships that dared not reveal a mutual respect and love to a condemning society ruled by racism, of which there must have been many over the nearly 400 years of this country's existence.

It is the image of the black male with the white female that calls up these memories among white males today; memories of the freedom their fathers and their father's fathers had with black women from the time the first 20 Africans were landed at Virginia from a Dutch warship in 1619. But today those memories are accompanied by the image of the big, bad, angry, threatening, black male, typified at its most menacing in the black garbed, gun–toting Black Panther Party member of the 1960s, that the media, television and Hollywood films consistently portray. The objective is to associate street crime in America exclusively with black and brown (Latino) males. That image terrifies white males who have for years feared black male retaliation for their illicit behavior with black women.

O.J. Simpson's mistake was the flair with which he lived his life with Nicole Brown in southern California. This together with his natural good looks, his wealth and his popularity made it appear to many white males of undistinguished achievement that he was flaunting his ravaged white conquest in their collective face as a kind of retaliation. In Los Angeles, this media–hyped behavior surely engendered murderous rage within a law enforcement community whose hatred for black and brown Americans is demonstrated daily in South Central Los Angeles, and has been revealed to the world by the video–taped police beating of black motorist Rodney King and the taped racist and sexist venom of the prosecution's chief witness in the Simpson trial, the former Los Angeles policeman, Mark Fuhrman.

The O.J. Simpson drama forces Americans, black and white, to confront their far more numerous and complex "secrets and lies" about race and sex than the brilliantly realized characters of the fine British film of that title on the same subject could ever imagine. This explains its continuing fascination for the nation.

David G. Du Bois is a visiting professor in the journalism and Afro–American Studies departments.

You deserve a break today

Daniel Bodah

The trial is over and the judge is now contemplating his decision. We can only wait and see whether the justice served is cooked to perfection, or filled with grittle and warmed beneath a heat light. Welcome to the saga of the McLibel Trial.

Sloppy and fast, while they may characterize McDonald's food, don't seem like appropriate words to describe this spectacle of law. The McLibel Trial is the longest trial ever in British history, having lasted two and a half years. The judge is not expected to deliver his verdict until May in this saga that began nearly seven years ago.

In 1990, London Greenpeace (a group independent of the international environmental group Greenpeace) was distributing a six–page flyer in front of the fast food giant's stores. In it, they slammed McDonald's for promoting deforestation of rainforests, mistreating employees and knowingly pushing an unhealthy diet.

Many of us won't be phased by these accusations — they fit right in with what we expect to be true of the often– ridiculed company. For some strange reason, however, McDonald's felt it was a chance to vindicate themselves in the eyes of the public. Instead, when McDonald's U.K. took five members of London Greenpeace to court for libel, our negative suspicions had a chance to be confirmed.

British libel laws don't mess around with any of this new– fangled "innocent until proven guilty" junk. Instead, anyone accused of libel must provide proof to back up all allegedly false statements they've made. It's no wonder that, faced with an apparently hopeless court battle against one of the very icons of capitalism, three of the five activists chose to make public apologies and bail out.

David Morris and Helen Steel decided they didn't have anything to lose, though, so they fought the case all the way. While learning to be their own defenders, they also succeeded in digging up and legally documenting a mountain of dirt on the hamburger–slinging bad guys.

One hundred and eighty witnesses took time to contribute to this mammoth besmirchment of the company's image, described by one commentator as the best free entertainment in London. Information from the trial has contributed to a world wide web site archiving facts on the food chain (McSpotlight, http://www.envirolink.org/mcspotlight) and perhaps as many as two million more copies of the original flyer have been distributed since the case went to court.

The trial has truly been a case for our times. In the spirit of postmodernism, Ronald McDonald himself even took the stand. Actor Geoffrey Guiliano, who portrayed Ronald in the 1980s, had these disillusioning words to go on the court record. "I brainwashed youngsters into doing wrong... I want to say sorry to children everywhere for selling out to concerns who make millions by murdering animals."

Were he still alive, George Orwell himself might be impressed by the doublespeaking skills McDonald's executives displayed while testifying. McDonald's U.K. president Paul Preston denied the chain used Ronald McDonald to sell food to kids, instead declaring that Ronald promoted the "McDonald's experience." A vice president of marketing declared "that Coca–Cola, since it provides water, can be part of a balanced diet. While maintaining that McDonald's did not fight worker unionization, the vice president admitted that employees involved in any efforts to unionize would be fired for "gross misconduct."

Just after the one–year mark in the trial, McDonald's approached Steel and Morris in an attempt to settle out of court. The "McLibel Two" had some stern conditions, however, and McDonald's backed out. The case has definitely damaged their reputation, and the company has decided to contain the injury by making it seem as if this is strictly a McDonald's U.K. issue. We're not that dumb though, are we? Besides, evidence that arose in the trial implicates McDonald's U.S. as well.

So no matter what the judge's decision, the trial has been a success for the McLibel Two — and for the rest of us.

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

The student trustee speaks out

To the editor:

I'd like to clarify my stance in relation to the Board of Trustees vote on 1997–1998 Tuition and Fee rates. On Feb. 5, the UMass Board of Trustees voted to decrease the maximum level of mandatory tuition and fees for UMass–Amherst by a minimum of $81. The cost reduction vote came before the Board as a direct result of my questioning the stability of fees in November. According to the minutes of the Administration and Finance committee meeting, I "reminded the president and the Board that fees are more than half the cost of attending UMass. This was [then, and still is now,] unacceptable. The president in response stated that he had discussed with the chancellors the importance of keeping student fees stable."

On Feb. 5, President Bulger took a good first step towards fulfilling his word. In his announcement of the fee rates, the president said, "Cost should not be a barrier to access the education of the University." I commended the president for taking this initiative, but I also pointed out that this was a first step. UMass–Amherst is still the fourth most expensive public flagship institution in the nation. Our fees have made us inaccessible for many students to attend the University. Indeed it is up to us as students to advocate for greater opportunity at this university.

As your Trustee, I have worked tirelessly to bring the educational opportunity to the students. In concert with other student leaders from across the University, including John Okray, I have been working on rolling the curriculum fee into tuition. Those students who receive tuition waivers would see their bills reduced by over $2000 per year. Benefactors of such a plan include dependents of state employees, GI's and thousands of others state wide. Students working together can make these changes happen. I have a very strong relationship with the student trustees from Dartmouth, Lowell and the Medical Center.

Unfortunately John Okray's comments in the Feb. 6 edition of the Collegian only serve to alienate his campus from the rest of the University system. Breaking line with the rest of the student trustees, the Boston student leaders have jeopardized the entire university's student interests. Unlike John Okray who is seeking a seat on the Board of Higher Education, my "hidden agenda" for this semester is to graduate. Other students and other trustees respect my presence and impact on the Board. I will not sacrifice the status of Amherst students' voice to appease rogue politicians who do not listen to the full context of my message.

Representing the students of the University of Massachusetts–Amherst is my extreme privilege. I cherish the responsibility, and I will talk with everyone who has any questions or comments on my tenure on the Board.

Sean M. Carter
Student Trustee

Administrator should be commended

To the editor:

For the past three years, I have been an active member of the undergraduate Student Government Association (SGA) and have worked with my fellow students to better student life on campus. Too often, the efforts of SGA members are disregarded due to bureaucratic administrators who choose to ignore the voice of the undergraduate governing body. Thus, when an administrator is responsive to the requests of students, they are deserving of recognition.

Last semester, when the Off Campus Meal Plan (OCMP) was removed from the Top of the Campus restaurant, many students expressed the desire to have the program returned. In fact, the undergraduate Student Senate unanimously passed a resolution explicitly stating this sentiment.

When I returned to campus this spring and found that the OCMP had not been returned to the Top of the Campus, I contacted Roberta Potter, an administrator in the Campus Center Food Services Office. After looking into this matter and discovering that the motion had not been forwarded through the appropriate channels, Ms. Potter took the necessary steps to ensure that the plan be returned to the Top of the Campus restaurant.

Roberta Potter should be commended for going out of her way to accommodate students. It is administrators like her that allow the SGA to act on behalf of students and better the campus community.

Bill Ramsey
Amherst

Social Security clarified

To the editor:

I was glad to see the issue of Social Security addressed in a recent editorial by Sam McAfee (Feb. 5). This is an extremely important issue facing our country and especially our generation. The pay as you go system currently in place is fundamentally flawed in that it assumes that there will be a sufficient number of wage earners paying into the system at any given time to support these collecting benefits. The pending crisis (estimates I've read indicate the fund will be bankrupt sometime between 2020 and 2030) involving the fund's solvency highlights the irrational way in which the fund was designed.

Unfortunately, about half–way through Mr. McAfee's commentary, the issue was lost as he veered into an uninformed, rhetorical lashing of corporate America and U.S. foreign policy. He never returned to the issue nor did he offer any potential solutions, leaving me to believe that his solution would be not to deal with the problem in any way. This is the easiest thing to do, but we will eventually get screwed.

The reason it has been suggested that the money currently deducted from our paychecks as "social security" be diverted into the stock markets is because that is where, over a lifetime, one could historically expect to maximize the return on their investment. If such deductions are placed in an individual's own account, as opposed to going into some general fund, then it also assures that changes in the nation's population over time will not have a disastrous and disparate impact on one segment of our population.

If each individual were able to chose his or her own licensed broker, then the "enormous" commissions envisioned by Mr. McAfee for a "larger brokerage house" would never materialize. In fact, as people would have freedom to choose among the thousands of existing brokers and shop around, then commissions may actually come down. We have already seen drastic reductions in brokerage commissions as more and more people enter the stock market with investments in IRAs, 401Ks and other private retirement accounts.

It's almost humorous that Mr. McAfee states that the stock market is one of the least stable places to invest your money, in an article precipitated by the fact that the well into which we've been dumping social security taxes will dry up long before we ever go to make a withdrawal.

I believe we are faced with the decision of continuing to give our retirement money to the government or investing it in the capital markets. On one side is the federal government which has continuously demonstrated an ineptitude for financial management, as demonstrated by the design of the current social security system and the size of our national debt. On the other side is a sophisticated financial infrastructure with significant expertise in matching investors' desired risk levels and excess money with talented, hardworking businessmen and businesswomen who have, throughout the long–run history of the stock market, skillfully used these investments to create value for themselves, shareholders and society. Tough choice? Not for me.

Paul Donnelly
Amherst

You all should understand

To the editor:

In response to Luke Meredith's "Hickbonics & more," [article] on Feb. 5, I would just like to inform him that the word "y'all" is, in fact, correct English. Yes, as Redneck as it may sound, the word "y'all" is simply the contracted form of "you–all." My roommate owns two dictionaries (one published in 1961, the other in 1980), so I looked the word "you–all" up. The '61 dictionary gave the example sentence of, "Down here we can always spot Yankees by the way they you–all in the singular" (Arthur Gordon). The '80s dictionary also combined the word "you–all," described as "Southern U.S. informal." So if the contraction "y'all" is essentially "you–all," and the word is used in the North and South, who's the Redneck: me or you? Furthermore, I do not believe that Ebonics is a "good idea." Hindering already underprivileged, inner–city children with incorrect grammar sounds like a really stupid idea to me. Before you write about Ebonics (or Hickbonics for that matter), perhaps you should analyze and dissect words like "y'all" before you dismiss them as "hillbilly."

By the way, Bon Jovi sucks hard. And hey, maybe you and Dennis Rodman are the stupidest men alive!

Kerby Langford
Amherst

Send your Letters to the Editor to:
113 Campus Center Basement, UMass — Amherst

Arts & Living

Monday, February 10, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

The Figgs are back. COURTESY CAPITOL RECORDS

Figgs get macho at Pearl St.

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

THE FIGGS
Pearl Street
Feb. 6

NORTHAMPTON — Last Thursday night about 40 people had the rare privilege of seeing a totally entertaining rock show completely devoid of theatrics and gimmicks. Such often ignored necessities like solid, hook–filled songs and dynamic band interplay are what make Saratoga Springs, N.Y.'s The Figgs one of the few consistently great live bands in clubland.

Young, loud and in dire need of a Kleenex, The Figgs have been perfecting their craft for a decade. All in their mid–20s, the band was first inspired and influenced by everyone from Chuck Berry up through the SST stable of Husker Du, the Minutemen and the Meat Puppets. With elements of the Clash, Replacements and Velvet Underground also audible, the band have tweaked their roots to create their own distinctive sound.

The Figgs' trademark, though, is the three–headed monster made up of guitarists Mike Gent and Guy Lyons and bassist Pete Donnely. All three sing, alternating the lead vocals and utilizing the harmonies to create a raucous, ragged blend more reminiscent of Mick, Keith and Ron rather than John, Paul and George. The hit–or–miss vocal approach, though, is the perfect compliment to the music underneath.

Years of incessant touring and recording have transformed the Figgs into a rock n' roll juggernaut. The bedrock of the band's sound is its twin guitar assault. Gent and Lyons trade lead and rhythm parts, often in the same song, to create a mesh of melodic interplay and barre–chorded power. Donnely's basswork is loose and lively, and drummer Pete Hayes is solid and unpretentious, propelling the music with a mix of subtle fills and all–out bashing.

At Pearl St., the band took the somewhat unorthodox approach of ignoring most of their previously released work in favor of trying out material for their next album. Their three singles (on Absolute A Go–Go and Chunk Records) and first full–length album, 1994's Lo–Fi At Society High, were almost completely unrepresented. Instead, the bulk of the material was from last year's criminally ignored Banda Macho LP and their as–yet–to–be–recorded follow–up. Such tracks as "FTMU," "Choker" and "Let's Go Pop" were crowd favorites, and the band played with extremes, vacillating between the metallic "Supreme Fashion" and the quasi–ballad "Reject" with equal dexterity.

The small size of the crowd, though, is indicative of the Figgs' present status. Their previous label, Capitol Records, let Banda Macho sink without a trace and promptly dropped the band. Without record company support, the Figgs have been taking the grass–roots approach of touring, both alone and as a backing band for hero Graham Parker. As evidenced by the show Thursday night, though, the Figgs' fortunes will rise again. You can't keep a band this good down.

Creatures not quite as fierce as fish

Cast of A Fish Called Wanda attempts to recreate chemistry

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

FIERCE CREATURES
Directed by Fred Schepisi and Robert Young with Jamie Lee Curtis, Kevin Kline, John Cleese
Playing at Hampshire Six Theatres

There are inevitable problems with sequels, especially sequels that stem from successful, popular films. It is hard enough to entertain a large number of people for two hours, never mind ask for them to like it enough to come back for more.

The cast of Fierce Creatures seems to think that they have circumvented this problem. Rather than try to duplicate the success of the '88 hit A Fish Called Wanda, John Cleese, Jamie Lee Curtis, Kevin Kline and Michael Palin have spawned some half–breed film they have called an "equel," using the same actors with original characters.

However arduously the film has been constructed to avoid comparisons, it is inevitable. Whatever positive things Fierce Creatures accomplishes, it is doomed to hide in the shadow of it's successor's success.

To it's credit, Fierce Creatures knows where to play on A Fish Called Wanda's strong points. Jamie Lee Curtis and Kevin Kline both radiate as the transplanted Americans in a failing zoo in Great Britain. Curtis seems to have sold something to the devil, and will shine with the charm (and body) of an 18–year–old as she eases gracefully into her 40s.

Kevin Kline, after winning an Academy Award for A Fish Called Wanda's manic assassin Otto, is still the funniest part of the film. As a fitfully unlucky businessman, he can still ham it up above and beyond his cast members, with delightful results.

The legend of Fierce Creatures actually precedes the film. As many horror stories of film productions make their way into the media, it's rare that the final product is ever visibly affected — the fact that the film's ending tested poorly and was reshot doesn't seem to affect the narrative.

What does effect the film is the uneven sense that the story takes in terms of humor. It's an uneven sense that reflects Schepisi's film career, from bizarre flops like Mr. Baseball to wonderful commercial failures like Six Degrees of Separation. Some of the film's scenes just aren't funny and they tend to overpower the far too infrequent scenes which are riotous. For example, repeated scenes of Cleese's nervous malapropisms run on too long, especially when they aren't very funny to begin with.

If there is one person who gets the proverbial "short end of the stick" with Fierce Creatures, it's Michael Palin. His character is nothing more than a glorified extra who sputters random bits of academic wisdom. Unfortunately, even the few scenes he is featured in aren't enough to make us wish there were more of him. C+

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS
Fierce Creatures' Jamie Lee Curtis...

COURTESY OF ASSOCIATED PRESS
... and John Cleese.

MANDATORY ARTS & LIVING STAFF MEETING

Hey, past and present Arts writers — there's a staff meeting at the Collegian office (113 Campus Center) this Wednesday at 5:30 p.m. Old and new are welcome to attend. Interested in writing? Come on down!

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS

MATHEMATICS

DATE: TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1997
TIME: 6:00 P.M.
LOCATION: GRADUATE RESEARCH TOWER, ROOM 1634

SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

ALUMNI PANELISTS:

EILEEN ADAMS '88	DATA ANALYST - SOFTWARE ENGINEER LINCOLN LABORATORY LEXINGTON, MA
DARYL MILLER '88	FINANCIAL CONSULTANT SMITH BARNEY BOSTON, MA
NANCY SINCLAIR '90	COMPUTER SYSTEMS CONSULTANT THE REGISTRY, INC BOSTON, MA

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

Right Here Right Now!

The perfect opportunity has arrived for you to begin a career unparalleled by most other industries!

We're Ames. One of the dominant discount store chains in America, with more than $2 billion in sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the Northeast. And, we've recently been named the Connecticut Retail Merchants Association Retailer of the Year!

Assistant Buyer Training Program

Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where farsightedness and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 7–week training program for you, that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on–the–job training with a successful Buyer.

And because we're so dedicated to this program and your success, senior–level management will participate in the classroom training, and experienced Buyers and Divisional Merchandise Managers will work closely with you throughout all phases of your training.

Upon successful completion of the 7–week program, you will become an Assistant Buyer. Then, you'll work alongside a Buyer, assisting in the management of a $20 to $100 million business!

As an Assistant Buyer, you will continue to participate in ongoing developmental seminars, Business Analysis Group Workshops, and other training support programs...all designed to ultimately prepare you for a career in Buying.

We're looking for dynamic, creative, success–oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills.

If that's you, please come talk to us!
We'll be participating in the Career Fair at your college on:

Wednesday, February 12th
10am - 3pm

Contact your placement office for more detailed information or to schedule an interview.

Ames

Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V

■ Hockey

continued from page 10

midway through the second period, the first two stanzas lacked the all–out title fight intensity that the third period carried. The third period proved to set a fervent tone for the entire night.

"I knew that once we got up a goal they would come at us hard and start banging," Mike Gaffney said. "You could see it getting a little hairy out there. Once the lead started changing it got kind of hectic. When it was tied it was calm, but when you're fighting for the lead, you mix it up."

UMass took a 3–2 lead 58 seconds into what would become a frenzied period, one of the best all–around efforts by both teams seen at a UMass game this season. Brad Norton fired a diagonal pass from along the boards, across the top of the crease, and right onto Chris Fawcett's tape for one of the easiest goals the junior will ever score.

Lowell answered back at 6:38 with the first of four goals that would be scored in the next 2:37. With a long pass, seemingly from the fields of Scarborough, Greg Koehler sent Shannon Basaraba in past the UMass defense. Basaraba flipped a simply unsaveable shot top corner past Regan's blocker.

The Minutemen retaliated just over a minute later when Bonneau deposited his first of two in the period, scoring from the crease on his own rebound after being fed from behind the net by Steve MacKinnon on the power play.

"You have to look at our leadership and Rob Bonneau really stepped it up in the third period," Mallen said. "[He] played tremendous hockey."

Koehler erased the UMass lead 35 seconds later, slipping a shot under Regan on a set play off a face off win by Ryan Sandholm.

Mike Gaffney gave UMass the lead for good seconds later though. The junior defenseman made a brilliant rush down the right wing, undressing a pair of Lowell defenders and faking Fillion right out of his pads to complete his masterpiece.

"That was as good a rush as I've seen by a defenseman in a long time," Mallen said.

The River Hawks flew around the UMass net from there, but Regan was up to the challenge. A Bonneau empty–netter iced UMass' Alumni Cup title defense.

While UMass used a hard–nosed third period on the road to win on Saturday night, the No. 4 Boston University Terriers used a three–goal outburst of their own to top UMass 6–3 at the William D. Mullins Center on Friday night, foiling an upset bid by the Minutemen.

Ryan Furness notched his first goal in maroon and white 2:17 into the contest, redirecting a Norton point shot 5–hole on Michel Larocque. The significance of the goal can not be undervalued, for it gave the Minutemen some added confidence which was visible until some dreadful officiating helped take it away midway through the second.

After Chris Drury scored the first of five BU power play goals on the night to tie the game, MacKinnon put UMass up 2–1 on the rebound of a Warren Norris shot after tough play by Judd Smith forced a BU turnover on a breakout. Cahill put UMass up 3–1 at 12:15 of the second and visions of an upset danced through UMass heads.

In the game, UMass penalty minutes outnumbered BU's 40 to 18, and the results were evident. Mallen's scheme of shadowing the BU wingers in the neutral zone worked perfectly during full–strength situations, but the 11 Terrier power plays decided the game. The Minutemen could handle BU five–on–five, but five–on–four proved to be a different story altogether. A gritty effort by Regan was the only thing that kept this one so close after a promising first half.

But UMass–Lowell, not BU, is what will be remembered by the Minutemen from this weekend. Some will tell you this was just the tonic the team needed.

"This is maybe the biggest win of the season," Gaffney said. "If we can carry it over for the next couple of games and into the playoffs, it was huge."

■ Alumni Cup

continued from page 10

develop his program, and then would start the rivalry with his lesser–recognized, but more–respected, cross–state adversary. His team had tough enough times in their first two campaigns in the conference, nevermind having another possible ego–breaking scenario to deal with every season.

Last year, UMass had to face a tough team which finished second in the final Hockey East standings, and eventually, went to the NCAA Tournament. Then–Lowell, and current Northeastern, coach Bruce Crowder headed the team, with Crowder going on to National Coach of the Year honors. The Riverhawks had a stellar senior class, led by forwards Jeff Daw, Brendan Concannon and Christian Sbrocca.

But with all of that to face, UMass took to the William D. Mullins Center last Feb. 10, and after four periods of action, won the shootout (5–4) on two goals by now–senior co– captain Rob Bonneau. The first time around in the Alumni Cup for the Minutemen was extremely sweet — but would a bad aftertaste evolve for this year's edition?

With the graduation of their seniors, and the departure of Crowder, it looked to be a down year for new coach Tim Whitehead's squad. Not so, and wins over nationally ranked BU and UNH have propelled them to fourth place in the HE standings (actually, third place due to Maine's ineligibility for post–season action). After a tough loss to BU, the question turned to the mental fortitude of the Minutemen.

Could UMass get off their recent conference schnide (two wins in the last nine HE games), and begin a run into March and playoff time? For the first half of the question, yes, and for the second half, the answer will be this weekend with two home games this Friday and Saturday night against Maine.

Bonneau came through again for his team, netting two goals in the third period (4 points). The defense came up into the attack, with junior Brad Norton (2 assists) beautifully setting up fellow classmate Chris Fawcett for the first of four UM goals in the third. But it was junior Mike Gaffney who scored the game winner, continuing his career year on a Bobby Orr–esque rush to put UMass up for good. "You have to look at our leadership, and Rob Bonneau really stepped it up in the third period," Mallen said. "He played tremendous, and Mike Gaffney had an unbelievable solo rush. That was as good a rush as I've seen from a defenseman in a long time."

Gaffney liked his game–winning scoring rush, but the adrenaline rush of winning suits him much, much better.

"This is the biggest win of the season," Gaffney said. "If we can carry it over the next couple of games, and carry it to the playoffs, it will be huge. Winning the Cup is big, and it was a hard win for us. We need to carry it on to next weekend [against Maine]."

JOSHUA KAHSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Mike Gaffney scores the game–winner in UMass' Alumni Cup win over UMass–Lowell Saturday.

CANON LASER COLOR COPIER
ON TRIAL AT THE C.C. PRINT SHOP

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN • NASSAU • MAZATLAN
$299
http://www.takeabreak.com
1-800-95-BREAK
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL

Spring Break Fever
we've got it...
Bahamas 7 nights land only $336
Grand Cayman 7 nights land only $394
Jamaica 7 nights land only $346
Aruba 7 nights land only $479
you catch it!
Council Travel
44 Main Street, Amherst
Tel: 413-256-1261
http://www.ciee.org/

HAIR SKIN NAILS
STYLES BY DEBORAH
•HAIRCARE •WAXING
•FACIALS •MANICURES
•PEDICURES •TANNING
•FREE HAIR & SKIN CONSULTATIONS
549-5610
65 University drive, Amherst
$5.00 OFF Consultation Style HAIRCUT Shampoo + Dry with Cheryl -Coupon expires 3/3/97
ONE FREE TANNING VISIT with Any Other Salon Service

Coming soon... CAMPUS SENDER

This Week in the Campus Center
INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND SPECIALS FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER/STUDENT UNION COMPLEX

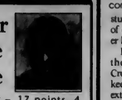
University Store
Stop by for weeky specials!
Save 20% ALL BATTERIES Eveready, Duracell, Sony, Radio Shack
UMASS BOXERS - flannel, thermal, knit cotton
Always 20% Off - NY Times Best Seller List
Save 25% In Store Poster Sale
Save 35% Pictorial Calendars
Save 50% Academic Planners

BLUEWALL
Bluewall Cafeteria & Ore Ida are pleased to introduce
BREW CITY FRIES
Beer Battered Onion Rings, French Fries, Mozzarella Sticks
Now Available from 11:30 am-9:30 pm

Valentine's Day
The University Store has a large assortment of cards and gifts for your Valentine. And if you are thinking about getting away with your Valentine, rooms are still available at the Campus Center Hotel.

Campus Center/Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS

Massachusetts 64, Rhode Island 61



Feb. 8 at the Providence Civic Center

Massachusetts (14–10, 8–3)
Clarke 1–5 1–2 3, Weeks 5–10 5–7 15, Ketner 6–10 5–7 17, Padilla 2–6 2–3 7, Travieso 4–12 3–5 14, Smith 3–3 0–0 6, Basit 1–2 0–0 2, Norville 0–0 0–0 0, Babul 0–0 0–0 0. Totals 22–48 16–24 64.

Rhode Island (13–8, 7–4)
Bakari 0–0 0–0 0, Reynolds–Dean 1–9 0–0 2, Andersen 2– 12 3–3 7, Mobley 5–10 2–2 12, Wheeler 4–9 3–4 14, Thomas 1–4 0–0 2, Arigbabu 2–4 2–3 6, King 2–3 0–1 6, Murphy 3–9 4–6 12. Totals 20–60 14–19 61.

Halftime — Tied at 31. 3–point Field Goals — Massachusetts 4 (Travieso 3), Rhode Island 7 (Wheeler 3). Rebounds — Massachusetts 30 (Weeks 11), Rhode Island 44 (Andersen 8). Assists — Massachusetts 11 (Padilla 5), Rhode Island 9 (Bakari 2, Andersen 2, Wheeler 2). Blocks — Massachusetts 6 (Ketner 4), Rhode Island 2 (Reynolds–Dean, King). Total Fouls — Massachusetts 18, Rhode Island 17. Technical Fouls — Clarke, Thomas. Attendance — 12,931.

Player of the Game

Lari Ketner – 17 points, 4 blocks

Highlights...

Things looked bleak in the opening minutes of the first half for the Massachusetts men's basketball team. But after being down by as many as 10, the Minutemen fought back to a tied score at half–time on a huge Lari Ketner dunk. Tyrone Weeks came to play in the second half, grabbing all but two of his points and rebounds in that second frame. UMass' defense did its part too, grabbing Rhode Island's inbounds pass with :01.4 on the clock to seal the game.

■ men's hoop

continued from page 10

regain possession, the Rams fouled Weeks, who made both free throws to seal the UMass win.

If many Minuteman fans thought they had seen this before, in a way they had.

"To be honest with you," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said, "they ran the same exact play that they ran at UMass that tied it at our place [before UMass won 64–60]. Mobley is a good player for them, he made the basket that put them up off the same play, so why not go back to him?

"Pius he's a Philly boy, and Philly boys are tough. They want the ball down there at the end of those games."

Things did not start out smoothly for UMass in the early going. In the first four minutes of play, the Rams came out on a 10–0 run and managed to control the lead of the game until the Minutemen went on an 11–2 run to tie it up.

With seconds remaining in the first frame, Mobley turned the ball over to Padilla, who ran the length of the court dishing it to Lari Ketner, who put down a nasty one–handed jam and got the foul from Andersen. After sinking the foul shot, UMass knotted the score at 31.

"[Ketner's dunk] was a big lift," Weeks said. "I went into the locker room and told the team, we have the momentum right now and just had to go out and carry out in the second half. We showed them in the last two minutes of the first half that we could come out and play with them, so let's keep it up in the second half and try to win the ball game."

Flint felt Ketner, whose 17 points and four blocks were both one away from tying career game highs, played up to his full potential in the win. How effective was the UMass center? Take a look at the line of URI's Andersen — seven points, eight boards on 2–for–12 shooting.

"He can do that, when he wants to," Flint said. "What people don't realize about Lari is that he's only been playing basketball for four or five years, then of those four or five years, they take one away from him. So, he's just starting to learn and get confident about being on the court. People don't realize that Donnie Carr [La Salle] and [Arthur] Yah Davis [St. Joe's] were his teammates in high school, so he didn't get the ball that much."

Saturday afternoon, however, the Weeks–Ketner frontcourt combined for 32 of the team's points.

"That was our game plan. Take our time on offense, try to get the ball down low and try to get the foul and make them try to stop us down low," UMass guard Carmelo Travieso said. "We thought that Lari would have the advantage with his size and his quickness and Tyrone would have the advantage because of his size.

"We got together in the second half and said to pound the ball down low, and they did a great job."

The best indication of how UMass pounded the Rams with its post play in the second half was Weeks. At the end of the first half, Weeks went into the locker room with just two points and two boards. In the second half, Weeks played like a man possessed, tallying 13 points and nine boards.

"In the first half, I don't know, my hands didn't want to touch the ball," Weeks said. "Every time I touched the ball, it would pop away or someone would hit it out of my hands. I just told myself in the second half, in order for this team to win, I have to go out and rebound the ball."

With UMass playing tough at crunch time, picking up final second wins against Rhode Island twice, Duquesne and getting edged out by Xavier, Flint could not wipe the grin off his face throughout the post game press conference.

"It was a hard–fought game, but it is always a hard–fought game against Rhody," Flint said. "They didn't give up, man, they battled back. We got a lead, and they battled back and back and back."

■ minutemen

continued from page 10

students are a stone's throw from areas of civilization, but in, ummm... wherever Kingston is, there's nothing.

Next, look at the cheerleaders. One of the URI cheerleaders looked like Cro–Magnon girl and was barely able to keep her head up for the length of an extended time– out cheer. Yet it was not the cheers, but the acrobatics that UMass used to put URI to shame.

When the Ram cheerers got together to toss a female cheerleader into the air, she barely got high enough to touch rim. When it was UMass' turn, the UM cheerleader could have done a few flips on the rafters she was up so high. I blinked and missed the Rhode Island girl, but I could have baked a cake and done my taxes before the cheerleader from UMass was caught.

Then, take the band — I am biased, I'll admit. My seat was all the way, and I mean the very last seat, down on press row. That meant that I could have packed my old saxophone and sat in on a few (read: two) numbers while in my seat. I was so close to the band. It seems the Rockin' Rams, or whatever they call themselves, have only had time to learn two numbers, both of which they played ad nauseam.

Now, I love the way a band adds to a game, and I love the way a band can get the crowd going. Look at the director of the UMass Hoop Band, who constantly leads cheers with his cowbell and band members backing him up.

But there was something about the Rhody band that just annoyed me. It might have been the way my hair moved because of the wind every time URI's Cymbal Boy banged those cursed metal plates together, and it might have been the fact that they had more drummers than trumpet players (i.e. I could hear feel the bass drums in my small intestines), but it was probably that whole thing with knowing only two songs.

It's been said that the University of Southern California's marching band knows only one song. I've heard the USC band at a football game before, and the rumors are true — the Marching Trojans are a one–trick pony. But the URI band is close behind, with one song that is played constantly. Emphasis on the constantly. Luckily for me that song contained lots o' bass drum and cymbal.

Look now at the UMass band. This band has got a great flair to it, the director is always into the game and it knows a heck of a lot of tunes — it even put out a CD of its stuff. They get people into the game without turning the 100 people sitting closest to it into hearing–impaired idiots (I think the people at URI were already idiots, at least the ones sitting behind me).

I guess it's all relative. The past 20 times former UMass hoop player and current Rhode Island coach Al Skinner has faced the Minutemen, he is 2–18, including Saturday.

UMass has dominated Rhode Island on the court — and off it.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Write for Collegian Sports

■ women's hoop

continued from page 10

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Freshman Allson MacFarland scored 17 points in the Minutewomen's win at Temple Friday night.

did some good things... [but] you have to give them credit. They made the shots they had to make and we didn't."

Crystal Carroll led the Minutewomen with 15 points in 40 minutes of action, and center Kara Tudman added 10 points on five–for–five shooting from the field. UMass continued to shoot well from the field, hitting on 55 percent of its field goals. For the Hawks, Facer led all scorers with 22 points, and Melissa Courney added 12 points on four–of–five shooting from behind the three–point line.

UMass started the weekend by handing Temple a good old–fashioned spanking Friday night. The Minutewomen shot 77 percent from the field in the first half, and took a 17 point lead at the break. Senior forward Carroll scored 10 points in the first half, and powered a 20–6 run that gave the Minutewomen a 32–18 lead with 5:03 left in the first half.

The Minutewomen would push the lead to as much as 33 in the second half. Sophomore Jaywana Bradley scored a career–high 15 points, and 6–3 UMass sophomore center Yolanda Rayside added 11 for the Minutewomen, who swept the season series with the Owls, having defeated Temple 61– 45 on Jan. 25 at the William D. Mullins Center.

UMass has only four games left in the regular season, three of which are at the Mullins Center. St. Bonaventure comes into Mullins on Thursday night, and the Minutewomen host Fordham on Sunday. UMass has defeated both the Rams and the Bonnies on the road this season.

"We have to get ourselves together and prepared for the stretch run," O'Brien said.

Material from WMUA FM was used in this article

ATKINS FARMS Country Market
Corner of Rte. 116 & Bay Rd. So. Amherst · 253–9528 · Open everyday 8 am – 7 pm
YOUR HEART IS IN THE RIGHT PLACE WHEN YOU SHOP ATKINS, A FULL SERVICE VALENTINE GIFT CENTER
FLOWERS:
"Florist Quality at Country Market Prices!"
Basket arrangement $17.50
Bud Vase with 3 Roses $15.00
CUDDLE UP BOUQUET $30 & up
ROSES Individually or boxed with fern & baby's breath, dozen or half dozen (special time of order)
CANDY:
- STORE OWN HOMEMADE -
FUDGE HEARTS
HEART SHAPED ASSORTED BOXED CHOCOLATES AND TRUFFLES ... PRICE VARIES
GOURMET VALENTINE Candies from all over the country Including heart shaped chocolates, marzipan hearts and fruits, mints, jelly beans and more...
ASSORTED TRUFFLES BUY 5 at $1.50 ea. AND GET ONE FREE GIFT BASKETS:
"LOVE YOU" BASKET $25.00
VALENTINE FRUIT BASKET with select fruit, candy or cookies & cocoa ..... $15.95 +up
ALWAYS IN MY HEART BASKET
Fruit, cheese, crackers, cocoa, large chocolate filled heart, macaroons, assorted candies and beautifully wrapped & boxed $32
Bearly Smooth & Soft Basket
Basket includes Bubble Bath, a CD of Romantic Songs, a Cuddle Bear, Candy, Hand Cream, Truffles and more! $24.95
BAKERY & CAKES:
VALENTINE COOKIE TRAYS ..... $15.75+up
DOUBLE LAYER HEART CAKES $15.00
HAVE-A-HEART COMBINATION
Single Layer Double Chocolate Heart Cake Plus Carnation Bud Vase $8.95
Dinner for TWO to GO! $30.–
Baked Stuffed SHRIMP w/ scalloped Potatoes
Saute'd SALMON w/ Rice Pilaf & Garden Veggie
RIB EYE STEAK Baked Potato & Corn Medley
Jerk CHICKEN with Pineapple Salsa & Stir Fry Veggies
Includes roll or bread, vegetable, dessert and your choice of the above main entrees.

Collegian Classifieds
Valentine's Day Special
Send a Valentine Personal to that special person!
Deadline is Wednesday Feb. 12
Pick up or drop off order forms at the Collegian Newsstand on the Concourse or at our basement office.
To place your Classified over the phone call 545-3500.

O.K....So maybe you didn't major in paint.
The Sherwin-Williams Company, a leader in the paint/coatings industry, is seeking achieving sales-oriented individuals who are recent college grads for our extensive entry level management training program in the Greater Boston vicinity. We think this great career opportunity with a company like ours is something to get excited about.
Who we are:
– Fortune 500
– 130 year History of Success
– Industry Leader
– $4 Billion in Sales
– Aggressive Growth
What we offer:
– Competitive Compensation
• Salary
• Benefits
• Bonus
• Recognition Program
– Well Defined Career Path
– Promotions Based On Merit
– Structured Training Program
• 6 Weeks Store Level Hands-On
• Workbook Modules
• 1 Week Headquarters Classroom Forum
We seek:
• Are Competitive
• Desire To Succeed
• Have Strong Work Ethics
• Are Interested In: Running a business; including Profit/Loss Responsibilities; Credit/Collections; Wholesale/Retail Store Operations; Inventory Control; Human Resources Management and Wholesale Market Development
These entry level store management positions require a 4 year college degree and can open the way to many career paths which can lead to tremendous opportunities in areas such as Branch Management, Outside Commercial Industrial Sales, and District Level Management.
Please join us at the Career Fair on Wednesday, February 12th. However, if you are unable to attend, please send your resume to: Jeff Kerfoot, The Sherwin-Williams Company, 313 Technology Dr., Malvern, PA 19355 or fax your resume to: 610-640-4265. An equal opportunity employer who welcomes the opportunity to add a diversity of people to our rich culture.
SHERWIN Williams

Academics and More !!!
UMass Division of Continuing Education
For a free course catalog, call 413-545-0107 or e-mail contined@admin.umass.edu
Explore our web site and see how we can help you - http://www.umass.edu/contined/
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Amherst
providing access to adult, nontraditional education for over 25 years
Tons of credit undergrad courses — in the evening!
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops — affordable, fun, practical, including
• Bartending,
• GMAT, GRE, LSAT, & MCAT Preparation,
• Magical Arts,
• Photography,
• ESL,
• EMT Training,
• Marketing,
and CHOCOLATE !

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

All students interested in the turf industry and becoming a member of the student chapter of the GCSAA, there will be a general meeting on Wed Feb 12, at 4:30pm in Stockbridge 114 All are encouraged to attend!!!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

RUSH Theta Chi Feb 3,4,5,8,10-12, 8-10pm 549-9252

TREK FANS If you are interested in joining STARFLEET International, please contact Martin A. Lessem @ 546-7803 to get membership information.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Puffton 1 bedroom apartment for rent starting the second week of Feb. Partially furnished. Take over lease Call Melissa 549-1091

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Black BMW 318i 5 speed. Perfect exterior. $2000 or B/O Call 546-3830

1988 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap $1650 or B/O 546-5320

1985 Irac for sale Superb condition. Many new parts Call Jeff 665-7578

Mustang looks good, runs good $500. Call 665-9068

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Wayne-sister half of brother/sister camp in Northeast Pennsylvania. 6/23-8/29/97! Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches teachers, students

EMPLOYMENT

Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation. On-campus interviews March 11th Call (800)279-3019

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krakow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680

Premiere Brother/Sister Camp in Massachusetts On-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talanted and energetic students in all Team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball, 30 Tennis openings; also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling; other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board and travel. June 22nd-August 20th Call for information MAH-KEE-NAC(tonn) (800)753-9118 DANBEE(girls) (800)392-3752 Recruiters will be On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am to 4pm at the UMass Camp Day.

Camp Blue Ridge, a co-ed camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are looking for lifeguards, WSI, as well as instructors in water-skiing, rappelling, boating, art, riflery, archery, sports, drama, cheerleading and dance. For more info. call Debra at 665-8463

EMPLOYMENT

Work Study students needed. Teaching positions in a multicultural after-school program for children 5-12. Some experience desirable $8.00/hour. Men and people of color encouraged to apply Call Capacidad at 253-5659

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St. D40, NYC, NY 10014

Summer Job! Camp Somosat is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama and woodworking. Also hiring secretaries, kitchen and maintenance workers. Call or fax resume to: Winter Office, Wellesley, MA. Phone (617)237-3017 Fax. (617)237-7369

Drivers Wanted Apply in person between 3-5pm Pinocchio's, Amherst

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Appointment Setters Hadley office has several openings in its calling center. No selling involved! Fun atmosphere. On bus-line. Up to $7-$10/hr. Start work immediately Call 584-7686. Ask for Mr. Boone or Mr. Baril

EMPLOYMENT

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people-previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info. send resume and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339- or call (413)339-0188

Wanted: Tour geidas, Summer Counselors, Student Admissions Representatives. Applications available at the Admissions Center

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available. Benefits. Summer or year round (612)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information: call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

Outside Jobs- Now hiring. National Parks, Beach Resorts, Ranchas, Rafting. CO's benefits and Bonuses! Nationwide openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180 Eastern Europe/Asian jobs- Live in Prague, Budapest, Tokyo, etc. Teaching simple conversational English. No languages/teaching exp. required. (919)918-7767 ext. W180

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Pentium 120 System 16 Gig 32 RAM 336 modem 64 bit Video $3000 in software ONLY $1500 Joe 665-9112

Snowboard w/bindings 148GNU Dukester Brand new 665-8680 CHEAP!

Laptop/Notebook 899 , Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25 Steve 566-3324-2

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition $200. Sean 546-5734

4 Jeep Tires- 30x9.50 R15LT Kelly Trisa. Very good condition $200 or B/O. Call Jennifer 548-9770

Smith Corona WP compact, great condition. $150 or B/O Call 256-5470

486 New Laptop $585, VGA Color Monitor $175, IDE Hard Drive $110 Steve 566-3324-2

FOUND

Waikman Found in the Campus Center at the end of last semester. Call Ana Maria Gonzalez at 665-8394

INSTRUCTION

Performing Arts Division offers group and private instruction in Music, Theater and Dance. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass (413)545-0519 for info

Bartend with University Bartending 90% student discount. On-campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Paried Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved Cost $35 (800)666-4793

PERSONALS

B-RAD, You are beautiful. Love, The Scoobies

"Take a chanca oo me"- Abba, Free love and Valentines at www.mainquad.com

"Love Shack, baby"- The B52's, Free love and Valentines at www.mainquad.com

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in two bedroom apt. On bus route. Available immediately $220 + utilities Call 665-2197

One bedroom in 2 bedroom apt Available immediately On bus route Sugarloaf Estates Keira (203)294-1336 Females Only

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available (800)773-8704 Cost $29 Applications close 2-24-97

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 272 State Street, Northampton (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Students Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. FS0016 (We are a research and publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97! CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Intercampus Representatives (800)327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

TRAVEL

Best Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more Call 256-8724

Jamaica- Spring Break Stay in beautiful Negril. Includes roundtrip airfare, hotel transfers, 7 nights lodging from $519. Don't take chances with other companies, go with the UMass Ski Club! Call 545-3437

Europe $155, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations Airhitch Tm (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.isicom.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven! Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations-free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed From $99. (800)426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Spring Break- Nassau/Paradise Island, from $379. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize small group- earn free trips plus commissions! Call (800)9-Beach-1

WANTED

Coeservative students interested in starting a conservative student newspaper. Good writing skills and familiarity with Pagemaker software a plus. Call Paul at 8-0183 for more information

Pamper Your Valentine

Give'em a Special Valentine Personal Classified

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payments and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

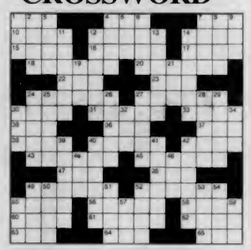
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students



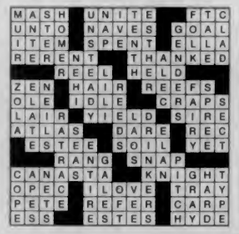
20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

CROSSWORD



ACROSS

1. Keats subject
5. Not many
9. Cudgel
10. "The House at ___ Corner"
13. Des Moines resident
14. ___ Alto
15. Shooting need, for short
16. Farm-implement pioneer
17. Singer Guthrie
18. Nacreous necklace items
20. Air Force equipment
22. Small deer
23. ___ detector
24. Soft hat
27. Boring tool
30. Actors Marsh and Linden
31. "Wake Up Little ___"
33. Pour messily
35. Cable option
36. Veterans' mo.
37. Rug
38. Diminutive ending
40. Aquatic animal
42. Civil-rights pioneer Parks
43. Cute tea
45. Most pleasant
47. Yale grad
48. Guy's partner
49. When Dracula starts to stir
52. Exclusively
56. Boring
58. SF athlete, to a fan
59. Orderly
60. Say nay to
61. Homes for sloths
62. Actress Garr
63. Greek letter
64. Long period of time
65. Hospital workers (abbr.)

DOWN

1. ___ creek without a paddle (2 wds.)
2. Win easily
3. Seward Peninsula's commercial center
4. Opponents
5. Woolly mom
6. Distort
7. Unpower
8. Start of a Shakespearean title
9. "Never ___ Later"
11. Stockpiles
12. Loafers
13. Nervous ___
14. TV groups
19. Kanga's baby
21. Intention
24. Abetains from food
25. Overjoy
26. Dorothy's Em or Al
27. Donated
28. Pollster Roper et al.
29. Skoal, e.g.
30. Coloring
32. Lush
34. School gp.
39. It's balanced mirror
40. Familiarize with surroundings
41. Challenged
42. Give in
44. Raised railroads
46. Abdn's brother in East of Eden
49. Bird feeder treat
50. Humerus neighbor
51. Fatigue
52. Looked at
53. Look at maliciously
54. Tall tale
56. Waging Peace author's monogram
57. Modernist
58. Scale notes

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
A commitment you've been putting off could be at a critical phase, so every move you make is significant. Be very sure of what you really want before firing off one of your infamous flip replies. This week, it's better to invest than to indulge.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A productive streak could have people close to you in awe. Turn it to their advantage by actively helping them out, and you'll win over someone who didn't care for you previously.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
If the boundaries of your world seem to be closing in on you, stand back and take a deep breath. This is not the time to let yourself go crazy. A domestic project could evolve into a romantic interlude.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Keep abreast of the latest facts for a real advantage in an unexpected confrontation. You'll win the respect of someone who knows the value of doing their homework. Enjoy an unessential evening—it could be your ticket to a good cuddle.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Your sense of humor is infectious and a great asset in an ongoing negotiation. Enlist the help of an expert to troubleshoot your latest brainstorm or project. You'll save time, money and embarrassment over the long run.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Business is booming—are you ready for it? Go with the flow to reap the most benefits from this situation. You could be called upon to perform an unusual task. You're equal to it, or they wouldn't have asked.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Treat yourself to a lazy weekend—an extra long shower or bath or a gourmet breakfast would be a great start. Share your time with someone who's in need of some extra TLC and companionship. You'll both feel better.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A good partner makes it easy to glide through some tough circumstances. Be sure you're communicating your appreciation. They may feel that you take them for granted. Look for a new solution to an old problem.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
A cluttered environment could be the symptom of a deeper problem. Call in an organized friend for their input into your behavior. You could be startled by how well you can clean up your act.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
If stress has you feeling burned out, spend time with an energizing person. They could really refresh you and give you renewed energy. Music and books hold special appeal, too. Check out the library.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Build security down the line by making a small sacrifice this week. It's possible to have some cake and eat it too—it's just a matter of proportion. Your patience and grace under fire earn you extra brownie points.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A friendly gathering offers the chance to network. Your sincerity—or insincerity—will be clearly apparent. Don't try to overwhelm people. They will appreciate you on your own terms, or not at all.

Daily Listings sponsored by: Your Ad Could Be Here. Call 545-3500

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 BET
5	ABC/5	Boston	26 BET on Jazz
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 Laser Video
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28 The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	30 Comedy Central
9	Weather Channel		31 Popcorn Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32 Satellite Programming
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 10, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places		American Experience		Knife to the Heart		Back From the Brink
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Cosby	Ink	Murphy Brown	Cybill	Chicago Hope		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Ink	Murphy Brown	Cybill	Chicago Hope		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dangerous Minds (In Stereo)		"Payback" (1997, Drama)	Mary Tyler Moore, Edward Asner			News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		7th Heaven "Happy a Valentine"		Savannah "Code Blue"		News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock From the Sun (R)		"Love's Deadly Triangle: The Texas Cadet Murder" (1997, Drama)		News		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Goode Beh.	News	LAPD	N. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Hard Copy	3rd Rock From the Sun (R)		"Love's Deadly Triangle: The Texas Cadet Murder" (1997, Drama)		News		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Melrose Place (In Stereo)		Close Call: Cheating Death		News		Coach	Babylon 5
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	3rd Rock From the Sun (R)		"Love's Deadly Triangle: The Texas Cadet Murder" (1997, Drama)		News		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places		American Experience		Knife to the Heart		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Dangerous Minds (In Stereo)		"Payback" (1997, Drama)	Mary Tyler Moore, Edward Asner			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Goode Beh.	News	Martin	Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos		"Blue Steel" (1990, Drama)	Jamie Lee Curtis, Ron Silver			Faces of Death 3: "The First Power" (1990, Horror)	Lou Diamond Phillips
A&E	51	Quincy		Equalizer "Hand and Glove"		Biography: Bonnie & Clyde		Poirot		Miss Marple (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order	Jurisdiction
CNN	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Inside Politics	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	35	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	"The Favor" (1994, Comedy)	Harley Jane Kozak,			On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC	67	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Red Star (R)		Wild Discovery: Monsters		Hubble: Secrets From Space		Great Whites of Australia (R)		Wild Discovery	Monsters
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter		ESPY	ESPY Awards (Live)					ESPY Postgm.	Sportscenter
LIFE	69	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Heartbeat" (1993, Drama) John Ritter, Polly Draper				Intimate Portrait	Janet Leigh
MTV	33	Ren & Stimpy	MTV Unfiltered	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)				Road Rules	House of Style	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	53	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	55	Odyssey	Sci-Fi Trader	Time Trax "A Stranger in Time"		Tekwar "Killer Instinct" (R)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		V (R) (In Stereo)		Time Trax "A Stranger in Time"
TLC	68	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines		Diana's Story		Human Animal: A View		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	63	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		WCW Nitro (Live)				Adventures of Robin Hood		WCW Nitro (R)
USA	62	Renegade "Murderer's Row"		Highlander: The Series		Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show (Live)						Wings	Wings
HBO	65	★★½ "Animals Are Beautiful People" (1974)		Testament		★★★½ "Braveheart" (1995, Drama) Mel Gibson, Sophie Marceau (In Stereo)						Tracey Takes	Chris Rock (R)
MAX	66	★★ "Iron Eagle II" (1988, Adventure) Louis Gossett Jr., PG				★★★ "To Die For" (1995, Satire) Nicole Kidman (In Stereo)				"The Sweeper" (1996) C. Thomas Howell, R		"Grand Can"
SHOW	64	(5:45) ★★★ "The Owl and the Pussycat" (1970)		Morningside		★★½ "Dead Presidents" (1995, Drama) Larenz Tate R				★★★ "Fear of a Black Hat" (1993) Rusty Cundieff		"By the Sword"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloon

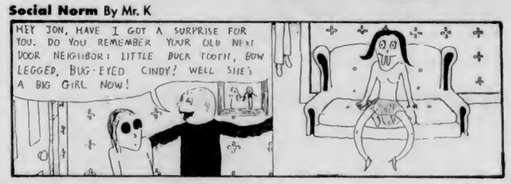
Leold™ (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

For 15 years, every year on my birthday, my mom calls the doctor who delivered me.

She usually tells him little stories about how I've been doing lately, what I look like, how well I'm doing in school, whether I've been seeing a girl nowadays...

Last year he told her to stop calling.

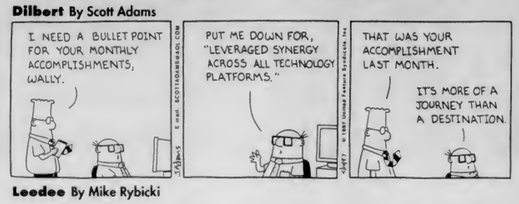
Kind of makes me feel abandoned.



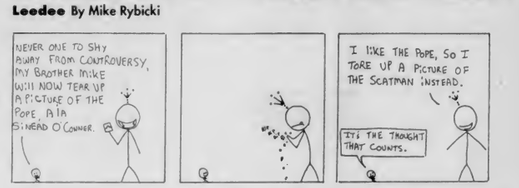
University² By Frank Cho

Non Sequiter By Wiley

Social Norm By Mr. K



The Unsilent Majority By Luke Meredith

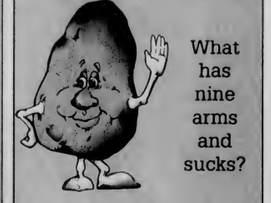


Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Close to Home By John McPherson



"If you're planning on videotaping the birth, we're gonna need 20 minutes to touch up our makeup."

Quote of the Day

"We must believe in luck. For how else can we explain the success of those we don't like?"

–Jean Cocteau

Joke of the Day

What has nine arms and sucks?

–Del Leopard

Today's Staff

Chris Conner
Night Editor

Laura Stock
Copy Editor

Anna Feder
Photo Technician

Lorraine Urbanski
Production Supervisor

Chris Lavin
Lauren Goldfarb
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Beef Fajita
Turkey Chili	Fried Shrimp Dinner
Scalloped Spaghetti	Lentil Chili
	Quarter Pound Burger

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger on a Roll	Beef Fajita
Chicken Pucks	Ravioli w/Tomato Sauce
American Chop Suey

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Sandwich	Beef Fajita
Fettuccini w/ Sauce	Fried Shrimp Dinner
Golden Burgers	Tofu Fajita
	Pastabilities

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Sandwich	Beef Fajita
American Chop Suey	Fried Shrimp Dinner
Golden Burger	Tofu Fajita
	Pastabilities

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, February 10, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

MEN'S HOOP	WOMEN'S HOOP	MEN'S HOCKEY	MEN'S GYMNASTICS	WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS	MEN'S TRACK	WOMEN'S TRACK
Feb. 11 ST. BONNIES, 7:30 p.m.	Feb. 13 ST. BONNIES, 7:00 p.m.	Feb. 14 MAINE, 7:00 p.m.	Feb. 16 ARMY-AIRFORCE, 4:00 p.m.	Feb. 16 AIRFORCE, 4:00 p.m.	Feb. 16 @ Rhode Island A-10 Championships 10:00 a.m.	Feb. 16 @ Rhode Island A-10 Championships 10:00 a.m.
Feb. 15 Maryland, @ Worcester Centrum 1:30 p.m.	Feb. 16 FORDHAM, 12:00 p.m.	Feb. 15 MAINE, 7:00 p.m.

Minutemen experience déjà vu in Rhody win

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE — For a few hours Saturday afternoon, the Massachusetts men's basketball team (14–10, 8–3 Atlantic 10) was at the top.

The Minutemen held the No. 1 spot in the Atlantic 10 East after beating Rhode Island 64–61. With both clubs entering the Providence Civic Center tied for second place with marks of 7–3, UMass got the jump on Rhode Island. However, a 79–65 St. Joseph's win over Xavier gave the Hawks a 9–2 overall record and the No. 1 spot.

Back in the Civic Center, a sold-out crowd of 12,931 (largest A–10 crowd this season) got a sneak preview of just how tough this year's conference tourney will be. In a wire- to-wire battle, the Minutemen were able to get the upper hand before the buzzer.

Massachusetts	64
Rhode Island	61

With 2:14 remaining, Tyrone Weeks (15 points, 11 rebounds) went to the line on a Michael Andersen foul, knocking down the first shot for the tie and the second for a 60–59 lead.

In the ensuing play, UMass and URI exchanged baskets keeping the Minuteman lead alive (62–61).

Ketner, Weeks dominate the paint

However, both squads had a chance to put the other away in the final minute. The Ram's Cuttino Mobley missed a layup with 1:08 on the clock which was grabbed by the Minutemen's Edgar Padilla (7 points, 5 assists), who took it coast to coast, missing a 3–pointer that would have put Rhode Island to bed.

After inbounding the ball with :21 remaining, the Rams found Mobley inside, who bricked a jumper with two seconds on the clock. In a last ditch effort to

Turn to MEN'S HOOP, page 7

CHRIS CESNER / COLLEGIAN

Tyrone Weeks was one of the Minutemen who helped turn things around in the second half against Rhode Island Saturday.

UMass–URI? The answer is obvious to me

As I sat on press row of Saturday's Massachusetts–Rhode Island men's basketball game, I was struck by the similarities between that game and the contest earlier in the season in Amherst (Jan. 21).

But it was not just those similarities in the games that caught my attention, but the corresponding facets of the schools.

CASEY
KANE

Sure, there was the score. At the Providence Civic Center on Saturday, UMass prevailed 64–61. At the William D. Mullins Center, It was also the Minutemen, though the score was 64–60.

And it was the way the games ended. At Rhody, the game came down to the final minute, as Cuttino Mobley missed a shot that would have boosted the Rams. Tyrone Weeks grabbed the rebound, was fouled and sank two free throws to give UMass the win after the Rams' three-quarter court inbounds pass was caught by Charlton Clarke.

When the two teams met at the Mullins Center, the game ended when a pair from Weeks at the charity stripe sealed the game.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner had no trouble with Ram Michael Andersen at the Providence Civic Center on Saturday.

But after looking at the game, my thoughts turned to comparisons between the schools, the bands and the cheerleaders.

First, the schools. Both are state universities, major schools that house tremendous populations. While an argument could be made that both are in relatively remote sections of the state, Kingston is leaps and bounds worse than Amherst. Here in Western Mass students are a stone's throw from areas

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

Hockey's win keeps Alumni Cup in Amherst

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

NORTH BILLERICA — Saturday night the Massachusetts hockey team (12–17, 7–13 Hockey East) got exactly what it needed — a rousing road victory over a fierce rival to eradicate the team's often stagnant play of late and help build steam towards a playoff run that will hopefully end up at the FleetCenter.

Boston Univ	6
Massachusetts	3

This was a night for the Minutemen to say farewell to the dilapidated home of UMass–Lowell, a glorified high school rink named Tully Forum. The farewells ended there, for this evening UMass would not say a hail and farewell to the Alumni Cup, the prize awarded to the winner of the season series between the two branch schools.

The teams exchanged goals in a free–for–all of a third period, but the River Hawks (13–16, 9–10), after rallying from three separate deficits, would finally succumb to UMass, falling 6–4 before a festive, but greatly underestimated crowd of 1,210.

Massachusetts	6
UMass-Lowell	4

"I remember Pete Rose saying during a World Series game that whoever wins it, this is a great game," coach Joe Mallen said. "It was like a heavyweight boxing match punching and counter punching, blow–by–blow. The excitement was unbelievable. It was great game for the fans to watch and a real solid effort by our club."

The Minutemen drew first blood with 34 seconds to play in the first period when Keith O'Connell's one–timer of a Gerry Cahill feed trickled through Martin Fillion's pads, stopping in the crease. Cahill rushed to the net and knocked the loose puck home for a 1–0 UMass edge.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Brad Norton had two assists in UMass' Saturday night win over UMass–Lowell.

Cahill made it a 2–0 game 1:09 into the second with a tremendous shoulder fake after being sent in on a break away by Rob Bonneau. Cahill froze Fillion and fired a wrister through the 5–hole for his second of the night.

Filled with pride, the River Hawks battled back to tie the game at 2–2 by the end of the second period on a pair of power play goals. Marc Salsman beat Brian Regan with a swift far side wrist shot at 4:38, and Mike Nicholishen drove home a rebound past Regan, who could not locate the puck through a scramble in front of him at 8:46.

Despite Dean Stork sending Craig Brown into the stansion beside the visitors' penalty box with authority

Turn to HOCKEY, page 6

Alumni Cup

In second year, Cup again belongs to UM

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

NORTH BILLERICA — There was a time when Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen did not want the rivalry between the two state schools showcased. The Alumni Cup was formed between the Amherst and Lowell campuses to create a battle cry in their seasonal three–game series, and the winner would have bragging rights.

Oh, how times can change...

Last Saturday night, the Minutemen were able to bounce back off from a demoralizing 6–3 loss to Boston University on Friday, and took the Cup for the second consecutive year in a thrilling 6–4 win at Tully Forum.

Originally, Mallen wanted four years in Hockey East to Turn to ALUMNI CUP, page 6

Minutewomen split pair in Philadelphia

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team went into this weekend's two–game road trip in Philadelphia knowing that if it could get by Temple on Friday and St. Joseph's on Sunday, the Minutewomen would be in prime position for the upcoming Atlantic 10 tournament.

They came one shot away from doing just that.

The Minutewomen split this weekend, pounding Temple 82–56 Friday night behind 17 points from freshman Alison MacFarland, and falling to A–10 East leader St. Joe's 61–59 at the buzzer yesterday in Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse. UMass heads back up to Amherst with an overall record of 14–8, 8–4 in the A–10.

Massachusetts	82
Temple	56

The St. Joe's loss was especially tough for the Minutewomen, considering the fact that the Hawks have now virtually assured themselves of first place in the A–10 East with the win, improving to 18–4 overall, and more importantly, 11–1 in the A–10.

The Minutewomen were down 61–57 yesterday with :25 left in the game, and MacFarland cut the lead to two with a layup with :03 left. UMass immediately fouled on the ensuing St. Joe's inbound pass, and when Hawk Amy Facer missed the front end of a one–and–one, the Minutewomen regained possession. Senior co–captain Sabriye Mitchell took a desperation shot from half court, but the ball bounced off the rim, giving UMass its fourth loss of the season in the conference.

St. Joseph's	61
Massachusetts	59

"They shot the ball extremely well," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We played hard, we

Turn to WOMENS HOOP, page 7

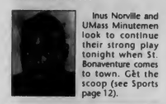
The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 80 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 11, 1997

UMass Professor promotes memoir

English professor Jay Neugeboren read from his new book at the Jeffrey Amherst Bookshop. Check out our review (see Arts and Living, page 5).

My Bonnie lies over the ocean...

Inus Norville and UMass Minutemen look to continue their strong play tonight when St. Bonaventure comes to town. Get the scoop (see Sports page 12).

WORLD

Muslims riot in China; deathtoll varies widely

BEIJING (AP) — In a worrisome challenge for Chinese leaders, young Muslims demanding independence in western China beat people to death and torched cars in the region's worst rioting in nearly 50 years.

The death toll in riots last Wednesday and Thursday varied widly — from four to nearly 300 — and it was not possible to reconcile the reports. Police quashing the riots fired into the air and arrested hundreds of people.

"There was a protest... It was illegal," an official with Xinjiang's provincial government who gave only his surname, Liu, said Monday. "Illegal protests are curbed."

The rioters were Uighurs, Xinjiang's Muslim majority, who were demanding independence for the region, an officer with the Yining city police said. There is deep resentment about Chinese rule and an influx of ethnic Chinese into the region, where Turkic-speaking Uighurs live.

Chinese police said yesterday that four to five people were killed in the violence in Yining, a city close to the border with Kazakstan in China's Xinjiang province.

NATION

Army suspends soldier for alleged misconduct

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army suspended its top-ranking enlisted soldier Monday after the woman who accused him of sexual misconduct publicly complained of a "different system of justice" for the service's upper tier.

In explaining its decision, the Army said publicity about the allegations against Sergeant Major of the Army Gene C. McKinney made it difficult for him to perform his job.

Meanwhile, a military official said the Army has begun investigating a second case involving McKinney and a female sailor. The woman reported an allegation of harassment by McKinney to her supervisor, who then reported it to the Army, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A second military source, also speaking privately, confirmed that an incident involving a Navy sailor is being investigated. The sailor is on active duty and wants no publicity regarding her allegations, said the military officer. "The Army Criminal Investigation Division has it," said the military officer, confirming that the Army's investigators were looking into the sailor's allegations against McKinney.

On Sunday, Army Secretary Togo West had argued the case for letting McKinney continue in his duties, although West said the issue was not fully settled.

On Monday, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Dennis Reimer issued a statement saying McKinney — his senior enlisted adviser — had been assigned to the Military District of Washington "pending resolution of the allegations."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thur.
HIGH: 30 LOW: 15	HIGH: 30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 30 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 12

Professors use latest technology to send classes around the world

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Video Instructional Program (VIP) announced that it is participating in The African Virtual University (AVU), a program designed to provide education in engineering to students in African nations.

Professor Donald E. Scott, of the electrical and computer engineering department, will provide an introduction class in electrical engineering to students in Ghana, Uganda, Ethiopia and Zimbabwe.

"This is very exciting," Scott said. "UMass could be involved at every institution of higher learning in Africa that's interested in electrical engineering."

Scott's lectures were videotaped this past semester, and will be transmitted via satellite to the African universities. The students there will view the lectures during their normal semester, which runs from April to July, and will receive additional instruction from on–site instructors.

Scott will present a live video link six times during the semester when he will answer questions from students and give supplemental information. He will also hold regular telephone hours to handle questions from the students that the local instructors can not answer.

The AVU is a pilot program supported by the World Bank and the National Technological University. UMass is one of very few universities in the world selected to participate in the program.

"I am proud that we were chosen," Scott said. "It's nice to be recognized."

Currently, the New Jersey Institute of Technology is the only other American school involved in the program. If the first two semesters are a success, Iowa State and Clark University in Atlanta are tentatively scheduled to get involved.

"We certainly hope it flies," Scott said.

The AVU is only one of several projects that the VIP works on.

The Video Instructional Program, which was founded in 1974, allows graduate students to earn degrees in electrical engineering and engineering management without commuting to campus.

In its regular program, VIP allows students who work full– time to get a UMass degree by taking one or two classes from home or work each semester for four years.

"We provide distance education in the engineering field," said Mary McCulloch, marketing coordinator for VIP.

"Our professors teach their normal classes and are videotaped," McCulloch said. "The classes are transmitted by videotape, satellite and the Internet to students around the world."

The professors volunteer to teach the classes, which are conducted in three studio classrooms in Marcus Hall. The studio classrooms are equipped with stationary cameras and several televisions that display the professors' computer monitors.

Scott said that many students like taking classes in the studio classrooms because of the technological advantages compared to the average classrooms on campus.

"You can end up doing a lot fancier and better lecture than in a regular classroom," Scott said. "Students like it because it's a more professional delivery, and because they can view the classes again at the library."

Only the professors are videotaped, and no students are shown in the tapes, which are sent to mostly to private industry all over the world.

"We send the tapes to companies who want to further their staff education, such as Raytheon, Boston Technology, General Electric and Gillette," McCulloch said.

The students enroll themselves in the program, but, according to McCulloch, many of the companies will reimburse the $1,225 cost of each course upon the employee's successful completion of the program.

This semester, 303 students are enrolled in 80 courses taught by 49 professors in the VIP program.

"The benefit is you can still get a master's degree, even if you can't drive to campus," McCulloch said.

For more information on the VIP, contact Mary McCulloch at (413) 545–0063.

Nocturnal stimulus

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

The Fine Arts Center at night yields some interesting stimuli.

Police nab parking lot thieves; one suspect a UMass student

University of Massachusetts Police caught and arrested three men on Thursday for breaking and entering parked cars in the Stadium Drive parking lot.

According to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, the three individuals were spotted by police at night in the parking lot.

"They were observed going into vehicles by officers and stopped, whereupon it was discovered that the vehicles did not belong to them," Luippold said.

Dang T. Dung, 21, of 77 Bromfield St., Lawrence, Dangkhoa VU Trinh, 18, of 5 Richmond Ct., Lawrence and Pham Q. Tuan, 19, of 15 Mt. Vernon St., Dorchester, were arrested for nighttime breaking and entering for a felony, possession of burglarious instruments, larceny over $250 and destruction of property over $250.

Additionally, Tuan was charged with receiving stolen property in excess of $250.

Of the three, Trinh was the only UMass student.

Luippold said the men broke into two vehicles and stole assorted stereo equipment.

A pre–trial hearing will be set in Northampton District Court

— Laura Stock

Simpson to pay $25 million as punishment for slayings

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A jury today ordered O.J. Simpson to pay $25 million as punishment for the slayings of his ex-wife and her friend, a final blow that could doom the fallen football great to a lifetime of debt.

The punitive judgment is on top of $8.5 million in compensatory damages awarded last week when the jury found Simpson liable in the June 12, 1994, slashing deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. It was a dramatic turnaround from Simpson's murder acquittal 16 months earlier.

Simpson hasn't been back to court since Tuesday's verdict, but has been seen playing golf. Again today, Simpson was a no-show. Members of the Brown and Goldman families showed no reaction. Jurors were similarly impassive.

The combined $33.5 million in compensatory and punitive damages was more than double the $15.7 million even Simpson's accusers said he was worth.

Unlike the liability verdict, the jury did not unanimously agree on the punitive award. The vote: 11-1 on whether Goldman's father should get damages and 10-2 on the amount; with the same split on the damages for Ms. Simpson's estate.

The only person with black ancestry on the jury, a Jamaican-born man who is also Asian, was the only person to vote against punitive damages. He was joined on the vote about the damage amounts by a young white woman.

Ms. Simpson's estate, whose beneficiaries include her two children now living with Simpson, was allotted $12.5 million of the award. Goldman's father, Fred, got another $12.5 million, while mother Sharon Rufo did not ask for punitive damages. The long-divorced parents, however, got the $8.5 million compensatory award for the loss of their son's love and companionship.

It took the panel five hours over two days to arrive at the punishment amount, ignoring the portrayal of Simpson as a tapped-out pariah and siding with a plaintiffs' lawyer who urged jurors to "Send a message."

The decision marked yet another milestone in the 2 1/2-year legal saga that transfixed the nation and still exposes its racial divisions - from the acquittal by a mostly black jury to the wrongful death verdict from a mostly white panel.

The civil trial ended in a flurry of rhetoric and dueling depictions of Simpson's financial picture.

Simpson's lawyers said their client was worse than broke, arguing last week's verdict and compensatory award left him $9.3 million in debt. They said that since his first trial ended, Simpson has been shunned by those who would employ him and banished from the sports card shows that were his bread and butter. But plaintiffs contended Simpson is potentially worth at least $15.7 million, based on the predicted $3 million he stands to make every year for selling his name, likeness and trademark. The estimate is important because under California law creditors can garnish up to 25 percent of future wages.

Plaintiffs also pointed out that Simpson still lives in a mansion, drives a Bentley and employs a huge

Turn to OJ, page 2

Two men found guilty in riot slaying

By Richard Pyle
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A black man who was acquitted by a state jury of murdering a Jewish scholar during a 1991 riot in Brooklyn was convicted in federal court yesterday of violating the victim's civil rights in the stabbing.

Lemrick Nelson Jr., 21, cried and put his head on the table as he heard the verdict that could bring him life behind bars. As he was led out of court, his supporters angrily chanted: "No justice! No peace!"

Also found guilty was another black man, Charles Price, 43, who was accused of inciting a black mob to "get Jews."

The conviction stemmed from the slaying of 29-year-old Yankel Rosenbaum, who was attacked in a riotous furor after a 7-year-old black boy was accidentally struck and killed by a car driven by an ultra-Orthodox Jew.

Rosenbaum, a Hasidic history student visiting from Australia, was the only person killed in four nights of violence in Brooklyn's racially mixed Crown Heights section.

Nelson was acquitted of murder in 1992 by a mostly black state jury, outraging politicians and Jewish leaders, who demanded federal intervention. Two years later, Attorney General Janet Reno ordered a civil rights investigation that led to the federal charges.

The federal jury — two Jews, three other whites, three blacks and four Hispanics — reached its verdict after 20 hours of deliberations over four days.

"To persevere does bring results," said Rosenbaum's brother, Norman, who came from Australia for the trial and had fought to get the case reopened. "The American people should know that this is a good day for justice."

Although it was the second criminal trial for Nelson stemming from Rosenbaum's death, it was not considered double jeopardy because the charges were different and the case was tried in federal court. In similar fashion, two Los Angeles police officers acquitted of state charges in the 1991 beating of Rodney King were later convicted in federal court of violating his civil rights. Federal prosecutors argued that Rosenbaum was deprived of his civil rights in being randomly attacked on a public street because of his obvious religious garb. The car accident that had sparked the violence involved a motorcade carrying the Lubavitcher, Hasidim's spiritual leader, the Rebbe Menachem Schneerson. Price had not been previously charged in the attack; he was identified only recently from videotape of the rioting.

Prosecutors said because of Price's long record of petty crimes, he probably faces a longer sentence. No sentencing date was set for either man.

Defense lawyers claimed both men were scapegoats in the politically and racially charged case. The riots contributed to the 1993 defeat of the city's first black mayor, David Dinkins, who was faulted along with police in a state report for a slow response to the violence.

Several police officers who testified at the 1992 trial returned to retell how they found a bloody knife in Nelson's pocket minutes after the attack; how the dying man identified Nelson as one of his assailants; and how Nelson confessed twice that night.

Defense attorneys sought to revive doubts about the police version, suggesting — as did Nelson's lawyers at his murder trial — that evidence was planted and that Nelson's confessions were obtained under duress.

The strongest evidence came from two witnesses who did not meet Nelson until after the trial, when he moved to Georgia to live with relatives and finish high school.

Travionne Shaw, 20, a former high school girlfriend, testified reluctantly that Nelson had once confessed to her that he had stabbed Rosenbaum.

Shaw, who sobbed through her testimony, recalled Nelson saying that "the guy was holding his shirt... and the guy wouldn't let go, and he — he stabbed him."

T-8 PUZ CAO \ COLLEGIAN

Little dancers

Chinese children are dancing at the celebration of a traditional Chinese Holiday, Spring Festival, organized by the Chinese Student Association.

For Your Information

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, Feb. 11

Info-social — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will be holding its weekly info-social in the Campus Center, room 803. We will be accepting nominations and holding elections for the position of Intercollegiate Outreach Liaison. For further information, contact Ashavan Doyon at the LBGA office 545-0154.

Meeting — Students Helping Area Reach-Out Efforts (SHARE) is having its first general meeting of the semester at 6:30 p.m. outside of 504 Goodell Library. Free pizza.

Meeting — Club Communication will hold its first meeting of the semester tonight at 6 p.m. in Machmer E-35. All students are welcome. Come here about our annual career forum and plans for a trip to N.Y.C.

Workshop — A Money Management & Financial Aid workshop will be offered by the Learning Support Services from 3 to 4 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545-5534 to register.

Wednesday, Feb. 12

Fair — The ALANA Career Fair, "A World of Opportunities at Your Doorstep," will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Campus Center, rooms 162-176. All students are welcome to meet with prospective employers and/or inquire about Co-Op/Internship/Job opportunities. For more info, contact Dianna Dunn at 545-6266.

Forum — A public forum about services for people living with HIV/ AIDS in Hampshire County, sponsored by the Hampshire County Ryan White II HIV Consortium along with their Consumer Advisory Board, will be held from 4 to 5 p.m. at The Depot, 125 Pleasant St., Northampton.

Meeting — Circle K International, a campus community service group, is having a meeting at 8 p.m. downstairs in the Campus Center. We will be holding elections. New members welcome. For more info, cal Aimee or Suzanne at 665-7712 or stop by our office at 409 Student Union.

Meeting — Undergraduate Employee Organization, a group dedicated to securing and protecting the rights of student employees, will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. in 413 Student Union.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have this week's meeting in the Student Union Duke's Room at 7 p.m. New members are always welcome. For directions to the Duke's Room or more info, call Tim at 546-0562 or Kayc at 546-1459.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Music — An Improv Jam Session (invited musicians) will be held at the Blue Moon Gallery Cafe at 7 p.m. The event is free.

Thursday, Feb. 13

Concert — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will host Jonathan Stevens, folk, acoustic, at 8 p.m. The event is free.

Discussion — An informal discussion on "Spirituality and Identity" will take place at 7 p.m. in Campus Center, room 805-809. All are welcome to participate. For more info, call 546-5174.

Lecture — Louise Rice, director of Education of the AIDS Committee, will present a lecture entitled, "Is the AIDS Epidemic Over or Has it Just Changed Direction?" at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. Free.

Meditation — The Bangs Senior Center will hold "Heart to Heart and Soul to Soul Communication" from 7 to 9 p.m. at 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst.

Meeting — Pi Sigma Alpha Honor Society will be hosting the second annual Career Forum for political science majors from 4:30 to 6 p.m. on the sixth floor of Thompson Tower. For more info, contact Bill Ramsey at 549-1035.

Notices

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Comedy — The UMass improv comedy show Mission Improvable will perform every Saturday in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Chemical exchange — The UMass Reuse/Exchange inventory is now available at http://www.unix.oit.umass.edu/~safety/rex1.html. The items on this list are available free of charge and will be delivered on a first-come, first-served basis. Call 545-2682 for more info.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Karate — The UMass Shotoran Karate Club is now accepting new members. No prior experience necessary. Come watch and join our daily training in a traditional Japanese martial art. For more info, contact Loukia at 549-8058 or Ian at 549-5485.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MASSPIRG, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253-0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them, and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop overeating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617)641-2303.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will hold free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. every Saturday in February at Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. Appropriate for all ages. Dates: Feb. 15 and 22. For information, call Tom Whitney at 256-6234.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

UMass after dark
The UMass campus shines in the cold February night sky.

OJ

continued from page 1

staff. Attorney Daniel Petrocelli urged jurors to make Simpson pay heavily and take away his "beautiful life."

Jurors took note of both sides. An hour into deliberations, they requested documents detailing the plaintiffs' rosy view of Simpson's financial future and a chart from Simpson's lawyers showing how his fortunes plummeted since his murder acquittal from more than $10 million to some $800,000 in the red.

Before plaintiffs can claim their money, Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki must decide whether the awards are reasonable, or inflated by irrational passions. He can pare them down if he chooses.

Under California law, any punitive award is supposed to bear some resemblance to the defendant's financial state: It's supposed to hurt him but not destroy him.

Simpson also could appeal, but that would not let him postpone payment.

Once Fujisaki certifies the verdict and awards, the plaintiffs can go after Simpson's assets almost immediately, seizing bank accounts and auctioning property.

It looks like the real world.
It feels like the real world.
It pays like the real world.
It's an internship.
Unreal.

Visit Our Booth at the UMASS Career Fair on Wednesday, February 12th.
Call for more information on this unbelievable opportunity.

Kate Kane
The Steffen Agency
1351 Main Street
Springfield, MA 01103
413/748-6000
or 1-800-CALL-NML

Northwestern Mutual Life
The Quiet Company®
http://www.NorthwesternMutual.com
© 1997 The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., Milwaukee, WI

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Rhythm Man
Chris Perna, 18, an English major chills out and practices on the snare drum for the UMass marching band.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 5
There was a two vehicle accident on Massachusetts Avenue.
There was a two vehicle accident on Orchard Hill Drive.
There was an accident between a bus and tow truck on Presidents Drive.
A vehicle knocked over a light pole on Emerson Road.
A two vehicle accident occurred on Fearing Street.
Feb. 6
A vehicle backed into a parked vehicle in parking lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue.
A two vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue. One operator was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.
A two vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue.
A two vehicle occurred on University Drive.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 5
There was a complaint of a bat in a room at Thoreau Residence Hall.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Feb. 5
A mountain bike was stolen from a vehicle that was broken into in parking lot 12 on Forestry Way.
Feb. 6
A telephone was stolen from a room in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Health/Safety Hazard
Feb. 7
Environmental Health and Safety was called for a burnt out light bulb on Infirmary Way.

Larceny
Feb. 5
An individual from Coolidge Residence Hall reported illegal purchases on his credit card.
A television was reported stolen from a suite in Brown Residence Hall.
Feb. 6
Vikram Gaur, 23, of 25 Hickman Dr., Hopewell Junction, N.Y. was arrested in the Campus Center for shoplifting and resisting a police officer's lawful arrest.
Feb. 7
A telephone was stolen from a Campus Center office.
A valuable fur coat was stolen from Gorman Residence Hall.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Dang T. Dung, 21, of 77 Bromfield St., Lawrence, Dangkhoa Vu Trinh, 18, of 5 Richmond Court, Lawrence and Pham Q. Tuan, 19, of 15 Mt. Vernon St., Dorchester, were arrested for breaking and entering, possession of burglarious instruments, larceny over $250 and malicious destruction of property over $250.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 5
David Lee, 21, of 48 Holy Family Rd., Holyoke, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for operating a motor vehicle with a revoked license.
Erin B. Mahoney, 22, of 1 Cabot St., Milton,, was arrested on Campus Center Way for operating a motor vehicle without a license.
Mark J. McDonough, 21, of 265 Salem St., Wakefield, was arrested on University Drive for operating a motor vehicle without a license.
Feb. 7
William T. Mack, 22, of 168 Gaskill Rd., Owego, N.Y. was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for operation a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Vandalism
Feb. 5
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 40 on Hicks Way.
Feb. 6
A large window was smashed in the lobby of John Adams Residence Hall.
Lounge furniture was thrown from the 7th floor of Webster Residence Hall. Three individuals will be summoned to court.
Feb. 7
Three tires were slashed on a vehicle in parking lot 49 on Van Meter Road.
A swastika was painted on a wall in the stairwell of Baker Residence Hall.

Do you have a news story?

If you or someone you know has information that could lead to a news story, call the Collegian news office at 545- 4794.

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

Huge Campus-Wide Career Fair
sponsored by the University Career Center and EDS and Digital Semiconductor

Wednesday 12 February, 1997

10am – 3pm
Campus Center Auditorium

PLUS Rooms 162, 174 & hallways

Abercrombie & Fitch	CIGNA	Gould Farm	Lockheed Martin	Procter & Gamble	Sybase
Amerinex-Applied Imaging	Clean Water Action	Grocery Manufacture	MIT Lincoln Labs	Prudential Preferred	State Indus. Products
Aerotek	Data Viz	Hamilton Standard	Mitre Corp	PIRG	TJ. Maxx/Marshalls
Agile Networks-Lucent Tech.	Digital	Harvard Pilgrim Health	NY Life	Putnam Investments	3Com Corp.
Baystate Health Systems	Dow Jones & Co., Inc.	HBO & Co	Nine West Group	Quad/Graphics	U.S.D.O.T.(Volpe)
Bright Horizons	Dun & Bradstreet	Hit or Miss Amerinex	Northeast Utilities	Random House(publ.)	U.S. Robotics
Business Data Systems	EDS	Host Marriott	NW Mutual Life	Registry (consultants)	Universal Systems
C-Grams	EF Education	Hygienetics Environ.	Olympia Sports	Sears	UNUM
C.W. Costello (consulting)	Executive Risk	IBM	Hilton Hotel	Sherwin-Williams Co.	USDA Wildlife
Celmic Corp.	Ferguson Enterprises	InfoCellular	Pfizer, Inc.	SIS Bank	Veratec
	Filene's/The May Co.	Investors Bank & Trust	Phoenix Home Life	Sphere (educ. consortium)	Wallace
	Fugro East(envir. consult.)	Keane, Inc.	Polaroid	Sprint	Wal*Mart
	GE & GTE Technol Corp.	Keyport Life Insurance	Polo Ralph Lauren	Star Markets
	Genetics Institute	Logica	Pratt & Whitney	Sun Microsystems	(partial list only)

A Great Networking Opportunity

☞ Look Sharp
☞ Bring Your Resume
☞ Ask for Business Cards
☞ Project Enthusiasm ... Ask Questions

Stop By Table 64 to Register with the Career Center for Campus Recruiting & Electronic Resume Referral

University Career Center • 434-2224

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: Office Use Only
Date to run: February 14, 1996 Headline: Personals
S.S.# _____ Total Words: _____ X .10¢ rate = _____
Total Cost (w/specials) _____ Authorized signature: _____

Specials

Free Red Spot Color w/purchase of a graphic	Graphic #1 ♡ ❒
$2.50 Heart Graphic at Beginning & End ❒	Graphic #2 ❣ ❒
$5 Heart Graphic Border ❒	Graphic #3 ❤ ❒
$7 Heart Shadowed Behind Message ❒	Graphic #4 ❦ ❒

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN/UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
VALENTINE'S DAY CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Cash ❒ Check # _____ VISA/MC# _____ Exp._____

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

COMING SOON... VALENTINE'S DAY!

• Whether you...Want to be funny/play a joke
• Want to make a good friend smile
• Be a secret admirer
• Want to say a little "I love you"

Reserve Your Valentine's Day Collegian Personal by Wednesday, February 12th for the Collegian's Friday, February 14th Valentine's Day Issue.
Place as many as you like - No Limit per person.

For more information call the Collegian @ 545-3500 Drop off order forms @ Collegian in the Campus Center basement or mail to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003 (by 2/12)

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghurram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majercwski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Peppas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1996. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

What will our legacy be?

In a thousand years, how will historians remember our society and the state of world affairs in our time? Is there a defining person or topic that will receive all of the attention in those history books? What do you think it would be?

Because so many people have so many ideas about how this world is supposed to work, one could assume that there would be many arguments. If I could write a chapter in those history books, a permanent reminder of what it meant to grow up in the '80s and '90s, I would not focus on Bill Clinton or Boris Yeltsin or Newt Gingrich. While these figures are indeed historical, they can only go so far in producing an image of our society.

I wouldn't write about our space program or any of our recent wars or the dawn of the Information Age. Scientific advancement and warfare are so common that our years would quickly and quietly disappear from recorded history altogether. The defining concept or legacy of a historical era effects each and every one of that society's members in ways that societies had not previously been affected.

> "The defining image of our era has loomed over our society for more than 15 years now, it has provoked fear and hate and tears and more than anything else... pain."
>
> Mark McGrath

The defining image of our era has loomed over our society for more than 15 years now. It has provoked fear and hate and tears and more than anything else... pain. Yet what I am thinking of is one of the smallest things in all of nature, it's a virus, to be exact, the HIV virus.

I was born in 1975, just a few years before the disease was discovered. Since then, I have seen it go from a mysterious "gay plague" to one of the concerns foremost on society's mind.

I grew up with Ryan White... I never knew him, but nonetheless I grew up with him. I remember the Weekly Readers that attempted to explain to third and fourth graders how society's hate could manifest itself in the face of a child of my own age, but I could never have understood.

To a third grader in the 80's, AIDS was as comprehensible as a black hole. As I grew up, scientists learned more and more about the disease... how it was passed from one person to another... how it attacks a person's own immune system... how it kills.

I remember the day when Magic Johnson stunned the world with the revelation that he was HIV positive, bringing the world of AIDS to an unprecedented number of living rooms. After Magic Johnson, came Greg Louganis and Tommy Morrison, all men who had represented what it means to be a man in our society.

Growing up with a disease of the proportions of AIDS has affected each and every one of us in its own way, whether we've known a sufferer or acted in a different way because of it.

As time has passed, we have educated ourselves to the point where there are now fewer cases of AIDS and HIV in the United States than there were two years ago, but that by no means resolves our problem.

Worldwide, the number of AIDS sufferers continues to grow. Many of the most seriously impacted countries are still developing and have no means to control the spread of the virus.

In Bombay, India, an estimated 50 percent of all prostitutes are HIV positive. In China, the number of cases has increased tenfold in the last two years. The most dramatically affected area is Sub-Saharan Africa, where over five percent of the population has HIV or AIDS. Although residents of the United States may be seeing a decline in its AIDS numbers, the rest of the world is in dire need of a cure.

Right now, researchers know more about the disease and the virus that causes it than they ever have before. Pioneers like David Ho, who was named Time's Man of the Year for 1996, are leading the way to a cure, but without our help, their efforts may be useless.

Drug "cocktails," mixtures of anti-AIDS drugs which have had some good preliminary results have offered some hope to people who are wealthy enough to afford them, but in most cases, AIDS is much like a death sentence, save for the fact that you can't appeal and you don't have to commit a capital offense to get it.

What is needed most desperately is a vaccine, which could stop the spread of the disease. Scientists may not even be close to finding such a cure, but we must keep them working on it. Our lives could depend upon it. The HIV virus is known for its ability to adapt and change for its own survival. What if it were to change into an airborne virus or one which could be transferred like the common cold? The results could be devastating.

The war on AIDS could be the World War of the 21st Century. As a responsible society, if indeed that is what we would like to be called, it is our duty to knock out the threat of AIDS while there remains a glimmer of hope.

AIDS is our legacy. For if we are unable to deal with it, then it's feasible that AIDS could mark the end of our history altogether.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

The X factor

Jeremy Hurewitz

She had long, auburn–brown hair framing an attractive but tightly bunched face. She wore a hip, '70s style, black– leather jacket. Underneath it was a burgundy T–shirt, with some sort of necklace and pendant hanging between her breasts. Her shirt ended right at her waistline and she was constantly fidgeting, exposing her maddening, slim waistline and contoured belly. Below she wore tight blue jeans that cradled her lovely bottom as closely as the most devoted mother cradles her newborn child.

X and I were sitting in a bar uptown. "Girls like that really piss me off," X exclaimed.

It wasn't her good looks or her meretricious clothes that caused my friend X to lash out in male anger. It was her behavior. She strutted up and down the bar, noticing no one, seemingly waiting or looking for something of importance. She stopped here and there to light a new cigarette and sigh deeply, as if wishing she were somewhere else.

"Well... she's good looking," I said, half–heartedly.

X looked at me with thinly veiled disgust.

I felt bad for X. I could deal with the fact that she was attractive but also appeared so self–absorbed and cold, but he was obviously having a hard time. He still resented his conflicting desires: both to pursue and to ignore. She had the key to his garden and he was pissed because he didn't remember giving it to her.

I tried pointing out that it was useless to resist. Man falls for woman, empires crumble, friendships die, politicians fall, preachers are scandalized, marriages end. But don't forget the good stuff, I told X: falling in love, growing old together, sex and all its sweaty ecstasy. I implored X to not think of the negatives that arise out of our biological tendencies and to resign himself to the desultory nature of our attractions. Don't worry about your desire for her, I told him.

"No way man. I wouldn't touch her," X said, finishing his beer and pouring a new one. A look of futility glimmered in his eyes like he was a dog chasing his tail.

We kept drinking and she kept doing her pixie thing, up and down the bar like it was a catwalk in Milan. I kept noticing different guys ogling her then leaning into their friends to make comments. The whole scene sickened me. The guys sickened me more than our attractive barmate. They were so obvious. Is there any way out of this maze?

As we were getting ready to leave, who came our way but the evening's main attraction, herself.

"Hey do you think you could give me a lift home?" she asked, smiling at X, raising her arm to ash her cigarette, exposing her taught belly.

"Uh... sure," X said, sheepishly, submissively.

They left before me and I watched them, or rather her, begin to talk as they exited. I buttoned my jacket, dumped back the rest of my beer and left a minute later.

Outside, the cold hostile air enveloped me and froze my buzz into my brain. I started to think about X and that girl. What would happen? Would he just drop her off and drive away forever? Something more?

I got a little angry at the hypocrisy of X's actions. At least I was honest about my addiction to the female and not hung up with false machismo that crumbled to dust upon the touch of a women. Why had she chosen him? To prove she could break him and his declarations? Was she close enough before to hear his statements? Things get confusing when you're drinking...

Deep at the heart of this was an overriding ambiguity that frames our anarchic existence. An X–factor, that is, of contradictions. Born out of nihillistic ennui, something in the human spirit makes us act against our better judgement. It makes for spontaneity and unpredictability, which is life's elixir, but it often creates some odd, humiliating behavior, like tonight.

I started my car and drove to the package store. I felt frightened and really small in the scheme of things. A full moon, God's eye, stood watch on the clear evening.

I got a bottle of Cabernet Sauvignon and went back to my apartment. I didn't want to face people tonight. We behave so poorly and without reason. I would drink alone, with my X–factor, and file the night: unknown.

Jeremy Hurewitz is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

History includes everyone

Seema Gangatirkar

For centuries, school curricula have focused on Euro– centric ideas and history, paying only lip service to other regions of the globe.

We celebrate Columbus, honor him with a day named after him. He cruised the Atlantic, found the Caribbean and discovered this wonderful land for Spain.

In the process, he wiped out the Arawaks, obliterating traditions and culture, all in the name of religion and wealth. He also paved the way for the destruction of the Incas and Aztecs, bringing warfare, disease and genocide to the New World.

Yet he is celebrated in our schools and in his honor, we get a long weekend every year. Propaganda, in the form of history, has turned this man into a hero.

The truth is, history is written to suit the authors. If the authors happen to be white and of European descent, that's the point of view that is force–fed to students every day in history classes.

We are taught about medieval Europe, about the Renaissance and the Mona Lisa. Yet we know nothing about Korean culture or the conflict in Tibet unless we seek out this information for ourselves.

We are taught that the United States is the greatest country in the world. We are never given an opportunity to think otherwise, partly because we are taught to disdain and revile communist governments like China or feel sorry for developing nations like Kenya.

The main characters in the history books are mostly white, though there is a sprinkling of color here and there. There are pages and pages devoted to the Founding Fathers, to the explorers, to our glorious military tradition. There is little mention of the subjugation of the Native Americans, little mention of Andrew Johnson's Trail of Tears.

Instead we are amused with tales of Manifest Destiny, to reach the Pacific Ocean. The gold rush and the spread of railroad across the country, never mind the Chinese who worked endlessly on creating the new transportation system.

To read history books, you would think that the only African Americans of consequence in this country are Harriet Tubman, Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X.

But there is more to African American history than those three people. For instance, ever hear of Benjamin Banneker?

If you're confused about who Banneker is, you can still see examples of his work in our capital city. That's right, Banneker was one of three men commissioned by President George Washington in 1790 to design Washington, D.C. When one of the architects quit, Banneker and his team reconstructed the city plans from memory.

Or how about Fannie Lou Hamer, who in 1962 was fired from her job as a sharecropper when she registered to vote? Hamer turned her disadvantage into opportunity and organized a registration drive in Mississippi. According to the Boston Globe, her work led to one of the most influential political organizations in the modern civil rights era, the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party.

August Tollen, in 1886, became the first African–American ordained Catholic priest.

Frances Ellen Watkins Harper helped slaves escape to Canada. Later she became a well–known poet and speaker for women's rights.

Senator B.K. Bruce, a former runaway slave was elected to the Senate in Mississippi in 1874 and later, he was the register of the treasury and his signature appeared on all currency issued by the United States during his term.

You might want to toss in the argument the reason African Americans and other minority groups are summarily left out of history books (unless conquered by the mighty United States) is precisely because they are minorities and who really cares about a small fraction of the population in this country?

But we have to care. It's necessary in a country like the United States that we care about everyone— that we leave no one out. This is not a homogeneous country, but at no time in history have we been able to claim, with a straight face, that the United States is a melting pot of cultures and ideas.

Rather we are a nation with simmering resentments, most recently exemplified by the O.J. Simpson case. We are a country that leaves people of color and their ideas out in the cold. We're a country that ignores minorities, a country that denies them place in history books.

Somehow, we forget that everyone here, with the exception of Native Americans, were once immigrants. And in 300 years, people from all over the world have come to the United States, to build a better life and to make this a great country.

As such our history ought to represent everyone. A country cannot be truly great unless everyone who contributed to that greatness is included.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

GEO seeks support

To the Editor:

It is no great mystery that the strength of a country lies in the education which is available to its residents. However, we often underappreciate (or perhaps we forget) how fortunate we are to be a part of a public institution. One of the ultimate aims of UMass, as a public university, is extending the possibility of higher education to all the citizens of the Commonwealth. The emphasis on expanding access to the University of Massachusetts system is one of the top priorities the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO). Affiliated with Local 2322/ UAW, GEO champions all of the issues relating to education access. One clear and poignant example is the extreme lack of affordable child care needed by many students in order for them to attend the University. Additionally, GEO is a strong supporter of affirmative action policies designed to enable enrollment of students of color, along with the associated recruitment and retention of faculty and staff of color.

One of the other focuses of GEO currently is attaining wages and benefits which will make it viable for most graduate students to attend and devote themselves to the University. Graduate student employees are vital to the operation of undergraduate programs (with their work as teaching assistants) and to maintain the reputation of UMass as a quality research institution (through their work as research assistants and so forth). These issues, along with those mentioned above, are at the heart of the ongoing contract negotiations between GEO and UMass. Thus far, there has been much talk about UMass' commitment to these issues, and how much UMass values the work of its graduate student employees. However, since June of 1996, UMass has yet to provide these workers with a contract. The time is long overdue for UMass to put their money where their lip service is.

Are you wondering how these issues affect you — why they should matter to you? "I'm not a graduate student," you say. But the truth is: when GEO benefits, the university community benefits as a whole. Stop by the GEO office in the bottom of the student union, or give us a call at 545–0705 — we'd love to talk with you about how the concerns of GEO affect us all.

Support graduate employees — support access to UMass — GEO!

Adrianne Bushey Hadley

Collegian needs to balance coverage

To the Editor:

With no surprise last Friday (Feb. 7), I read a Campus Perspectives in our Daily Collegian about the O.J. Simpson Civil Trial verdict. This reading brought to mind an incident in which I was involved. I was falsely accused of stealing from the University Campus Store. The accusers were two highly educated white security students to whom my skin color was sufficient to make their judgment and assumption. Not surprisingly, our Daily Collegian at first did not consider exposing the incident to the campus community by confining their report in the Black Affairs section. Nevertheless, with the defiance of minority and white students, we brought the issue to the attention of not only the campus community but to the nation. At that point the incident (the false accusation) was being discussed in the classroom as well as offices on campus; yet the unbiased editors of our Daily Collegian judged that it was unnecessary to have Campus Perspectives on an issue dear to the students on this campus. Perhaps it is not too late for our Daily Collegian to balance the equation... recall that as soon as racism persists in this campus, so will we!

It is time for our Daily Collegian to play a better role in informing the campus community. They should use their massaging power as a tool to rally students as a unit not to divide. Diversity is a symbol of strength, an instrument of power, a reservoir of wealth and resources... Artists use different colored inks to beautify their work and to convey their message. America is the greatest country in the world because it has the brightest minds of all races.

Pierre Arthur Elysee Southwest

Arts & Living

Tuesday, Feburary 11, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Punk thrives with Distortion

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

SOCIAL DISTORTION
Tuxedo Junction
Feb. 9

For over 15 years, the name Mike Ness has been synonymous with the true essence of punk rock. He has experienced things that your average white, suburban, upper middle class, fashion–oriented, new–school punk rocker could never begin to relate too. He has spent time in jail and fought the demons of drug addiction. Once he even admitted to believing he was Sid Vicious in a raging fit of angst– filled self–destruction.

Ness has always found an outlet for these experiences through his music, Last Sunday, he and his band Social Distortion targeted their rage at the ridiculous audience at Tuxedo Junction in Danbury, Conn. With amazing support from opening acts Swingin' Utters and the Supersuckers, Social Distortion played an amazing set with songs from throughout their career.

After a 30–minute intermission between bands, Social Distortion took the stage with the utmost confidence and energy. Ness commented on the weather and then calmly asked, "you guys wanna hear some punk rock?"

The band then broke into a cover of the Stones' "Under My Thumb" which appears untitled on Social D's latest release White Light, White Heat, White Trash. For the next hour, Ness and company rarely slowed down, despite the crowd's hesitancy to give older songs a chance.

The first part of the set consisted of such classic punk anthems as "Mommy's Little Monster," "Prison Bound" and "Another State of Mind." However the crowd didn't seem to even acknowledge the band's presence until they played the MTV hit single "I Was Wrong."

At one point, Ness began to explain the sensitive nature of a new song called "When Angels Sing," only to be greeted with jeers.

"Real life for me isn't singing about fraternities," Ness said in a classic response which separated the true punk fans from the rest of the audience.

Other highlights of the show included brilliant renditions of the anti–war anthem "1945," and the Social Distortion theme "Bad Luck." it was the rock star encore however, that really made the evening complete.

Ness returned to the stage and introduced the next song as a punk rock love song. He then returned to their self–titled 1990 release for the remainder of the evening. After completing the ballad, "Ball and Chain," he wiped the mascara ridden tears away from under his eyes and paid homage to his inspiration.

"A long time ago, there was an outlaw who wore all black, and his name was Johnny Cash." Social Distortion then ended a nearly flawless performance in much the same way they began it, with a cover song. At least this band knows where they came from and their performance of Cash's "Ring of Fire" proved it.

The comic relief of the evening went to the Seattle cowboy band, The Supersuckers. With a completely unique sound and appearance, the Supersuckers played an interesting mix of country–western and heavy metal and somehow attempted to pass it of as pop punk. Equipped with cowboy hats, rodeo shirts and Elvis snares, The Supersuckers brought back the cynical humor of classic punk. The lead singer, who surprisingly seemed to have quite a low self–esteem, used impressive charm to ridicule certain members of the audience.

The evening began on the right foot however, thanks to the San Francisco–based Swingin Utters. Proof that quality punk did not die in 1977, the Utters dedicated the majority of the set to their latest album Juvenile Product of the Working Class. The Utters recently finished opening up for the first leg of the Descendent's reunion tour and they sounded energetic and well experienced. They blasted their way through such raw passionate songs as "No Time to Play," and "London Drunk." The highlight of the set was the absolute breathtaking rendition of "Teenage Genocide," from their last album The Streets of San Francisco. All in all, each band did their part to prove punk will not die without a fight, even if the audience should.

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS

MATHEMATICS

DATE: TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1997
TIME: 4:00 PM
LOCATION: LEDERLE GRADUATE RESEARCH TOWER - ROOM 1634

SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

ALUMNI PANELISTS:

EILEEN ADAMS '88	DATA ANALYST - SOFTWARE ENGINEER LINCOLN LABORATORY LEXINGTON, MA
DARYL MILLER '88	FINANCIAL CONSULTANT SMITH BARNEY BOSTON, MA
NANCY SINCLAIR '90	COMPUTER SYSTEMS CONSULTANT THE REGISTRY, INC BOSTON, MA

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

Touching memoir explores illness

By Adam Klein
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts Professor Jay Neugeboren performed a reading from his new book, Imagining Robert, My Brother, Madness and Survival, on Saturday. The audience reached nearly full capacity at the Jeffrey Amherst Bookshop in Amherst.

The book is a memoir of Neugeboren's experience growing up in the 1940s and 1950s, and centers around his brother Robert's first breakdown just before the age of 19.

Neugeboren has received many awards including the Guggenheim fellowship. The book received a laudatory review in the Sunday New York Times.

Neugeboren read from chapter four, which was about the author and his brother's relationship with their parents:

"I see the book as a family history... we were alike in so many ways," Neugeboren said regarding his envy for Robert's close relationship with their mother.

According to Neugeboren, although the book is "not exactly a thigh slapper," the audience laughed in response to several humorous passages. One audience member said the reading was "funny and sad at the same time."

Neugeboren said that a major motivation for writing the memoir was to get at the reason why Robert, not he, has spent the better part of the last 35 years in and out of mental institutions and halfway houses.

"The very history of the ways in which our century deals with those it calls mentally ill... has for many years now been passing through my brother's mind and body," Neugeboren said. Neugeboren listed a few of the many drugs and therapies that Robert has been prescribed, including lithium and shock treatment.

Justine Dymond and Marco Bisaccia, graduate students in UMass' English department, as well as students of Neugeboren, said that he never talked about this book or his brother in or out of class.

"He doesn't believe in writing as therapy," Bisaccia said. Both students purchased the book at the reading.

Neugeboren, who talks to his brother almost every day, said that Robert, "has been doing a little better lately." Part of this recent improvement, according to Neugeboren, is due in part to Robert's recent enthusiasm over the book's publication.

Neugeboren explained that when he brought the book to show to his brother, "he just sat there stroking the [cover] photo, saying, 'this is something no one can take away from us'."

COURTESY STEPHEN LONG
UMass English Professor Jay Neugeboren, author of Imagining Robert.

Always in Bloom
Valentine's Day
Friday, February 14th
LOCAL ROSES, DUTCH, & EXOTIC BOUQUETS
SPECIALS
AVAILABLE LOCALLY ONLY
HUGS & KISSES
HUGS: An adorable 8" white bear holding a red rose and a balloon $19.95
KISSES: A cuddly soft 12" white bear with a red rose and balloon $24.60
220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
WE DELIVER ANYWHERE
253-5545 253-7228

Get primed.

The Sherwin-Williams Company, a leader in the paint/coatings industry, is seeking achieving sales-oriented individuals who are recent college grads for our extensive entry level management training program in the Greater Boston vicinity. We think this great career opportunity with a company like ours is something to get excited about.

Who we are
– Fortune 500
– 130 year History of Success
– Industry Leader
– $4 Billion in Sales
– Aggressive Growth

What we offer
– Competitive Compensation
• Salary • Benefits
• Bonus • Recognition Program
– Well Defined Career Path
– Promotions Based On Merit
– Structured Training Program
• 6 Weeks Store Level Hands-On
• Workbook Modules
• 1 Week Headquarters Classroom Forum

We seek those who:
• Are Competitive
• Desire To Succeed
• Have Strong Work Ethics
• Are Interested In: Running a business, Including Profit/Loss Responsibilities; Credit/Collections; Wholesale/Retail Store Operations; Inventory Control; Human Resources Management and Wholesale Market Development.

These entry level store management positions require a 4 year college degree and can open the way to many career paths which can lead to tremendous opportunities in areas such as Branch Management, Outside Commercial Industrial Sales, and District Level Management.

Please join us at the Career Fair on Wednesday, February 12th. However, if you are unable to attend, please send your resume to: Jeff Kaufmann, The Sherwin-Williams Company, 313 Technology Dr., Malvern, PA 19355 or fax your resume to: 610-640-4265. An equal opportunity employer who welcomes the opportunity to add a diversity of people to our rich culture.

SHERWIN Williams

TOC Bar & Grill
Tuesday, Feb. 11 at 7:30pm
UMASS vs. St. Bonaventure
Munchie Specials Mon - Fri 4 - 7 PM
Free Popcorn Draft Beer Drink Specials & Micro Brews
UMass basketball
11th Floor Campus Center
Mon-Fri 4 - 12:30
Sat 5 - 12:30

Broken-up indie rock band Holiday is sorely missed

By Jonathan Liberty
Collegian Staff

Indie pop fans all over the country were devastated last month when Holiday broke up. Shortly after Tweefest '97 (Push Kings, Racecar, Jumprope, etc.) the four boys from Brooklyn called it quits.

Holiday sang their sweet pop songs for over three years, pleasing crowds of kids all over the United States — they did a national tour last summer which included several west coast dates.

Many Five College students may have had the pleasure of seeing them play live at the University. Holiday played two shows at Greenough in Feb. '95 and Dec. '96. The cute drum playing of Calvin Chin made all the kids smile.

The band leaves behind two full length albums, Holiday (their self-titled debut) and Ready, Steady, Go!, both via March Records.

The anxiously awaited Holiday featured such pop treasures as Holly, Obviously Love and She Never. The hand claps kept the pop real while the falsetto vocals added to the creation of a boy pop wonder group.

To appease fans, Holiday released a 5 song CD-EP featuring Who's Gonna Find Out— an up tempo pop song leading to their next album.

Then in the summer of '96, Holiday pleased many of their fans with their sophomore LP Ready, Steady, Go! Fewer hand claps and slower music gave the album a more serious sound.

The reasons for the downfall of such a successful pop group leave many questions for indie pop kids everywhere. However, seeing the band interact during an overnight stay at Kristen Wilbur's house let me witness the tensions of these four Yale graduates.

Not only did their majors vary greatly, from religious studies to economics to classics, but so did their personalities. The tension was fierce between the lead singer and the lead guitarist, at times leading to personal attacks at family members.

Overall, Holiday was a group of four intelligent young men who played great pop music for three years. Maybe they tired of the long road trips and the small payoffs, or maybe it was those darned double-breasted navy blue suits.

Either way, they have promising futures as long as they didn't burn their Yale diplomas in a fiery indie pop rebellion.

Hold on to those 7" releases and remember: "We never should have moved to Reno, big moutains and big casinos, bright lights and American cars, too many free drinks at all the wrong bars, we should've moved to San Fransisco, gay bars and the Latin Disco, Tenuki girls, Japanese karyoke the way I felt when you used to hold me... You've got nothing, you've got nothing at all."

Fill this space with your clever witticisms and insightful commentary. Please.

Write for Collegian Arts.

U.S. delayed telling Japan about uranium

By Yuri Kageyama
Associated Press

TOKYO — Stirring up new ill will with authorities on Okinawa, the U.S. military acknowledged Monday that its jets mistakenly fired 1,520 uranium bullets during shooting practice near the island, then waited a year before notifying Japan. U.S. officials said the bullets posed no environmental or health threat. It wasn't clear why they waited until Jan. 16 to tell Japan about the gunfire at a firing range on an uninhabited coral island in late 1995 and early 1996.

But the incidents occurred at the height of tensions on Okinawa over the heavy U.S. military presence there and the rape of a schoolgirl by three U.S. servicemen.

Okinawa's governor was furious at the delay in notification. "They keep saying they will make improvements, but it never happens," Masahide Ota said. "When I start wondering how much longer this kind of thing is going to continue, I feel miserable — really depressed."

Foreign Ministry official Sadayuki Hayashi said the delayed notification was as regrettable as the accident itself.

But the Japanese government also stalled the disclosure, hastily calling a news conference only after the report of the bullets first surfaced yesterday in The Washington Times.

Japan also failed to tell local Okinawan officials until after the newspaper report, the Asahi newspaper said in Tuesday's editions.

The U.S. government said the bullets pose no health or environmental danger, and that they are only as radioactive as old color TV sets.

"These are conventional weapons, the gunnery range is isolated and we felt this should not have caused undue concern," U.S. military spokesman Lt. Col. Kevin Krejcarek told The Associated Press.

Some Japanese were not convinced.

"This is outrageous. The U.S. military often tries cover-ups. This time, the notification came so late. It is insulting," Meisuke Kohiruimaki, who works with a group opposing the U.S. military presence in Japan, told Asahi.

The uranium bullets are not classified as nuclear weapons. But Japan, the only nation to sustain an atomic bombing, is extremely sensitive to anything radioactive.

Uranium rounds are not allowed on training ranges in Japan under U.S. Marine Corps policy, although they are used during exercises on approved ranges in the United States.

An AV-8B Harrier aircraft fired the 25-mm rounds — each containing 5.2 ounces of depleted uranium — because they had been incorrectly labeled, the U.S. government said. Uranium is used in some ammunition because it can pierce armor and other hard material.

The delay in notification seemed contrary to reforms announced by the United States in December to make U.S. troops less of a burden on Okinawa. A major element of the reforms, promised as part of a renegotiation of the U.S. military presence on Okinawa, was to provide more timely information on aircraft accidents.

About two-thirds of the 47,000 U.S. troops in Japan are stationed on Okinawa, and residents long have resented their presence. The September 1995 rape of a 12-year-old girl sent tens of thousands of protesters into the streets.

The already troubled efforts to shift some of the troops to other parts of Japan probably will face even more opposition now that Japanese trust in the U.S. military has been dealt another blow.

The U.S. military in Japan said in a statement that it has informed Tokyo that "it regrets these incidents and the late notification."

Dave Quist... nominated for three Emmys, including Webmaster of the Year and tool of the year.

Arteaga holds out for amendment

Ecuadorian president won't leave until constitution is changed

By Monty Hayes
Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador — Just a day into her job, Ecuador's president challenged the terms of her emergency appointment, stirring new turmoil yesterday by insisting she will step down only when the constitution is amended.

Rosalia Arteaga, 40, ascended from Ecuador's vice presidency to the top position on Sunday following last week's political crisis in which Congress dismissed President Abdala Bucaram for "mental incapacity."

Under an agreement engineered by the powerful military and reportedly accepted by Arteaga and Congress, she was to fill the presidency only until legislators could elect an interim president, who in turn would call new elections. But yesterday, the 40-year-old Arteaga stepped up her challenge of the lawmakers' authority to replace her.

Conservative Congressman Heinz Moeller accused Arteaga of trying to "usurp power without popular and legal support."

"It appears ambition has awoken in her and she wants to retain power beyond the commitment she made," Moeller said.

Since the start of the crisis, Arteaga has maintained that under Ecuador's constitution, the vice president is the successor to the president.

Yesterday, her choice for interior minister, Gil Barragan, said that if Congress intends to elect an interim president, it first will have to amend the constitution, which currently makes no mention of an interim leader.

"Congress must reform the constitution because it cannot elect an interim president. If it does, it would be violating the constitution," Barragan told reporters.

"The president would be willing to agree to leave the post when the figure of an interim president is in the constitution," he said.

Congress plans to convene Tuesday to debate who the interim president should be. Congressional President Fabian Alarcon says he has the support of 50 lawmakers.

The congressional measure that put Arteaga temporarily in power says the interim president is to be chosen with a simple majority of Congress' 82 seats. Constitutional reform, on the other hand, requires 55 votes.

When Congress unanimously approved the measure on Sunday, it brought relief to Ecuadoreans who endured a month of violent street protests against Bucaram, including a nationwide 48-hour strike last week.

Bucaram, whom critics accuse of corruption, nepotism and embarrassing behavior during his six months in office, claims Arteaga conspired to oust him with the support of the military. Arteaga was sworn into office in the national palace Sunday. Military chief Gen. Paco Moncayo was at her side, and the armed forces declared their loyalty to Arteaga and to "the legitimately elected authority of the National Congress."

But yesterday, fears of a possible military takeover resurfaced. "A coup cannot be discounted," Benjamin Ortiz, editor of the newspaper Hoy and a key player in the negotiations to end the political crisis, said in an interview.

"I heard a military commander say: 'We have tried our best to respect the constitution, but if this political problem becomes a problem of national security or survival of the state, regrettably we will have to take other steps.'"

The armed forces last ruled Ecuador from 1972 to 1979. Before last year's presidential elections, there were strong rumors that Gen. Moncayo was so disgusted with Ecuador's political leaders that he was considering a coup.

Violence erupts in Spain; justice shot dead

By Leon Lazaroff
Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — A Supreme Court justice was shot dead outside his Madrid home yesterday in an apparent reprisal for the court's investigation of a political group tied to Basque separatist militants.

The assassination followed the suicides of an imprisoned member of the separatist ETA group on Friday and of an ETA political leader yesterday.

Also yesterday, a car bomb exploded in the southern city of Granada as an air force van passed by, killing one passenger in the van and wounding seven other people.

The violence — authorities blamed ETA for the justice's assassination and the car bombing — made a peaceful solution to Spain's "Basque problem" seem more remote than ever.

"Things will have to be much calmer before real solutions can be studied," said Paul Ortega, a political analyst with the UNESCO Center in the Basque city of Bilbao.

ETA, an acronym for Basque Homeland and Liberty, has killed almost 800 people since 1968, when it began fighting for independence for northern Spain's Basque regions.

Yesterday afternoon, two gunmen approached Supreme Court Justice Rafael Martinez Emperador outside his apartment building in an upscale Madrid neighborhood. One of the men opened fire and the assailants fled, leaving Martinez lying on the sidewalk.

Passersby covered the body with a white tablecloth from a nearby restaurant. It quickly turned red.

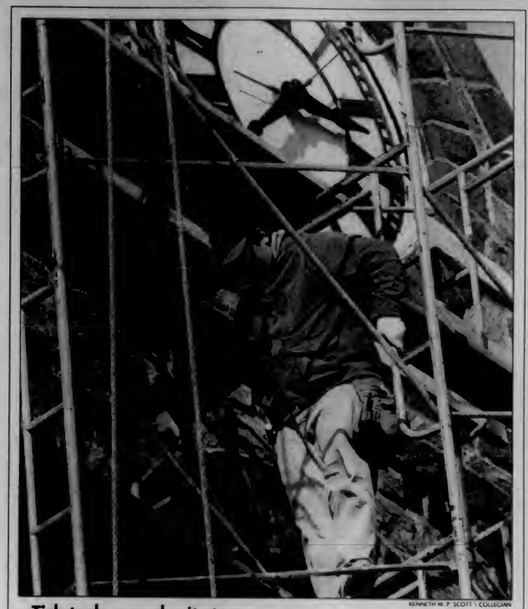
Police said the 9 mm pistol used in the attack and the way it was carried out were typical of ETA.

The president of the National Court, which regularly tries ETA gunmen, called the assassination an attack on Spain's judicial system.

"This is a brutal attempt to intimidate the courts so the judges will not carry out their duties," Clemente Auger said. One of Martinez's colleagues on the Supreme Court, Jose Luis Manzanares, said the assassination "was foreseeable. Not in the person of my good friend, but in the person of a Supreme Court judge."

Since last week, the Supreme Court has been summoning all 25 executive board members of the Herri Batasuna coalition, ETA's political arm, on charges that its use of a video made by ETA for last year's general election constituted "collaboration with an armed group." Five of the leaders have been arrested for refusing to appear in court.

Martinez did not belong to the branch of the court that was investigating the coalition.



Just before the Martinez shooting, the body of one of the Herri Batasuna board members, Eugenio Aranburo, was found, hanged, in a house in the Basque town of Mallabia.

Aranburo had been scheduled to appear before the Supreme Court on Monday. The remaining 19 board members are to appear in the coming days.

On Friday, a man imprisoned on charges of being an ETA member was found hanged, an apparent suicide. Young ETA supporters responded to the death by going on a weekend rampage in some Basque cities. Three dozen people were arrested.

The protests picked up last night, when three people were arrested in the northern city of Pamplona after a rally called by Herri Batasuna turned violent, news reports said. Protesters smashed windows and set up barricades in several Basque towns. After Martinez's murder, Deputy Prime Minister Francisco Alvarez Cascos said the government would keep up the pressure on ETA. "The government maintains the same attitude toward these terrorists 365 days a year," he said.

Last week, the Basque National Party — a moderate group that heads the Basque regional government — proposed direct talks between the government and the ETA.

Tick tock, you don't stop.
Manny Belcher carefully puts up staging on the chapel here on campus

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

College freshman dies after frat party ; alcohol poisoning apparently the cause

FROSTBURG, Md. (AP) — Eight students at Frostburg State University were charged with manslaughter in the alcohol poisoning death of a freshman who got drunk at a fraternity party.

The freshman, John Eric Stinner, 20, consumed at least six beers and 12 shots of vodka in two hours at the off-campus Kappa Beta Zeta party, Allegany County State's Attorney Lawrence V. Kelly said Monday.

Friends carried Stinner back to his dormitory room, where he was found dead on Nov. 9 with a blood alcohol content of 0.34 percent, more than three times the legally intoxicated level of 0.10 percent.

The defendants were indicted on Friday and all had been released on their own recognizance by yesterday afternoon, Kelly said. Seven were members of Kappa Beta Zeta, one of several unsanctioned fraternities that hold weekend parties in the western Maryland town of 8,000. The eighth lived in the apartment building where the party was held.

They also were charged with reckless endangerment and sale of alcohol without a license. Stinner, of Glassport, Pa., and other underage drinkers had paid a $3 admission fee to the party, Kelly said.

About 5,700 people died from alcohol poisoning in 1994, the most recent report available from the National Center for Health Statistics. Of those, 375 were 15 to 24 years old.

Felony charges are rare in binge drinking deaths. Two men were charged with involuntary manslaughter in 1995 in the death of a Chickamauga, Ga., high school football player, and an Anderson, Ind., bartender was charged earlier this year with reckless homicide in the death of a man who drank until he passed out.

Be a Resident Assistant!

Help Shape Your Piece of the World

Applications for 1997-1998 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.

Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Receive an Application:

February 12	7:00pm	McNamara Main Lounge
February 13	7:00pm	Webster Classroom
	7:00pm	Stonewall Center, Crampton
February 20	7:00pm	Coolidge 5th floor
	7:00pm	Baker Classroom
February 24	7:00pm	Campus Center 165-9
February 26	12:30pm	Campus Center 165-9
	7:00pm	Knowlton Main Lounge
February 27	7:00pm	Hillel House
	7:00pm	Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge
March 3	7:00pm	Campus Center 804-05
March 4	7:00pm	Patterson Main Lounge

For more information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0472.

DESIGN INVENT CREATE

Use your EDUCATION in ways you never thought possible. DESIGN a new software program. MARKET the next remote access product. CREATE products that fit in the palm of your hand. U.S. Robotics gives entry-level sales professionals MEANINGFUL experience. (You may be new, but your VALUABLE contributions are encouraged, and expected.)

U.S. Robotics is the LEADER in information ACCESS. We make PRODUCTS that connect people with INFORMATION — anytime, anywhere. We hire SALES PEOPLE — with DEGREES in marketing, business, sciences and liberal arts.

Now that you know more about US, we'd like to know more about YOU.

Come see us at the
Career Fair
February 12

If you are unable to stop by, send your resume to: U.S. Robotics, College Relations, 7770 N. Frontage Rd., Skokie, IL 60077, or e-mail: resumes@usr.com We are an equal OPPORTUNITY employer m/f/d/v.

There are NO limits.

U.S.Robotics
The Intelligent Choice in Information Access
HTTP://WWW.USR.COM

GRAND OPENING!
KOREAN CUISINE
ICHIBAN いちばん
Gift Certificate Available
$1 Sushi & Free Karoake
10:30pm - 2:30am
Thurs. - Sat.
15% Discount on Dinner (Except Korean Menu) w/student I.D. expires 2/28/97 Not good with other offers.
Japanese & Korean Restaurant
One Roundhouse Plaza
Northampton, MA
Tel: 413-585-1185

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA • 253-3539
!! TREADMILLS !!

Minutewomen ram Rhode Island

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

Eight first place finishes for the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team in Saturday's meet against Fordam carried them to their first ten win season in 20 years. The Minutewomen's 156–74 score against the Lady Rams finishes their regular season schedule with a 10–3 record.

Diving champ Angelique Rodriguez won the one–meter diving event with a personal–best score of 261.675. She also placed first in the three–meter with a 225.15.

Senior Jessica Farley, who usually swims a 100 or 200 free or the 200 individual medley, brought in a first in her 50 free with a time of 25.29. Shana Strothers, a strong distance freestyler, made a 10:47.10 in the 1000 free. Freshmen Andrea Spencer and Tricia Argentina placed first in the 200 IM (2:14.15) and the 200 fly (2:14.00) respectively.

Rounding out the pack are juniors Karen Sonwald who took the 100 free with a time of 55.62 and Irina Kossenko who won the 200 back in 2:12.90.

Coach Bob Newcomb felt that the girls finished out the last of their dual meets very well.

"We had different people swimming in different events than usual... Trisha (Argentina) had a really good meet and Shana continued to swim well," Newcomb said.

The reason many of the swimmers competed in events they were not used to was because, according to Newcomb, "Fordam is just a weaker team".

Newcomb believes that this final dual meet is a bridge to the upcoming Atlantic–10 Conference Finals.

"We are looking forward to the A–10s. It was hard to concentrate on this dual meet with the Conference so close... I feel that we could be there now. The girls are going to have a week more of rest," Newcomb said.

Seniors that will be going to the Atlantic 10 Conference are Jessica Farley, Jodi Walters, Kristin Schambach and Krystin Carpenter. The Minutewomen placed third out of 9 teams last year in the A–10s.

Was it Jordan's last All-Star game?

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — There will never be another All-Star game like it. Nothing will ever quite match the spectacle of the greatest players in NBA history being introduced together.

There also may never be another All-Star game with Michael Jordan participating. Jordan apparently is wavering on whether he will return to the Chicago Bulls next season.

"It could have been the last. I don't have a problem saying that," Jordan said after recording the first triple-double in All-Star game history as the East beat the West 132-120 Sunday. "It showed that I could still play with these guys no matter how old I am, and have a good time doing so. If this so happens to be my last All-Star game, believe me, I've been very happy to entertain the fans in whatever capacity I have in the last nine years."

It almost sounded like a farewell statement from the game's greatest player, who had said Saturday that he wants to come back to the Bulls next season if coach Phil Jackson also wants to return.

Less than two weeks ago, Jordan sounded certain that he'd be back.

"Nobody can put a time frame, or a time limit, on something you love. Right now I love the game," he said at the time. "I hope to fulfill all those expectations of winning a championship and go right into next year."

So what gives? Is he coming back next season or not?

The answer — the definitive answer — won't come until the Bulls finish the season. Chicago takes a 42-6 record into the second half of the season, and a record-breaking 73 victories isn't out of the question.

The season resumes tonight with 12 games, including Jordan and the Bulls against the Charlotte Hornets and All-Star MVP Glen Rice. Dennis Rodman will be back for Chicago after serving an 11-game suspension for kicking a cameraman.

The Bulls seem certain to lock up the No. 1 playoff seed in the East, but it's a different story in the West where the Los Angeles Lakers, Houston Rockets, Utah Jazz and Seattle SuperSonics are within three games of one another.

Obviously, the season still has plenty of excitement left. But once it's over, will Chicago owner Jerry Reinsdorf, who is paying Jordan $30.1 million this season, offer $40 million for next season? Or $45 million? Or $50 million?

By linking his future with Jackson's, Jordan could be doing his coach a favor — forcing the Bulls to rehire Jackson before he'll definitively commit to coming back.

If he does return, Jordan would certainly be voted into the starting lineup for the 1998 All-Star game at Madison Square Garden.

And that might be the best chance the NBA will have at coming close to the excitement of this year's festivities.

The halftime spectacle at Gund Arena was something to behold. There were 47 of the game's greats, from Wilt Chamberlain to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar to Larry Bird to Elvin Hayes, spread across the Gund Arena court.

One by one they were introduced, each stepping onto an X-shaped podium that covered the floor. The 20,562 fans gave them a standing ovation when the introductions were complete, and the game seemed like an afterthought when it resumed.

But thanks to Jordan and Rice, it wasn't.

The East used a 40-7 run bridging the second and third quarters to overcome a 23-point deficit, and Rice scored 20 points in the third quarter to break the record Hal Greer of Philadelphia set in 1969.

Rice also made two free throws in the final minute to break Chamberlain's record of 23 points in a half.

Rice, who led all scorers with 26 points, took home the MVP trophy.

"I am the best player in the world — today. I have the MVP," Rice said with a laugh.

Rice was only joking. Everybody knows that Jordan still holds that title.

Whether he holds it at the next All-Star game remains to be seen.

Van Slyke attempts come back with Cards

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Andy Van Slyke, who retired after the 1995 season due to back problems, is trying to make a comeback with his original team.

St. Louis Cardinals manager Tony La Russa, who needs a backup third baseman and wants a reserve infielder who hits left-handed, has invited Van Slyke to training camp as a non-roster player. Van Slyke, 36, won five Gold Gloves as a center fielder, but started out as an erratic-throwing third baseman with the Cardinals in 1984.

Van Slyke, who retired from the Philadelphia Phillies after the 1995 season, has undergone a strenuous offseason workout program. He said he's been working out since August, including stints at the St. Louis Rams' facility. Van Slyke says he has no physical problems and intends to report to St. Petersburg, Fla., next week. "My back problems are always going to be in the attic," Van Slyke said. "If it comes to the point where it's going to keep me from playing, I'll go back home."

Van Slyke's age isn't likely to be a factor in his comeback bid. The Cardinals have the two oldest pitchers in the major leagues (Rick Honeycutt and Dennis Eckersley, both 42). There's also left-hander Tony Fossas, 39, and third baseman Gary Gaetti, 38. "I'm not relatively close to being the oldest guy on the team," Van Slyke said. "I don't believe I can apply for an AARP card yet."

Other infielders who could make the team are former top draft pick Aaron Holbert and David Bell. Both players are out of minor-league options, but both bat right-handed.

Van Slyke has no expectations about playing time.

"It's better playing a little on a good team than a lot on a bad team," he said.

Van Slyke is a two-time All-Star and he played in three playoff series with the Pittsburgh Pirates from 1990-92. He was on the Cardinals' 1985 World Series team before being traded to the Pirates in 1987 for catcher Tony Pena.

He has a .274 career average with 164 home runs. He hit .310 or better twice with the Pirates and had 100 RBIs in 1988.

When he retired, Van Slyke said he always intended to give baseball another shot. He wants to finish in St. Louis, where he has lived for about 15 years.

"I think I always put it in the back of my mind that I'd like to try it again," Van Slyke said. "But I'm not setting myself up for any disappointment. Believe me, I've got realistic goals. If I make the team, I'm home and I play. If I don't, I'll just go home."

Parcells is Jets coach — now!

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bill Parcells will take over as coach of the New York Jets immediately, under a deal brokered Monday by NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue.

New England will get New York's first-round draft pick in 1999, the Jets' second-round pick in 1998 and their third- and fourth-round picks this year. In addition, the Jets will make a $300,000 contribution to the Patriots' charitable foundation. New England had insisted that the price for Parcells would be the Jets' No. 1 pick this year — the top pick in the NFL draft. New York had the worst record in the NFL last season, going 1-15.

"Ultimately, there were wide differences on how this would have to be resolved," Tagliabue said. "But ultimately, we got it resolved."

Parcells didn't attend the meeting, but TV crews, fans and passersby waited in the lobby in hopes of seeing the coach, who led the Patriots to the Super Bowl this season.

Patriots owner Robert Kraft, Jets owner Leon Hess, Jets president Steve Gutman and lawyers for both sides attended the meeting.

The Parcells controversy has plagued the NFL since the Patriots lost 35-21 to Green Bay in the Super Bowl two weeks ago.

Three days later, Tagliabue ruled that Parcells remained the property of New England as a coach or in a "comparable position" until Feb. 1, 1998, the expiration date of his contract.

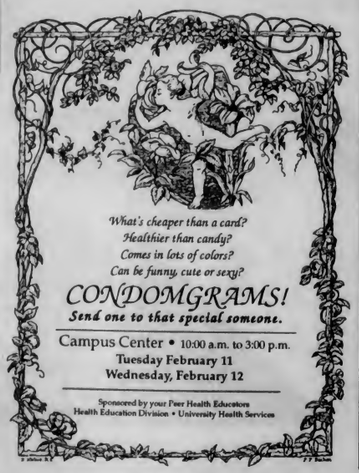
Parcells resigned following the Super Bowl and last week the Jets hired him as a consultant, part of a six-year contract signed Friday that called for him to take over as coach and general manager the following the 1997 season. The deal calls for him to coach at least four of those years.

Bill Belichick, his longtime associate, was appointed coach for this season just last week. Under Monday's settlement, It appeared Belichick would become assistant head coach.

Kraft called the consultant's agreement a sham, and the issue went back to Tagliabue.

UMass Collegian Graphics
The best in '97

DAN'S FANTASY



Golly, I just love being a gas pumper! Five bucks an hour, free cigarettes and all the fumes I can sniff. Am I ever glad I quit my job at the Collegian!

Collegian Graphics- We dare to dream

SKI Snowboard & from $239
SpringBreak "97"
Mont Sutton, Canada
◆◆5 DAY LIFT TICKET
◆◆5 NIGHTS LODGING
◆◆5 NIGHTS PARTIES
55 SLOPES, Walk to Lifts from the condos
71 Black Diamonds, Happy hour every Day
1-800-848-9545

Spring Break Northland Departures
Guaranteed Lowest Prices On-Campus!
Cancun from $449
Jamaica from $449
Florida from $139
STS Student Travel Services Toll free 1-800-648-4849 http://www.ststravel.com

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $277 $517
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Fly/cruises available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs/immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

What's cheaper than a card?
Healthier than candy?
Comes in lots of colors?
Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone.
Campus Center • 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Tuesday February 11
Wednesday, February 12
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division • University Health Services

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER
545-2619
M - F 9 - 5
SAT 10 - 5

ENTRY FORM
ENTRIES CLOSE AT NOON THURSDAY FEBRUARY 13
NAME _____
LOCAL ADDRESS _____
LOCAL PHONE _____
UNIVERSITY STORE EMPLOYEES ARE INELIGIBLE FOR THIS DRAWING

Minutewomen finish 2nd in BU Invititational

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

In an attempt to rest up some team members for the impending A–10 Championships this Sunday, the Massachusetts women's track team, led by coach Julie LaFreniere, chose not to send a full squad to Boston University's St. Valentine's Invitational Saturday. A testament to their strength as a team, the Minutewomen showed little effect, throwing its weight around and topping 21 of 22 schools in attendance, enroute to an impressive second place finish.

UMass was defeated by a strong UConn team, while they bettered St. John's, Boston University and Brown to round out the top five, respectively.

The Minutewomen were led by one first place finish coming in the 4x400 relay, finishing with a time of 3:52.22.

Still, UMass successfully pulled away from the rest of the pack thanks to the consistent performances hovering around and within the top ten.

In the 55M Hurdles, Andrea Comeau finished second with a time of 8:41.

In the 55M Dash, UMass standout Shelanda Irish finished third at 7.34, with fellow Minutewoman Raqueil Shelton close behind at sixth with a time of 7.40. Emma Gardiner was six hundredths behind at 7.46 in 13th place, while Melanie Bell rounded out the top 15 with a time of 7.55.

Silifa Kenku was UMass' top performer in the 400M Dash, finishing third, at 58.55. Michelle Cooper and Nicole Way finished 13th and 14th at 59.92 and 1:00.72, respectively.

In the 200M Dash, Sally Hirsch and Shelanda Irish finished back to back at fourth and fifth with times of 25:44 and 25:57, respectively. Silifa Kenku crossed the line ninth at 26:12. And Melanie Bell finished 16th, with Emma Gardener finishing 24th to round out UMass' performers.

Christy Martin was UMass' top runner in the 3K, finishing 15th overall, at 10:16.70. Behind her was Sally Hirsch in 15th (10:16.70), Molly Dunlap in 24th (10:48.53). Kristin Donaldson in 26th (10:52.04) and Tracy Meagher in 28th (10:53.55).

In throws, Shayna Mitchell placed third, with a 51'0" effort, while UMass' Stephanie Townson finished ninth with a 47'5" toss.

In the long jump, Melanie Bell took fourth place with a 17'5.25" leap, while Melissa Ward's 17'7.25" jump moved her into sixth place.

Rebecca Donaghue was beaten by a fraction of a second in the mile, finishing second while running a strong 4:53.63.

Sunday, the Minutewomen will head to Kingston, Rhode Island to compete in the A–10 Championship at 2:45 p.m.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Rebecca Donoghue and the UMass track and field team finished second out of 25 teams this weekend.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 12

are with her first touch, and being a lefty is unorthodox for opponents, giving her the ability to control the ball at a higher level. She is a quiet kid, not real vocal, but in big games for us she always does something to help us win."

A possible addition to the front line is forward Kara Green, from Spackenhill High School in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. The leading scorer on the Yorktown Jaguars Football Club, a Eastern N.Y. ODP member for four years ('92–'96), and a leader for several state championship squads, Green is said to do anything to score goals. The Jaguar standout also knows her Minutewomen, and was defender Meghan Brennan's teammate on the 1995 USYSA squad that reached third place in the Nationals.

Her club coach Whitney Stark already knows her soccer ability, and thinks it can translate well to the Division One level.

"In plain English, she scores goals," Stark said. "She has an incredible shot, and it will win you preseason, regular and postseason games."

More connections with UMass abound in defender Miss Froehlich, from Brookfield High School, in Brookfield, Conn. She has amassed 37 goals and 25 assists in her career, played for the Connecticut Yankee Soccer Club, and was on both the state ODP and Top 100 team in '95–'96.

A very aggressive and fast defender, with personality to boot, she could be bringing her skills to the school where her brother excelled. He was an ex–UMass basketball player, Cary Herer, and was part of the program in 1988–89, compiling 238 assists in 31 games in 1990.

Her verbal commitment was waiting for the signing of the dotted line, and as of yesterday afternoon, that is done.

"I'll definitely be coming, and its just a matter of clearing the paperwork," Froehlich said. "When I first heard about UMass, I really thought it would be a huge school. But I liked it a lot because its like a half city–half town, in a beautiful area. Rudy is great, and is a real nice guy. Some coaches are just recruiters, and he is like a friend already. There is no doubt that I'll work a 100 percent for him."

If you are an alliteration fan, you will love the fast, skillful, attacking flank player from Mechanicsburg, Pa. — Molly Megan McGrew. The Cumberland Valley High School standout has officially committed to UMass, and will balance out the other side of the pitch for the Minutewomen. Junior defender Erica Iverson is a force up the right flank for UMass, and alongside junior midfielder Liz Rutherford, the addition of McGrew will literally spell good things next season.

"I liked the campus a lot, and the area is beautiful," McGrew said. "I loved the team when I met them, and we really clicked and had a lot of fun together. Of course, Rudy is the best. I think I can bring to the team some visibility and speed, seeing a lot of things going on, and where everybody is located to the ball. And, if I get behind the ball, I can use my speed to catch up."

Men's skiing takes first

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's and women's ski teams traveled to Ascutney Mountain in Vermont to race in the Boston College Tournament last weekend. The men had yet another great race, while the women continued in their struggles.

The men took first place in Saturday's slalom race, with a team time of 460.12. They beat out rival Boston College, which took second with a time of 468.16. Plymouth State, which has dominated almost every race this season, came in at third, in 482.34.

"This weekend went exceptionally well for the men," coach Bill MacConnell said.

Tom Schaefer led the way for UMass, coming in third overall at 87.62. Right behind him in fourth place was Tom Holden, who finished at 88.20. Eric McCormick rounded out UMass' top three, taking eighth overall, in 92.45

Also finishing for the Minutemen were Aaron White at 13th, and Justin Rouleau at 15th.

In Sunday's giant slalom, the men took second, at 459.83, behind the Panthers, who finished at 451.05. Boston College claimed third place, with a time of 466.64.

This time Holden came in first for the Minutemen, and third overall at 87.66. Schaefer took sixth place (91.07), and Aaron Hersh had 11th (92.47).

The men were tied with the Eagles for second place in the regional standings, but broke that tie this weekend. They now hold second place with 17 points, and BC is in third with 19. Plymouth State has a good hold on first place with 12 points. With the top five teams heading to the United States Collegiate Skiing Association Reigonals, the men are well on their way.

The women tried to move from sixth place into fifth this weekend, but they came up short. The team took sixth in both the slalom and the giant slalom. Boston College took first in both races, followed by Plymouth State and Smith.

The Minutewomen lost their number one skier, Leah Muliero, when she fell and injured herself in the giant slalom race.

"Muliero had a dramatic crash, and a muscle pull, but I expect her to ski next weekend," MacConnell said.

Muliero was the Minutewomen's top skier in the slalom, however, where she took 17th in 107.48.

This weekend featured the return of Heather Schea, who has been out with a sprained ankle. She came in 20th overall in the slalom, in 109.05.

"She had a good, solid slalom race, and skied very strong," MacConnell commented. "I think she's going to ski well for us the rest of the season."

Maryanne Shirley finished third for UMass, at 28th in 128.38.

In the giant slalom Katie Keane finished first for UMass, and 14th overall, in 99.12. She was followed by Heather Schmitz at 37th, and Liz Anderson at 41st.

The women will have one more opportunity to qualify for the USCSA Regionals this weekend, when both teams head to Berkshire East for their last meet of the regular season.]

Women's gym wins meet

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Women's Gymnastics team was in top form this past weekend, beating both the University of Bridgeport and The University of Rhode Island Sunday at Boyden Gymnastics Center.

The Minutewomen broke a new school record with a 194.915 in the tri–meet. Rhode Island and Bridgeport scored 191.325 and 190.875, respectively. After breaking many school records at their last meet against Michigan, the Minutewomen have continued the streak, setting six new records this time around.

"I think we exceeded our expectations," head coach Dave Kuzara said. "We made a big point to start fast."

The Minutewomen surpassed their previous team scores on all four events with a 48.9 on vault, a 48.625 on uneven bars, a 48.465 on the balance beam and a 48.925 on the floor exercise. Sophomore Anita Sanyal finished first on the balance beam, with a new school record of 9.9175.

"We're using all of our depth," Kuzara said. "We have a great chance to break the school record next time."

The Minutewomen took first place in all four events. Outstanding performances included the first place finish on the uneven bars by senior Tara Swartz who scored a 9.925, her season's best. Senior Lianne Lang took top honors on the vault (9.850) and the floor exercise (9.875).

Kuzara said last week that the entire team was healthy and he could utilize all 13 gymnasts. This was evident on Sunday, with most competing in at least one event.

In addition to breaking six school records, five of the gymnasts turned in career high scores in the tri–meet. Freshman Mandy Mosby finished second on the vault with a 9.90 and fourth on the uneven bars with a 9.750, sophomores Betsy Colucci and Michelle LoPresti finished second and fourth on the floor exercise with a 9.825 and 9.775 and junior Penny LeBeau took third on the floor exercise with a 9.80.

Colucci also turned in a career–high of 9.775 on the balance beam to finish fourth and Sanyal took fourth place on the uneven bars with a career–best of 9.80.

"This team's not going to settle," Kuzara said.

The Minutewomen look forward to competing in another tri–meet this Sunday against Air Force and Yale at the Curry Hicks Cage. The Minutemen will also be competing in a tri– meet at the same time against Air Force and Army. Both meets will be at 4 p.m.

Rodman back in action

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen no longer respect Dennis Rodman, whose most recent suspension showed the Chicago Bulls' stars that the "Worm" cares only about himself. Rodman returns tonight after sitting out 11 games for kicking a cameraman — his third suspension in 1 1/2 seasons with the Bulls — and Pippen isn't sure Rodman is willing or able to avoid future trouble.

"All I know is that Dennis doesn't give a damn about most things," Pippen said. "I'm not sure he's capable of learning any lessons from his suspensions. I don't expect him ever to change because if he did, he wouldn't be the Worm, the personality he has invented for himself."

As for Rodman's relationship with Jordan, "We have no relationship," Jordan said.

When Rodman takes the court tonight against the Charlotte Hornets, he undoubtedly will be cheered by the sellout crowd at the United Center.

After all, the cross-dressing, hair-dyeing, referee-baiting forward helped the Bulls win the NBA title last season. And Rodman, the league's rebounding leader, has promised to demonstrate his love for Chicago fans by donating his salary from the next 11 games to charity.

But Jordan and Pippen are wary.

What will the Worm do next? Will it be bad enough for NBA commissioner David Stern to banish Rodman from the league forever? Jordan is prepared for the worst.

While leading the Bulls to a 9-2 record during Rodman's latest suspension, Jordan repeatedly said the Bulls can repeat as champions without the tattooed one. They went 72-10 last season even though Rodman missed 18 games and are a league-best 42-6 this season.

"We can be better with Dennis, we know that. But we can survive without Dennis, we know that, too," Jordan said after Sunday's All-Star game. "Our will to win is just as great without Dennis." Asked what advice he'd give Rodman before tonight's game, Jordan said: "I'd tell him to wear pants all the time."

It was the first time Jordan took a public shot at Rodman's assortment of evening gowns, feathered boas and lingerie.

Pippen, meanwhile, is disappointed that Rodman "knocks the game so much."

"Someday, maybe, he'll realize that he wouldn't have all the movies and books and fans if he didn't have basketball," Pippen said Sunday. "He says he doesn't need the game, but it's the game that's made him who he is."

Neither Rodman, Jordan nor Pippen talked to the media after yesterday's practice.

Another teammate, Steve Kerr, said Rodman didn't apologize. "We don't expect an apology, at least a verbal one. His apology comes on the floor when he goes out and plays hard and gets 20 boards," Kerr said. "He knows that if he screws up again he could be in serious trouble. The team definitely has to keep an eye on him and try to keep him out of trouble."

Coach Phil Jackson said Rodman looked good in practice but might not start today. After serving a six-game suspension for head-butting a referee last March, Rodman came off the bench for five games.

Jackson said Rodman "is a very easy person to have on the team."

"That's the thing that people don't understand," Jackson said. "He does his job, comes to practice and keeps his mouth shut. He works hard. He is never delinquent. The fact that he's not there for every game is the only thing that's a problem for us. When you get to rely on a person as dominant as he is and he's not available, then it is a problem.

Bullets rehire Bickerstaff

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BOWIE, Md. — The Washington Bullets addressed the future by dipping into their past yesterday, hiring former assistant Bernie Bickerstaff as their new head coach.

Bickerstaff, who turns 53 today, signed a four-year contract with the team that gave him his start in the NBA.

"I feel lucky to be able to come back into a situation where I'm familiar with the community, the organization and the owner," Bickerstaff said at a news conference at the team's practice facility.

"I'm very fortunate to be back with the organization that gave me my start, and I'm excited about the prospect of getting things done here."

Bickerstaff stepped down as general manager of the Denver Nuggets to return to Washington, where he served as an assistant coach from 1973-1985. He was on the sidelines with head coach Dick Motta in 1978 when center Wes Unseld and the Bullets won their only NBA championship.

Unseld, now the Bullets' general manager, was the man in charge of bringing Bickerstaff back to Washington. Bickerstaff replaces Jim Lynam, who was fired Wednesday after the Bullets staggered to a 22-24 start that hardly matched lofty preseason expectations. "This is not a buddy-hire," Unseld said. "I was looking for someone with the ability to handle talented players and get them to perform. I had the opportunity to get what I think is a pretty doggone good coach, and I took it."

Bickerstaff figured in the 1980s that he would eventually land the Bullets' top job. He finally grew tired of waiting and went to Seattle, where he led the SuperSonics to the Western Conference finals during the second of his five years with the club.

He joined the Nuggets in 1990 as president of basketball operations and general manager, but took over as Denver's head coach near the end of the 1994-95 season. The Nuggets went 35-47 in their only full season under Bickerstaff, and were 4-9 when he stepped down Nov. 26.

Bickerstaff has a 261-276 record in six full seasons and parts of two others as an NBA head coach.

Bickerstaff hopes to improve upon that, beginning with tonight's home game against the New York Knicks.

"It's a matter of defining roles, trying to give them some confidence and a sense of urgency," Bickerstaff said.

The long road to success starts with a short walk across campus.

Go ahead, put away your hiking boots. The MITRE Corporation will be on your campus February 12th & 13th at the Career Fairs, and we will be screening candidates for interviews on the 19th. We have many full-time and co-op positions available. So be sure to visit our booth at either job fair. You just might walk into the biggest opportunity of your life.

Our expertise has been developed from more then 30 years of experience in systems engineering and integration. MITRE teams the best engineers in the industry to develop the most effective and efficient systems, and brings them into operation for clients worldwide. Currently we are looking for talented engineers to join us in the following areas and others:

Network Engineering
Software Development
Communications Systems Engineers
Information Security

We will be at campus fairs on February 12th and 13th, and interviewing qualified candidates on February 19th.

If you can't make it to the job fair, you may also fax your resume to (617) 271-3402 or e-mail it to jobs@mitre.org.

For more information regarding the MITRE Corporation, Please see our homepage at http://www.mitre.org.

MITRE

It claims good people.
UNTREATED DEPRESSION
#1 Cause of Suicide
Ad Council of America (Voice of Education) http://www.save.org

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Potato Skins Supreme $3.50
Nachos $2.88
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes $3.48
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

All students interested in the turf industry and becoming a member of the student chapter of the GCSAA, there will be a general meeting on Wed., Feb. 12, at 4:30pm. in Stockbridge 114. All are encouraged to attend!!!

RUSH Theta Chi Feb. 3,4,5,6,10-12 8-10pm 549-9252

TREK FANS If you are interested in joining STARFLEET International, please contact Martin A. Lessem @ 546-7003 to get membership information.

Amherst 2 bedroom apartment for rent. Water and heat included. Take over lease. Call Angela 546-4784

1985 Black BMW 318i 5 speed. Perfect exterior. $2000 or B/O. Call 546-3830

1988 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap. $1650 or B/O. 546-5320

1985 iroc for sale Superb condition. Many new parts. Call Jeff 665-7578

EMPLOYMENT

Hedley office hiring for evening and weekend shifts. Flexible hours. Fun atmosphere. Start work immediately. $7.$10/hr. Call 584-0215. Ask for Mr. Cavanaugh

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7767 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

LIFE MODELS- Male/Female for Life Drawing class at Holyoke Community College. $10 per hour. Call David M. at 253-5885 or 532-2492

Counselors needed for co-ed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation camp. 3 hours from NYC- general, sports, drama, H2o and Arts. (800)973-3866

Camp Weyeosister half of brother/sister camp in Northeast Pennsylvania, 6/23-8/20/97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students. Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation. On-Campus interviews March 11th. Call (800)279-3019

SUMMER CAMP! Co-ed Sleep-away! MANY COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE! We need role models- sensitive, caring and skilled staff members. FOR THE BEST SUMMER OF YOUR LIFE! in NE Pennsylvania's Pocono Mts. call (800)61-WANDA or E-Mail towanda@intercamp.com or visit our Web Site at http://www.intercamp.com/towanda for information, application and to schedule an interview. This is a great camp and an awesome experience. Camp Towanda, Honesdale, PA

Summer Job! Camp Samoset is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama and woodworking. Also hiring secretaries, kitchen and maintenance workers. Call or fax resume to Winter Office, Wellesley, MA. Phone: (617)237-3017 Fax: (617)237-7269.

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krahow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680

Camp Blue Ridge, a co-ed camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are looking for lifeguards, WSI, as well as instructors in water-skiing, rappelling, boating, art, riflery, archery, sports, drama, cheerleading and dance. For more info call Debra at 665-8463

Work Study students needed. Teaching positions in a multicultural after-school program for children 5-12. Some experience desirable. $6.00/hour. Men and people of color encouraged to apply. Call Capacidad at 253-5658

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St . D40, NYC, NY 10014

Drivers Wanted Apply in person between 3-5pm. Pinocchio's, Amherst.

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people-prevous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info send resume and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188.

Wanted: Tour guides. Summer Counselors, Student Admissions Representatives. Applications available at the Admissions Center.

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available. Benefits. Summer or year round. (612)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

Outside Jobs- Now hiring. National Parks, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting CO's benefits and Bonuses!! Nationwide openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180. Eastern Europe/Asian jobs- Live in Prague, Budapest, Tokyo, etc. Teaching simple conversational English. No languages/teaching exp. required (919)918-7767 ext. W180

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryer and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856.

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Docmartens Steel Toe 3 Eye Greasy. New. Size 9 U.S. (M @ 256-1748. $70 min. HURRY!

Pentium 120 System 1.6 Gig 32 RAM 33G modem 64 bit Video. $3000 in software. ONLY $1500. Joe 665-9112

Soowboard w/bindings 148GNU Quikaster. Brand new. 665-8680 CHEAP!

Laptop/Notebook $99. Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 568-3324-2

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange. 256-0941

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition. $200. Sean 546-5734

486 New Laptop $585. VGA Color Monitor $175. IDE Hard Drive $110. Steve 566-3324-2

FOUND

Walkman Found in the Campus Center at the end of last semester. Call Ana Maria Gonzalez at 865-8394

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. On-campus classes starting soon! Call (800)-Can-Mix for info.

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-4763

PERSONALS

"We've got a groovy kind of love"- Phil Collins. Free love and Valentines at www.mainquad.com.

B-RAD, You are beautiful. Love, The Scoobies

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in two bedroom apt. On bus route. Available immediately. $220 + utilities. Call 665-2197

SERVICES

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available. (800)773-8704 Cost $29. Applications close 2-24-97

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 700,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016. (We are a research and publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs.

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T, Europe $169 O/W. It's the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations: Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as inter-campus Representatives. (800)327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Best Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company. Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more. Call 256-8724

Jamaica- Spring Break Stay in beautiful Negril. Includes roundtrip airfare, hotel transfers, 7 nights lodging from $519. Don't take chances with other companies, go with the UMass Ski Club. Call 545-3437

Europe $155, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.isi-com.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed. From $99. (800)426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Spring Break - Nassau/Paradise Island, from $379. Air, hotel, transfers, parties and more! Organize small group- earn free trips plus commissions! Call (800)9-Beach-1

WANTED

Sofa or Couch Wooted Willing to pay. Please call 549-6452

Cooservative studoets interested in starting a conservative student newspaper. Good writing skills and familiarity with Pagemaker software a plus. Call Paul at 6-0183 for more information

Pamper Your Valentine

Give'em a Special Valentine Personal Classified

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be preathead by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the personal.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the personal form. Students must also provide a valid driver's license and date the license number must be recorded on the member desk. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

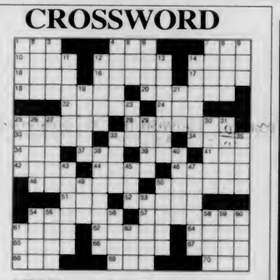
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students



20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Author Thompson
4. Before DDE
7. Mischievous child
10. Step ___ (2 wds.)
12. Earrings
14. Dashed herons
15. Lost Generation nickname
16. Exceed
17. Some sheep
18. Husband's boy
20. Bad cover
22. High fidelity?
24. Feryle
25. Protect
28. Used to advantage
32. Actress Evans
33. Reach across
34. Biblical twin
36. Luau instrument, for short
37. Tenor or Coral
39. North Pole product
41. Amenhotep's grandson
42. Type of warfare
44. Blvds.
46. Physicist Joliot-Curie
48. Was at the helm
50. Banquets
51. ___ Mateo
52. Fast puberty
54. Furniture wheel
57. Denouements
61. Fail to fascinate
62. Family car
64. Bar order
65. Parted with for money
66. Very small
67. Vasco da ___
68. From ___ Z (2 wds.)
69. Med. workers
70. Merrill Allen's "Johnny ___"

DOWN

1. Keystone ___
2. Medical suffs.
3. Exclamation of surprise
4. Emulate Marley
5. Army officer: abbr.
6. Koppel et al.
7. Hawkeye's home
8. Vocal pacomino
9. Dada
11. Did a buck and wing
12. Romanced
13. Beverly Sills, s.g.
14. Crewsaw's need
19. Eppie's foster father
21. Kings Fr.
23. Yelp
25. Bell
26. Backpacks
27. Not active, as a gas
29. Tuba
30. ___ Park, Colorado
31. Intimidate
33. Escapt for
35. Western Indians
38. The Importance Of Being ___
40. Give up
43. Had chow
45. Psychologist LeShan
47. Appraising
49. All-you-can- ___
50. Drol
53. Jimmy and Dizzy
54. Crotchety fellow
55. Younger Guthrie
56. Actor Oliver
58. Close in on
59. Wild animals, collectively
60. Casual try
61. Eagle's org.
63. Barbn article

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

U	R	N		F	E	W				B	A	T
P	O	O	H		I	O	W	A	N		P	A	L	O
A	M	M	O		D	E	E	R	E		A	R	L	O
	P	E	A	R	L	S		P	L	A	N	E	S
		R	O	E			L	I	E
	F	E	D	O	R	A		G	I	M	L	E	T
H	A	L	S		S	U	S	I	E		S	L	O	P
U	S	A			N	O	V			M	A	T
E	T	T	E		O	T	T	E	R		R	O	S	A
S	E	V	E	R	S		N	I	C	E	S	T
			E	L	I			G	A	L
S	U	N	S	E	T		S	O	L	E	L	Y
D	U	L	L		N	I	N	E	R		N	E	A	T
D	E	N	Y		T	R	E	E	S		T	E	R	I
E	T	A			E	O	N				R	N	S

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
You'll be called upon to make plenty of decisions this week. Be sure you know the difference between someone who genuinely wants your opinion and someone who just can't make a decision on their own.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
It's planting time, so get it in gear! You'll be glad you did at harvest time. Now would also be a good time to change your eating habits for the better, since you're already thinking about vegetables.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Catch up on the whos and whats of everyday life with someone who seems very far away. They could be feeling left out of the circle, and your efforts will make a big impression. Don't toy with the affections of a sensitive person.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Make an investment in a basic piece of equipment for your home. And don't skimp—the goal is to plan for the long haul. A decisive action you make could take some by surprise. Don't let their gasps faze you.

LEO
July 23-August 23
You're a sponge when it comes to information this week, so expose yourself to all kinds of things you've always been interested in. Pick one you especially like and sign up for a group that specializes in that.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Take careful inventory before heading off to the store. Something you have on hand could inspire your creative juices, and you'll save money. Clip coupons and put the money you save in a jar. With time, it could pay for a vacation with someone you have yet to meet.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Although you're a bundle of positive energy, you could meet with a great deal of resistance. Use extra tact, and lean on a few people if you think it necessary. Try not to make enemies lightly—they could cause trouble later.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A compulsive borrower heads in your direction. Don't feel compelled to offer an excuse if you refuse. The best teacher is the school of hard knocks, and that might be exactly what is needed in this case.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
A deadline looms, so put in extra time to ensure things are done right. You have other things you'd rather be doing, but don't shirk your responsibilities. You'll enjoy a social gathering, but resist the temptation to be the host.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
If you can't avoid a conflict, then be sure that you're prepared with plenty of facts and figures to back up your position. There could be more at stake than it appears, so remain rational.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A younger person needs a helping hand on a big project. Offer them your time and expertise, but don't offer to do it for them. Your creativity lands you a big assignment at work. Plan an outline, and you'll wow your bosses.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Pay extra attention to the arts this week. An event could have a special meaning for you that could reverberate throughout your life. Head for a party to show off your dazzling conversational skills.

Daily Listings sponsored by: Your Ad Could Be Here. Call 545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 BET
5	ABC/5	Boston	26 BET on Jazz
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 UCTV
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28 The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Comedy Central
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32 Much Music
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 12, 1997

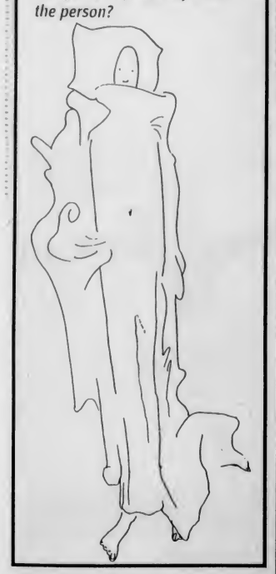
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH (2)	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Secrets of Lost Empires" "Obelisk/Colosseum"				Great Performances: Gospel Music			People-Here
WFSB (3)	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Nanny	Pearl	"A Nightmare Come True" (1997, Drama) Gerald McRaney,		News		News	Late Show
WBZ (4)	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Pearl	"A Nightmare Come True" (1997, Drama) Gerald McRaney,		News		News	Late Show
WCVB (5)	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI (6)	56	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Nick Freno	Weyans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH (7)	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order: "Banter"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Sentinel "Secret" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Unity"		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Banter"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC (61)	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five (In Stereo)		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP (22)	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Banter"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY (57)	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Secrets of Lost Empires" "Obelisk/Colosseum"				Kurt Browning		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB (40)	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK (38)		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You		NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at Phoenix Suns. (Live)					Real TV
WTBS (72)		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball: Orlando Magic at Detroit Pistons. (Live)					Inside-NBA	"Night of the Living Dead"
A&E (32)		Quincy		Equalizer "Re-Entry		Biography "Michael Douglas"		American Justice (R)		20th Century		Law & Order
CNN (29)	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Inside Politics	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM (35)	36	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Medusa: Dare to Be Truthful		Kaufman: Hollywood		A-List (R)	Dream On	Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC (52)		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Luftwaffe (R)		Wild Discovery: Deadly Nest		Discover Magazine		Shark Chronicles		Wild Discovery: Deadly Nest
ESPN (31)		Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Clemson at Wake Forest. (Live)				College Basketball: Connecticut at Boston College. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE (50)		Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Something Wild" (1986, Comedy) Jeff Daniels,				Living	Mysteries
MTV (33)		Ren & Stimpy	Winter Lodge	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)				Real World	Real World	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK (43)		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI (42)		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Masters of Fantasy (In Stereo)		Talker "Deadline" (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Unreality TV"		Sightings (R) (In Stereo)		Masters of Fantasy (In Stereo)
TLC (98)	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	SeeTek	Pop Science	Royal Secrets	Royal Secrets	Human Animal: A View		SeeTek (R)	Pop Science
TNT (54)		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		"Nighthawks" (1981, Suspense) Sylvester Stallone				"Above the Rim" (1994, Drama) Duane Martin, Leon
USA (47)		Renegade "Carrick O'Quinn"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		"Night Watch" (1995, Adventure) Pierce Brosnan,				Wings
HBO (59)		"Tommy Boy" (1995, Comedy) Chris Farley. PG-13		"Mostly Thoughts" (1997) Demi Moore. R		"Mostly Thoughts" (1997) Demi Moore. R		Rosewood-1st	Larry Sanders	Tracey Takes		"Eye for an Eye" (1996) R
MAX (60)		(5:45) "First Knight" (1995) Sean Connery. PG-13				"The Lost Boys" (1987) Jason Patric. R		"Under Siege 2: Dark Territory" (1995) Steven Seagal. R					"UnderWor
SHOW (55)		"3 Ninjas Knuckle Up" (1995) Victor Wong		Fortunes Son		"Who Framed Roger Rabbit" (1988) PG		"Funny Bones" (1995, Comedy-Drama) Oliver Platt. (In Stereo) R

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Unsilent Majority By Luke Meredith

Leoid By Roger & Salem Salloom



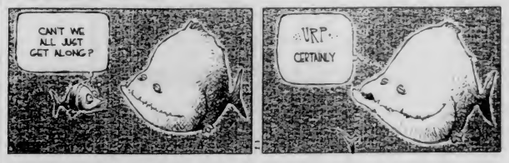
This morning I woke up and lay in bed for about 20 minutes and didn't want to get up.... lonely.

Once again my lonely organ was circulating lonely juice throughout my body.

I need someone in my life. I need me in my life.....At least, if I had me....

I need a dating service that will help me have a good time with myself.

Do you think they'll charge a fee if I already know the person?

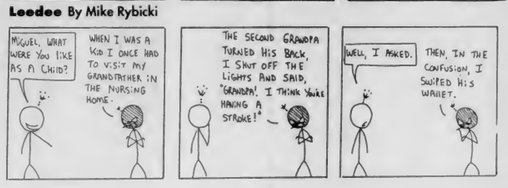


University² By Frank Cho

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Non Sequitor By Wiley

First Impressions By Kenneth W.P. Scott



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Loedoe By Mike Rybicki

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Jerry, the chimney sweep wants to talk to you about his estimate."

Today's Staff

Mark McGrath
Night Editor

Suzanne Barber
Copy Editor

Kenneth W.P. Scott
Photo Technician

Matthew P. McCarthy
Production Supervisor

Joylyn Lombard
Kelvin Torres
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Kielbasa Grinder
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Ham Steak, Chicken with Rice
Eggplant Parm
Grilled Cheese

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken with Rice
Stuffing

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Bean Burrito

DINNER
1/4 lb. Burger
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities
Manicotti w/ Sauce

Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Bean Burrito

DINNER
1/4 lb. Burger,
Chicken Wings, Harvest Burger, Pasta
Manicotti w/ Sauce

Quote of the Day

"Very funny Scotty, now beam down my clothes!"

–Seen on bumper sticker

Joke of the Day

Where does a sheep get it's hair cut?

–A: At the Baa-baa

SPORTS

Tuesday, February 11, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Minutemen set to battle Saint Bonaventure

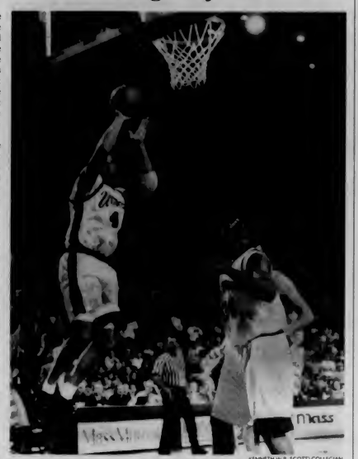
Travieso; Weeks look to continue winning ways in A-10

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Tonight, at 7:30 p.m. the Massachusetts men's basketball team comes back to where its successful streak started when it hosts St. Bonaventure in the William D. Mullins Center.

The last time the two squads met, UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint initiated a three guard offense sparking the Minutemen (14–10, 8–3 Atlantic 10) to a five game win streak.

Since the last time the two squads met, UMass has won eight of its last nine contests. Last month, the Minutemen came out with a 63–59 win. In the win, Tyrone Weeks had 19 points and a career high 14 rebounds. With two minutes to play, the Bonnies brought it within two points, but a pair of key hoops by Carmelo Travieso revived UMass, and the win was sealed with a monstrous Lari Ketner jam. For the Bonnies, junior Rashaan Palmer scored a season–high 29 points in the losing effort.



The Bonnies have not had much luck in the Mullins Center in the past. Last year, the Minutemen routed them by 25, the year before 27 and in 1993, 24. In fact, St. Bonaventure's Mullins margin of defeat for the 90's has been 26.3.

While the Bonnies (12–7, 5–5 A–10) currently stand in the No. 5 spot in the A–10 East, they currently lead the conference in steals averaging 10.68 per game. Freshman Tim Winn has had the hot hands for St. Bonaventure. With 51 steals, he currently ranks second in the league in steals. This week, Winn earned A–10 Rookie of the Week for the second time in three weeks on the merits of a career–high 27 points against Temple and a 14 point effort against Dayton. However, the rookie had little success against UMass in the first meeting, as he was held to just four points on 2–for–10 shooting.

As for the Minutemen, they have been working on all cylinders. Most noticeably, Carmelo Travieso has come through with some last second heroics as of late, keeping things alive to pull off final second wins against Rhode Island and Xavier. The senior guard is currently leading the team in scoring (15.2 points per game). In his last six games, Travieso has averaged 18.7 ppg and has been lethal outside the arc connecting on 26–of–54 3–pointers (48.1 percent).

While Travieso's backcourt mate Edgar Padilla has not been a tremendous scoring threat as of late, he has made up for his lack of points in the assist department. In the last three games, Padilla has tallied 22 assists while giving up just five turnovers for a 4.4 turnover/assists ratio.

In the paint, Tyrone Weeks has been a workhorse for the Minutemen. In his last nine games, Weeks has averaged a double–double in points (13.2) and boards (10.8), while shooting 49.5 percent from the floor and 85.3 percent from the foul line.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen hope to keep the ball rolling tonight when St. Bonaventure invades the William D. Mullins Center. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Track cleans up at BU

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

Another week brought another meet, and another meet brought even more good news for the Massachusetts men's track and field team. This time, it was on Saturday at the Boston University St. Valentine's Invitational.

The 4 x 400 relay team's shattering of the school record highlighted it all, as Tom Toye, Scott Price, Neil Concepcion and Dave Cahill combined for a time of 3:15.22, rendering the previous high of 3:18.1 a distant second.

Many on campus felt the chances were good that the feat would be accomplished, including some of the athletes involved.

"It wasn't a question of whether or not we'd break the record, but by exactly how much we'd beat it by," Cahill, the third leg said. "The guys in the relay had short races beforehand, so we had some energy.

Plus there were longer rest intervals between the races. Everything was in place to capitalize, and we did. by more than a lot of people expected."

In all, the Minutemen notched 16 season–best performances, with five of those entering the UMass record books.

Along with the relay team, they included Price's 22.17 in the 200 meter dash (second all–time behind Toye), Christian Abbott 's 22.62 in the 200 (fourth all–time), Cahill's 1:05.20 in the 500 meter dash (fourth all–time), Concepcion's 22.81 in the 200 (fifth all–time).

One factor which contributed to the abundant success was the track itself, which, along with Harvard's, is considered one of the top five in the country.

But perhaps strong showings are simply contagious, as Jan Stevens, the shot– putter, finished in third place with a throw of 51'4.50". Clearly. the track is not a variable in such an event.

"I think the number of seasonal bests was probably a little more than I expected," head coach Ken O'Brien said. "And it's a good sign that they're coming now, because this is an ideal time of year for a team to be improving.

"I guess the best performance of the day was the 4 x 400 relay team. I thought they might break that record, but I didn't anticipate them running four seconds faster [than normal]. It was a good day for Dave Cahill, especially. He made a significant jump in his time in the 500."

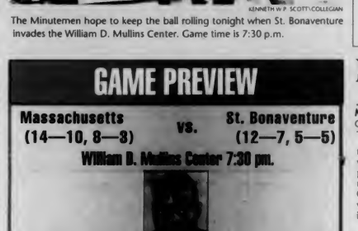
Also faring well were triple jumpers Andre Roach and Alex Ampontuah (second and fifth), Jon Way and Mike Ferrari in the mile run, Paul Blodorn in the 800, Matt Behl in the 5000 and Ben Baraldi in the high hurdles. Price (6.61) and Toye (6.63) both had season bests in the 55 meter dash.

So, does this bode well for the Atlantic–10 Championships, up next for the Minutemen?

"Well, it does if we can duplicate the performances," O'Brien said. "If Carmelo Travieso scores 30 points before the A–10's and you ask Bruiser Flint if bodes well, he'll tell you the same thing.

"The bottom line is the strength of this team is it has two or three athletes in every event. Other teams aren't getting free points from us. We're not a team of superstars, so a team with about five of those CAN win a meet.

"This is a contradiction In the commonly accepted structure of championship track teams, but we've been relatively successful. We force opponents to be honest with our good, hard–working athletes."



Unorthodox or not, it has worked so far. And the athletes are just hoping it will keep on working for as long as possible.

"I'm psyched," Cahill said. "Hopefully, we on the relay team can maintain our improvement. I don't see any reason why we can't keep it up."

GAME PREVIEW

Massachusetts (14—10, 8—3) vs. St. Bonaventure (12—7, 5—5)

William D. Mullins Center 7:30 pm.

Inus Norville

PROBABLE STARTERS

Massachusetts	St. Bonaventure
G Edgar Padilla	G Shandue McNeill
G Charlton Clarke	G Tim Winn
G Carmelo Travieso	C Robert Blackwell
C Lari Ketner	F Terrence Durham
F Tyrone Weeks	F Rashaan Palmer

ON THE AIR

TV: A–10 TV
Radio: WHMP 99.3 FM- Mark Vandermeer, Jack Leaman

UMass men's swimming splashes past Fordham

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

One of the teams that both head coach Russ Yarworth and top sprinter Sean Anderson believe to be a formidable adversary during the Atlantic–10 Championship is Fordham.

Saturday turned out to be a sneak preview for what fans should be expecting to see on Feb. 20 in Buffalo. The Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team splashed up against the Rams of Fordham in a tremendous A–10 dual meet, and won 122.5–119.5.

The meet came down to the wire, when UMass's 400 free relay team of senior Dave Dornaus, sophomore Brian Wisniewski, and juniors Dan Peck and Matt Davey took first in the last race of the meet, icing the victory for the Minutemen.

"It was a good story, very similar to the meets we had against St. John's and Dartmouth (the team's only two losses)," head coach Russ Yarworth said. "We came out flat, which is what I expected. It was the first week of classes, and after a three hour bus ride, I didn't expect too much."

"We were down 10 points going into the last relay (the 400 freestyle relay). I knew if we got first and third place, we would tie, but if we got first and second, we would win," Yarworth said. "I asked the guys, 'Do you wanna win, or do you wanna tie?' It was the first sign of emotion from them during the whole meet. So I split up the A squad and the B squad, switching two guys from each, and we pulled out first and second."

Yarworth's coaching decisions were just enough to push his team to victory against a team that may be their toughest opponent during the Atlantic–10 Championship.

Some other notable swimmers for UMass were sophomore Simon Flynn, who took first in the 1000 free (9:46:85), senior Mike Shaw, who dunked the rest of the Rams in the 200 fly (1:56.05) and Wisniewski, who took the 200 back (1:56.38).

"Simon Flynn was consistent, Dan Peck also swam well, but the guys know that they have to swim better if they want to win A–10s," Yarworth said.

UMass' final dual meet record was 7–2. The team also took high honors in the Philadelphia Open, the San Juan Invitational and the Rhode Island Invitational.

After defeating LaSalle earlier in the year, and now Fordham (two teams on Yarworth's list as possible contenders), the Minutemen have the momentum and are looking strong heading into the Atlantic–10 Championship, for which they are defending champions.

Men's gym beats Temple

Matt Perrault
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts men's gymnastics team traveled south this past weekend to take on Temple. On paper, this looked like a good match–up. UMass had not beaten the Owls since 1989, but the Minutemen were not going to let history repeat itself.

With pride on line for many UMass seniors, who had never seen victory over Temple, the Minutemen turned in a record–breaking performance.

Sophomore Phil Leiberman shattered the first record of the day on floor. Phil posted a 9.9, breaking the old record by a tenth of a point on his way to wining the event. He also tied for first on the high bar.

Freshmen phenom Jeff LaValle, an Olympic hopeful, had two victories (9.775 on rings, 9.75 on parallel bars — a school record), a tie for first on high bar (9.6), and a second place finish on floor (9.7). LaValle's overall score of 57.6 broke the school record.

The upper classmen then stepped up, led by senior captain Ruslan Shupak and junior Michael Sangira. Shupak finished second on the rings and Sangira won the vault for UMass.

"I thought the meet would be much closer, but they had a lot of injuries. Still, we beat them by more than expected," UMass coach Roy Johnson said. "We are really fortunate to get a gymnast like Jeff LaValle."

UMass continued its dominance over the Owls throughout the meet and swept every event. The final score was UMass 227.45 Temple 218.025.

"This was tremendous, I had never beat Temple and we did it by ten points. We're pumped now for Regionals" Shupak said.

LaValle's amazing performance helped to break another school record, this time for total points. The overall score of 227.45 broke the old mark of 225.05 set in 1995.

Along with landing an outstanding gymnast like Jeff LaValle, UMass was able to bring Jeff's long time coach, Tim Daggett aboard as an assistant to Johnson and work with Jeff and the rest of the team. Daggett, you may remember, was NBC's gymnastics commentator for the '96 Olympics and also was on the U.S. team that won the gold medal in 1984.

Upcoming for the Minutemen is a meet on Sunday at the Curry Hicks Cage against Army and Air Force at 4 p.m. Both opponents are ranked In the top 20 and should pose a major threat to UMass.

"It should be a good, close meet. We lost to Army last year at Army but we are home this year. The pommel horse will be the key, they have a great team." Johnson said.

UMass is expected to be No. 7 when the national rankings are announced tomorrow.

Women's soccer reloads; recruits bring quickness

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

If the old saying goes "speed kills," then this year's recruiting class for the Massachusetts women's soccer team could be cast for the sequel to Natural Born Killers.

Skill–wise, last season's Minutewomen squad was incomparable in recent school history; consisting of all–time leading scorer Rebecca Myers, three–time All–American selection Erin Lynch, and a host of technically sound role players. But those players are graduating this year and coach Jim Rudy will have big cleats to fill.

The problem for the Minutewomen the past few years were playing teams like Connecticut, who possessed comparable skill, but had the first step in team speed. Hence, the man who notched his 200th win as a women's soccer coach this past season has been recruiting players who can run with the Husky thoroughbreds.

One of Rudy's verbal commitments for his three–time Atlantic–10 champion squad Is with a champion herself, Amy Burrill. A transfer from Barry University in Miami, the defender was on the squad that won the Division 2 National Championship. A left–footed defender, she originally played for the perennial powerhouse at Newton North High School.

For Burrill, the jump to Division One competition would be a daunting task, but one that she welcomes.

"Its almost overwhelming going from a small school to a large school, but I can't wait," Burrill said. "I think I bring some personality, hard work, dedication and a willingness to do what it takes to win to the team. I don't like to lose."

Another one of Rudy's verbal recruits already has a connection with the Minutewomen, or specifically, a Minutewoman. Kathleen Machamer is a midfielder from Cherry Creek High School in Englewood, Colorado, and is an All State first team selection. She also plays for one of the top club teams in the United States, the Lakewood Fury Soccer Club, and has worked with the Colorado Olympic Development Program— the top organization a player can compete for in their home state.

But her connection with UMass is with the player who most likely will take over Julie Magid's role in the central midfield, freshman Tarah Tokarchik. The two friends could be side by side next season, and her club coach Tom Stone definitely believes she can make the transition from state club ball to national competition.

Stone is impressed with her big play ability, demonstrated in her junior year when she scored the game Winner in double overtime in the state championship— amidst snow and freezing temperatures.

"She has Division I skill level, and that is what you see when you first see her play," Stone said. "Her assets

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 9

DePina to play for UMass

South Boston's Jonathan DePina has said he will hold a press conference this week about his intention to attend the University of Massachusetts in the fall.

"I felt comfortable out there," DePina said. "I'm looking forward to it."

The much–touted point guard committed to Boston College last September along with West Roxbury product Elton Tyler and Worcester Burncoat's Mike Bradley. Both DePina and Tyler were rejected by the school's admissions committee in November.

At UMass, DePina will be reunited with his former South Boston teammate, Monty Mack. The two paired to lead their high school to the last two Massachusetts Division I state championships.

The 5–foot–10 DePina, who is averaging 29 points per game this year, should fit comfortably into UMass' three– guard set. With point guard Edgar Padilla and shooting guard Carmelo Travieso both seniors leading this year's offense, DePina and Mack will both have the opportunity to slide Into the Minuteman lineup.

But both Mack and DePina can run the point, and the incoming freshman knows the team's reigns won't be handed to him automatically.

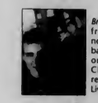
"Everything I do I have to earn, so I don't know," DePina said.

Boston College lost the services of Bradley when the school rejected DePina and Tyler. Instead, Bradley, a good friend of both players, decided to attend Kentucky. Tyler has yet to commit to a school and is considering George Washington, Michigan and Villanova.

Material from yesterday's Boston Globe was used in this article.

— Casey Kane

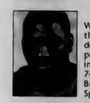
HUI GAO/COLLEGIAN



Weekend at Rhody's

The UMass women's gymnastics team had quite a successful weekend, beating both Bridgeport and Rhode Island. For the rest of the story, see page 8.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 81 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, February 12, 1997

Pavement in "Stereo"!

The new album, Brighten the Corners, from the most noble of alternative bands, Pavement, is on the streets! Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5)

Double–double trouble

Senior Tyrone Weeks earned his third consecutive double– double (17 points, 11 boards) in last night's 74–68 win over St. Bonaventure (See Sports, page 10)

WORLD

Power struggle remains in Equador

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — While a caretaker president insisted the office is hers until the constitution is amended, Ecuador's ousted leader flew off yesterday to spread word that "a civilian dictatorship has been imposed."

Abdala Bucaram, who was dismissed last week for "mental incapacity," left Ecuador on a chartered plane, saying he planned to visit Panama, Argentina and other Latin American countries. President Rosalia Arteaga, who became president Sunday during a three–way political battle for the job, was to remain in charge only until legislators could elect an interim leader — that was to happen last night. Her announcement Monday that she would not step down immediately infuriated some in Congress. She changed her mind later Monday, but changed it back yesterday.

"She accepted that commitment. She can'not try to hold onto power now," Social Christian Congressman Marco Flores said yesterday.

NATION

O.J. Simpson speaks: 'This is far from over'

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — O.J. Simpson declared "this is far from over" yesterday as the focus in his civil case shifted to how the football great might fend off a crushing $33.5 million jury award.

In a brief telephone conversation with The Associated Press, Simpson declined to discuss his next move in court or in life, saying: "I don't want to join in this circus atmosphere that's out there at this time."

"It would be premature for me to say anything now," he said. "Obviously, I have feelings. But this is far from over." Later in the day, he went to a local golf course and played 18 holes.

Simpson has played golf nearly every day since a jury unanimously ruled him liable and ordered him to pay $8.5 million in the 1994 slashing deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman. He even watched TV coverage of Tuesday's $25 million punitive judgment against him from a golf course bar.

While Simpson played, his chief lawyer, Robert Baker, also kept his silence about how he will fight the combined $33.5 million award — which is more than twice as much as even Simpson's accusers say he could ever pay.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 10	HIGH: 25 LOW: 5	HIGH: 35 LOW: 10

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Student businesses object to new I.D. card

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

With a move that has been deemed, "bringing the University of Massachusetts into the 21st century," a rift has developed between the administration and student–run businesses on campus.

By the fall of 1997, the University will implement the new AT&T All Campus I.D. card which will allow students, faculty and staff to use their cards for a variety of services on campus, including making debit purchases at participating businesses and at vending machines.

While several University–run businesses on campus are looking forward to the update in technology, some student–run business are objecting to the card on three levels: First, they feel that students were not sufficiently involved in the decision making process behind its implementation; secondly, they feel the cost of setting up such a system is so high it could threaten the existence of smaller businesses; and third, they question the ethics behind setting up such a system.

Paul Page, vice chancellor of Administration and Finance, is aware of the concerns of student businesses, however he feels that the benefits that will come with the new card will outweigh the initial difficulties of its set–up.

"The basic premise behind why we're implementing the card is to provide convenience for the holder of the card — and for activities on campus, to provide efficiency in their business," Page said.

"The University Store, vending machine companies, the Munchy stores and the dining halls are all interested in the same–card technology," Page said. "Other than student businesses, this is viewed very positively."

Peter Kilbourne, secretary of Public Policy–Relations for the Student Government Association (SGA) ran a meeting of representatives from student business last week concerning the installation of the new I.D. system.

"The University has created an unfair slant, which we feel is a direct assault upon student businesses," Kilbourne said.

Costs vs. benefits

"The sky's the limit," Page said, referring to the numerous ways the new all–campus card can be used.

However, for some student–run businesses, purchasing and maintaining the new card readers and computer equipment is simply too costly.

According Page and Jacqueline Watrous, director of Financial Analysis and a coordinator in the all–campus card system, the cost of purchasing each reader ranges between $1400 and $4000, depending on the level of sophistication of the equipment.

Watrous said there will also be additional expenses. AT&T will charge an annual maintenance fee of $120 per reader. A monthly user fee of $11 per reader and a 2 percent fee on each transaction made with the card will finance administrative overhead.

"In order to provide these services we have to create an infrastructure, and with any system there are costs behind it," Page said.

Student–run businesses, most of which are non–profit, are caught in a business paradox. They must either face financial hardship now by purchasing the readers on credit or risk losing business without the updated technology.

"We're non–profit, but we do well and we could pay for the readers," said Adam Feldman, co–manager of People's Market. "Some can't afford it, like Earthfoods, Greenough [snack bar], Sweets 'n More and the Craft Center.

"They would have to use a three to five year payment plan with a huge amount of interest, so the total amount of money becomes outrageous."

Amy Howland, a worker/manager at Earthfoods, agreed with Feldman.

"We don't have the money to purchase these machines, and the payment plans are difficult," Howland said.

LAUREN KOSBY/COLLEGIAN

As early as next semester, People's Market customers like Alyssa Ruff–Fountain may be using their student ID card for purchases.

Howland said the 2 percent transaction fees could make their prices go up, which, she said, "is the last thing we want to do."

"The reason why we're here is to provide inexpensive, healthy food," Howland said.

Page said that the administration's expectation is that the increase in sales generated from the card would "be more than enough to offset the costs associated with the set–up of the system," however it may take four to five years to recover these costs.

Student businesses who opt not to purchase the readers, Page said, "may be losing out on growth potential, but I'm not sure if they'd lose their customer basis."

"In a business environment, these are the types of choices that businesses are constantly faced with," Page said.

When asked if he felt that prices on merchandise could go up next semester, Page said, "It's always a possibility."

A lack of student involvement

Though cost is an important issue for the survival of student businesses, student workers are most concerned and even hurt by the lack of involvement they feel they had from the card's inception.

Jeremy Cottrill, a member of the governing board of Commuter Area Government, said that "the biggest issue was that students were not involved."

Maydad Cohen, co–manager of Campus Design & Copy, echoed Cottrill's thoughts.

"The key issue which is most important to all of us was that students were not involved in the process," said Cohen.

"That we were not involved really hurts me, because this is supposed to be a student–friendly campus," Howland said.

"Right now, it's too late to do anything about it," Cottrill said. "The cards

Turn to CARD, page 2

Annual fair assists in job search

Career Center hosts fair; all students encouraged to attend

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

The Mather Career Center's annual campus–wide Career Fair is bringing a record number of companies to the University of Massachusetts for recruiting purposes from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today in the Campus Center.

The event, which now has corporate sponsors in Electronic Data Systems (EDS) and Digital Semiconductor, is geared toward seniors, graduate students, alumni and Five College students who will soon be entering the job market.

At the fair, a number of corporations will be recruiting students from all fields, ending the myth that these events are created strictly for business and engineering majors.

Outside of the record 125 employers, the fair brings an extraordinary diversity of job choices to UMass students. Some participants in the fair are Foot Locker, the United States Navy and Putnam Investments.

Another newer dimension at the Career Fair this year will be the presence of a number of non–profit organizations. These include, for example, EF Education, the world's largest private educational organization, which teaches languages and organizes cultural exchanges.

Gould Farm is a residential treatment program for the mentally ill in Monterey. They encourage a family atmosphere and function as a working farm, animals and all.

"There are some really interesting companies coming," said Karen Knight, co–coordinator of the Career Fair.

In addition, Jobs in the areas of publishing and environmental studies have served to further diversify the selection at the fair. With the presence of Random House and Dow Jones, the Career Center has hit on an industry that has previously remained untapped.

"The addition of the publishing industry is something we've had trouble with," Knight said.

Publishing is just one of the career opportunities that are opening up for liberal arts majors.

"There are wonderful opportunities for liberal arts majors. We're often seen by the University as a whole as only serving engineering, computer science and business majors, when in fact we are here for everyone," Knights said. "There's an openness for liberal arts majors."

While it is never too late to start looking for a job when preparing to enter the "real world," Joan Stoia, the director of the Career Center recommends visiting the center as soon as possible.

"People who use the Career Center throughout their career get better jobs than people who don't. The sooner you start working with us, the better we are able to help you," Stoia said.

According to a number of sources at the Career Center, the job market is very healthy this year. Knight speculates that the health of the job market is the flip–side of downsizing, saying that companies may now be top–heavy in bosses and lacking in workers.

If it is indeed a fruitful employment season, then now is the time to reap the benefits.

"There is a season for college recruiting and that season starts now," Stoia said. "The Career Fair signals the beginning of the time when your efforts will be most rewarded.

"It's a lot easier to get a job when the employer has come looking for you than to wait until later when they

Turn to JOBS, page 2

Police blames seperatist sect for Chinese riots

By Charles Hutzler
Associated Press

BEIJING — Although Chinese police blamed rioting in western China on a banned Islamic sect, a separatist group said yesterday that the fighting was ignited by the public execution of 30 young Muslims.

Accounts of last week's riots, some of the worst In years in restive, predominantly Muslim northwestern China, varied widely. One exile group claimed up to 300 people were killed and a Chinese official said there were no deaths.

All was calm yesterday, six days after the violence began, according to officials and residents contacted in Yining city, near China's border with Kazakstan.

Reports of separatist– and religious–linked violence In Xinjiang — home to Muslim, ethnic Turkic groups — have increased in recent years.

On Monday, a Yining police officer told The Associated Press that the Uighurs, Xinjiang's largest ethnic group, started the violence. Demanding independence, they allegedly beat people to death and burned three cars. In response, he said, police fired in the air and arrested up to 500 people.

But Yusupbek Mukhlisi, head of a Kazakstan–based Uighur separatist group, the United National Revolutionary Front, said the riots began after 30 young Uighurs were publicly executed in Yining.

He said the condemned, who were alleged to be separatists, were shot in front of 1,000 spectators, including their relatives. Contradicting other reports, which said the rioting was on Wednesday and Thursday, Mukhlisi said the fighting began Friday.

In yet another explanation, Ma Shiqiang, director of the Yining police department's administrative office, said about 200 demonstrators of an "illegal religious organization... took off all their clothes and shouted slogans like 'Don't sleep. Don't eat. Don't work.'"

Ma said no one was killed and that about 100 police officers broke up the protest, arresting five ringleaders of the group, known as "Tabilike."

Ismail Cengiz of the East Turkestan Immigrants Association, a pro–Independence Uighur group based in Istanbul, Turkey, said earlier this week that 200 Muslim rioters and about 100 Chinese soldiers were killed in the fighting.

The varying accounts could not be reconciled. The governments in Beijing and Xinjiang seldom give permission for Western reporters to visit the region.

Independence sentiment has strengthened among the Uighurs (pronounced wee–gers), fueled by resentment against Chinese migration, the creation of Kazakstan and other Central Asian nations after the breakup of the Soviet Unlon, and by Iranian fundamentalism.

Last year, separatist groups held running gunbattles with police and tried to assassinate an Islamic leader seen as pro–Chinese. Beijing in turn ordered the Xinjiang government to wipe out the separatists and illegal religious groups that support them. Police patrols have been doubled to search cars and people, but Ma said there was no curfew or security cordon around the city, about 220 miles east of Kazakstan's capital, Almaty, and 1,700 miles west of Beijing.

Lake's nomination as CIA director postponed again

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Senate committee again postponed a hearing on Anthony Lake's nomination as CIA director yesterday, citing evidence that his aides met with a Thai businesswoman who contributed to the Democratic Party.

Sen. Richard Shelby (R–Ala.), chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said in a one–page announcement that the confirmation hearing will be moved back two weeks. from Feb. 25 to March 11. The announcement, the second time the committee has postponed Lake's hearing, caught the White House by surprise only hours after President Clinton met with Republican leaders on Capitol Hill.

"After consulting with other concerned members of the committee, I have decided to postpone the hearings." Shelby said.

He cited "detailed questions" that Lake has yet to answer about his actions over the last four years as Clinton's national security adviser.

The questions, Shelby said, concern "National Security Council contacts with foreign polund–raisers." Lake's failure to divest energy stocks after being instructed to do so, his role in the tacit U.S. support for Iranian arms transfers to Bosnia and the lack of an administration response to Chinese missile exports to Pakistan.

While most of the issues listed by Shelby have already been extensively discussed by committee members and White House aides, the reference to foreign political fund–raisers meeting with NSC officials was new.

In a telephone conversation, Shelby told Clinton he was postponing Lake's hearing and suggested that the White House cooperate in providing information. Clinton expressed concern about the delay and urged the senator to consider holding the hearing sooner, spokesman Mike McCurry said.

LAUREN KOSBY/COLLEGIAN

"Life and Legacy"

Dax Munna, a sophomore sports management major, looks at the "Jackie Robinson: Life and Legacy" exhibit at the Visual and Performing Arts space at Student Union yesterday afternoon.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, Feb. 12

Fair — The ALANA Career Fair, "A World of Opportunities at Your Doorstep," will be held from 7–9 p.m. in the Campus Center, rooms 162–176. All students are welcome to meet with prospective employers and/or inquire about Co-Op/Internship/Job opportunities. For more info, contact Dianna Dunn at 545-6266.

Forum — A public forum about services for people living with HIV/ AIDS in Hampshire County, sponsored by the Hampshire County Ryan White II HIV Consortium along with their Consumer Advisory Board, will be held from 4–5 p.m. at The Depot, 125 Pleasant St., Northampton.

Meeting — Circle K International, a campus community service group, is having a meeting at 8 p.m. downstairs in the Campus Center. We will be holding elections. New members welcome. For more info, cal Aimee or Suzanne at 665–7712 or stop by our office at 409 Student Union.

Meeting — Undergraduate Employee Organization, a group dedicated to securing and protecting the rights of student employees, will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. in 413 Student Union.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have this week's meeting in the Student Union Duke's Room at 7 p.m. New members are always welcome. For directions to the Duke's Room or more info, call Tim at 546–0562 or Kaye at 546–1459.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Music — An Improv Jam Session (invited musicians) will be held at the Blue Moon Gallery Cafe at 7 p.m. The event is free.

Thursday, Feb. 13

Concert — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will host Jonathan Stevens, folk, acoustic, at 8 p.m. The event is free.

Discussion — An informal discussion on "Spirituality and Identity" will take place at 7 p.m. in Campus Center, room 805–809. All are welcome to participate. For more info, call 546–5174.

Discussion — The Five College Program in Peace & World Security Studies will sponsor a Five College panel on "Clinton's Foreign Policy: The Road Ahead." The program will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Franklin Patterson Building, West Lecture Hall at Hampshire College. The event is free, and open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.

Information — The Golden Key National Honor Society will have a table in the Campus Center concourse from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. to promote AIDS awarenes. Free condoms, candy, red ribbons and information on safe sex will be distributed.

Lecture — Louise Rice, director of Education of the AIDS Committee, will present a lecture entitled, "Is the AIDS Epidemic Over or Has it Just Changed Direction?" at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. Free.

Meditation — The Bangs Senior Center will hold "Heart to Heart and Soul to Soul Communication" from 7–9 p.m. at 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst.

Meeting — Pi Sigma Alpha Honor Society will be hosting the second annual Career Forum for political science majors from 4:30–6 p.m. on the sixth floor of Thompson Tower. For more info, contact Bill Ramsey at 549–1035.

Friday, Feb. 14

Exhibit — "Love Makes a Family: Living in Lesbian and Gay Families" (a photograph–text exhibit) opens at UMass with a special Valentine's Day reception. The reception will be held in the Campus Center Graduate Lounge from 7–9 p.m. The exhibit will remain in the lounge until Feb. 29. Co–sponsored by the Stonewall Center.

Information — The Golden Key National Honor Society will have a table in the Campus Center concourse from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. to promote AIDS awareness. Free condoms, candy. red ribbons and information on safe sex will be distributed.

Lecture — "The Eruption of Krakatau and the Processes of Explosive Volcanism," a lecture by Steve Cary, University of Rhode Island, will take place at 3:30 p.m. in Morrill II South, room 131. Part of the Geoscience Lecture Series.

Music — "Something Every Friday," a free weekly program series of special activities sponsored by the Campus Activities Office, presents John Akers at 8 p.m. in the Bluewall Cafe. Akers music includes influences from gospel, pop, folk, punk, country and zydeco.

Music — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will hold an Open Mic Night at 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome. Free.

Notices

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577–5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Comedy — The UMass Improv comedy show Mission Improvable will perform every Saturday in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Chemical exchange — The UMass Reuse/Exchange inventory is now available at http://www.unix.oit.umass.edu/~safety/rex1.html. The items on this list are available free of charge and will be delivered on a first–come, first–served basis. Call 545–2682 for more info.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Karate — The UMass Shotoran Karate Club is now accepting new members. No prior experience necessary. Come watch and join our daily training in a traditional Japanese martial art. For more info, contact Loukia at 549– 8058 or Ian at 549–5485.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in South Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an Illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

■ card

continued from page 1

are here, the contracts have been signed with AT&T."

Cohen said that their goal now is to build a better relationship with the administration to prevent the "miscommunications" he said occurred with the planning of the card.

SGA did pass a motion in December 1996, calling for more student input and voting power on the card issue. They also requested free machines and no fees for student–run businesses. According to Kilbourne, however, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson has not responded to their motion.

"We [students] need to see that in the future, we are involved in all decisions that are being made," Kilbourne said.

Cohen said an unofficial advisory board on the all–campus card with five to six representatives from student businesses and SGA was recently set up.

"It's a good first–step," Cohen said.

Many student–run businesses would say the first step has come too late. Feldman, Howland, and Cottrill all said they believe Auxiliary Services knew about the card four years ago, providing ample time for the dining halls and University businesses to build a budget.

"We just found out about it last semester," Cottrill said.

"Students have been kept in the dark on purpose," Feldman said.

Watrous, however, said the idea of the card only arose in the 1993–94 semester.

"We performed surveys, created focus groups and a task force and it certainly felt like a good thing," Watrous said.

According to Watrous, the administration worked with people in Student Activities over the past year and a half.

"Nobody's forcing anyone to do anything," Page said

"Big Brother" UMass?

With the range of possibilities afforded by the information stored on the new I.D. cards, some students have raised the question of whether or not the card is ethical.

For example, Housing Services has already begun installing Diebold card–key access systems to the entrance of residence halls in Southwest Residential Area, and plans to do likewise throughout the entire campus. Entrance in and out of the dorms can be monitored for safety purposes.

The new card carries all student validation information, as well as library barcode and campus facility membership information to eliminate the need for stickers on the card.

Page also said the possibility of gated parking lots with card access instead of window stickers is on the horizon.

"SCERA [Student Center for Educational Research & Advocacy] is tackling the privacy issue of the card," Feldman said. "It can monitor the food we eat, what we buy. Will they give student information to businesses, and put us on mailing lists?"

No, according to Watrous.

"Certainly privacy is an issue when using any card," Watrous said. "But that's not what this information is being collected for. We will be following all Privacy Acts."

Page said that the use of information generated from the card would be limited to figuring out when the busiest hours are at the Bluewall for staffing purposes, or determining what product sells well at a particular vending machine, for example.

What do the students want?

According to Watrous' studies, the demand for updated card services has come largely from the students. She also said similar programs have been very successful on other campuses.

Samira Sheth, a junior biology major, expressed these same sentiments.

"I think it's a very good idea, especially for people who eat in the Bluewall and the Coffee Shop," Sheth said.

Marty Keane, a junior sports management major, agreed that, in concept, the idea is good, but added that a financial responsibility will now be placed on students.

"A couple of friends of mine who go to school in Iowa recently got a similar card system, and they tend to spend exorbitant amounts of money," Keane said.

"It's a good idea in terms of convenience, but I don't think enough students are fiscally responsible enough to have it," Keane said.

"I know a lot of other campuses have this, but we are a very unique campus with student–run cooperatives," Howland said.

Howland feels that many students do not realize how the new card could affect them.

"People have to think about the ramifications," Howland said. "If you enjoy student–run businesses, support them. Speak out. We need to know you're behind us.

"Every aspect of this campus will be affected."

The pros and cons of the card issue will continue to be discussed, but the ultimate decision remains with the administration.

"How do we balance their issues with the other 22,000 students who want convenience?" Page asked.

■ jobs

continued from page 1

have stopped looking."

Asked how UMass graduates rate out in the job market, Stoia said that they are "very popular and competitive."

"We're known for quality, and the demonstration of that is that we have many more companies that want to come than we can accommodate. But the candidate can't rely on that alone if they've done nothing else to prepare," Stoia said.

The fair is by no means only open to seniors, Knight recommends that as many students as possible check it out, if only for research and for garnering ideas on how to approach getting a job in the future.

For those who are anticipating making a pitch for a job, Knight advises a snappy resume, which the Career Center can help you put together. She also suggests careful consideration of the choices.

Knight also recommends that students know what they're looking for before going into the fair. She suggests engaging the interviewers in conversation and finding out what you can add to their organization. Most importantly, she emphasizes following up by sending a letter or thank you note to the interviewer.

"Many of the people representing companies at the fair are screeners only," Knight said. "If they aren't hiring for your particular major, ask if there is another department which would be interested in what you do."

The biggest mistake students make is not following up their inquiries, Knight said. Students must demonstrate that they are interested in the prospect of working for a particular company.

"Employers are interested in interested people," Knight said.

A co–op and summer job fair, also sponsored by the Career Center, will be held tomorrow in the Campus Center for students who will not be graduating this semester, but are still interested in gaining experience over the summer or for a semester during their academic career.

Representatives of the Career Center will be leading workshops for students who would like an introduction to the services of the Career Center. All interested students are welcome to attend.

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS

Something Every Friday

SINGER
JOHN AKERS
February 14, 1997 8:00pm
Bluewall Cafe FREE

John is a very gifted singer/songwriter. The music he writes and performs includes a very wide range of influences; from gospel to pop, and folk to punk. John was voted the "Best Male Vocalist" by Freetime Magazine. For more information check out our website:

http://www.umass.edu/cwspac/events/calendar.htm

The movie "The Associate" will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 8pm and again at 10pm

This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxilliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the Daily Collegian.

7pm, Feb 14th+15th at the MULLINS CENTER University of Massachusetts Amherst

Division 1 Hockey East

UMass Hockey

VS

MAINE

Pick up your tickets at:

- Curry Hicks Cage
- 'TIX' in the Student Union
- Hockey Table in the Campus Center
- At the Game

Be a Part of the Action

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

COME TO THE CO-OP JOB FAIR!

Sponsored by:
The Career Center,
Digital Semiconductor and EDS

TEST DRIVE A CAREER

Thursday,
February 13, 1997
10:00am - 3:30pm
Campus Center
Auditorium

Summer and Semester
Paid Positions
All Majors-Undergraduate and Graduate Students

Call 545-6265 for info

LAUREN KOSKEY / COLLEGIAN

Sitting by the side

Jen Aylward, a freshman education major sits on the steps of the Campus Center, taking advantage of yesterday's warmer temperatures.

Black Affairs is dead . . .

without writers to keep it alive. The Black Affairs Page is looking for creative, dedicated writers to present on the page. If you've been meaning to get involved, this is your time. All members of the ALANA community with an interest are urged to come to a general interest meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 18 at 7:00 p.m. This is your voice. Utilize it and give Humphrey brown III a call at 546–0977 or come down to the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

FAC director, Tillis, wins honors

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The state of Massachusetts has chosen the Director of the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center as one of its 10 recipients of the 1997 Commonwealth Awards.

Dr. Frederick C. Tillis will receive the state's highest honor in a celebration to be held at the State House in March. Tillis, who has directed the Fine Arts Center since 1978, will receive the Commonwealth Award for his organizational leadership of the Fine Arts Center.

"[The award] means as the director of the Fine Arts Center that we have developed an organization that is outstanding," Tillis said.

The Commonwealth Awards are given biennially for outstanding contributions in the arts, humanities and sciences.

"[The award] is designed to acknowledge people every two years or so who the state feels have made a very valuable contribution to the community," Tillis said. "Its recognition is a sense of what the state feels about art."

Tillis came to the University in 1970 as a member of the music faculty. In 1978, he was named director of the Fine Arts Center.

In the role of director, he wanted the Fine Arts Center to have some sort of distinguishing characteristic.

"One of my priorities was to see that [art] was more comprehensive then what it recognized as art," Tillis said, citing examples of how most music presented is Eurocentric and he wanted to bring American music to the Fine Arts Center.

Tillis' approach to the arts encompasses a broad, multi– cultural view. The various art galleries and theaters that compose the Fine Arts Center make it possible to present a wide spectrum of art in the form of music, dance, theater and artwork.

"Some people think it's just a building, but it's more than a building. it's a concept," Tillis said. "My approach is that it embraces the universality of what art means. Every culture is represented at one time or another."

Tillis' focus avoids concentrating on certain cultures or certain art forms.

Arafat greets 31freed Palestinian female prisoners after release from Israeli prison

By Samar Assad
Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Waving clenched fists and "V" for victory signs, 31 Palestinian women prisoners were freed from Israeli prisons yesterday after the Supreme Court rejected a final petition to block their release.

Hundreds of friends and family members mobbed the women as they arrived early this morning in the autonomous West Bank town of Ramallah, where they were greeted by Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

"I'm proud to be on free Palestinian land!" shouted Abir Wehaibi, 27, as she climbed off a bus and was surrounded by ecstatic relatives.

Wehaibi was convicted of heading a militant group that attacked Israeli soldiers and settlers. She served four–and–a– half years of a life sentence.

The release of the women — several of whom were involved in deadly attacks on Israelis — brought Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu severe criticism from hardliners, including his own supporters.

Several dozen protesters carrying signs reading "Freed to kill again" and "Kill Jews for peace" marched outside Netanyahu's office in Jerusalem during the day. Three of the demonstrators carried a coffin with a sign reading "Victims of peace." Arafat called the releases a good sign for peace with Israel.

"No doubt this will help the relationship between the two peoples," he told reporters in Ramallah.

The releases came after a year of delays and wrangling and a long day of waiting and confusion.

Seven women had left the prison earlier yesterday — but one was brought back by her jailers because of the Supreme Court petition and three others insisted on being returned to prison in solidarity with her. Finally, after 11 p.m., all the remaining prisoners, their hands bound with plastic cuffs, climbed onto a bus to make the trip to freedom.

The petition to block the release was filed by a group representing families of Israeli terror victims, which argued that some of the women were not on the original list authorized by the government.

The court had thrown out another appeal by the group on Monday. Aisha Abu-Hazem, who served two years of a 12-year sentence for stabbing a policeman, expressed mixed feelings about her release.

"I'm not happy that I left while there are still prisoners in the prison — and I mean all prisoners, including the men," she said after shaking hands with Arafat in Ramallah.

About 3,000 Palestinian men remain in Israeli jails, most on charges of anti-Israeli violence. Arafat said the release of the Palestinian men was high on his agenda for peace negotiations. Earlier in the day, Palestinian women in traditional village costumes danced in a jubilant circle after the first prisoner — Lamia Marouf — was released.

Marouf, 31, was driven in a white van from Sharon Prison to Ben Gurion International Airport. Marouf, who served 10 years of a life term for membership in a group that kidnapped and killed an Israeli soldier, was deported to Brazil, where she has dual citizenship and her daughter lives.

Marouf rented and drove the car used in the kidnapping. Her husband, also a member of the group, remains imprisoned in Israel. The releases yesterday were among the promises in the peace accords with the Palestinians signed by Netanyahu's dovish predecessors. As opposition leader, Netanyahu fought bitterly against the agreements, but after his May election victory he said he would honor Israel's commitments to the Palestinians.

Initially, the women were set to be freed in the fall of 1995, but Israel's president and an army commander at the time refused to pardon five women involved in killing Israelis — and the others remained behind bars in a show of solidarity.

The releases were finalized in a Sunday meeting between Netanyahu and Arafat.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: Office Use Only

Date to run: February 14, 1996 Headline: Personals

S.S.# _____ Total Words: _____ X .10¢ rate = _____

Total Cost (w/specials) _____ Authorized signature: _____

Specials

Free Red Spot Color w/purchase of a graphic — Graphic #1 ♡ ❒
$2.50 Heart Graphic at Beginning & End ❒ — Graphic #2 ❣ ❒
$5 Heart Graphic Border ❒ — Graphic #3 ❤ ❒
$7 Heart Shadowed Behind Message ❒ — Graphic #4 ❦ ❒

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN/UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
VALENTINE'S DAY CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Cash ❑ Check # _____ VISA/MC# _____ Exp._____

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

COMING SOON... VALENTINE'S DAY!

- Whether you...Want to be funny/play a joke
- Want to make a good friend smile
- Be a secret admirer
- Want to say a little "I love you"

Reserve Your Valentine's Day Collegian Personal by WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12TH for the Collegian's Friday, February 14th Valentine's Day Issue.
Place as many as you like - No Limit per person.

For more information call the Collegian @ 545-3500 Drop off order forms @ Collegian in the Campus Center basement or mail to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003 (by 2/12)

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig I. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor "Position Vacant" Systems Manager
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor "Position Vacant" Circulation Manager
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Laura Stock News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Thang Vo Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The death of grunge

Luke Meredith

It's been rumored for years, but last week I finally saw it. It was disheartening, depressing and downright ugly. Yes, kids, I finally saw the death of "grunge," courtesy of the new Bush video. It's about 10 minutes long, and has some stupid story about Gavin Rossdale being harassed by cops, (apparently there was a murder or a robbery or a jaywalker or something), and then he turns into a fly.

Two points to make here. One, pompous, overblown rock star–esque projects, such as this, are the reason why "alternative" sprouted up in the first place, which is ironic in a cyclical kind of way. And two, the only thing Rossdale would ever be arrested for is Bush's last album.

But this all got me thinking. What is going to happen to all these grunge bands who can't sell records anymore? We can't just throw them out on the streets, or can we? Of course not! So I called around, and I think I can find at least a few of these guys a job.

***

Candlebox — They'd move back to Seattle and work at Jack–in–the–Box. (You know, that fake McDonalds out in the Pacific Northwest that had those hamburgers that killed people a few years back.) Customers could have the option of either eating one of those "killer burgers" or listening to the band's first album. Either way, they'd be dead in an hour. After they get fired, because, as we all know, they suck, they could cut lawns until their big reunion show, which could be held at Yankee Candle in the year 2014. They could bill the show as "Yankee Candle–Box–Palooza '14."

***

Stone Temple Pilots — Two words for Scott Weiland—: rehab counselor. The way I see it, he's been there so many times, he has to know the drill by now. You just go,"Yes, yes, I know your parents didn't love you, you just needed to escape, no, no, the world doesn't hate you." You know, stuff like that. How hard can it be?

***

Better Than Ezra — They can make the biggest comeback of them all by pretending that the singer, that guy with the curly hair, is dead, and then go Beatle–esque and put out a double album called, "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Suck– Ass Band." To further ensure their longevity and credibility, they could sing the words, "The guy with the curly hair is dead," over and over again — backwards throughout the album.

***

Silverchair — College.

***

Rage Against the Machine — They could organize a radical left–wing take–over of America, which I think they're doing right now anyways. They'd rename the country Amerikka, change the national anthem to "Bulls on Parade" and end each session of Congress by shouting "#$%& you, I won't do what you tell me!"

(P.S. I've said it before and I'll say it again. Zach Dela Rocha would be a lot less angry if somebody would just give him a hug once in awhile.)

***

R.E.M. — In between making amazing albums, Michael Stipe could clean up by competing in "Alien Look–Alike" contests all over the world. It wouldn't be easy though. He'd have to expect tough competition from the likes Houston Rocket Sam Cassell, Celine Dion and Duke center Greg Newton.

***

Pearl Jam — Now I still love Pearl Jam, but if they keep putting out records like No Code, they'll have to find real jobs pretty soon. It shouldn't be too hard, especially for Eddie Vedder. He could be Neil's Young's administrative assistant, much like Mr. Smithers on the "Simpsons." He could get Neil's coffee (cream, no sugar), answer phone calls and pick up his arthritis medication. My advice to Mr. Young, though — don't let Eddie book tour dates! Before you know it, you'll be playing in a barn in Leverett or a racetrack in Athol.

***

Sponge — If they would just come out of the closet and accept their fate, they could make a decent living as a Winger cover band. They could call themselves "Seventeen," and if someone ever asked them to sing that Sponge song, (they only had one, right?), they would just say, "Who?"

***

You know what, though? I am not crying in my beer over the death of this corporate–induced grunge era. Pearl Jam, Nirvana and Jane's Addiction put out really good music at a time when the rest of it was crap, (except for Bon Jovi, of course) and that's why we started to listen to it, because it was quality, and it spoke to us on a level you can't package and sell in a Sam Goody's. They took that as a sign that we liked it because it was "alternative," and we were all disenfranchised whiners, but they were wrong. We liked it because it was good, and that's the bottom line. What they'll never understand is that bands like Phish, the Beastie Boys and Beck, bands that push the boundaries and create real music for people who'll appreciate it, have done more for alternative music than all the Dishwallas, Smashing Pumpkins and Nixons put together.

So rest in peace, grunge. We'll be waiting for you on your reunion tour in 20 years.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

The expensive truth on gas

Daniel Levenson

If you trust the "information" provided by the American Petroleum Industry (API), we should all be bowing down at the feet of the all–mighty oil companies in praise of the reasonable prices we pay for gasoline.

Well, maybe that's a little harsh, but then again maybe not. In a document entitled "How Much We Pay for Gasoline," published by the API's Policy Analysis and Strategic Planning Department, the group attempts to explain, through incomprehensible piles of daunting data and uncogently constructed sentences why we should all love the oil companies. Or at least try to understand them.

They try to explain everything from how we actually pay less for gasoline now than consumers did in the 1930s to the many ways the petroleum industry has implemented changes and new regulations that the federal government has mandated.

In my 11th grade chemistry class my teacher told us about a little thing called "manipulation of data." Now before the oil executives leap out of their La–Z–Boys and break their spleens in an attempt to run for their cell phones and lawyers offices, I am not accusing the API of blatantly lying to the American public in an attempt to sell us more fossil fuels.

Rather, what I am putting forth is the notion that perhaps the information presented in these pages is the result of someone taking a bunch of facts and jumbling them around until they look how someone wants them to.

It's like watching a 3–D movie without the glasses, you can still see the movie, but some things will appear slightly askew.

A perfect example of this can be found in the documents opening paragraph, where the authors state, "The average annual cost of motor gasoline to consumers was less in 1995 (in inflation–adjusted 1995 dollars terms) than it has ever been over the entire 77 year history of recorded pump prices."

What the hell does that mean? The price may actually be lower in inflation–adjusted terms, but in a significantly more real and applicable way, the fact is that when I go the gas pumps to fill up my car I am paying around $1.30 for a gallon of unleaded regular gas, and people in 1993 were paying approximately $1.10 per gallon.

In my mind, "rate of inflation" is virtually irrelevant, but anyway you slice it, a 20 cent increase since 1993 can add up. For every five gallons of gas a person puts in their car they are paying $1.00 more than someone filling their car with the same grade of gasoline in 1993.

A significant part of the increase in the cost to consumers, according to the document, comes from gasoline taxes levied at the state and federal level.

Taxes on gasoline total 42.4 cents per gallon in 1995 — that further breaks down into 18.4 cents per gallon in federal taxes and 22 cents per gallon in state taxes.

In seven states there is a sales tax imposed. These include: California, Georgia, Hawaii, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and New York. These states "...account for more than a third of the motor fuel used in the United States."

Hmm... so who is to blame here? The oil companies, the States? The federal government? Well, what about the consumer? After all, if people didn't drive cars, the industry would have no market for its product. Maybe we should all shut up and ride bikes and horses.

Certainly all of the above mentioned groups share part of the blame, but the sale of motor fuel does have to be regulated at different levels, and I suppose the government does have a right to tax the product at different levels.

So the federal government takes their cut, albeit a seemingly large one from my gallon of gas, and then the state jumps in too.

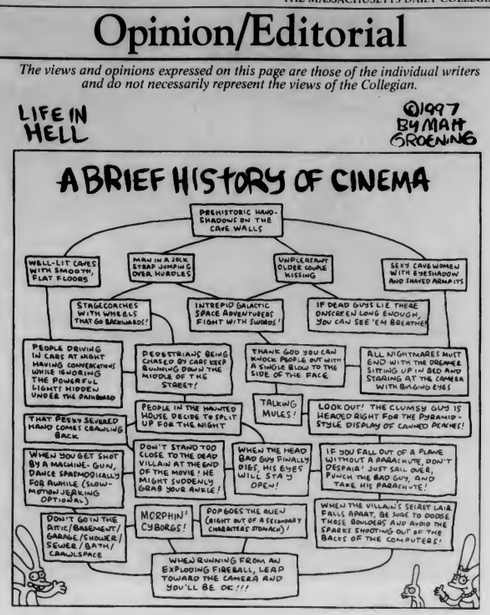
The consumer is basically held prisoner by the fact that we live in a country with comparatively very little public transportation outside of major urban centers, which leaves us with a nation of drivers dependent on their mechanical steads for everything from driving to the store to pick up frozen tortillas to driving the U.S. mail across the country.

We are so vitally dependent on the oil companies it is sickening. So perhaps the American driver can be blamed for a lot of things, but in all likelihood the ridiculous price of a gallon of gas is not one of them.

Lastly, the oil companies have to make some money from their product, but at what point does the amount charged by the company become exuberant?

The answer to that question is not easily found. When I spoke with Dorothy Beeler, from Texaco's U.S. Public and Government Affairs department, she explained that she is not allowed to talk about how Texaco determines the price they are going to charge for gasoline.

She also told me that she couldn't speak for any other company since they are forbidden to discuss pricing policies with other petroleum companies, since that would constitute price fixing.



This brings me to the final point, the petroleum industry charges us a seemingly unfair price for a product which, if we own cars are forced to buy.

And regardless of state and federal taxes, someone is getting rich, and it's coming out of our pockets.

Daniel E. Levenson is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

A sorority of my very own

Jamie Sinsheimer

Last week I experienced something I have never experienced before. By the constant urging of a good friend of mine, and the nerve to try something new — I went to sorority rush. It started out as a joke. People talked, they were shocked, they didn't believe it — how could I join forces with them?

From the beginning, I kept running over in my mind what it might be like to actually be in a sorority. Would I hate it? Or even more scary, would I love it? Could some fun actually emerge out of the experience, or would it just be a complete failure? Well, in truth rushing was fun, for the first 20 seconds.

Walking into the Newman Center on the second night of rush, I was in a state of extreme amazement. There were hundreds of girls waiting, some more dressed up than others, some looking bored, others nervous, others annoyed. As I made my way, I passed them to go talk to my rush counselor, every head looked up at my passing. I figured this was some ritual way of checking me out, seeing if I was good enough — if I fit the status quo.

This was my first night of formal rush. I had the opportunity to go to three different houses, and in short, experience three different worlds that contrasted significantly from my world and with each other.

My first house was quite overwhelming. I walked in laughing. My laughter was caused in part by sheer nervousness (would they catch on to me?) and in part by complete silliness.

Inside, the other rushees and I were serenaded by a group of singing girls. This ritual I found amazing, as it happened at all three of the houses I visited that evening. After we signed in, we were escorted to seats and became immediately engaged in conversation with the sisters.

They were nice, I am not going to say that they weren't. I did have a good time talking to over a hundred girls in the course of three hours. I met a lot of interesting people, and I was made to believe that they were as open minded as they could possibly be, but this changed two days after rush.

Returning home from the night, I explained what had happened to my girlfriend and my roommate. I was so excited about how friendly everyone was, that I encouraged them to rush too, just for the experience. I knew in my heart that I was not the "type" to join a sorority, but for a while the sisters made me feel welcome.

As with everything, there is usually almost always a negative and positive side to things. Almost expectantly, a down side emerged as well.

As part of formal rush, all participants are required to wear a name tag for identification purposes. In one house, about six of us were in the midst of conversation, when one of the sisters [in the house] reached for a rushee's shoulder to nudge her out of the way in order to make her name tag visible. With this came the remark from the sister, maybe to protect herself or the girl, which went something like this: "Don't worry, I'm not trying to check you out or anything."

With this came the thought, "What if these girls knew I was lesbian? How would they feel about my being in their house?" Aside from that, it was also an upsetting remark to hear. Unfortunately, that wasn't the only thing that happened in the course of the week.

Speaking to a woman who is on the inside of this territory, I found out in part what I believe to be the real truth. Through her, I found out the two real reasons as to why I was cut from a certain house:

First, they supposedly caught on to me and found out that I was doing a story for the Collegian, and second (this is a good one) because I was lesbian.

They knew that I was a lesbian since they do some pretty heavy duty research on all their candidates, and hence found out that I was the GLB editor. What if I really wanted to rush and I was working for the paper, would they cut me regardless?

Now, after I heard this, I wasn't as shocked as I thought I would be, in actuality I figured that they wouldn't want me because of my sexual orientation. It was a shame since I felt a certain way about things that night I returned home, and my image of one of the houses I visited became completely tarnished over the course of the week.

Even though my experience in one or two houses was a bit disturbing, I am not naming all the sororities accountable. I still encourage everyone I know to go to rush, formal or informal, just for the experience. I feel this because I know everyone will have a different experience than I did.

Hey, if not, maybe we can get a bunch of lesbians and bisexuals to form their own sorority — now that would give some of those girls a run for their money, wouldn't it?

Jamie Sinsheimer is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Two takes on O.J.

To the Editor:

Professor DuBois speculated daringly on the reason for the white male's "continuing fascination" with the Simpson case. He says its summons up "memories among white males [including me] of the freedom their fathers and their father's fathers had with black women" from 1619 onwards. It engenders "white male guilt... for the wholesale violation of black women by white men during the days of slavery..."

Now Prof. DuBois may be privy to information about my forefathers that I lack, and that millions of other white males lack about their forefathers, but if we all lack that information how can we have memories of what these forefathers supposedly did and feel guilty about?

Then again, my forefathers, and those of millions of other white males, arrived in America well after the Civil War, and neither I nor these millions feel any guilt over the despicable behavior of slave owners. We do not believe in collective guilt.

Professor DuBois, no doubt inadvertently, seems to be stereotyping white males, offering racist generalizations, insulting our fathers and grandfathers and ignoring the key question of whether, for him, Simpson the human being — not the black man — is in fact guilty of a double murder. DuBois' theory also fails to explain why white and black women and black men also find the trial fascinating.

May I suggest that the case is fascinating not primarily because of the race issue — injected long after the trial began by Simpson's lawyers — but because of its truly tragic character: the harrowing fall of a rich hero due to a fatal flaw in his character, and his hubris in thinking that he could get away with his crimes?

Arnold Silver
Professor of English

To the Editor:

The Op/Ed piece by David G. DuBois regarding "Race and the O.J. Simpson case" reveals the author to be just as racist as the dreaded "white male."

Mr. DuBois' argument relies heavily on "straw men," a rhetorical device that sets up an argument or viewpoint for the sole purpose of being refuted. That the argument is not held or defended by the opposing side is not important, for its intension is to distract from authentic discourse that might require compromise.

To claim that the "white, underground information network" (of which Mr. DuBois includes the victims families) was outraged by the Simpson criminal trial because it would provide a channel of retaliation for black males is a perfect example of such a "straw man" argument. Since this claim is not actually held, it does not require a defense. Yet, it serves as a distraction from the overwhelming evidence that O.J. Simpson killed Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

No, Mr. DuBois, the real outrage of rational white and black America is caused by our fear that the justice system can be so undermined by a cadre of opportunists. The trail of DNA between Rockingham and Brentwood, the unexplained cuts on Mr. Simpson's hand, the 911 tapes and photos of a battered Nicole Simpson, the Bruno Magli shoes, the "suicide" note, the thwarted escape in the Bronco — complete with a gun, thousands of dollars, a disguise, a receipt for the disguise (have I left anything out, O.J. cognoscenti?) are no match for an improbable police conspiracy to the most susceptible members of society.

Thus, the interracial fetish you accuse the "white, underground information network" of having must be an artifact of your own projection, Mr. DuBois. Further, as an apologist for a probable murderer and definite liar, you lose your credibility. Remember Mr. DuBois, falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus.

Matthew Brown
Belchertown

Arts & Living

Wednesday, February 12, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

'Bright' times for Pavement

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

PAVEMENT
Brighten the Corners
Matador/Capitol

COURTESY CARL BUTTENSKY

Pavement's new album Brighten The Corners, a new dose of sunshine for the band, is out in stores now.

Not since R.E.M.'s early days of college radio stardom has an American band intrigued the underground music scene by simply playing rock music like Pavement has. Unlike their cutting edge peers fiddling and diddling with electronic gadgets and remixes, Pavement has remained true to its roots and continues to belt out the best rock music around bar none.

Brighten the Corners adds yet another chapter to Pavement's near flawless back catalog (see sidebar). On their fourth studio album, the band breaks little new ground musically, but weaves together a beautiful album with few dry spots.

Recorded by Mitch Easter (of R.E.M., Game Theory fame) during a two week span last summer, Brighten the Corners' production is a far cry from their early four–track days. Songs like "Transport is Arranged," with its Pet Sounds– esque instrumentation (flutes included) and breaks, mark a new progression for Pavement — a band formerly renowned for their simple recording methods.

"Stereo," the album's first single — and deservedly so — captures the band at its best. Lead vocalist Steven Malkimus quickly finds himself spewing out his notoriously obscure and often hilarious lyrics: "What about the voice of Geddy Lee? / How did it get so high? / I wonder if he speaks like an ordinary guy." Then part–time drummer, and full–time entertainer Bob Nastanovich chimes in "I know 'im and he does."

But "Stereo" magnifies Pavement's problem (or perhaps good fortune) in relating to the so–called alternative rock world — this band is just too weird in a not–so–weird kind of way. While his peers sing about teen angst, death and drugs, Malkimus finds himself too busy spewing off random and unsensical lyrics like the rock version of avant–garde film.

This pattern of discombobulated lyrics over more traditional rock sounds marks this album and their entire career. Like early R.E.M., when Michael Stipe's vocals were indecipherable, Pavement has this knack with free flowing irrational lyrics — the only difference, though, is that Malkimus's words are crystal clear in delivery and like mud in content. But it is beautiful mud.

On "Shady Lane," a song about how everyone needs a shady lane, Malkimus sings, "freeze / don't move/ you've been chosen as an extra in the movie adaptation of the sequel to your life."

As for sequels. Brighten the Corners builds where Pavement left off on Wowee Zowee and Crooked Rain, Crooked Rain, the band's last two albums. Gone are the messy, distorted days of Slanted and Enchanted and Perfect Sound Forever. Pavement has matured and it's quite obvious.

Besides the lyrics, Brighten the Corners may be Pavement's most accessible work yet. Where Wowee Zowee teased the listener to nearly every side of Pavement schizophrenic vision and Crooked Rain suffered from a little too much filler, Brighten the Corners flows well — perhaps due to the familiarity of many songs. "Blue Hawaiian" and "We Are Underused" are your typical, lackadaisical Pavement numbers.

Possibly the band's first venture into politics, "Embassy Row" serves as another high point. The tune begins in typical Malkimus fashion: lazy beat, catchy melody and "ba– ba–ba" backing vocals before exploding into a full rock attack akin to their finer moments on Slanted and Enchanted.

With another stellar album under their belts, Pavement proves that the band's deep well of songs has not dried up yet — and that it has little intention of selling out to the Lollapalooza masses.

Rumor has it that the band recorded over 10 more tracks with Easter and if the track "Westie Can Drum" from the "Stereo" four song CD5 is any indication, we can only hope more Pavement is right around the corner. A

A decade of success

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

Since the release of their debut single, Pavement has charmed the underground rock world with their obscure packaging, quirky attitudes and brilliant songs. Their track record is untouched in recent memory:

• Westing (by Musket and Sextant) (Drag City)

Collecting all of their out–of–print singles and the amazing Perfect Sound Forever 10" EP, Westing captures Pavement in their messiest hour. These early recordings along, with other Drag City labelmates and Guided By Voices, set in motion the four–track/low–fi revolution that followed. Essential tracks include: "Debris Slide," "Forklift," "Box Elder" and "Home." A

• Slanted and Enchanted (Matador)

The quintessential independent record of the 1990s and one of the finest debut records ever released, Slanted finds Pavement at their peak. From the beautiful "Summer Babe" and "Here" to their noisier moments on "No Life Singed Her" Pavement covered all the bases and came up all aces. Unfortunately, this recording marks the end of the band's relationship with drummer/ ex–hippie Gary Young who consistently added spice and surprise to Pavement's recordings. A+

• Watery, Domestic EP (Matador)

Pavement continued their winning streak with this four song, 12–minute teaser of a release that takes a glimpse at the band's maturer and quieter sound. All four cuts are essential Pavement, especially "Frontwards." A

• Crooked Rain, Crooked Rain (Matador)

Perhaps the closest the band has come to a let–down, Crooked Rain remains an excellent album. Featuring their breakthrough hit single "Cut Your Hair," Pavement became a semi–darling of the MTV alternative nation, though still too weird to grasp by mainstream America. Crooked Rain features of slew of outstanding tracks including "Silence Kit," "Elevate Me Later" and "Unfair." A–

• Wowee Zowee (Matador/ Atlantic)

Instead of selling out to their Lollapallooza fanbase, Pavement threw another curveball with this three–sided album of their most mature and diverse work yet. Lacking a bona fide hit single, Wowee Zowee went nowhere fast but remains a worthwhile, underrated record. A–

ROCK the house

Silverchair
Freak Show

Bush
Razorblade Suitcase

11.99 CD 6.99 CASS. EACH

The Offspring
Ixnay on the Hombre

No Doubt
Tragic Kingdom

11.99 6.99 EACH

Toni Braxton Secrets

Rhyme & Reason
Soundtrack

11.99 CD 6.99 CASS. EACH

OVer 60,000 CDs DisCounted Every Day

Counting Crows
Recovering the Satellites

Romeo & Juliet
Soundtrack

MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
MORE CHOICE. LESS PRICE. EVERY DAY.

Spring Break Party '97
DAYTONA BEACH
From $229 Bus & Hotel
From $99 Hotel Only
• ROUND TRIP TRANSPORTATION VIA DELUXE MOTORCOACH
• 6 OR 7 NIGHT ACCOMMODATIONS AT OCEAN FRONT HOTELS
• FULL TIME BREAKAWAY STAFF ON LOCATION
For Details or to Book Call:
1-800-465-4257 Ext. 375
Breakaway Tours
www.breakawaytours.com

Tonight
Retro Night
Music of the 70's and 80's
Weekly Drink Specials
16oz. Red Dog Drafts 1.50
16oz. Bacardi Limon & Coke 2.00
16oz. Vodka and Cranberry 2.00
12oz. Bottles of Rolling Rock 1.50
NEW HOURS
1/2 Price Appetizers & Nachos
3-5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11 pm
No Cover Charge
THE PUB

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Round-trip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA $277 $517
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
212-986-8420
800-272-9676

VALENTINE'S VALUES
Cash & Carry
Knowlers Flowers
#1 Long Red Rose Boxed Chocolate Bar $ 8.95
#2 Long Red Rose Boxed Chocolate Bar Valentine Mylar Balloon $ 12.95
#3 Chocolate Bar Valentine Mylar Balloon Stuffed Bear $ 18.95
★ Delivery Available
Please Place Orders EARLY !
172 N.Pleasant St. Amherst MA. 01002
253-3805

Listen to the Reverend's rockin' sermons

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

According to the Reverend Horton Heat, there are three things worth living for: booze, women and vintage cars. Throw in some hair grease, cuffed pants and bright white socks, and the picture is complete — three Texas playboys hell-bent on resurrecting the spirit of Gene Vincent by rocking out with a religious fervor.

It would be completely unfair to dismiss the band as a bunch of psychobilly throwbacks, though. Their music is a white-knuckled blend of Sun Records-era rockabilly, jump blues, country swing and punk, with a bit of Southern Gothic mystery and raunchy Lone Star humor thrown in for color. This intricate mix of influences, when combined with the high-octane energy of the Heat, creates the sonic equivalent of a blow to the solar plexus.

The Reverend Horton Heat's unique line-up plays a large role in the band's sound. Fronted by the Rev himself on guitar and vocals, his growling Texan drawl and Duane Eddy-on-steroids guitar twang act as the basis for the band's sound. Stand-up bassist Jimbo and new drummer Scott Churita provide the rhythm, propelling the music with a crazed attack of crashes, slaps and fills.

On record, the band is dynamic — their four albums (especially 1993's Full-Custom Gospel Sounds) each jump out of the speakers like a souped-up '57 Chevy driven by Satan. It is on stage, though, where the Reverend truly shines. Touring behind last year's It's Martini Time, the Horton Heat live experience is not to be missed. Their show is a ferocious mix of guitar fireworks, outlandish theatrics, fire-and-brimstone preaching and hellacious rock n' roll fury — the perfect opportunity to cleanse your soul by bathing in sin. Do not miss this opportunity for redemption — feel the Heat and see the light tonight.

The Reverend Horton Heat performs tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton, with N.Y. Loose and Angry Johnny and the Killbillies opening up. Doors open at 7:50 PM.

COURTESY MARINA CHAVEZ

The Reverend Horton Heat, flanked on his left by Scott (drums) and on his right by Jimbo (bass) hits Pearl St. tonight.

■ Anderson

continued from page 10

coaching takes its form.

Next year will be Anderson's final year at the collegiate level, and the junior from Hebron, Conn. has plenty of experience to lead the newcomers as a possible, if not probable, captain.

"I can lead the team with having experience with all kinds of meets — just knowing how to deal with all the meets with my experience and not to get all crazy about the first meet, I think I can help the team that way," Anderson said.

On top of losing senior-tri-captains John Koritkoski, Chris Martin and Matt Getty, UMass will also be saying good-bye to three other seniors. Dave Dornaus, Mark Collier and Mike Shaw.

"We're losing some people, but we have a lot of people coming back that are scoring a lot of points. I think we'll be fine next year," Anderson said.

The returning Minutemen to whom Anderson refers are swimmers like Brian Wisniewski, David Koritkoski, Billy Hunter and Matt Davey.

When asked about his teammates, Anderson had nothing but good things to say.

"Brian Winiewski, he's just doing great. Grimes, Heuston, everyone's doing good," Anderson said.

All year, Yarworth has stressed his loathing attitude toward dual meets, and how he's just waiting for the championship meet to come around again. His swimmers take on similar views.

"I just think [dual meets are] like a practice, you know, just get myself ready. I don't like them that much," Anderson said.

Anderson's plans are not limited to the swimming pool.

"My major is chemistry, and after that I may go to medical school or grad school," Anderson said.

But until swimming is over, it's the No. 1 thing on his mind. In just a week and a half, Anderson and the rest of the top swimmers for UMass will travel west to Buffalo, N.Y. to defend their Atlantic 10 Championship. From being drilled by coach Yarworth, Anderson knows what to strive for come Feb. 20.

"To repeat and win A-10s again," Anderson said. "Personally, to try to do just as good, look better, but the first thing is to win for the team.

"I think we can win if we swim well. I don't think it's a given, but yeah, I think we can win," Anderson said.

At the championship last year, Anderson won three 1996 Atlantic 10 titles, claiming the 100 free at a finishing time of 45.86, the 400 medley relay (3:24.53) and then took his specialty, the 50 free at 20.51 in A-10 record time. That time also secured a second place spot on the All-time Top 10 Swimming and Diving Records for UMass.

This year's competition is not so clear cut. The title will be claimed by the team that decides to show up, and the players who want it the most.

"I'm not really sure. I think St. Bonaventure is going to be good, probably Fordham, maybe G.W.," Anderson said.

Anderson's top times this year are 21.23 in the 50 free on Jan. 26, 47.62 in the 100 free on Jan. 26 and 55.02 in the 100 back on Jan. 19. He also posted high scores for the 400 free relay team at 3:08.21 on Jan. 26, the 800 free relay team at 7:08.63 on Dec. 6 and the 200 free relay team at 1:25.81 on Dec. 6.

■ Beanpot

continued from page 10

with the Charles River to our right, and not only seeing the lights on, but seeing students in there studying. As Torbin so gracefully said, "If Texas was playing Texas A&M in a football game, not only would there be no students, but the libraries would be closed."

That was the only sad part, because everything else was magical. From shaking Sean McDonough's hand to standing next to Gord Kluzak in the freight elevator, Monday night had a certain glow to it. Maybe it was the tears building up in lorma's eyes after just coming off of the ice surface, or maybe it was the grin from ear to ear that Leigh was wearing after seeing his friend with that certain "awe" about him. Or it was the tremendous FleetCenter hot dogs sitting in our stomachs, but whatever it was, the evening was spectacular, and one that everyone should enjoy.

If you're an American, once in your life you'll want to visit the Statue of Liberty or see the Grand Canyon, or go to a Hooters. If you grew up within an hour or two of Boston, and are a hockey fan, you want to witness at least one Beanpot Championship game.

Monday night was the limit.

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian staff member.

The nominations are in!

The 69th Academy Award nominations were announced yesterday morning in Burbank, Calif. The ceremony will be held on Monday, March 24th. The following is a partial list of the nominees.

Best Picture
Jerry Maguire
The English Patient
Fargo
Secrets and Lies
Shine

Best Director
Anthony Minghella — The English Patient
Joel Coen — Fargo
Mikos Forman — The People vs. Larry Flynt
Mike Leigh — Secrets and Lies
Scott Hicks — Shine

Best Actress
Brenda Blethen — Secrets and Lies
Francis McDormand — Fargo
Kristen Scott Thomas — The English Patient
Diane Keaton — Marvin's Room
Emily Watson — Breaking the Waves

Best Actor
Tom Cruise — Jerry Maguire
Goeffrey Rush — Shine
Ralph Fiennes — The English Patient
Woody Harrelson — The People vs. Larry Flynt
Billy Bob Thornton — Sling Blade

Best Supporting Actress
Marianne Jean-Baptise — Secrets and Lies
Juliette Binoche — The English Patient
Barbara Hershey — The Portrait of a Lady
Lauren Bacall — The Mirror Has Two Faces
Joan Allen — The Crucible

Best Supporting Actor
Cuba Gooding, Jr. — Jerry Maguire
Maurice Stahl — Shine
William H. Macy — Fargo
Edward Norton — Primal Fear
James Woods — Ghosts of Mississippi

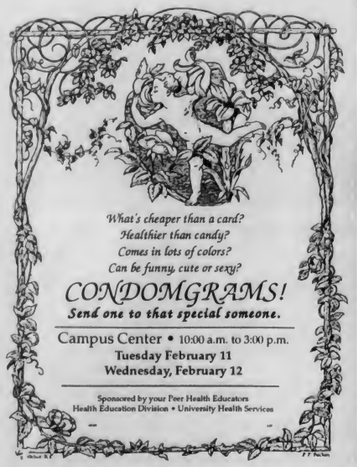
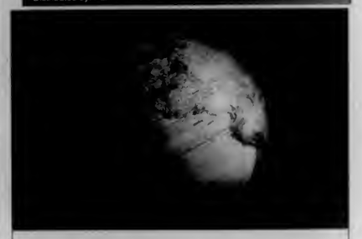
Best Adapted Screenplay
Trainspotting
Hamlet
The Crucible
The English Patient
Sling Blade



Best Original Screenplay
Fargo
Jerry Maguire
Shine
Lone Star
Secrets & Lies

— List compiled by Jeremy Brothers

LET THAT SPECIAL PERSON KNOW YOUR STALKING THEM WITH A COLLEGIAN VALENTINE 545-3500



Bud Night
TIME OUT
Win a trip to the Final Four Lots of Prizes!
Budweiser

Choices Not Chances
Free Contraception Education
Every Mon & Thurs 3 - 4:30 pm and Tues & Wed 7 - 8:30 pm in rm. 302 UHS
Men and Women Welcome
For more information call the Health Education Office 577-5181

What's cheaper than a card?
Healthier than candy?
Comes in lots of colors?
Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone.
Campus Center • 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Tuesday February 11
Wednesday, February 12
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division • University Health Services

!! AEROBICS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER
175 UNIVERSITY DRIVE, AMHERST, MA • 253-3539
!! TREADMILLS !!

MULTILEX
English/Russian Dictionary on CD ROM for Windows 95™
The World's Largest and Most Powerful English/Russian Language Tool Available on The International Market Today!
ORDER TODAY!
By INTERNET:
http://www.profit-russia.com (click "MEDIALINGUA")
Or Call toll free USA/Canada: 1- (800) 717-3105
OVER 250,000 ENTRIES !!!
ONLY $39.95 + Shipping and Handling!
"Exceptional Dictionary For Studying" POWERS/Russian Edition October 1st, 1995
"Electronic Dictionary of a New Generation" COMPUTERWORLD Russia September 24th, 1995
Published by: MEDIALINGUA - MOSCOW, RUSSIA
Distributed by: PEAK TRADE SYSTEMS INC. - DENVER, COLORADO USA

Put the world at your fingertips.
Software Engineering
Systems Engineering
Computer Design
Signal Processing
Electro-Optics
Image Processing
With Raytheon Electronic Systems, you'll create the technologies that define the future of tomorrow's world. You'll maximize your Engineering and Computer Science knowledge and make an impact when you join our team. We currently have over 350 opportunities available in the technical areas listed above.
Raytheon Electronic Systems will be visiting campus soon. To find out more about the complex challenges we have to offer, please contact the Career Placement Office to sign up for an interview.
For additional information, please see our homepage at: http://www.raytheon.com/res
Interested candidates who are unable to meet with us on campus may send a resume directly to: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Professional Staffing, M/S T2SL2, 50 Apple Hill Drive, Tewksbury, MA 01876-0901. Fax: (508) 858-1163. E-mail: staffing@res.ray.com
U.S. citizenship may be required for some positions. Equal Opportunity Employer.
Raytheon Electronic Systems

EF Education invites graduating students to learn about job opportunities in the fast-growing, far-reaching EF world.

EF worldwide
EF has more than 30 years of experience teaching languages, organizing cultural exchanges and arranging educational tours. We've helped two million people broaden their own personal horizons, and become the world's largest private educational organization with 70 offices in 40 countries. Our biggest office is in Boston—and it's getting bigger all the time.

You and EF
To join our team in Boston, you'll have to be the type of person who only works for companies you believe in. The type who can talk sensibly about the benefits of an international experience because you've had a few yourself. The type who has already impressed someone with your professionalism, potential and ambition. And the type who sees no limits to your career growth.

Please drop by our booth at the Career Fair to tell us about your international experiences.

EF Education
One Memorial Drive
Cambridge, MA 02142
1-800-590-1154
e-mail: jobs@ef.com
Visit the EF world at www.ef.com

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS
CAREER FAIR
TODAY!
10 (don't [illegible])
Career [illegible]
25% discount on Dr. Pro* disc today only!
Discount coupons at the door
* Many firms [illegible] you must be [illegible]
73 employ[illegible] ALL!
Something [illegible]
Non-profits
Human services
Computer [illegible]
Education
Research
Environmental Publishing Healthcare
University Career [illegible]
545-222[illegible]
Campus Center Auditorium
PLUS rooms 162, 163C, 174 & hallways

Creative Control

Intelligence Credentials Ambition. This powerful combination needs only one thing more. A venue in which to excel. CIGNA, for example.

We're 44,000 people strong. We're 96 billion dollars big. We're five continents across. We're health care. We're insurance. We're investment management. And we're covering new ground in a world of financial services designed to do good things for good people.

If you're looking for a place where you can exercise care and creativity - as well as control over your career, come with us. And accept the challenge of leadership.

Please join us to learn more about our Human Resources Summer Management Development Program at the following information session:

Wednesday, February 12, 1997
Campus Center, Room 911-15
6:00 - 8:00 p.m.

CIGNA
A Business of Caring

Individual Insurance | Property & Casual | Group Insurance Life•Accident• Disability | Retirement & Investment Services | Investment Management
International | Reinsurance | HealthCare

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

If You...
- want to work for a Global Leader that markets well-known brands like Tide, Bounty, Crest and Pantene
- have an interest in Customer Business Development
- are looking for a Challenging Full Time or Summer Co-op Position
- would like to learn and grow in a Team Environment
- desire a Management Career

Then You should come join us at the...

Procter & Gamble
Career Information Session

We are looking for talented students of ALL MAJORS from both undergraduate and graduate programs.

Visit our website at www.pg.com

When : Thursday 2/13/97
Time : 7-9 pm
Where : Campus Center 101
Refreshment will be served!!!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Get Involved! The Women's Health Project seeks volunteers interested in teaching and political action in contraceptive education, body image, etc. For information call 577-5181

All students interested in the turf industry and becoming a member of the student chapter of the GCSAA, there will be a general meeting on Wed., Feb. 12, at 4:30pm. in Stockbridge 114 All are encouraged to attend!!!

ANNOUNCEMETS

The Sisters of Delta Zeta would like to invite all university women to Open Rush on Wednesday, February 12 at 8pm DZ is located at 11 Phillips St

VALENTINE ROSES
Send your Valentine some roses! Deliveries available on-campus and in Amherst. Place your order with Marry on the Campus Center Concourse from 9am until 5pm on February 12th, 13th and 14th!

RUSH Theta Chi Feb. 3,4,5,& 10-12, 8-10pm 549-9252

TREK FANS If you are interested in joining STARFLEET International, please contact Martin A. Lessem @ 546-7003 to get membership information

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst 2 bedroom apartment for rent. Water and heat included. Take over lease. Call Angela 546-4784

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Black BMW 318i 5 speed Perfect exterior $2000 or B/O Call 546-3630

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap $1650 or B/O. 546-5320

1985 Iroc for sale Superb condition. Many new parts Call Jeff 665-7578

EMPLOYMENT

Auditions for Utah Shakespearean Festival Greenshew performers, Feb. 15 at 10am in Totman Gym Room 13. Full summer employment and housing. Looking for singers/dancers/actors. Also looking for jugglers/musicians. For more info call 256-3077

Hadley office hiring for evening and weekend shifts. Flexible hours. Fun atmosphere Start work immediately. $7-$10/hr. Call 584-0215. Ask for Mr. Cavanaugh

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel-Alaska/Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7767 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

LIFE MODELS- Male/Female for Life Drawing class at Holyoke Community College. $10 per hour Call David M. at 253-5885 or 562-2482

SUMMER CAMP! Co-ed Sleepaway! MANY COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE! We need role models- sensitive, caring and skilled staff members FOR THE BEST SUMMER OF YOUR LIFE! in NE Pennsylvania's Pocono Mtz. call (800)61-WANDA or E-Mail towanda@intercamp.com or visit our Web Site at http://www.intercamp.com/towanda for information, application and to schedule an interview. This is a great camp and an awesome experience. Camp Towanda, Honesdale, PA.

EMPLOYMENT

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krakow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680

Camp Blue Ridge, a co-ed camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are looking for lifeguards, WSI, as well as instructors in water-skiing, rappelling, boating, art, riflery, archery, sports, drama, cheerleading and dance. For more info. call Debra at 665-8463

Work Study students needed. Teaching positions in a multicultural after-school program for children 5-12. Some experience desirable. $6.00/hour. Men and people of color encouraged to apply. Call Capacidad at 253-5698

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.-D40, NYC, NY 10014

Summer Job! Camp Samoset is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama and woodworking. Also hiring secretarias, kitchen and maintenance workers Call or fax resume to: Winter Office, Wallesley, MA (617)237-3017 Fax (617)237-7269

EMPLOYMENT

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info. send resume and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available Benefits. Summer or year round. (612)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C9017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryer and more! On bus line Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses. Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Macintosh SE, Hard Drive, Style Writer II ink jet printer, $400 or B/O Call 549-9188

FOR SALE

Docmartens Steal Toe 3 Eye Greasy, New. Size 9 U.S. LM @ 256-1749. $70 min. HURRY!

Pantium 120 System 1.6 Gig 32 RAM 336 modem 64 bit Video. $3000 in software. ONLY $1500. Joe 665-9112

Laptop/Notebook 899 , Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 566-3324-2

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available Benefits. Summer or year round. (612)643-4333

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition. $200 Sean 546-5734

FOUND

To Carla, I have your keys. Call Kevin at 6-1422

Walkman Found in the Campus Center at the end of last semester Call Ana Maria Gonzalez at 665-8394

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

HAPPY BIRTHDAY MEGAN CARPINELLI!!! I apologize for Spike and Audrey's condition but, even though they are no longer with us, I hope that you will be able to love and nurture once again. And one more thing. They'll coma back!- They're just a little wirtted!!! I Love You! Ange

Megan- Happy Birthday to the finest of fry-girls! Keep on groovin'! We love you! Love Always, Angela, Dawn, Danielle and Jen- "4th Floor Mac. Fry-girls"

INSTRUCTION

Performing Arts Division offers group and private instruction in Music, Theater and Dance. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass. (413)545-0519 for info.

Bartead with University Bartending 50% student discount On- campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info.

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-4793

PERSONALS

To the new members of Delta Zeta Toby, Robyn, Samara, Bonnie, Lori, Jodi, Beth S., Sari, Beth N., Royce, Carrie, Anne, Anna, Ashni, Casey, Allison, Elke, and Val. Congrads and Good luck for this semester. Love, the sisters of DZ

"Touch me baby, Twisted love"- Soft Gel, Free love and Valentines at

SERVICES

www.mainquad.com
Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available (800)773-8704 Cost $29 Applications close 2-24-97

SERVICES

Piercings by the Boardad Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0629

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. FS0018. (We are a research/grant publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all

TRAVEL

your smart drug needs.
SPRING BREAK '97! CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

SPRING BREAK/ JAMAICA, CANCUN, BAHAMAS, PANAMA CITY, SOUTH PADRE Lowest prices. Reliable company. Asta Istan Member Contact Matt 253-6473

Spring Break '97- Don't be left out! Space limited! Cancun and Jamaica from $449. Florida from $139. Call STS @ (800)648-4849 for the best rates

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T. Europe $189 O/W. Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations. Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Inter-campus Representatives. (800)327-8013 http://www.icpt.com

TRAVEL

Bust Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more. Call 256-8724

Jamaica- Spring Break Stay in beautiful Negril. Includes roundtrip airfare, hotel transfers, 7 nights lodging from $519. Don't take chances with other companies, go with the UMass Ski Club Call 545-3437

Europe $150. Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations Airhitch Tm (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.rsi-com.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations-free parties!!! Organize group and travel free Lowest price guaranteed From $99. (800)426-7710 www.sun-

WANTED

splashtours.com
Sofa or Couch Wanted Willing to pay. Please call 549-6452

Give 'em a Special Valentine Personal Classified

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a violent, live or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, work committees, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction Lost
Musicians Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation Wanted to Rent
Wanted

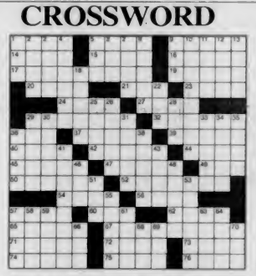
Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others



40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

K	A	Y			H	S	T			I	M	P
O	N	I	T		W	A	G	E	S		N	O	R	A
P	A	P	A		O	U	T	D	O		E	W	E	S
S	T	E	P	S	O	N		S	P	R	E	A	D
			P	I	E	T	Y		R	O	D
S	H	I	E	L	D		A	V	A	I	L	E	D
L	I	N	D	A		S	P	A	N		E	S	A	U
U	K	E		S	E	A		T	O	Y		T	U	T
G	E	R	M		A	V	E	S		I	R	E	N	E
	S	T	E	E	R	E	D		F	E	A	S	T	S
		S	A	N		A	D	U	L	T
C	A	S	T	E	R		E	N	D	I	N	G	S
B	O	R	E		S	E	D	A	N		N	E	A	T
S	O	L	D		T	E	E	N	Y		G	A	M	A
A	T	O			D	R	S				R	E	B

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Vase imperfection
6. Direction in a Steinbeck title
9. Sinister Fiorianne
14. Sting lay
15. "In a crowsby's ball ____" (The Tempest)
16. Inactive
17. Realization
19. Fortune-telling card
20. Highest point
21. "____ Academic" (TV slide)
23. Gobies' Sp.
24. ____ it the truth!
27. Native of Paisley
29. Marine el al
32. Frigid weather feature
36. U.K.'s continent
37. Rate of movement
39. For rent
40. Sharpness
42. Drawl viciously
44. Lonesome Dove lad
45. Property claims
47. Dore
49. For shipmer
50. Soaked
52. Pundits
54. Colorado Indians
58. Entry a cells
57. Jail (slang)
60. Delighted exclamation
62. ___ lacto
65. Haunting
67. Butcher shop purchases
71. Before fix or form
72. Opposite of sweather
73. "Dream Children" essayist
74. Sometimes-squeaky door part
75. Margrithe or Descartes
76. Garden pest

DOWN

1. Heat's league abbr.
2. Part of the Louisiana Purchase
3. Comment from Thor
4. Asian language
5. One Gen.
6. Brewery product
7. Sartor's double affirmative
8. Tries out
9. Elect Fr.
10. Sloth
11. Son of Agrippina II
12. A ___ in the bucket
13. Unsorted wheat flour
15. Disconnect out
22. ___ -4
25. Finches
29. The Hardy Boys, e.g.
35. After Sept.
29. Sound
30. Encouraged
31. Polar mammals
33. Chin feature
34. Comedian Jerry
35. Feminine ending
36. Slippery ones
38. Emotion described by Kierkegaard
41. Telegraphing
43. Blubbs of the Four Tops
46. Cast
48. Wall Street sell-off
51. Pallen's opposite
53. Donald, to Scrooge McDuck
55. Of the sun
57. One of Eve's sons
58. Actress Hatcher
59. Seuss' If ___ The Zoo
61. Healthy
63. Flatfish
64. Andy Taylor's son
66. Pars-to-Zürich dir.
68. Those Magnificent
69. Warrior inspector
70. Morose

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
A volatile situation could be on the horizon or on reputation. Use tact with a particularly difficult person to avert disaster. Your flexibleness could be part of the problem, too, so resist the temptation to speak your mind. Avoid exaggeration when it comes to matters of the heart.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
It's time to take action on a problem that's been nagging at you for a while. More discussion will only delay things. That special someone could have something on his or her mind, and you're just the person to share it with.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Don't allow a committee's indecision at work to drag on. Keep your head together when planning weekend activities. Someone could propose a wild and crazy idea. It may sound like fun, but is it worth the risk? Think twice before going along with the crowd.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Where a battle of wits and power is concerned, you'd do well to stay as far away from the conflict as possible. An interesting proposal comes from an unexpected direction. Consider carefully before giving your answer. An old friend has some happy news.

LEO
July 23-August 23
If you're faced with a difficult situation, step back for a moment and take time to decide exactly what you want. Then get through to the person who has the power to fix things, and start talking. Just don't give in, and everything should work out.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Stray away from a battling pair—they could try to entangle you in their conflict, and you don't want to get caught in the middle. Keep open the lines of communication with your novelist to avoid a petty argument. Try an evening alone—just the two of you

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Pay close attention to the person who could help you gain more knowledge and advice to get to the next level. Someone may be giving you a subtle hint that you haven't yet picked up on. Turmoil in home or in the office causes your stress level.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Speed is the key to most difficulties this week. Are you moving too slowly on a project? Recklessly fast so that you miss important details? Focus on watching your speed all the time—in traffic, too. Careful driving could be a major issue for you in the weeks ahead.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
If you're feeling trapped and stressed, treat yourself to a little adventure. Search for buried treasure, or just stage a great escape. You don't need to travel long distances to find happiness. It could be staring you right in the face.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Avoid reckless norms that will burn your bridges behind you. Compromises will work much better at enabling you to achieve your long term goals. An intense relationship could be floundering—do you have enough in common to make it work?

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A zest for exploration takes hold of you this week and you could be ready to climb mountains. Instead of blowing your vacation on a prohibitively expensive trip, try to change the things in your life that cause you stress. A new perspective may not understand where you're coming from.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Although it may seem as though a committee has accomplished nothing, the groundwork is in place for some really exciting developments. Be patient, and watch things take off. Take on a little extra responsibility and you'll notice results.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23	CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24	CNN/Headline News
4	CBS/4	Boston	25	BET
5	ABC/5	Boston	26	BET on Jazz
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27	UCTV
7	HSCN	Movie Channel	28	The Learning Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29	TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30	Comedy Central
10	NBC/30	New Britain	32	Much Music
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

Daily Listings sponsored by: Your Ad Could Be Here. Call 545-3500

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 12, 1997

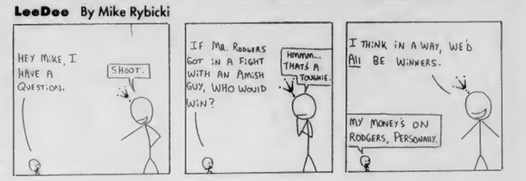
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH (E)	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Secrets of Lost Empires"		"Odelisk/Colosseum"		Great Performances: Gospel Music		News	People-Here
WFSB (3)	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Dan Journal	Nanny	Pearl	"A Nightmare Comp True" (1997, Drama) Gerald McRaney				News	Late Show
WBZ (4)	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Pearl	"A Nightmare Comp True" (1997, Drama) Gerald McRaney		News		News	Late Show
WCVB (5)	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI (6)		Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Nick Frano	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)	Tonight Show
WHDH (7)		News		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Barter"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Sentinel "Secret" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Unity"		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Barter"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC (61)	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five (In Stereo)		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP (22)	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Barter"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY (11)	11	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Secrets of Lost Empires"		"Odelisk/Colosseum"		Kurt Browning		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB (40)	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WSBK (38)	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at Phoenix Suns, (Live)					Real TV
WTBS (22)		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball: Orlando Magic at Detroit Pistons (Live)					Inside-NBA		"Night of the Living Dead"
AAE (53)		Quincy		Equalizer "Re-Entry"		Biography "Michael Douglas"		American Justice (R)		20th Century		Law & Order
CNN (29)	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Inside Politics	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM (35)	35	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Medusa: Dare to Be Truthful		Kaufman: Hollywood		A-List (R)	Dream On	Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC (52)		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Luftwaffe (R)		Wild Discovery: Deadly Nats		Discover Magazine		Shark Chronicles		Wild Discovery: Deadly Nats
ESPN (31)		Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Clemson at Wake Forest, (Live)				College Basketball: Connecticut at Boston College, (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE (62)		Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★★ "Something Wild" (1986, Comedy) Jeff Daniels,				Living	Mysteries
MTV (33)		Ren & Stimpy	Winter Lodge	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)				Real World	Real World	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK (38)		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moors	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI (59)		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Masters of Fantasy (In Stereo)		Tekwar "Deadline" (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Unreality TV"		Sightings (R) (In Stereo)		Masters of Fantasy (In Stereo)
TLC (72)	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	SeaTek	Pop Sciences	Royal Secrets	Royal Secrets	Human Animal: A View		SeaTek (R)	Pop Sciences
TNT (54)		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		★★★ "Nightshade's" (1981, Suspense) Sylvester Stallone,				★★ "Above the Rim" (1994, Drama) Duane Martin, Leon,		Wings	Wings
USA (51)		Renegade "Carrick O'Quinn"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		★★ "Night Watch" (1995, Adventure) Pierce Brosnan,				Wings	Wings
HBO (30)		★★ "Tommy Boy" (1995, Comedy) Chris Farley, PG-13				★★★ "Mortal Thoughts" (1991, Dem. Moore, R		Rosewood-1st	Larry Sanders	Tracey Takes		★★ "Eye for an Eye" (1996) R
MAX (46)		(5:45) ★★½ "First Knight" (1995) Sean Connery, PG-13				★★★ "The Lost Boys" (1987) Jason Patric, R		★½ "Unzer Siege 2: Dark Territory" (1995) Steven Seagal, R				"Circle/War"
SHOW (35)		★ "3 Ninjas Knuckle Up" (1995) Victor Wong, R		Fortunate Son		★★★★ "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" (1988) PG		★★★ "Funny Bones" (1995, Comedy/Drama) Oliver Platt, (In Stereo) R

Non- Sequitur By Wiley

Social Norm By Mr. K

Drabblo By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

LeeDee By Mike Rybicki

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My mom can't afford health insurance for us.
She took my little sister to a specialist to look at her big toe.

He didn't do much except look at her toe and talk to my mom. He charged my mom $135. She cried in the waiting room when she saw the bill.

I told her he was a specialist in toes and in installing pure white marble floors in his wife's kitchen.

University² By Frank Cho

First Impression By Kenneth W.P. Scott

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Renaissance Girl By the former Arts Girl

Close to Home By John McPherson

Operating on the same principle as an electric pencil sharpener, Tina's new insta-Shave can safely shave both of her legs in just 15 seconds.

Quote of the Day

"Like the ski resort of girls looking for husbands and husbands looking for girls, the situation is not as symmetrical as it seems."

– overheard

Joke of the Day

How did the RedNeck astronaut get lost in space?

His claw.

–He rolled down the window to spit out

Today's Staff

Mike Burke
Night Editor

Lisa Oliveri
Copy Editor

Lauren Kosky
Photo Technician

Marc Dione
Production Supervisor

Mark Hohengasser
Dan Bodah
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Sandwich
Sloppy Joe
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Tilapia Santa Fe
Broccoli casserole

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Sandwich
Grilled Cheese

DINNER
Szechuan Beef/Broccli
Backed Ziti

Worcester

LUNCH
Steak/Cheese Sandwich
Rotini

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Cheese Lasagna
Cauliflower Casserole

Berkshire

LUNCH
Steak and Cheese
Rotini

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Lasagna
Cauliflower Casserole

Hoop Fans:
A limited number of tickets for Saturday's UMass v. Maryland basketball at the game Worcester Centrum are available to the general public. Call the UMass Athletic Ticket Office at 545-0810.

SPORTS

Wednesday, February 12, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UMass beats Bonnies, Travieso sets 3–point record

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

For the 19th consecutive time, the Massachusetts men's basketball team (15–10, 9–3 Atlantic 10) defeated St. Bonaventure (12–8, 5–6 A–10) last night 74–68 at the William D. Mullins Center.

Massachusetts	74
St. Bonnaventure	68

With 2:25 remaining in the game, the Bonnies' freshman guard Tim Winn (16 points, 3 rebounds) knocked down a 3– pointer to tie the game at 64. With 1:55 to go, UMass' Edgar Padilla sank a trey of his own, putting UMass over the hump for the lead.

"We tried to run a play for Tyrone [Weeks]," Padilla said. "Because they doubled and he kicked it out and I thought I had the open shot so I took it."

After an Ajmal Basit jumper in the paint with 1:01 on the clock gave UMass a 69–65 lead, the game came down to free throws.

While the Bonnies were able to come within two points with 42 seconds of play, the Padilla and Basit each hit a pair from the foul line while Weeks went 1–for–2 as UMass rolled on to win.

Despite the Minutemen's inability to put St. Bonaventure away until the end, Carmelo Travieso scratched his name into yet another page of the record books. With a 3–pointer three and a half minutes into the second frame, Travieso knocked down his 222 career trey making him the all–time 3–point scorer in UMass history breaking Rayfer Giles' record.

Defensively, Travieso did an outstanding job shutting down St. Bonaventure's Shandue McNeil, holding him to just four points on the night.

"We've always done a pretty good job with Shandue," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "We play some pretty good defense when we want to. I think Carmelo is one of the best defensive guards bar none in the country. If you score on him, you've earned every point."

In the first half, the Minutemen had problems swinging momentum in their favor. The Bonnies opened with a 7–0 run. With just 3:15 into the game, UMass found itself down 10–4, yet countered with a 10–0 run of its own, capped off by a Weeks jumper with just over seven minutes into play.

Though St. Bonaventure took a 17–16 lead on a Rashaan Palmer jumper with 10:34 to go in the first frame, that was the last time his squad would have the advantage in the first half as the Minutemen went into the locker room up 37–32.

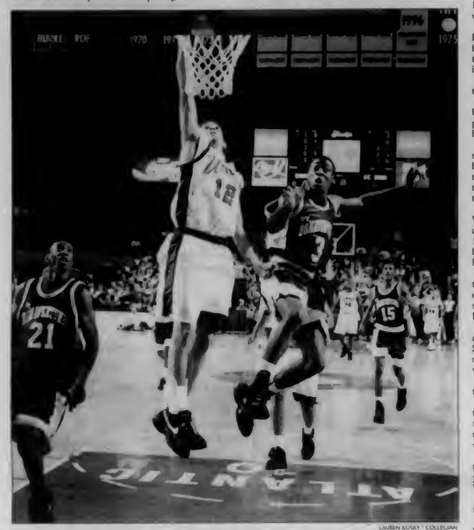
With the Bonnies' key guard shut down, how did they stay alive? Rebounding.

In the first half, St. Bonaventure out–rebounded UMass 21– 15. On the night, in addition to 19 points, Palmer rang up a double–double with 14 boards.

"What the game came down to was that they got second shots," Flint said. "They got a couple lose balls and they made baskets. The guys aren't out there trying to rebound. When guys don't leave their feet, you're not supposed to get rebounds, that's the bottom line. Palmer had 14 rebounds."

Key play off the glass for UMass came from Weeks, who was the only Minuteman who pulled down double digits in rebounds (11). In addition, his 17 points made for his third consecutive double–double and even more impressive his 10th double–double in 16 starts.

In the scoring department, Padilla had a breakthrough game leading the team with 23 points, just one point away from tying his career–high which he set at the beginning of UMass win streak against Boston College last month.



"[Padilla] shot the ball well," Flint said. "He won't admit it, but the little guys give him problems like Shandue and Winn, they get up under him and he struggles from time to time. Today he shot the ball well and made some big buckets for us."

Given the his team's recent success, Flint warned them that they are not out of the woods yet.

"You have to give the guys credit," Flint said. "I talk to them all the time about the shovel. They had the grave dug with the dirt, they threw a little bit on us with the R.I.P UMass on it and everything a few weeks ago.

"But I said, you pulled yourself out of it. [I told them] that we could go back into it, but don't do it to yourself. You worked too hard to get to this point. We just have to keep at it."

Next up, the Minutemen face No. 10 Maryland at the Worcester Centrum. After winning nine of its last 10 contests, they have finally come into their own. Saturday will be a test to see just how far they have come.

LAUREN KUSKY / COLLEGIAN
Edgar Padilla was a point away from tying his career high for points with 23 in last night's win over the Bonnies.

Padilla (23 pts) leads Minutemen in attack

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Ten games ago, the Massachusetts men's basketball team was trying to dig itself out of a hole. With a 5–9 record that included a 1–2 mark in the Atlantic 10, the Minutemen were facing a do–or–die situation.

Ten games ago, the Minutemen played at St. Bonaventure, hoping for a road win to give them a boost. What they got was a hard–fought victory that brought them not only one step closer to a better record, but also the return of their point guard.

Edgar Padilla's contribution that night in Olean, N.Y. was in the form of assists — nine total — to help UMass. But the senior's return to the starting line–up also brought confidence, and ultimately, wins.

"They had the shovel, with the grave dug, with the dirt," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "They had the RIP and everything. UMass a few weeks ago. I tell our guys about that. I said, 'But you pulled yourself out. Now don't start to think that I'm this and I'm that, because we can easily go back in it. Don't do it to yourselves, because you've worked too hard.'"

This possibility of slipping and falling made St. Bonaventure all the more dangerous. The Bonnies have long been the pesky little brother of the league the other guys have had to play with — but this year is different. Led by Rashaan Palmer and Robert Blackwell, the Bonnies are no pushover, no gimme win. They have emerged as a tough A– 10 opponent, sporting a record of 12–7, 5–5 in conference.

"This team came in as one of the hottest teams In the A– 10," UMass forward Tyrone Weeks said of the Bonnies.

So it's understandable that when the two teams tipped it off in Amherst, UMass was looking for a go–to guy to lead the team past this surging conference foe.

Fittingly, it was Padilla.

After an afternoon of limited scoring last Saturday against Rhode Island, Padilla found a hot hand against the Bonnies, lighting up the Mullins scoreboard for a game–high 23 points, a total that is only one point shy of a career–high.

"He shot the ball well," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "He made some big buckets for us and he made some big foul shots for us."

Flint wasn't the only one who noticed either. Bonnie coach Jim Baron knew the senior had the potential and was not surprised by the offensive onslaught Padilla produced.

"Padilla stepped up and hit big shots tonight," Baron said. "He stepped up and made the threes."

But the role of point guard is one that dictates running the offense, making sure the other players on the floor get the ball. Padilla knows that, and his eight assists attest to that.

"I just wanted to take my time and not think about shooting the ball," Padilla said. "I just wanted to run the plays and get everyone involved."

A point guard's job is also to take the ball away from an opponent. Padilla complied with a pair of steals. And while it is unusual for a player in the No. 1–spot to stop a shot, Padilla threw in a block just to make his line complete.

Padilla was not only hot from the field (7–for–11 field goals), but also from the line, where he hit all six of his attempts to help seal the game for the Minutemen.

"He's supposed to do that," Flint said. "When you're a senior, you're supposed to be a leader on the team, you've got to want the big shots."

In the fast lane with Sean Anderson

by Johnathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

The 50 yard freestyle race is the most adrenaline pumping sprint that occurs in the water during a collegiate swimming and diving meet. There is nao room for error, no room to think. As Maverick said in Top Gun, "You have no time to think, if you think, you're dead." That's the type of attitude junior sprinter Sean Anderson has to take whenever he dives into the pool to swim the 50 free.

"It happens so fast, I just try to go as fast as I can. You have to be able to make decisions really fast," Anderson said.

In just two years, Anderson has become a key asset for the UMass swim team. He has found a permanent spot on the Massachusetts squad at potentially the best sprinter this University has ever seen.

"There's always the goal of going 19 [seconds] in the 50, but I don't know if I'll be able to go that fast," Anderson said.

It's hard to believe that the man who has made the all– time record charts for the 50 free wasn't always a sprinter.

"I used to be a backstroker up until high school," Anderson said.

In his first year as a Minuteman, Anderson posted records in the 50 free (20.51), 100 free (45.74), 100 back (52.15) and was part of record breaking relay teams in the 200 free relay (1:23.02), the 200 medley relay (1:33.42) and the 400 medley relay (3:24.53).

Anderson spent three semesters swimming for Penn State, but last year when he joined the squad in Amherst he took 18 individual and six relay victories during the 95–96 season.

"When I decided to transfer, they were real cooperative, I liked it a lot more than I did Penn State. I did fine [there], but they were a little too serious. Here's a little more laid back. We work hard, but I like it better that way," Anderson said.

Russ Yarworth is a players coach, he doesn't drill his swimmers like he's in the military, and he certainly doesn't scream at them when something goes wrong. He knows what it takes to get his team to win and has buil' a comraderie between his squad.

"[Yarmorth] pushes me though, he works me pretty hard; it's good and he helps me," Anderson said.

"I think our team does a really good job at that. Russ somehow gets us to think, you know, when you go up for your race it's only you, but you do it because you want to win the meet," Anderson said. "He does a much better job than I had at Penn State."

One wonders if a swimmer for UMass can get properly motivated for the regular dual meets during the first part of the season.

"Maybe sometimes in dual meets, but not at the end of the year," Anderson said.

"He's been a great addition to this team," Yarworth said. "He's the limit, he's a natural sprinter that hopefully will make him an NCAA qualifier."

Anderson understands that when push comes to shove, he has to be prepared when the championship draws near. That's where Yarworth's

Turn to ANDERSON, page 6

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
With records in the 50 free, 100 free and 100 back, junior Sean Anderson has emerged as the UMass swim team's sprinting force.

BU Terriers claim Beanpot once again

JOHNATHAN M. PLACE

BOSTON — Monday night driving home on the pike from Boston, it hit me, I just spent the evening in the FleetCenter watching the 45th annual Beanpot Hockey Tournament. Maybe it was the serene atmosphere on the roads that sparked this feeling, or maybe it was the chanting of Leigh Torbin and I reminding Jorma Kansanen that he was just on the ice surface of the FleetCenter, taking pictures of the Beanpot trophy while looking up at the rafters to see the banners of all sixteen championships for the Celtics, or to see Bobby Orr's No. 4 hanging high. Whatever it was, I had just witnessed one of Boston's great annual sporting events.

Now you may be wondering, "What the hell do I care. I'm a student attending UMass. Why should I wanna read about Northeastern or Harvard, or especially BC and BU?"

The answer is simple.

The Beanpot Hockey Tournament is one of the greatest spectacles of sport the Hub hosts, and sports fans that claim to appreciate the legacy Boston has to offer should respect this mighty event.

Last night was definitely no exception. It could be one of the best championship games the Beanpot has ever seen, and definitely the best hockey game the FleetCenter has hosted all year. From high above in the pressbox, nicknamed the "Halo," Leigh, Jorma and I watched an enthralling first and second period that featured slam–packed hitting, stellar defense and Vezina Trophy worthy goaltending by both Tom Noble (BU) and Greg Taylor (BC), both who at points in the game looked to stand on their heads. The period featured one lone goal for BC, coming right off a face–off.

Between the second and third, I enjoyed a lovely $3.00 slice of cheese pizza.

Overpriced, but what the hell, it's the Beanpot.

When the third period's 20 minutes started to descend, the game completely opened up. Both teams decided to start taking big chances on the offensive side of the puck. Within the span of a few minutes, the BC's lead of 1–0 quickly turned into a 2–2 tie. From that point on, the game tightened back up. Both teams were lining opponents up and taking crazy checks. The game stayed extremely close as both Noble and Taylor were trading save for save.

Then suddenly, as if Moses had parted the middle of the ice of all Eagles' jerseys, BU's captain Bill Pierce received a pass wide open on the right side of the neutral zone. Pierce skated in all alone and parked the puck top shelf over Taylor's left shoulder. That made the score 3–2, and it looked as if BU had done it again.

The clock was getting closer and closer to 0:00, and BC's chances were becoming slim. With :24.7 left to go in the game, Leigh turned to me and said, "This is what the Beanpot is all about" — referring to the time and the fact that the Eagles had a face–off in BU's zone, and anything could happen. A dive in front of a shot by BU's No. 15 Mike Sylvia, and another Terrier stick knocking the puck out of the zone, and the win was secured for the Terriers.

BU has played in the final game of the Beanpot a record number of times, and Monday night was it's 20th Championship. The Terriers have owned the Beanpot during the '90s, taking six out of the last eight.

But the Beanpot is an elusive and mystical thing, anyone can win. Harvard or Northeastern could be having the worst seasons in school history, yet decide to show up for the Beanpot and win. And for them, that would be all they would need for the entire season. Unfortunately, on Monday night, BU's skill and sheer presence on the ice was enough to squeak past the will of BC's Eagles.

The only depressing part of the evening was driving past the Boston University Library on Storrow Drive,

Turn to BEANPOT, page 6

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
Terriers captain Bill Pierce and assistant captain Shawn Bates bask in BU's Beanpot victory.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 82 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Thursday, February 13, 1997

Large and in charge

Hockey player Brad Norton has worked to become a mainstay of UMass' defense and one of the toughest players in the game (see Sports, page 16).

Valentine's Day is upon us again

Love it or hate it, V-day is one of the most emotionally-charged holidays of the year (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Large student, employer turnout leads to a successful career fair

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN
Jan He, a sophomore at the University, talked to Bernie Celli, of Business Data Services, at the career fair held in the Campus Center yesterday.

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

The annual campus–wide Career Fair, held yesterday in the Campus Center, was viewed by many in attendance to be a success because of large student turnout and productive meetings with employers.

"This is by far the biggest turnout we've ever had," said Karen Knight, co–coordinator of the fair.

The fair, hosted by the Mather Career Center, brought in over 125 corporations looking to recruit seniors from the University of Massachusetts and other Five Colleges.

"It was a sell–out this year. We've filled every available space and there's still a waiting list with approximately 10 companies," Knight said.

"It's a great opportunity not only for the employers here, but also for the students."

Knight attributes the large turnout to what she called a turnaround in the job market.

"Companies now recognize that they are too 'top heavy' — they're now looking to recruit at the entry level," Knight said.

Students at the fair were also impressed by the number of employers present at the fair and convenience.

"It's a little overwhelming, but there are a lot of openings, especially in my major," said Amy Lakritz, a BDIC major. "Everyone seems really professional and nice, but it's still a bit overstimulating."

Another student, Nate Therrien, a finance major, was also affected by the fair's environment.

"There are so many firms here. I've already had some luck in the 45 minutes I've been here," Therrien said.

Corporations were just as impressed with the turnout of students looking to enter the job market upon graduation.

Caitlin Ames, the national recruiter for the Ernest and Julio Gallo wine company said that although she had better luck recruiting in the School of Management's fall career fair, she's met a lot of outgoing and ambitious students.

Princeton Properties, a real estate firm attending the UMass career fair for the first time, said the day went very well.

Claire Collins, director of leasing and marketing for the firm, said,

Turn to FAIR, page 2

Hospital merger could bring $330 million to UM system

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

A merger between the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester and privately–owned Worcester Memorial Hospital was approved by the university's Board of Trustees, yesterday.

Student Trustee Sean Carter reported the events of the Board's meeting at the Undergraduate Student Senate meeting last night.

"I was at Worcester this afternoon, where the Board of Trustees voted to merge the [UMass] Medical Center with Worcester Memorial Hospital," Carter said.

According to Carter, the merger would result in the University system acquiring $300 million worth of property and assets. Further information on the merger will be available later this week, Carter said.

'We can get close to a full rebate for our books if professors get their reading lists in early,' – Bill Ramsey

In other matters, additional candidates for this spring's Student Government Association (SGA) elections were announced at the Senate meeting.

Senators R.J. Lamar and Brian McManus (Southwest Area) announced their intentions to run for Student Trustee and SGA President, respectively.

Lamar cited his past experience in and outside of SGA as his qualifications for the position. Some of the issues Lamar said he would address as Trustee included, "the effects of privatization, the sad state of dining services and women's safety on campus."

McManus said that his "number one goal as SGA President will be to create an environment where every student is represented.

"We are also here to defend students' interests against an administration that just doesn't seem to realize who it works for," McManus said.

Senate Speaker Brian Tirrell appointed Peter Kilbourne, formerly secretary of Public Policy–Relations for the SGA, to the position of Associate Speaker. Kilbourne will fill the seat left vacant by Nathan Peyton, who resigned from the position last week.

The motion to confirm Kilbourne passed after several debates by a vote of 29 for, (five against and two not voting on the issue.

The Senate also unanimously passed a motion mandating professors to provide the Textbook Annex with their course reading lists early enough before each semester (Dec. 15 for spring, April 15 for fall), so that when students sell back their books, they may receive a greater return in price.

Sen. Bill Ramsey (Commuter Area), who drafted the motion, said that the Annex determines how much they will buy back a book based upon the need for it in classes the following semester.

"We can get close to a full rebate for our books if professors get their reading lists in early," Ramsey said.

WORLD

Soldier killed by sniper near border

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A sniper killed a British soldier with a single shot yesterday in the first fatality this year from Northern Ireland's renewed conflict.

A civilian woman also was hospitalized with a head wound that wasn't life-threatening, and two other civilians were treated for shock, police said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the killing in Bessbrook, a Protestant village 30 miles southwest of Belfast, where the army maintains its main helicopter base for running patrols along Northern Ireland's border with the Irish Republic.

But the nature of the killing suggested the Irish Republican Army was responsible. The outlawed group killed seven soldiers and three policemen in the border region with single shots — often using an American-made .50-caliber rifle able to penetrate flak jackets — from August 1992 to May 1994.

NATION

Mississippi outlaws homosexual marriages

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Gov. Kirk Fordice denounced same-sex relationships as "perverse" yesterday as he signed a law making Mississippi the 17th state in a year to ban homosexual marriages.

"For too long in this freedom-loving land, cultural subversives have engaged in trench warfare on traditional family values," Fordice said.

Mississippi's law also denies recognition of homosexual marriages performed in other states.

And Fordice said the law would ensure that gay couples do not enjoy benefits of marriage such as health insurance.

"Insurance benefits for dependents were never intended for perverse relationships such as the same-sex marriage," he said. "They were intended for traditional families."

State Rep. Jim Evans, one of three lawmakers who oppose the bill, said the governor should "be giving it a second thought before he begins to moralize right now."

Fordice is recovering from injuries suffered in a car accident 14 weeks ago while returning from lunch with an unidentified woman in Memphis, Tenn. His wife, Pat, was out of town. The governor said he has no memory of that day.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 25 LOW: 15	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics .....page 15
Crossword .....page 14
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 16

Students, staff and faculty met to discuss mental health

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Approximately 30 faculty, staff and advisors from the University met yesterday to discuss ideas on how to help students who are emotionally distressed.

The meeting is this semester's first part in a series of conversations, put on by the Resource Network, on how to refer students to counseling services.

Gary Bernhard, director of University Without Walls and facilitator of the Resource Network, said the goal of the Network "was to gather people across campus to improve the quality of the campus, and to join people who normally don't run into each other during their daily lives.

"We are continuing that into our first meeting of the spring semester," Bernhard said.

Assistant Dean of Students Paul Vasconcellos said, "In our office we advocate for students and coordinate responses. We help connect students with the right people.

"UMass is famous for 'you are in the wrong place, you need to go to this place,'" Vasconcellos added.

During the meeting several audience members voiced their opinions on students' experience at UMass.

One faculty member in the program commented, "we all work for the University and not in separate offices, and in the student's mind that's their experience and they expect us to all work together and know each other."

Another member replied, "That's not an unreasonable request."

The conversations throughout the meeting focused on how to help students who are fighting depression or are feeling suicidal.

Matt Zimmerman, a psychology intern at Mental Health In Hills North, said Mental Health Services receives many calls — about depression, suicide and substance abuse more than any other topic.

"It's more prevalent. We are more likely to hear about students who are going to harm themselves than students who are going to harm someone else," Zimmerman said. "We also receive calls from friends and family members who are worried about a student."

Some faculty members questioned the negative connotations in today's society about going to Mental Health Services.

"So many people I see automatically assume that they will be put in the hospital if they go to Mental Health," said a women's studies intern.

Psychologist Linda Scott said that that was not the case.

"Putting people in the hospital is usually the last option," Scott said.

"A lot of people might not like the label of depression or know what it is exactly... someone suffering from depression or suicidal thoughts is feeling isolated or alone. It is essential for them to have contact with others," Zimmerman added.

A major issue for many professors and advisors is when they should interfere in a student's personal situation.

"A question for many faculty members is 'when should I call the police?' If there is any doubt, call the police number. Professors call us all the time asking 'how should I handle this situation?'," said Barbara O'Connor, UMass deputy chief of police.

According to O'Connor, in rare circumstances when a student attempts suicide and public safety receives a call, officers will go to the scene and either bring the student to mental health or make referrals.

Dr. Robert Horowitz from University Health Services said there are warning signs for depression and suicide and those signs are recognizable.

"It takes little bit of intuition. We can read facial expressions, body language to tell when someone is depressed or suspect an alcohol problem, and we can also ask particular questions," Horowitz said. "It's OK to say to a student you seem like you are really down, have you ever thought about hurting yourself?"

Horowitz told faculty members to "set up a contract" with students who are having thoughts about hurting themselves but pose no immediate threat.

"Explain to the student 'if you feel bad enough that you think you may hurt yourself, call me' and give them your number," Horowitz said. "Verbalize it, but make it formal."

Ilana Gerjuoy, a counselor/advocate from the Everywoman's Center (EWC) spoke to faculty about what the Center has to offer.

EWC offers a 24–hour hotline for crisis intervention and short–term peer counseling in which students receive 10 sessions for free.

Gerjuoy also added that EWC works closely with Mental Health.

"Sometimes we are able to take students from mental health. If a women is showing signs of post–rape syndrome, then she is showing healthy signs to a unhealthy situation and we can help her," Gerjuoy said.

Turn to HEALTH, page 2

Seventy-five perspective employers arrive in CC today for co–op fair hosted by Mather Career Center

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

The Mather Career Center will be hosting 75 companies at its annual co–op Job Fair in the Campus Center Auditorium today from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Some of the notable corporate participants will be Massmutual, Filene's, General Electric, Procter and Gamble and Dow Jones & Co. Inc.

Reebok will be on hand, offering television production positions, which will, for the first time, be paid.

The event, which can open the doors to career opportunities, is open to all students who are interested in investigating summer and semester long co–ops and internships or who would just like an introduction to the Career Center and its offerings.

"I can't stress enough how important experience is, not only in getting a job, but In finding out what you'd like to do, what field you'd like to go into," said Jeffrey Silver, the associate director of field experience at the Career Center.

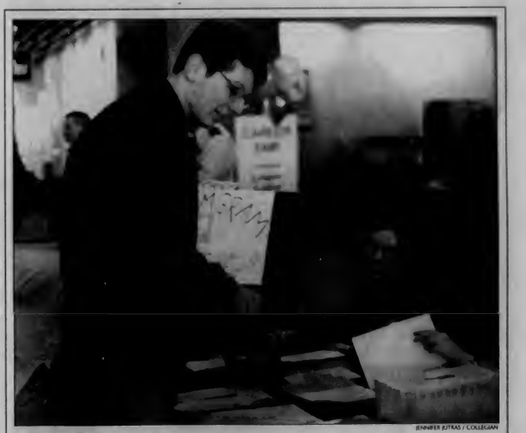
Silver said that the large number of diverse companies taking part in the fair offer opportunities to students of all majors.

"There's something for everyone," said Silver. "They don't care what your major is."

Silver explained that the paid summer positions are the most competitive, but that semester–long co–ops and internships, paid and for credit, are very useful when looking for a career.

"Any experience helps," Silver said, "It's a win–win situation."

Silver recommended that students attending the fair should wear nice clothes if possible, and that resumes, while helpful, are by no means necessary to make contacts with a particular company.



The Peer Advising System of the Career Center will be leading a workshop called "Welcome to Field Experience" for students who would like an introduction to the services of the Career Center.

For students who are unable to attend today, the workshops are offered Monday through Friday at varying times throughout the afternoon at the Career Center.

Silver said these jobs are just the tip of the iceberg. The career Center has hundreds of additional opportunities. He would like students to show an interest, not only on fair days, but throughout the year.

Most years, students show an initial interest in the field experience program, but don't follow through.

"We end up asking, 'where did they all go?'" Silver said. "They don't realize that there are so many different opportunities available."

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN
Show how much you care...
Debby Sinopoli, a sophomore African–American studies major, tries to get George Tsitsas, a junior civil engineering major, to buy a condom gram for his valentine yesterday afternoon.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Feb. 13

Concert — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will host Jonathan Stevens, folk, acoustic, at 8 p.m. The event is free.

Discussion — An informal discussion on "Spirituality and Identity" will take place at 7 p.m. in Campus Center, room 805–809. All are welcome to participate. For more info, call 546–5174.

Discussion — The Five College Program in Peace & World Security Studies will sponsor a Five College panel on "Clinton's Foreign Policy: The Road Ahead." The program will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Franklin Patterson Building, West Lecture Hall at Hampshire College. The event is free, and open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.

Information — The Golden Key National Honor Society will have a table on the Campus Center concourse from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. to promote AIDS awareness. Free condoms, candy, red ribbons and information on safe sex will be distributed.

Lecture — Louise Rice, director of Education of the AIDS Committee, will present a lecture entitled, "Is the AIDS Epidemic Over or Has it Just Changed Direction?" at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. Free.

Meditation — The Bangs Senior Center will hold "Heart to Heart and Soul to Soul Communication" from 7–9 p.m. at 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst.

Meeting — Pi Sigma Alpha Honor Society will be hosting the second annual Career Forum for political science majors from 4:30–6 p.m. on the sixth floor of Thompson Tower. For more info, contact Bill Ramsey at 549–1035.

Friday, Feb. 14

Exhibit — "Love Makes a Family: Living in Lesbian and Gay Families" (a photograph–text exhibit) opens at UMass with a special Valentine's Day reception. The reception will be held in the Campus Center Graduate Lounge from 7–9 p.m. The exhibit will remain in the lounge until Feb. 29. Co–sponsored by the Stonewall Center.

Information — The Golden Key National Honor Society will have a table in the Campus Center concourse from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. to promote AIDS awareness. Free condoms, candy, red ribbons and information on safe sex will be distributed.

Lecture — "The Eruption of Krakatau and the Processes of Explosive Volcanism," a lecture by Steve Cary, University of Rhode Island, will take place at 3:30 p.m. in Morrill II South, room 131. Part of the Geoscience Lecture Series.

Music — "Something Every Friday," a free weekly program series of special activities sponsored by the Campus Activities Office, presents John Akers at 8 p.m. in the Bluewall Cafe. Akers music includes influences from gospel, pop, folk, punk, country and zydeco.

Music — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will hold an Open Mic Night at 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome. The event is free.

Notices

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management, or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Comedy — The UMass improv comedy show Mission Improvable will perform every Saturday in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Support group — Having a hard time quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? The Health Education Division at University Health Services

Chemical exchange — The UMass Reuse/Exchange inventory is now available at http://www.unix.oit.umass.edu/~safety/rex1.html. The items on this list are available free of charge and will be delivered on a first–come, first–served basis. Call 545–2682 for more info.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Karate — The UMass Shotoran Karate Club is now accepting new members. No prior experience necessary. Come watch and join our daily training in a traditional Japanese martial art. For more info, contact Loukia at 549– 8038 or Ian at 549–5485.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in South Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577– 5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617)641–2303.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will hold free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. every Saturday in February at Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. Appropriate for all ages. Dates: Feb. 15 and 22. For information, call Tom Whitney at 256–6234.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: http://www.umass.edu/film.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Personal Injury
Feb. 12
A rear–end accident on Fearing Street, caused by icy roads, resulted in injuries to George Charnota, 21, of Milldam Road, Acton. He was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton by ambulance.

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 11
A minor two vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 11
There was a report of an individual trying to net fish from the campus pond.

Assist Agency
Feb. 10
Campus Center Way was temporarily closed due to a water main break.

Health/Safety Hazard
Feb. 10
A fire alarm sprinkler was turned on in the Campus Center Garage due to a water break.

Larceny
Feb. 10
An individual reported that a cellular phone was stolen from the Silvio O. Conte Research Center.

Vandalism
Feb. 10
A Mahar construction site on Presidents Drive was damaged.
Feb. 11
Racial graffiti was written on the stairwell wall in Johnson Residence Hall.
An individual from Van Meter Residence Hall reported that his vehicle doors had been glued and sand had been poured into his gas tank.

Warrant Service
Feb. 10
Victor N. Cora, 50, of 990 N. Pleasant St, Amherst was arrested at North Village Apartments on a warrant.

■ fair

continued from page 1

"There is a lot of positivity and organization. Things have been going very smoothly."

Krista Hanks, also of Princeton Properties was in awe of the professional atmosphere.

"Everyone seems so professional. On the whole, I am very impressed," Hanks said.

Electronic Data Systems (EDS), one of the corporate sponsors for the event, keeps returning because of the luck they've had in the past with UMass recruits.

Dave Eisenberg, a 1988 UMass graduate and recruiter for EDS, said that although this was not the largest career fair he has attended, UMass students have brought much to this Hudson–based company, especially in the last few years.

Several businesses were not limiting the employment options to specific majors, either. There was a wide selection of technology and engineering firms looking for liberal arts majors to fill inside positions — leaving potential recruits with open–ended and flexible opportunities.

Joan Stoia, director of the Career Center, said that yesterday's turnout was "fabulous." Alongside many of the companies pervading the basement rooms of the Campus Center, Stoia was very impressed with the professional attitude that many of the students have taken.

"There's a real seriousness when applying for a job. These students are less intimidated than in years past — they're willing to take a risk and take advantage of what's being offered," Stoia said.

To coincide with the career fair, the Massachusetts Career Center Field Experience Office is hosting the 13th annual co–op job fair in the Campus Center today from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The career fair is more geared towards graduating seniors looking for entry level positions, while the co–op fair offers valuable opportunities for undergradustes and graduates to gain experience in their field of interest.

■ health

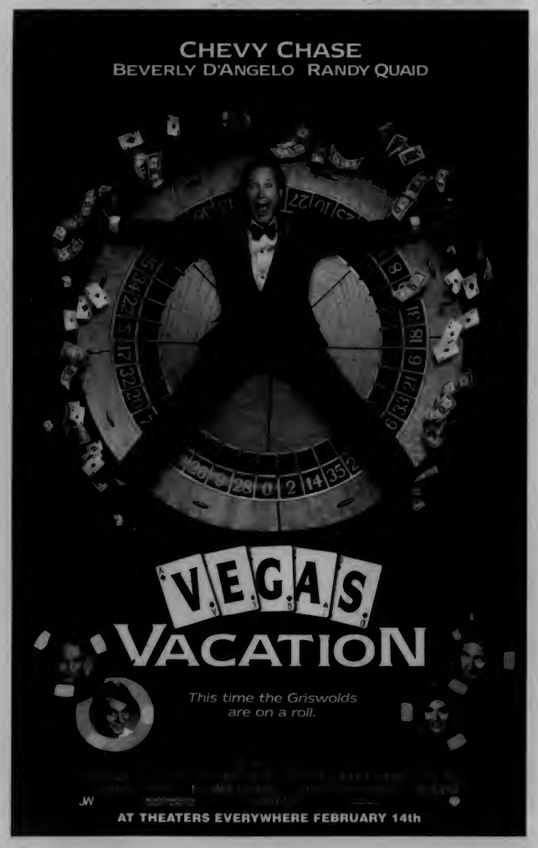
continued from page 1

EWC also offers legal and medical advocacy. Counselor advocates will accompany rape and abuse survivors to the hospital and court but it is "important to note that we are offering emotional support. We are not doctors or lawyers," Gerjouy said.

Gerjouy said the one piece of advice she could give to the faculty was, "If someone tells you they have been raped, bring them to us. It really helps. Believe them and listen, validate their story. It may sound simple but it is very powerful."



Fran Deats, director of the Employee Assistance Program, is coordinator of the Workplace Violence Management Team.

"We are thinking about students and their work. We deal with student employees and students who have issues with employees," Deats said.

The goal of the group is to coordinate University resources for individual and institutional issues regarding workplace violence, prevention, management, crisis intervention and debriefing and recovery and has been divided into three focus groups: prevention, risk assessment and crisis management.

"A lot of people who do advising at this institution think their job is intellectual advising... beyond that it is someone else's problem. Those are the people we have to get through to first," Bernhard said.

The Resource Network meets every other Wednesday in Campus Center room 804–808 from 12 p.m.–1:30 p.m. The next meeting is scheduled for Feb. 26.

The Women of Color Program of the Everywoman's Center presents...

DRUMSONG:
the art and Spirit of Drumming with
UBAKA HILL

This workshop is a fun and empowering exploration of the art and spirit of rhythm and drumming that fosters individual creative self-expression. Explore different rhythmic paths including intuitive drumming, singing and visualization in connecting with ones own inner voice for expression of ones personal power.

Saturday February 15, 1997
10:00 am - 4:00pm
Campus Center, Room 101

Refreshments will be provided!
This is a free workshop!

For more information, please call
The Everywoman's Center at 545-0883
We encourage you to bring your own drums, rattles, shakers, congas, and/or tambourines (some instruments will be provided)

"What a Great Experience!"

Learning the Language. Meeting people. Coming face to face with history, art and architecture, culture, food and fun.

UNIVERSITY STUDIES ABROAD CONSORTIUM...
Small classes. Personal attention. Fully accredited — receive university credit. We provide great classes in intensive language, history, anthropology, art, business, economics, political science...

University Studies Abroad Consortium
University of Nevada Library • Mail Stop 323 • Reno, Nevada 89557-0093
(702) 784-6569 • E-mail: usac@admin.unr.edu • www: http://www.scs.unr.edu/~usac

CHILE • FRANCE • ITALY • SPAIN • AUSTRALIA • NEW ZEALAND
ENGLAND • GERMANY • THAILAND • COSTA RICA

Term limits proposal rejected in House vote

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House rejected a proposed constitutional amendment yesterday to slap term limits on members of Congress after a debate that exposed deep divisions among supporters. The vote was 217-211, 69 votes shy of the two-thirds necessary for approval of the measure to limit lawmakers to 12-years in office — and fewer than it gained two years ago.

"They're eating their own. It's just bizarre," GOP Rep. Christopher Shays, a term limits opponent, exulted as supporters quarreled among themselves over whether six years, eight years or 12 years should be set as a limit for House service.

In the end, none of the proposals came close to amassing the two-thirds needed to prevail.

"Internecine warfare" poses a grave threat to the uphill drive for success, Rep. Bill McCollum (R-Fla.) mourned as the proposal moved toward its preordained doom.

Without a truce involving U.S. Term Limits and other organizations, he warned, "there will be gridlock and people who are opposed to term limits will prevail."

The more fundamental divisions over the wisdom of term limits were overshadowed in the daylong debate, although they surfaced occasionally.

"To adopt term limits is to play Russian roulette with the future," argued Rep. Henry Hyde, a 12th-term Republican who joined with many Democrats in opposition. "This is no place for amateurs."

But Rep. Charles Canady, a third-term Republican from Florida, countered that "term limits will break the power of entrenched incumbency. It will give us representatives who put serving the interests of the people and advancing the good of the nation ahead of perpetuating their own legislative careers."

Term limits remain popular with the voters, and Republicans brought the proposal to the floor as the first significant vote of the new Congress. House Speaker Newt Gingrich had pledged to do so last year, when lawmakers rejected term limits, 227-206, 63 votes shy of the two-thirds needed for approval.

At the same time, even supporters conceded in advance it would fall short again, in part because of opposition from many Democrats and in part because GOP term limits backers had failed to unite behind a single version of the amendment.

The result was a cumbersome procedure in which the House voted on nearly a dozen versions, many of them designed to provide political security for lawmakers from states where voters had approved ballot initiatives on the subject.

Lawmakers said that failure to obtain a vote on their own state's legislation would result in a "scarlet letter" at the next election — a notation in capital letters next to their name on the ballot that they "violated voter instruction on term limits." In addition, many of these lawmakers announced in advance they would vote against proposals patterned after initiatives approved in other states, even though there were only minor, stylistic variations in most cases.

McCollum, recently elected to his ninth term in the House, favors a 12-year limit to take effect after ratification by the states. But U.S. Term Limits, perhaps the best known of the outside lobbying groups, is opposed, and was instrumental in the passage of the state initiatives calling for six-year limits for House members.

Jonathan Ferry, a spokesman for the term limits group, said lawmakers were being "disingenuous... They're implying that they have the votes for a 12-year bill... They don't have the votes, and they don't have a strategy for getting there."

KENNETH SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Zapple guy?
Paul Saltzer, 20, posed as the Zapple guy to promote MassPIRG's new bottle bill campaign.

Army solider on trial for the deaths of two blacks

By Estes Thompson
Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. — As the victim's relatives bowed their heads, a song about shooting blacks echoed in a small courtroom yesterday during the trial of a former soldier accused of killing a black couple.

"Point it at their heads and let's have some fun... It's so much fun to mow them down," went the lyrics of one song.

James Burmeister, a former Fort Bragg soldier, is charged with murder and conspiracy in the 1995 deaths of Michael James, 36, and Jackie Burden, 27. Prosecutors played the song in an effort to show that he killed the couple because of his extremist beliefs. A witness said the two songs played in court were Burmeister's favorites.

When defense attorneys argued the songs weren't relevant, District Attorney Ed Grannis described one as "a premonition of what happened to my two victims." The couple was shot as they took a walk along a dirt street two blocks from the courthouse.

Prosecutors contend the victims were executed as part of a skinhead initiation rite. Burmeister, 21, could be sentenced to death if convicted. Also charged with murder is Malcolm Wright, 22, whose trial is scheduled for March in Wilmington.

Another former soldier, Randy Meadows, 22, was charged with conspiracy. He is testifying against Burmeister as part of a plea bargain.

The three men, all white, have been discharged from the Army, where they were members of the 82nd Airborne Division.

Meadows testified yesterday about his friendship with Burmeister, and their life on and off the Army base outside Fayetteville.

The defense contends the case is based on Meadows' lies. Burmeister and Meadows met in the paratrooper barracks at Fort Bragg and became drinking buddies. Meadows said that he wasn't a racist, but that Burmeister frequently said black people should be sent back to Africa or "rounded up and shot."

Burmeister believed white people created things such as government and businesses and Orientals sustained them, Meadows said.

"The destroyers were blacks," he said. "The Nazi flag represented a country he was very proud of because they believed in purifying the race to make it stronger."

Meadows told of accompanying Burmeister to beat up black drug dealers and prostitutes. They followed one to her house and sprayed her with Mace and knocked her down in her doorway, Meadows testified.

"It was Burmeister's idea of having fun, wasn't it?" Grannis said.

Yes sir," Meadows answered.

High ranking North Korean official seeks asylum in South

By Ju-Yeon Kim
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — A confidant of North Korean leader Kim Jong Il defected yesterday and was seeking asylum here, becoming the highest-ranking official to flee the communist North and giving the South an intelligence coup, South Korea said.

Hwang Jang Yop, 72, a member of the Central Committee of North Korea's ruling Workers' Party, fled to the South Korean Embassy in Beijing and asked for asylum, the South Korean Foreign Ministry said.

South Korean Ambassador Chung Jong-wook said in Beijing that Hwang had defected with an aide. The Foreign Ministry identified the aide as Kim Duk Hung, the president of a North Korean trading company who is in his 50s.

"Since [Hwang's] free will to defect has been confirmed, the issue will be handled through consultations with the Chinese government," the ambassador said.

North Korea insisted that Hwang must have been kidnapped by South Koreans, calling his defection "inconceivable and impossible."

"If it is true that Hwang Jang Yop is in the South Korean embassy in Beijing, it is obvious that he has been kidnapped by the enemy," an unidentified North Korean Foreign Ministry spokesman said in a report carried by the North's Korean Central News Agency.

"If it is brought to light that the South Korean authorities kidnapped him and describe him as seeking asylum, we will regard it as a serious incident without precedent and take due countermeasures," the spokesman said.

The importance of Hwang's defection was underscored by South Korea's reaction. It called an emergency Cabinet meeting to discuss ways to bring Hwang and his aide to Seoul. The foreign minister canceled a weekend trip to Singapore where he was to attend a meeting of Asian and European foreign ministers.

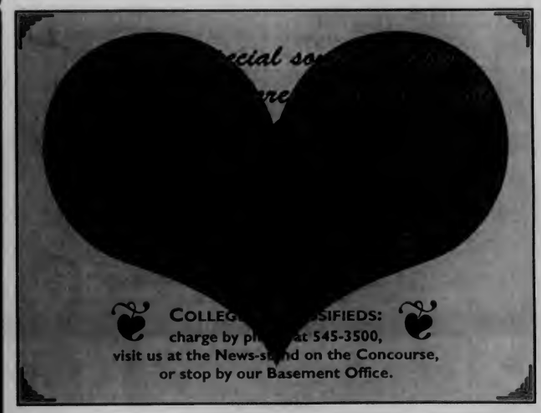
The defection could be a sign of a power struggle within the North's hierarchy, according to one South Korean official who spoke on condition of anonymity. Hwang also could provide a wealth of information about North Korea's government, which rules one of the world's most closed societies, the official said.

Hwang's defection comes while North Korea is preparing to celebrate its biggest holiday, the 55th birthday of Kim Jong Il, who became the country's de facto leader when his father died almost three years ago.

The weekend celebrations this year already had been overshadowed by the nation's worsening economic plight, aggravated by two years of floods that have devastated North Korea's food supply.

For the third time in a year, the U.N. World Food Program issued an appeal this week for 110,000 tons of emergency food aid worth $41 million. Hwang had stopped in Beijing on his way home from a North Korean-sponsored international seminar in Japan.

Ambassador Chung declined to characterize China's reaction to Hwang's defection, saying "it is a very sensitive issue." China is North Korea's closest ally, but their relations have cooled since China opened its doors to capitalism and established strong commercial ties with South Korea.



Under a 1978 treaty, China is required to return any North Koreans found in China without visas or other valid travel documents. That presumably would not apply to Hwang and his aide. North Korea urged China to "take appropriate measures" in the case of what it insisted was a kidnapping.

With the collapse of the Soviet Union and China's and Eastern Europe's embrace of capitalism, North Korea has been left with few ideological allies to turn to for aid, trade or diplomatic support. Its efforts to improve ties with potential aid donors — including the United States and Japan — also have made little headway. And increasing numbers of its people are fleeing for food and other reasons.

About 180 North Koreans have defected to South Korea in the past three years, including 30 this year.

Hwang graduated from North Korea's elite Kim Il Sung University and Moscow University in the late 1950s. According to South Korean officials, he is ranked 24th in the North's power hierarchy. As a key member of the North's ruling party, he served as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the North's parliament, the Supreme Peoples Assembly.

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS
Something Every Friday

SINGER
JOHN AKERS
February 14, 1997 8:00pm
Bluewall Cafe FREE
John is a very gifted singer/songwriter. The music he writes and performs includes a very wide range of influences; from gospel to pop, and folk to punk. John was voted the "Best Male Vocalist" by Freetime Magazine. For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/stuorgact/events/calendar.htm
The movie "The Associate" will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 8pm and again at 10pm
This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxilliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the Daily Collegian.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christaline Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggar Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Black History Month Editor's note: This is part five in an ongoing series of columns related to Black History Month. The series will run throughout the month of February.

Ebonics: what it ain't

Janice E. Jackson & D'Jaris Coles

In recent months there has been an almost hysterical debate in the media surrounding the topic of Ebonics. Until the Oakland school board's decision to accept Ebonics as the style of language used by its students, most people had never heard of the term Ebonics. Many misinformed "so called" leaders had comments and opinions about the subject and what should be done about the school board's decision. Now that a few months have passed, a slow but steady stream of language specialists and linguists have been getting the "real" word out on Ebonics. It is our hope that readers will leave with a better understanding of what Ebonics is, what Ebonics is not, as well as a broadened perspective on what may be more salient issues for African-American children in this country.

What it "isn't:" There are a plethora of myths and misconceptions about Ebonics. We find it pertinent to first discuss what it is not. Ebonics, also known as "Black English" and "African-American English" (AAE) is not "bad English," "broken English," or slang. It is also not the so-called "hip-hop" talk of the day. That is to say, AAE is not "yo baby, yo baby, yo" or "whas up!" or "she's dope." It is also not used solely by African-Americans.

What it is: With that out of the way, let us address what Ebonics is. African-American English (AAE) is the speech that is used by a large segment of the African-American population, which has ties to the West African linguistic roots of our slave ancestors. The evolution of the dialect is directly linked to the trans-Atlantic slave trade. Most of the Africans turned slave were taken from the West coast of Africa. Linguists understand that the languages spoken in this part of Africa are a part of the Niger-Congo family of languages, consisting of some 500-600 languages.

These languages, although not mutually intelligible, have very similar grammars. For example, members of the West African family of languages: (1) tend to follow the same sound rules with no consonants at the ends of words; (2) conjugate verbs by requiring that the verb remain constant for person and number; and (3) are inclined to have similar tense patterns such as past, present, future, near past, and remote past. In other words, Niger-Congo languages exhibit a grammar very different from the Northern European or Germanic family of languages of which English is a member.

Once the African arrived in this country he retained all of his African linguistic patterns. These patterns were indirectly reinforced, given that African slaves most often had very little contact with English. After all, how much English does one get to hear when picking cotton in a field? Not surprisingly, those slaves charged with house duties had significantly more opportunity to hear and interact with English. It is hypothesized that the slave did what all learners of second languages do — they first learned the names of things (nouns), then learned some verbs, and later adjectives and other forms. However, these nouns and verbs were then put into the slave's African grammar.

This is similar to what happens when English speakers first start to learn Spanish and learn the noun "casa" means house and the adjective "blanca" means white. The English speaker almost always first says "blanca casa," not realizing that Spanish grammar dictates that the noun precede the adjective (in English it is the reverse). The speaker has simply imposed his English grammar onto the Spanish words.

It is also crucial to understand that slaves for the most part were never "taught" English, but managed quite incredibly to attain it. Indeed the common penalty for literacy was death. This is an important distinction in understanding why the African-American is not the same as immigrants who came willingly to this country and had access to programs designed to teach them English so that they could assimilate as quickly as possible. The Negro was not welcome to assimilate into this society.

Today, AAE is used on a continuum by its speakers, some of whom use many features frequently while others use only a few features infrequently. Some of the most common features are identical to those West African grammatical rules listed above. Linguists generally consider it to be a dialect of English. Dialects are said to evolve when speech communities speaking a general common language become separated by either geographical or societal barriers. As a result, the dialect will be preserved as long as the particular group is isolated from or has limited contact with other speech populations.

AAE was preserved through the generations as a result of the social stratification of the African-American population during slavery, which ended in 1865, and subsequently through "Jim Crow" segregation which only continued the linguistic separation of the two groups. Segregation only started to be dismantled in the mid-60's during the civil rights movement. But even today this American society is largely segregated. Thus, it is not surprising that these speech patterns have stood the test of time.

What this controversy distracts us from: Unfortunately, the recent Ebonics controversy has been fraught with non-issues, such as the claim that children were going to be taught Ebonics. In fact children come to school with their respective dialects and do not need it to be taught. The Oakland school board's main objective is simply to better teach their students (53 percent of whom are Ebonics speakers) Standard American English by better understanding the dialect that they already use.

We fear that Ebonics has become the scapegoat for the ills of the public school system in this country. By focusing on Ebonics as a problem we pay less attention to the rising number of ill-equipped, poorly managed public schools. We also miss other serious issues such as how many of our schools are staffed with apathetic teachers who are inadequately trained to interact with culturally and linguistically diverse populations. When we decide that the only problem facing African-American children is their lack of Standard American English (SAE) skills, we also turn a blind-eye toward the reality of racism in this country, which affects even the most Standard English-speaking African-Americans.

SAE is not a panacea — even with SAE, African-Americans are going to face discrimination in hiring and in the work place. It may reduce some of the barriers, but even SAE-speaking African-Americans have found that they are discriminated against and not taken seriously in the work place. A case in point is the recent Texaco scandal where upper level administrators referred to upper level African-American employees as "black jelly beans," and laughed at the interesting phenomenon of the black jelly beans always ending up stuck at the bottom of the bag.

Finally, it should be noted that although a large portion of the African-American population uses AAE, there are great numbers of African-Americans who also employ effective use of SAE. Indeed, many of these individuals learned SAE in segregated schools with African-American teachers who also used the dialect. It is hardly likely that Ebonics is the cause for what ails the education of the African-American child today.

Janice E. Jackson and D'Jaris Coles are UMass Graduate students in the communication disorders

Letters to the Editor

Parking fee increase unnecessary

To the editor:

Monday's excellent Collegian article on the proposed parking fee increase left out one important fact: the campus administration has set aside nearly $90 million for building and facility renovation and maintenance. So why won't they spend any of it on the parking lots? Because they think they can get students and employees to pay for it instead.

Last fall the campus received over $60 million in new state money for building and facility improvements. The Chancellor has also set aside $20-30 million in campus money from his strategic action plan for the same purpose.

Everyone agrees that we need money to fix and maintain the parking lots. This is obvious. But what is also clear is that the campus administration has the money to make these improvements without sticking it to students and employees. Perhaps they should reexamine their priorities.

Marc Kenen
SCERA

University fails to fulfill ALANA Agreements

To the editor:

The University of Massachusetts Graduate Employee Organization, a unit of UAW Local 2322, has been without a new contract since June of 1996. Graduate employees and their representatives could have negotiated a new contract by now, demanding only an increase in the percentage of wages. Instead, the GEO Bargaining Committee, backed up by solid support from GEO members at the December 1996, meeting voted to stand firm on affirmative action issues including:

- demanding a substantial funding increase for the Office of Minority Graduate Student Recruitment (OMGSR) so as to augment the small number of non-white students in graduate school at UMass as well as providing financial aid to enhance retention.
- create another fund for working class students both from the United States and abroad, for single mothers who are students, and for first generation college students.
- demanding the immediate termination of the racially motivated "accent (language) testing" of international students, who are already required to take the Test of English as a Foreign Language before they are admitted to UMass.
- establishment of an open-early/closed-late, fully subsidized, child care facility in addition to a significant increase in child care vouchers for graduate students with children.

The overwhelming domination of university student life by one ethnic grouping (i.e. whites) in a society as class stratified but ethnically diverse as the U.S. not only criminally excludes most non-white students from formal education but, moreover, stunts the growth and distorts the development of those students who do gain admission to post-secondary education. In essence, we are currently being denied quality education by the absence of representational numbers of students, faculty, and staff from non-white ethnic categories. In the process, we are unwittingly being recruited to participate in this centuries-long whitewash.

In the 1992 ALANA Agreements, the Administration was able to negotiate down students' demands for a minimum of 30 percent non-white representation at all levels of the university to a 20 percent minimum for only the freshman class which it still is at pains to achieve (not to mention its failure to abide by the other provisions of the '92 agreement).

The fact of the necessity for the University proper yet speaks volumes about the poor state of race relations on campus and in the United States generally. Compromising students' demands downward to minimal reflects the hesitation and obstinacy of the campus administration to move forward on combatting racism in our own backyard. Being at pains to fulfill even the minimal requirements of the 1992 agreement five years later indicates a failure of will and disingenuousness of spirit.

When will the students and youth be able to learn in a non-racist environment in this country? What does it take to tear down the faulty towers and level the playing field of educational opportunity? Why does the administration hesitate so? These and other questions require organization and unity, vigilance and determination, and an unshakeable commitment to rid our nation of its seething, shearing, and scandalous heritage. Giving firm support to GEO's above- stated and just demands is one step we can and should all take in this endeavor.

Colin S. Cavell
Amherst

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

UMass Etiquette 101

C. Taylor Conner

The crying and whining is everywhere these days: "This country is going straight to hell," "Nobody respects anything or anybody anymore," "What we need is prayer in the schools and locks on the remote controls," blah, blah, blah. I never considered giving this line of thinking much more than a nod, a sigh and a requisite eye roll. Until Tuesday night.

That night, my girlfriend and I decided to go to the movies. We caught the late show and stopped in a restaurant for some munchies beforehand. On my way out, I stopped off to use the rest room and, much to my chagrin, I found that I was going to give the custodian a hand. You see, the mother's mistake who used the commode before me decided that raising the lid was far too much trouble, as was, I suppose, wiping up the resulting mess.

> "People in general are selfish and lazy, always have been, always will be, but the problem is so widespread now that I think a little bit of damage control is in order."
> Bob Dunn

Then I began to realize where the problem really lies. It's not in a return to some sort of grandiose, generic, one-size- fits-all belief system, but it's just a simple lack of civility that erodes away at polite society.

People in general are selfish and lazy, always have been, always will be, but the problem is so widespread now that I think a little bit of damage control is in order. Face it, we simply have different societal needs than people did 40 years ago and the old rules don't work that well anymore. It wasn't that long ago that terms like "gentleman" and "lady" were used without a trace of irony. These days you've got about as much chance of finding a polite person as you do finding a loyal "Baywatch" fan who's read "Moby Dick."

I'm certainly not talking about the sort of staunch, antiquated, "Miss Manners," elbows-on-the-table type of civility; just the basic, decent "Let's all get along" type.

Therefore, as a public service, I'd like to offer a few suggestions about how we, as a campus community, can make life a little easier for everybody here. We do have to share this campus with each other for four or five years (let's face it, if you're here for much longer than that, you've got bigger problems than being nice to people) and we should do what we can to help out.

- Walking: When walking anywhere, on-campus or off, walk as if you have a particular destination in mind. Don't just decide to take a leisurely stroll in between classes; get to where you're going or get out of the way. As a couple of corollaries to the above, if you see two oppositely moving lanes of pedestrian traffic trying to squeeze through one of a set of doors: open the other damn door, you too! Also, cross with the light and quit holding up traffic. I will run you over next time.
- ATM'S: If you need to use the ATM, take two minutes or less if it's crowded. The ATM isn't the place to completely overhaul your bank account or stage a hostile takeover while there are others waiting. Get your lunch money and get moving.
- Talking: Once the movie or lecture starts, shut your friggin' hole. There's nothing more annoying than a couple of yammering chimps flapping their gums while I'm trying to listen and/or watch and/or take notes. Trust me, no one outside of you and your sad little circle of friends cares what kind of time you and your "crew" had on Hobart last Thursday.

While we're on the subject of talking in public, if you happen to have or if you happen to take care of children, don't bring the snotgobblers to the movies unless it stars puppets, talking animals, or one of the Culkin creeps. They make noise, ask questions, throw stuff and are a general nuisance. Do everyone a favor, leave them at home and rent them Aladdin... again.

- Concerts/Sporting Events: If you go to one of these, don't bitch when people stand up. Chances are, they're standing up because the people in front of them are standing up and so on. That's what people do when their favorite band or team comes out to put on a show. Stand up or shut up. As far as wheelchair accessible sections go, those should have a clear and unobstructed view at all times, but that's another issue altogether.
- In General: Some across the board rules are: If you knock it over, set it back up. If you spill, wipe. If you bump into someone, say "excuse me." Watch your aim in the rest room and put the lid where it belongs when you're finished. If you're going to be in public a lot, try to shower at least every other day and save administrative questions until after class. When a professor asks if there are any questions, they usually mean about the readings or lectures, not about the price of the books or if chapter five is going to be on the exam. Quit wasting everyone else's time.

These are pretty simple guidelines and, if implemented, should make life a lot easier for everyone involved with a minimum of inconvenience. One final note, if you work in the local service industry, quit flirting with my girlfriend when I'm around. It really bugs me.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

That's the power of love

C. Taylor Conner

WARNING: The following column contains the maximum amount of references to adult contemporary love songs allowed by the Society of Professional Journalists. Please proceed with caution.

I want to know what love is / I want you to show me...
— Foreigner

Mere days before Valentine's Day, the impassioned words of Lou Gramm echoed through my head as I drove down the streets of Amherst, those lonely, disparate roads.

The disillusionment became stronger as I looked at the couples I passed: the frat boy outside a bar peeling the wall of makeup off his intended hook-up; the alterna-girl and boy who, by sharing a lip piercer, proved they'd taken INXS' "Never Tear Us Apart" a tad too seriously; and the shy folks who decided there ain't nothing wrong with a little bump 'n' grind — in the ATM cubicle.

You can only hope in that last situation that the guy knows the difference between "withdrawal" and "deposit."

I apologize for that last line, but it seems low humor and low spirits just naturally go hand-in-hand sometimes — a need for a cheap laugh. But even lowbrow shots couldn't lift my mood as I thought about my car and the upcoming repairs it required.

It's a light blue 1986 Jeep Cherokee with 163,000-plus miles on it. Just weeks ago some kid smacked its side, adding to the automobile's collection of unsightly dents. Yet I held no real love for my ride — or so I thought until I arrived at home.

My housemate Ron was in a funk unrivaled by that of George Clinton. His beloved forest green 1986 Chevrolet Monte Carlo was once again ailing, so he'd taken it home for repairs.

For the record, let me state that I have never quite gotten a grip on man's outward and unconditional affection for the car in general. The series of huffs, puffs and grunts I heard over the years from relatives and friends as they toiled away on their cruisers always pointed to the most basic of Freudian implications. Leave the dipsticks and such to the cretins, I believed. I'm civilized enough just to pay 50 clams at an auto shop for an oil change.

But in Ron's case, he was legitimately frustrated that he had to constantly shout the area in his mother's BMW 325i, a fine piece of German engineering. This indicated to me that there was truly something deeper to the whole car thing, this unyielding devotion to his wheels. This endless — dare I say — love?

"Connah," he said to me in that unmistakable Boston bass of his, "I like driving my mothah's cah fah a couple days, but then it gets tiahed. I just want my cah back. She's like the wind, Connah!"

(Okay, so he didn't really say that last part, but I couldn't resist.)

It then dawned on me that this car was indeed a part of Ron in its own inimitable way. The bubble-dome rear window, the tinted windows, the pine-scented car freshener dangling from the rear-view mirror — he wasn't the same without it. Curious to explore how this revelation has effected me, I went back outside and took another gander at the Jeep and all its little quirks.

Powder blue exterior. Oh, momma.

Black vinyl seats. Dig it.

Radio sans tape deck or CD player. Oh. I can't fight this feeling anymore.

For better or worse, I realized I was head over heels in love with that damn Cherokee. It was as if AMC's own private Cupid had driven up in his Gremlin, yanked out a arrow with a Pacer-key for a head, and shot me square in my narrow black rump. Michael Bolton was right — love is a wonderful thing.

Briefly, I even considered purchasing a set of sheepskin seat covers for the old girl, but snapping back to reality, I knew that I would do anything for love — but I won't do that.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

FILM • MUSIC • THEATER • LIFESTYLES • BOOKS • ART

Arts & Living

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Volume CVI Issue 72 Thursday February 13, 1997

Candy Hearts Abound

I wouldn't trade all the candy in the world for that tiny conversation heart. True it was just a heart-shaped crusty little piece of sugar, one of the brown ones to boot, but it was special because it had CUTE stamped in red letters on it.

I got it in the box I had contracted for the pairing of like-hooved patterns of hearts and flowers in red, pink and white construction paper. Usually we just constructed an envelope out of this paper, but I was pushed, I think, to create a profile of myself over the cover and all I was given was a cutout of a profile of Abraham Lincoln that was left over from his birthday two weeks earlier.

Mom took me to the store to pick out the valentines I was going to give the class. I think I got aliens that year. Not the cute, antennae and googley eyes aliens, they were the don't appreciate cute, they want gore, they want slime, they want to eat your brains aliens. They were little cartoon aliens with big eyes and stupid grins. They were simple and they were cute. Cute aliens.

Then I got to the candy hearts. Ah, the candy hearts. They were always my favorite part of all this crap. Especially the ones that had the little sayings on them. Remember those? Those little candies that had sayings like "Be Mine" and "Kiss Me" and "Call Me" and "Hug Me" and "Love You" and "Be True" and "Be Cool" and "Be Real" and "Be Hip" and "Be Groovy" and "Be Happy" and "Be Free" and "Be Sad" and "Be Depressed" and "Be Dead" and "Be Gone" and "Be Quiet" and "Be Still" and "Be Mute" and "Be Deaf" and "Be Blind" and "Be Dumb" and "Be Stupid" and "Be Ugly" and "Be Fat" and "Be Thin" and "Be Anorexic" and "Be Bulimic

David Bowie stays on top of it all at 50

"His wrinkles only make him look sexier..." David Bowie at 50.

By Bradley Skaught
Collegian Staff

DAVID BOWIE
Earthling
Virgin Records

We are either cursed or blessed to be living in an age where rock and roll heroes turn 50. Most of the time embarrassing reunions and cheap cash–ins chip away at an artist's once solid reputation. There are exceptions, however.

Sometimes an artist will continue to grow and explore—to bring out of their substantial experience something new and invigorating. Wish David Bowie a happy birthday and add him to that list of still vital rock and roll heroes.

With the opening track (and first single) "Little Wonder" Bowie immediately sets the stage for most of Earthling. A fascination with techno, jungle, industrial and Eno–esque electronic exploration is mixed in with healthy doses of Bowie's cool "Art Pop" and some thrashy Tin Machine style guitar noise. The result is a swirling, almost hypnotic joyride of sound — every song swerves wildly from style to style with electronic hiccups and blasts of blistering guitar static billowing out of a Jackson Pollack–with–a–Moby–complex sound painting.

It looks like a mess on paper, but it comes off smooth as silk on Earthling. The secret is that underneath all the noodling and knob twisting is the same sense of song and structure that made Bowie's late '70s collaborations with Eno as much great rock and roll as stylistic experiment. Reeves Gabrels' seemingly random guitar feedback squall ends up being the key hook in a song, and the bizarre chant that opens "Looking for Satellites" later reveals itself as part of the chorus. Bowie is in control on Earthling and despite all of the club inspired extravagance at work, he keeps it all ticking away like clockwork.

Most successful on the album are "Little Wonder," "Telling Lies" and "Dead Man Walking." All three pump up the dance quotient with skittering jungle programs pulsing underneath fluid live drumming, and all three skip freely from rumbling dance verses to pounding, explosive rock and roll choruses. This combination of electronic and organic sounds is one of the most startling things about Earthling — Bowie and his band are amazingly capable of blending the two seemingly disparate worlds.

The weakest tracks on Earthling are, ultimately, the least adventurous. Both "Seven Years in Tibet" and "The Last Thing You Should Do" lack the jittery edge and energy necessary to push them over the top — they have most of the necessary elements, but by playing it too straight Bowie fails to ignite their full potential.

Another problem is the length of the songs. Few fall under five minutes and a couple even exceed six. They don't drag necessarily, but one feels that the songs would have been more effective if compacted some. It is a problem, perhaps, of electronic music in general — especially here, in what is, essentially, a pop context.

These weaknesses, though, never distract from the feeling of excitement and discovery that pervades the album — it is the most spirited and confident Bowie album since Scary Monsters. At 50, Bowie continues to dig and rejuvenate. No one will pretend that Bowie invented the styles explored on Earthling, but, as he has often done, Bowie has upped the ante on the genres he incorporates — Earthling should stand as an open letter to the artists from whom Bowie has drawn inspiration. If you're going to remain vital and important you're going to have to keep up with David Bowie. A

Bowie a living legend; resurrections fill career

By Bradley Skaught
Collegian Staff

Career re–evaluation is one of the cornerstones of rock criticism. Any artist who's been around long enough has had his or her career given a second glance — a second glance that can completely redefine a career for a whole new generation.

Some artists, like Neil Young, have reaped the rewards of a positive re–evaluation — Young's techno pop experiment Trans has become a groundbreaking work in electronic music and even his most severe missteps are scoured for gems. In most cases this kind of re–evaluation is accompanied by a reissue series (although no one has been brave enough to re–release Trans, apparently).

One artist who has undergone numerous career re– evaluations is David Bowie. When Rykodisc began reissuing his albums in the early '90s, critics began to applaud once ignored works like The Man Who Fell to Earth and Pin– Ups. The problem with the dialogue surrounding this reissue series is that Ryko's reissues end with 1980's Scary Monsters. Bowie's career, then, can be divided into two separate categories: pre– and post–Let's Dance. It is the post– Let's Dance work that most deserves a second look.

The mega–popularity of Let's Dance makes it hard to look objectively at the album. It's a likeable affair — nothing too hard to swallow and the songwriting is mostly solid. It holds up well, and as New Wave Top 40 goes it's among the best the genre has to offer. The problem here is the artistic vortex it sucked Bowie into for almost an entire decade.

Even if one is being extremely charitable and generous it's hard to say nice things about Tonight or Never Let Me Down. Both are crassly commercial "products"— sterile production and half–baked songs so lousy even Bowie has disowned the albums. It's only fair, however, to mention the four listenable songs (all of which are available on Ryko's The Singles collection.) Both "Blue Jean" and "Loving the Alien" (from Tonight) are fair enough, and if you're stranded on a desert island with only Never Let Me Down to keep you company "Day In Day Out" the title tracks are practically bearable.

With Bowie's reputation and critical expectation at an all– time low, Tin Machine's self–titled debut was a pleasant surprise. Bowie's casting of himself as "just one of the guys in the band" may not have been entirely convincing, but at least there seemed to be a sincere attempt at being creative again. The songwriting tightens up a bit and there are some genuine moments of energy and excitement to be found. The follow up, Tin Machine II, continues Bowie's rejuvenative efforts and is easily one of his most underrated albums.

There are plenty of great songs and the band is tight and spirited. Sympathetic and honest production also helps to make Tin Machine II a lost gem. Tin Machine wrapped things up a year later with Oy Vey Baby, a rather loose live effort that doesn't exactly catch fire, but has some hot moments and a raw, thrashy feel.

For some inexplicable reason Bowie chose to return to his solo career with Let's Dance producer Nile Rodgers. Black Tie White Noise is an enjoyable, occasionally inspiring album with some nice jazzy elements (lots of sax and trumpet) and decent songwriting, but it's inconsistent and Rodgers' ultra–slick production threatens to suck many of the songs dry.

The next album, the album that really signifies Bowie's artistic resurrection, wasn't even released in the United States initially. A soundtrack for a British T.V. show, The Buddha of Suburbia is an impressive collection of originals that foreshadows the stylistic exploration and adventurous spirit of Outside and Earthling. The vital signs are clearly visible on Buddha and, luckily, the album is now available in the United States.

Almost an entire decade of missteps and recovery led up to the release of the dramatically underrated and criminally ignored Outside. A far cry from the

Turn to BOWIE, page 7

IRON HORSE
MUSIC HALL
20 Center St. Northampton

ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME

thursday, February 13 • 7:30 pm
ominous seapods
& YOLK
double your pleasure double your fun • $5 adv.

sunday, february 16 • 7&9:30 pm
DIRTYDOZEN
New Orleans' #1 funky brass band • $17.50 adv.

wednesday, feb. 19 • 7 pm • $15 adv.
PONCHO sanchez
world's greatest conga player + 8 piece jazz band

friday, february 21 • 7&10 pm
BO DIDDLEY
he knows. $20 adv.

tuesday, february 25, 8:30pm
the CONNELLS AND
TREBLE CHARGER
southern jangle & breaking canadian rock •$10

thursday, february 27 • 7 pm
GILLIAN WELCH &
DAVID RAWLINGS
alterna–country + bluegrass •$10 adv.

thursday, february 27 10 pm, 16 adv.
GALACTIC
AND TAMMY FLETCHER & THE DISCIPLES
medeski, martin & wood • galactic

friday, february 28 • 7 pm
MARCUS roberts TRIO outstanding jazz piano • $16 adv.

MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK

Coming: Christine Lavin, Tarika Sammy, Throat Singers of Tuva, Marcus Roberts Trio, Jane Siberry, Suzanne Westenhoefer, Dave Alvin, Big Geronimo, Moxy Fruvous

TICKETS: At the door. For the Record in Amherst, at the Northampton Box Office, or call 586–8686 to charge by phone.

24–hour Concert info:
413.584.0610

Attention
RSOs / GSOs / Agencies

Space Allocation Procedure has Begun!

The Campus Center/Student Union Commission has once again begun the Space Allocation Procedure for office spaces within the Campus Center/Student Union Complex

Pick up an application at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union!

A person from each RSO/GSO/Agency has to sign out an application at the Campus Activities Office.

Completed applications should be dropped off at the Campus Activities Office by 4:45 p.m. on February 28, 1997.

Applications Available: February, 11, 1997, Noon
Applications Due: February, 28, 1997, 4:45 p.m.

Introducing
Klub Kai
The Newest D.J. and Dancing in the Area AT KAI CHI
Thursday, Friday and Saturday Nights 9:30 - 1:30 a.m.

YOU'RE INVITED TO OUR
GRAND OPENING PARTY!!
FRIDAY & SATURDAY–FEBRUARY 21ST& 22ND–
FREE FOOD&GIVE–A–WAYS

1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS
Limited Selections
Sorry, Club Pass Not Valid

20% OFF
ALL FOOD ITEMS

DRINK SPECIALS

THURSDAY NIGHT	FRIDAY NIGHT	SATURDAY NIGHT
International NIGHT	Ladies NIGHT	College HOUSE PARTY
Everyone Welcome!	No Cover Charge for the Ladies!	All 5 Area Colleges are welcome!

Kai Tai
Ice Tea
Sex on the Beach
& more
12 oz.
$2.00

Mt. Farms Mall
Rte 9, Hadley
586 - 2774
FRIENDLY • CLEAN
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING • DRAFT BEER SPECIALS
POSITIVE I.D. AND PROPER ATTIRE REQUIRED . . . DRESS TO IMPRESS

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40
Some U–Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30
No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20
CONSULT MAPS

COME TO THE CO–OP JOB FAIR!

Sponsored by:
The Career Center, Digital Semiconductor and EDS

TEST DRIVE A CAREER

Thursday, February 13, 1997
10:00am - 3:30pm
Campus Center Auditorium

Summer and Semester Paid Positions
All Majors–Undergraduate and Graduate Students

Call 545–6265 for info

Dave Hole brings his unique slide guitar style to the United States.

Aussie slide master rockin' in the USA

The Mississippi River Delta, Chicago, Texas, Australia —— wait a second, here. Is it just me or is there an odd man out in that list of major blues areas? Australia, right? Well, sure it does not share a history of churning out blues legends like the other three U.S. outposts, but it has given the blues idiom one amazing slide guitar player. Meet Dave Hole.

Some of you may have heard of the England–born, Perth, Australia–bred man who plays slide guitar by bending his fingers over the fretboard instead of up from under like most guitarists. You're lucky. For those of you who haven't, try starting with his latest of four Alligator releases, Ticket To Chicago. This disc features some of the most rocking blues you have heard since ZZ–Top's '70s stuff or Stevie Ray Vaughan. The soul wells up in his voice so commandingly, that it actually makes you believe he's got the blues. Most contemporary blues singers lack this energy.

Despite the fact that the production on this disc is a little too bright for blues (a problem marring many Alligator discs), the playing overshadows all problems. "Wheeler Dealer," and "Beyond Jupiter" could probably survive well on AOR radio, while "Ain't No Justice," and "My Bird Won't Sing" are heartfelt ballads.

Most of the rest of this disc is just shameless rocking out and burning the strings with a slide technique you will not see elsewhere.

In the vein of slide guitarists, Hole was no doubt at least slightly influenced by Tampa Red. "The Guitar Wizard," as he was dubbed, lived from probably 1904 (many old bluesmen suffer the "mystery birthdate" problem) until 1981, and recorded heavily from the late '20s to the late '40s. His pen–in–hand was responsible for the blues classics "When Things Go Wrong With You (It Hurts Me Too)" and "Mean Mistreater."

RCA has blessed blues shelves with their new collection of Hudson "Tampa Red" Whittaker's complete Bluebird label recordings from 1934–36. On this two–disc 46–song set, we hear plenty of Red's high–pitched blues shout and melodic slide playing on a backdrop of lots of Dixie– and Ragtime– influenced blues numbers. Among the best are the moan of "I'll Find My Way," the reflective "I Still Got California On My Mind," and his first Bluebird hit, "Mean Old Tom Cat Blues." There are no "worsts" here. Also in this RCA reissue program of "Bluebird Blues & Heritage Series" are collections of "Big Maceo" Merriweather, and Sonny Boy Williamson. We'll look at those next week. Others will be released in late February.

The other great re–issue events this

Turn to JAZZ, page 10

■ Bowie

continued from page 6

straighforward pop of Black Tie, or even the four piece rock of Tin Machine, Outside finds Bowie digging deep into industrial, techno, and his own colored musical past to create a challenging, adventurous, ultimately rewarding album.

Outside succeeds not only as an experiment in style and sound, but as a substantial collection of mostly great songs. Both "Thru These Architects' Eyes" and "Strangers When We Meet" are among Bowie's best, and there are plenty of truly inspiring moments throughout. Admitedly, Outside is a difficult album — it's lenghty and full of extended experimental pieces, but regardless, Outside is a real return to form for Bowie — an album that holds up well alongside the best of his career.

Running offers viable alternative to snowy blues

Okay, so winter has not been perfectly white this year, nor has it been consistently mild. Don't be discouraged by the weather, Mother Nature has not sabotaged all forms of outdoor recreational sports. If you've had your fill of spending Saturday and Sunday indoors, due to fields of gray slush or eye lash–freezing wind chill factors, then snap out of it and slip into your running shoes.

That's right, running shoes. Not snowshoes nor skis, but running shoes. It is time to wake up from your winter hibernation and experience the outdoors again.

February is the shortest month of the year and Spring break is only a few weeks away. Now is the perfect time to re–start or start–up a spring running routine.

Regular exercise not only maintains physical fitness but it makes you feel good and relieves stress. Running is an inexpensive, easy way to re–introduce your body to intense physical activity and nature's elements. It only requires a good pair of shoes and a head full of imagination.

Running in the winter is not as strange as it may seem, and is often more enjoyable than trekking through the hot summer. Due to the lack of snow in the Pioneer Valley, not only are road sides clear for runners, but the Robert Frost Trail's 33–mile route is also in ripe condition for a winter run. (Of course, I do not expect you to go for 33–mile run.)

Running on the Robert Frost Trail in the winter is a wonderful opportunity to catch some of the season's most precious eco–systems frozen in the winter sun. Linking together Mt. Orient, Pulpit Hill, Long Mountain and Rattle Snake Knob, the Robert Frost Trail connects the homes of the Pioneer Valley's wildest habitat.

While running on the Robert Frost Trail a runner can expect to see not only an occasional deer or squirrel, but also members of the Pioneer Valley's newest population, a moose. Due to a recent expansion in the moose population over the past eight to 10 years, young bucks have been pushed out of their northern territories into western Massachusetts by their elders.

Running in the winter is a fabulous way to get a jump start on spring training, however, due to February's chilly temperatures and short days, runners must run with caution.

Although there are only a couple inches of snow left in the Pioneer Valley, it is still very slippery. It is crucial for winter runners to use a sturdy pair of running shoes with tire tread soles.

It is also very important for winter runners to keep their head covered in February's chilly air. Sure a hatless head will cool your body, but it will also jeopardize your health. Ninety–eight percent of the body's heat escapes from the top of an uncovered head.

It is also important for winter runners to wear a lot of layers. Wearing a lot of layers that can be easily removed while running will prepare you for all types of weather.

Breathable, water–proof, loose outer wear is perfect for winter running. Patagonia's element proof nylon or Gor– Tex's twill fabric are perfect for an array of movement and precipitation.

Due to February's short gray days, it is necessary for winter runners to wear a reflector vest or brightly colored clothing. Slippery roads and dark skies can lead to dead runners. If you do not have a reflector vest then be sure to wear a red, orange, or yellow sweat shirt.

It is not necessary to sprint for 20 minutes in order to reach your maximum running potential. Contrary to the old joggers' tale that says you're within your aerobic range if you can not hold a conversation with your jogging partner, the most accurate way to gauge your efforts is via your pulse.

If you are just starting a running routine after a couple months of limited activity don't shock your system with intense workouts. Start each workout slowly rather than simply bolting out of the door.

Walk the first two blocks of your run and slowly work up to a 20–minute jog. Starting your winter running routine with a 20–minute route allows you to increase the distance of your run as the days become longer with spring's strong sunshine.

This weekend don't watch the winter sun's highlights from your kitchen window, instead put on your sneaks and go for a run.

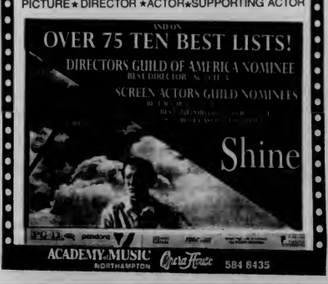
Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

BayBank
X–Press 24
5412 3128 4567 8111
2370 10–98
JANE WHALEN
MasterCard

Use it to buy a new CD.

(No, not a Certificate of Deposit. Duh.)

The Student Value Package™ gives you the freedom to get whichever kind of CD you're into. It comes with the BayBank Card with X–Press Check™ so you can make ATM withdrawals all over the place, and you can use it as a plastic check wherever MasterCard® is accepted.* Like at Strawberries, where you can get big discounts on cool stuff just for showing your BayBank Card and your student I.D. For more information about the Student Value Package or to open an account, call 1–800–BAY–FAST™ or stop by any branch.



SIGN UP NOW AND YOUR FIRST ORDER OF CHECKS COMES FREE WITH YOUR STUDENT VALUE PACKAGE.

Big Discounts On Cool Stuff.

Hey, life's right outside your door. Don't miss any of it.℠

BayBank
A BankBoston Company
Member FDIC

Visit our Web site at www.BayBank.com * X–Press Check only available to qualified customers.  For a limited time only.  Check offer good only through Feb. 28, 1997.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
PROUDLY STARTS FRI. Curtain Daily 7 & 9:15
7 Academy Award Nomination–Inc. 'BEST'
PICTURE ★ DIRECTOR ★ ACTOR ★ SUPPORTING ACTOR
AND ON
OVER 75 TEN BEST LISTS!
DIRECTORS GUILD OF AMERICA NOMINEE
SCREEN ACTORS GUILD NOMINEES

ACADEMY–MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584 6435

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

Fire and Flash

THE MINNESOTA ORCHESTRA
EIJI OUE, MUSIC DIRECTOR
PETER SERKIN, PIANO
One of America's finest orchestras and most renowned soloists present Argento's "Valentino Dances," followed by Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 21 in C major and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 4. A heavenly way to celebrate Valentine's Day! "...an adroit balance of passion and polish." – Detroit News
FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 8PM, FAC CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF FIRST MASSACHUSETTS BANK AND WFCR 88.5 FM
For more info on this event visit our website at HTTP://MNORCH.ORG

Y'all Come!

A Night in Nashville
with
Tennessee Dance Theatre
Mark O'Connor & Riders in the Sky
An afternoon in Amherst becomes an unforgettable night in the Music City, with Tennessee's world–class dance company, America's favorite band, and the fiddling genius of Mark O'Connor. Join Nashville's best cats as they raise the roof with down–home music, gravity–defying dance and foot–stomping fun.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, FEBRUARY 23, 3PM, FAC CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF WRSI

The Good Doctor is Back!

Fletcher Henderson Scholarship Concert
BILLY TAYLOR TRIO
AND SHEILA JORDAN/
STEVE KUHN DUO
Join Dr. Taylor and his trio along with jazz diva Sheila Jordan and her accompanist Steve Kuhn in an evening of melt–your–soul jazz. And support the next generation of jazz masters.
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 8PM, BOWKER AUDITORIUM
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF THE DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE AND COOPERS AND LYBRAND

CALL 545–2511 OR 1–800–999–UMAS FOR TICKETS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE AT HTTP://WWW.UMASS.EDU/FAC/FAC.HTML
The Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts Amherst
CELEBRATE THE RHYTHMS OF LIFE

HEART Warmers

Advertisers Displaying the Pink American Heart Association Logo Have Made a Donation to The American Heart Association. The Daily Collegian Will be Matching the Donations Raised by the Generosity of the Advertisers. The Massachusetts Daily Collegian and the American Heart Association Thank Them for Their Support.

■ help

continued from page 5

Pabst at Hugo's
The bottom line: Ritchie Cunningham trapped in the body of the Fonz

So there you go. Interested? If so, please drop by the Collegian. My office hours are Wednesday from 12 – 2 p.m. and Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Also, feel free to call at 545-1361. You won't have any trouble finding me; I'll be the guy surrounded by hordes of female admirers.

John Hendrickson is a single Collegian columnist.

■ alone

continued from page 5

a waiting list of over 40 to get a reservation for their Valentine's Special. I guess she was right.

My Suggestion: Go to Quabbin, shoot your own deer, and convince your RA to let you and your floormates spit roast it on the balcony.

My exploration of things to do on Valentine's Day has led me to believe that virtually every remotely romantic thing is already "booked." Restaurants have no available reservations, concerts and shows are all sold-out and it's guaranteed that they'll be no roses left in any floral shop.

So here is another list of my suggestions on how to spend this pseudo-holiday.

• Public Figure Skating — So maybe you're not Katarina Witt. But figure skating can be romantic, and plus, it only costs a few bucks. Grab your significant other and get up the courage to venture out on the ice. And, pretending like you don't know how to skate is always a sneaky way to hold your partner's hand.

• Make cards and cookies — This is a creative and cheap way to show your boy/girl friend that you love them. All you need is some multi-colored construction paper, glue and some ready-to-bake chocolate chip cookies. After you two are done with happy time, you can curl up and watch a sappy, romantic movie, i.e. While You Were Sleeping and gorge yourselves on your baked delicacies. If he/she still loves you after you've consumed a dozen or more cookies, you know it's meant to be.

• Yankee Candle — Though they may not be open at night, it would be fun to go sometime in the late afternoon and make candles together.

• The Hockey Game — It doesn't get any more romantic than this.

Lisa M. Oliveri is a Collegian columnist.

■ heart

continued from page 5

tom of my valentine box.

Within that class, there was a girl who dropped it in my box. There could be no mistaking. Things like that don't happen by accident. Someone thought I was cute. I never found out who it was, but that didn't really matter.

The other day, I took a look at a package of the "next generation" of conversation hearts. They looked the same and they tasted the same, but I was shocked to see that they read "Fax Me" and "U R A 10," in addition to the old standbys "Hug Me" and "Be Mine." I almost died. I guess that was my introduction to Valentine's Day in the '90s.

When I walk through the Campus Center around Valentine's Day, I can't help but notice the Condomgram Valentine Packs and the vendors selling flowers. The 14th of February has lost its innocence. Gone are the days of cute little aliens and Garfield, valentine boxes and construction paper cutouts.

Here are the days of huge corporations making millions upon millions of dollars by pushing the "holiday of love" upon a society that has otherwise forgotten what the word "love" means.

Once a year, I look back at the Valentine's Days of my past and wonder what happened, how it lost its magic in such a short period of time. I'd like to believe that the little kid still resides somewhere within the shell of my body... still longing for that little piece of packed sugar encrusted with the word "CUTE."

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

■ outlook

continued from page 5

14 as a day to re-evaluate themselves and their companions and, most of the time, they end up with a stronger relationship.

My idea to my fellow singles crowd is to just go home this long weekend. See old friends and family and stay away from a Happy Valley teeming with cutesy couples, which if you're around too much of, will make you wish too hard for what doesn't come easy, but should.

But to celebrate Valentine's Day, at least you don't need a tree, basket, costume or anything. As John Lennon wrote... ah, you know the line — sing it and feel it!

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

You've got until 1pm today to let that special someone know just how much you care...

Get your Collegian Classified now!

Charge it by phone (545-3500), visit the newsstand on the concourse, or stop by the Collegian in the basement of the Campus Center

Thanks Dad. Not!

We've seen it too many times. You get their old computer for school
*They tell you it's a Caddy, but it runs like a Yugo

That slow-running computer can be upgraded at low cost!
We upgrade for your needs, now.
And we make sure they work, now.

MORE MEMORY ÷ LARGER HARD DRIVES ÷ FASTER CD-ROMS ÷
FASTER INTERNET ACCESS ÷ INCREASED PROCESSING SPEED

19 Pray Street, Amherst Spott Computer, Inc. Call us at 549-6780
We are Spott Computer, a local computer company building and servicing computers for the greater Amherst community

BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL: Add 8 megs of RAM to your computer for only $40.00.
(72 pin, Parts only. Installation Extra; Limited to 32 megs per customer)
 (No offense to Yugo Drivers everywhere. We love you both.)*

24-HOUR TOWING
7 DAYS A WEEK!
PLUS...
• Tune-ups
• Brake Service
• Mufflers
• Shocks
• Wheel Balancing
• Alignment
• Auto Electric
• Alternators
• Tires
• Air Conditioning
• Auto Inspections
• Emissions Testing & Adjusting
College Street Motors
253-3200
260 College St., Amherst

Always in Bloom
Valentine's Day
Friday, February 14th
LOCAL ROSES, DUTCH, & EXOTIC BOUQUETS
SPECIALS
AVAILABLE LOCALLY ONLY
HUGS & KISSES
HUGS: An adorable 8" white bear holding a red rose and a balloon $19.95
KISSES: A cuddly soft 12" white bear with a red rose and balloon $24.60
220 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
WE DELIVER ANYWHERE
253-5545 253-7228

WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN AMHERST?
You Didn't Come to Experience the Standard "Chain Restaurant" you Find in Every College Town
classé Cafe
15 YEARS OF AMHERST'S BEST
CASUAL, FUN & FRIENDLY WITH DELICIOUS, INEXPENSIVE HOMEMADE FOOD simple: you are what you eat be who you wanna be....
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE morning noon night
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
welcome OCMP
wine & beer
168 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

Happy Valentine's Day

-From all of us at the Collegian.

Valentine's day resolutions could be the key to a better day next year

This one goes out to my fellow losers. That's right, all of you lonely losers... I share your pain. With Valentine's Day just around the corner, we're all preparing, or rather bracing ourselves for the big event. No other day of the year so clearly separates the haves from the have-nots — even the poor people get to eat on Thanksgiving.

On Valentine's Day, though, many will go hungry — in some cases we've been hungry for some time. We will be walking around on the 14th with our heads hung low, dressed in black, unshowered and gritting our teeth. A few of us, no doubt, will bump into our exes and their new significant other, and snarl like threatened animals at the sight.

Where to take refuge on a day such as this? How to escape its furry, flowery, chocolate-covered claws? Where to run... Wait, hold on a second!

You, over there, stop sighing into your beer and wistfully remembering walks in the park from long ago! And YOU, stop getting so stoned off your ass that you can't remember anything! Hey, you there, come out and stop listening to the Cure and Alice in Chains in complete darkness! Take that box of chocolates your mom sent you and throw them away! I'm going to put my pen down and refuse myself the pathetic joy that is sad, angst ridden poetry.

All of you, heed me, do not fall into the Valentine's Day traps. Do not allow it to beat you down; rather, we must fight back to defeat it. "How?" you ask. Well, I'll tell you.

You feel that you're scrawny? Then pick up those weights. You're out of shape? Put on those running shoes. There's a sport you like but aren't that good at? Get going. You're fat? Then you're eating sprouts tonight. Pick up that instrument, study for that class, read that book, work more hours, lift that barge and tote that bale. No, this isn't some sort of belated push to get you to fulfill your New Years resolutions. New Years is a time when you feel like you HAVE TO make some sort of self improvement, but normally people only keep these promises to themselves for a short time before the contrived sense of obligation wears off and everyone falls back into their old routine. No, the reason I ask you to set out to do these things now is for a much better reason than New Years-type "tradition." That reason is good old Valentine's Day type revenge.

Are you really telling me that you'd rather have all those people who look past you, or your ex for that matter, making jokes to their new significant other about how glad they are that they aren't wallowing in self pity and living stagnant lives? Do you really want to answer their questions of "so what have you been up to?" with "nothing much"? Do you mean to say that you want them to be smugly satisfied that they made the right decisions in not being with you?

Some might say that these are pretty poor and petty reasons to better ones' self, and that change should be made for personal gain. Well I say that these changes, these improvements, are born out of personal desires. I am also saying that, if it takes a wee bit of spite and pettiness to get us off of our rear ends, then so be it. Call it an impetus, call it a fringe benefit, but sadistic satisfaction by any other name is still satisfaction.

I'm going to get my mountain bike ready in time for a Valentine's Day tour de force, and then I'm going to learn a new song on the guitar. I'm not going to learn "Black" by Pearl Jam, but rather I think I may choose to learn Poison's "Talk Dirty to Me," or maybe even a little "Youth Gone Wild" by Skid Row.

So, I issue a rallying call to all my fellow losers out there. We must refuse to allow ourselves to be pathetic and lonely. Stop staying in to watch the Star Wars trilogy, get off of the Internet. Let's begin to develop ourselves, make them all a little bit jealous. And to everyone out there, with hugs and kisses, have a super duper Valentine's Day!

Paul Hayes is a UMass student.

BEADS
Great Selection
Classes
Hemp Twine
Also Featuring Gift Items
•Silver •Jewelry
•Pottery •Unique Imports •Candles
•Picture Frames
•Stationery •Cards
August the First
197 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst Ma.
01002
413-256-0276

THE HENION BAKERY
174 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002-1174
(413) 253-4909

Forget to get something for that special someone, and think there's no hope and no time left?
Well, there is hope.
Get a Collegian Classified for that special someone.
Charge it by phone (545-3500), visit the newsstand on the concourse, or stop by the Collegian in the Campus Center basement

Help cupid's arrow hit you. Start with a haircut.
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
253-9526

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY
from the TOC Bar & Grill

Valentine
Great Gifts
Bags Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Be Mine Cards
Rings Bracelets
Earrings
Toys Chains Candles
India Print Bedspreads
Sweaters Mugs
Chinese Shoes Dressers
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
the Sub
33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5100
For Free Delivery for Lunch or Dinner call 549-5100

Tonight Dance Music by D.J. Bob Paulin
Weekly Drink Specials
16 oz Red Dog Drafts $1.50
16 oz Bacardi Limon & Coke $2.00
16 oz Vodka & Cranberry $2.00
THE PUB
Appetizer & Nachos 1/2 price
3-5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11pm
No Cover Before 10 pm
15 East Pleasant Street

PHOTO BY JENNIFER POTTRAS
•Calvin Klein Lingerie
•Free People
•Dollhouse
•Betsey Johnson
•PA Company
•Bulldog
•NC Love
•URU
•Soda Bla
•Ecote
•Girl Star
•Tripp NYC
•Esprit •Airwalk
•And Lots More
Downs[illegible] Thornes
CONTEMPORARY CLOTHING & FOOTWEAR
25 CENTRAL
150 Main Street • Northampton, MA
413-586-8017

!! FREE !!
Happy Valentine's Day
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
All UMASS Women Free Workout [with this ad]
!! FEB 14 !!

GRAND OPENING!
KOREAN CUISINE
ICHIBAN いちばん
Gift Certificate Available
$1 Sushi & Free Karoake
10:30pm - 2:30am
Thurs. - Sat.
Japanese & Korean Restaurant
One Roundhouse Plaza
Northampton, MA
Tel: 413-585-1185
15% Discount on Dinner
(Except Korean Menu)
w/ student I.D.
expires 2/28/97
Not good with other offers.

Vision of Disorder with monster release

What's up, boys and girls; welcome to another edition of Keeping It Real. In local news Barrit released their debut 7" on Ellington Records (nice blood red vinyl, Mike). Barrit is one of those bands that know how to play their instruments, care about what they're doing, put a lot of time into this, but I just can't get into them.

They play heavy, heavy hardcore that is very close to metal; actually they play heavy metal that some might consider hardcore. They have some riffs that will make you call for your mom cause you're scared. The lyrics are also very heavy handed and I just don't share their bleak outlook on life. Of the two tracks, I preferred "Godless Disease" due to its faster Monster X-like parts. Still, if you like Bloodlet or Monster X check these guys out.

I think it's about time that I opened your eyes to a scene that's been making a lot of noise without nearly enough recognition. I'm talking about Long Island or Strong Island for all you tough guys.

• The biggest band on L.I. right now is Vision Of Disorder who released their debut self-titled album on Supersoul Records. V.O.D. is the bomb and they hit you harder than your dad with a bad case of hemorrhoids.

• Silent Majority is one of L.I.'s longest running bands and they have two 7"s out on Reservoir Records. If you like Avail, Lifetime, or Gorilla Biscuits check these guys out. They will be putting out a full length on Exit Records.

• Clockwise and Inside are two bands who lean to the emo side of the spectrum. Inside has that Sunny Day thing going on and they will make you a more sensitive guy after just one listen. Clockwise goes back to the glory days of the DC scene and if Embrace, Dag Nasty, Rites Of Spring, or Soulside is your thing check them out. Inside has a full length on Sunny Side Up records and Clockwise has an EP on Pie Records.

• Tripface, L.I.'s newest sons, have just dropped their debut "Some Part Sorrow" on Exit Records. They combine the best of the new and the old with some honest introspective lyrics that will have you picking up change as you dance around your room.

• Millhouse and Irony of Lightfoot represent the noise core. If you like singers who are red from screaming, guitars that screech, make dogs heads explode, and emo lyrics you will like these bands. Both bands have material out on Exit Records.

• Sleepasaurus, Wasted Time, and Latex Generation are doing that pop-punk thing that Green Day made famous. If Jawbreaker gets you all hot and bothered then you need to hear Sleepasaurus.

• Cleanser is a fairly new band that features Derrick from Neglect on guitar. Chugga-chugga hardcore that makes you want to swing your fists and get a lot of tattoos. They're debut full length is coming out on None Of The Above Records.

• Two new bands to look out for are Glassjaw who represent the X and Day In The Life who feature George Reynolds of Mind Over Matter on vocals and will be a force to be reckoned with.

• All the bands mentioned in this column can be reached at the following addresses: Ellington Records 112 King St, Northampton, MA 01060 (Barrit); Sunny Side Up Records PO Box 16, Millerplace, NY 11764 (Inside); Motherbox Records 60 Denton Ave., East Rockaway, NY 11518 (Sleepasaurus); Reservoir Records PO Box 790566, Middle Village, NY 11379 (Silent Majority, Millhouse).

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

Beckett gets a make–over at Amherst

COURTESY ARTHUR COURTZ

Anne Penner and Courtney March play Vladamir and Estragon in Amherst College's new production of Waiting for Godot.

By Alla Levitsky
Collegian Correspondent

Waiting for Godot, by Samuel Beckett, is being presented at Amherst College starting tonight and continuing through Sunday.

The 1950s version of Beckett's contemporary classic has two men sitting under a tree on a country road waiting for a friend that never arrives. Amherst College has added a new twist for the '90s — instead of two men, the lead roles in this play are women, "survivors of a Chechnya, refugees of a Sarajevo, the women of a Rwanda — they remain when the men make war."

Beckett's serene country road gives way to a city street with a burned out building. The Amherst College production brings in political themes and revises Beckett's original poetry to suit today's troubled times. Some of the themes in Amherst College's production include "ethnic cleansing and hatred of the other so that it may resonate against a particular dilemma of existence in the late 1990s."

This Amherst College production of Waiting for Godot is being directed by Peter Lobdell and features Anne Penner as Estragon, Courtney Munch as Vladimir, Gabe Alkon as Pozzo, a slave owner, and Kathy Couch as Lucky, the slave. The designer of the set was Tina Bishko and the costumes were designed by Scott Bolman. Kristin Messer will be responsible for the lighting.

Waiting for Godot, 8 p.m., Feb. 13–16, Fayerweather Studio Theater, Amherst College. Admission is free; reservations are required. Box office opened Jan. 30; call 542-2277 between 1–4:30 p.m. and until 8:00 p.m. performance nights.

■ jazz

continued from page 7

mid–winter is jazz's Blue Note "Rare Groove" Series. They have recently put out late–1960s material by three relatively unknown organists: Reuben Wilson, Jimmy McGriff and John Patton.

Wilson's Love Bug, a 1969 product also featuring trumpeter Lee Morgan, guitarist Grant Green and drummer Idris Muhammad, is a cool study in no–bull, straight–up organ funk. McGriff's Electric Funk (1969) is just that. You'll hear some grooves on here that possibly influenced James Brown's The Payback album. McGriff's organ is slightly more distorted than Wilson's and Patton's.

Patton's Accent On The Blues, also from '69, is less funky and more jazzy. He is joined by guitarist James "Blood" Ulmer, who plays fairly straight — Kenny Burrell–style — among others like sax player/Miles Davis alum George Coleman. "Don't Let Me Lose This Dream" on Accent is just simply beautiful, especially with Marvin Cabell's flute.

MCA has been releasing the '30s–'40s Commodore catalog and scored a great success with The Commodore Story. But with The Complete Billie Holiday Commodore Recordings, they seem to have gone completist–mad. Although Lady Day's singing is smooth and beautiful as always, and Eddie Heywood's band gently swings, there is no need for five versions of "He's Funny That Way," four versions of "I Cover The Waterfront" or four versions of "How Am I To Know." On a good note, "Strange Fruit" is on board here.

There are 17 songs on this 2–disc set, and all but two are represented two to five times. A little overboard, eh? Unlike The Beatles Anthologies, we don't get much of any differences between the different takes, either. If you have the time to sit down and go through each individual take for contrasts, more power to you. Next Week: Shirley Horn.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

SKI & Snowboard from $239
SpringBreak "97"
Mont Sutton, Canada
◆◆5 DAY LIFT TICKET
◆◆5 NIGHTS LODGING
◆◆5 NIGHTS PARTIES
1-800-848-9545

Spring Break
Hartford Stepdancers
Guaranteed Lowest Prices On Campus
Cancun from $449
Jamaica from $449
Florida from $139
STS STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES

Collegian Weather reserve yours today!
coming soon!

Thats Right!
Screen Printed T-Shirts
On 100% Cotton!
Many Colors to Choose From!
COOL DESIGN HERE
Only $5.60
PRINT SHACK & APPAREL UNLIMITED
322 Russell Street • Hadley, Mass.
*1A Minimum Includes: 1 side 1 color Ex 4.31.97
Call Today 586-6933

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
OUR VALENTINE'S DAY TREAT FOR MOVIE LOVERS
LATE SHOW THIS FRIDAY & SATURDAY AT 11:15 PM
$5.00 - TICKETS IN ADVANCE FORM 1:00 PM TO SHOWTIME
SOME THINGS JUST GET BETTER AS TIME GOES BY
Humphrey BOGART · Ingrid BERGMAN
Casablanca
PAUL HENREID CLAUDE RAINS CONRAD VEIDT SYDNEY GREENSTREET PETER LORRE
A HAL B. WALLIS PRODUCTION Directed by MICHAEL CURTIZ
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Over ~500~ Microbrews
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines
MICROBREWS
Latrobe Craft Beers $4.99/six (American Pale Ale, Bohemian Lager, Bavarian Black)
Middlesex Brewing Co. $4.99/six (Raspberry Wheat, Brown Ale, Oatmeal Stout)
Harpoon I.P.A. $8.99 12 pack bottles
Cider Jack $4.99/six
BEER SPECIALS
Busch & Busch Lt. $9.99 case bottles
Natural Light & Ice $4.99 12 pack cans
Genesee Cream Ale & Ice $9.99 30 pk cans
Bass Ale $11.99 12 pack bottles
1/2 KEG SPECIAL
Pete's Wicked Ale $75.99
SPECIALS
Sauza Gold Tequila $9.99/1 0L
Goldschlager $8.99/375ml
Mt. Gay Eclipse Rum $10.99/750ml
Poland Spring Vodka $9.99/1.75L
Glenlivet $20.99/750ml
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
263-8384
Rt. 9 East College Street
one mile east of American Civil on Rt. 9E

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
8 Ultra's Best! 1996 9
Bigger Is Better
• 43 Sporting

Pruddy's Wishes Everyone a Happy Valentine's Day!
At Pruddy's $5 Buys more than a pitcher of Bud Light!
(Be smart and save)
Come check it out!!
From 9:00 to 1:00 AM
Thursday: Request Night
Friday: Hip - Hop
Saturday: only 70's 80's 90's Club and Disco
Ladies Night Every Night. No Cover.

■ softball

continued from page 16

COLLEGIAN FILE

The Massachusetts softball team heads to Arizona this weekend for the Coca–Cola Classic, where it will face some of the top teams in the nation.

Tournament MVP, make up UMass' formidable throwing pair.

After a freshman campaign that saw her consistently throw a 60+ mile per hour fastball, Henderson, affectionately called Harry by her teammates, has worked on her changeup and added a riseball.

"Harry has matured totally. Being a freshman is very different than being a sophomore," Sortino said. "she's very, very focused and she knows what she needs to do.

"She's developed some good pitches. She has a riseball that really works, a beautiful change–up knuckleball, the ability to put her fastball wherever she wants, and I feel she's really a commodity as a pitcher," Sortino said.

Wagner was hampered during the latter part of last year by back problems but still managed to finish the year with a 14–7 record. This year, the junior will throw in a back brace, but it should not greatly influence her pitching.

"Liz has worked very hard on her endurance, on her mental ability to remain focused," the coach said. "What I like about Liz is that she's maintained her speed and increased her ball movement."

At the other end of the pitches, Kelly Buckley will benefit from a year under the catcher's mask to command the catcher's position for UMass. But she will be afforded some rest this year, thanks to freshman Nicole Faessler, who will be learning the ropes under Buckley.

In the infield, the Minutewomen have a wealth of experience at the corners in Kim Gutridge at first base and Sam Cardenas at third. It is the middle of the infield that is relatively new.

Last year's second base player, Amy Powell, graduated and the starting shortstop, Ashlie Hayes, transferred to Cal State–Northridge to be closer to home.

So the middle infield duties have been passed to sophomores Mandy Galas, Becky George and Karen LaFrenier. George will start at short, after working the offense as UMass' designated player for the second half of last year.

Galas, who makes the move in from right field, will likely see much of the time at second base. But for the early part of the season it will be LaFrenier on the diamond, due to Galas' recent off–season surgery.

"Becky played a lot for us last year. Karen is the back–up at second, short and first. She's going to have to start at second base because Mandy Galas is not ready after surgery," Sortino said. "The middle infield is going to be a question mark, but they'll settle and they'll be alright."

The outfield will once again be anchored by Stephanie Mareina. The senior co–captain will bring along a field troupe that could possibly include junior Tracy Osier, sophomores Katie Kendarski and Octavia Brown and freshman Monica Hashiguchi.

Mareina and Osier may have talent in fielding, but on the basepaths the pair turn on the afterburners. Osier is just five steals away from tying the UMass record. Not only that, she can hit — turning in a .349 career batting average and a .368 on–base percentage last year.

Mareina, meanwhile, was also successful in the steals category, avoiding the tag in every attempt last year.

While the Minutewomen have the luxury of returning so many experienced players, they do not by any means have a cream–puff schedule to start the season with. On UMass' first road trip of the year, a 6–game road swing to Arizona this weekend, the team is slated to face the nation's No. 25 school, Arizona State, as well as No. 3 Fresno State.

"We take our game plan, what we want to do offensively and defensively, to every team we play," Sortino said.

But with a strong nucleus and a strong schedule, Sortino hopes the team is prepared to make a run at tournament season, and ultimately, the NCAAs.

"Our first and foremost goal is to defend our conference title, which gets us to the NCAA play–in situation," Sortino said. "That is always the goal of this program, to make it to the national tournament."

I PROCLAIM THE LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR!
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
★★★ Presidents Sale ★★★
Downhill Skis, Snowboards, Boots & Bindings
LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR!!
CROSS COUNTRY SKI PACKAGES AS LOW AS $79.99
ALL SKI & SNOWBOARD CLOTHING 50% OFF
Jackets • Pants • Hats • Gloves • Turtlenecks
SKI BIBS AS LOW AS $14.99
AIR ADJUST FORCE $79.99 Reg $124.99
OTHER SELECTED STYLES 50% OFF
ALL HOCKEY SKATES & EQUIPMENT UP TO 50% OFF
Hampshire Mall Hadley Route 9

THE #3 LAW SCHOOL IN THE COUNTRY FOR STUDENT SATISFACTION
Western New England College School of Law was ranked #3 for student satisfaction according to the latest National Jurist/ Princeton Review survey of 28,000 law students. The atmosphere is both intellectually rigorous and student-friendly. The faculty love to teach and they have outstanding academic and professional credentials. In fact, the professors were ranked in the top 25% for publication volume in the most recent Chicago Kent Law Review faculty scholarship survey.
Open House for Prospective Law Students
If you're considering going to law school, you can find out everything you need to know about admissions, financial aid, legal careers, and our unique student-centered programs at our upcoming open house.
Western New England College
School of Law
Open House for Prospective Students
Saturday, February 22, 1-4 pm
S. Prestley Blake Law Center
1215 Wilbraham Road
Springfield, Massachusetts
For reservations and more information call:
800-782-6665
Visit our Web Site at http://www.law.wnec.edu

La Cucina di Pinocchio
256-4110
30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
Hours: Mon-Thurs. 11:00am to 2:00am
Fri.-Sat. 11:00am to 3:00am
Sun. 11:00am to 1:00am
Calzones Pizza Lasagna Salads
-Fast. Free. Delivery-
Coupons valid for delivery or pick-up only
Pinocchio's Coupon: $15.00 — 2 Large One Topping Pizzas — Add $2.50 for Gourmet Toppings — One coupon per order — Expires 8/31/97
Pinocchio's Coupon: Any Calzone $3.75; Any 2 Calzones $7.50; Any 3 Calzones $10.45; Any 4 Calzones $13.50; Any 5 Calzones $17.10 plus tax — One coupon per item — Expires 8/31/97
Pinocchio's Coupon: $1.00 off any Medium Pizza — One coupon per item — Expires 8/31/97
Pinocchio's Coupon: $.50 off any Salad (Tossed Salad Excluded) — One coupon per item — Expires 8/31/97
Pinocchio's Coupon: Any Large Sub $4.80; Any 2 Large Subs $9.25; Any 3 Large Subs $13.50; Any 4 Large Subs $17.00; Any 5 Large Subs $22.25 plus tax — One coupon per item — Expires 8/31/97
Pinocchio's Coupon: Any Small Sub $4.00; Any 2 Small Subs $7.75; Any 3 Small Subs $11.50; Any 4 Small Subs $14.50; Any 5 Small Subs $17.25 plus tax — One coupon per order — Expires 8/31/97
Pinocchio's Coupon: $1.65 off any Large Pizza — One coupon per item — Expires 8/31/97

Spring Break Party '97
DAYTONA BEACH
From $229 Bus & Hotel
From $99 Hotel Only
• Round trip transportation via deluxe motorcoach
• 6 or 7 night accommodations at Ocean front hotels
• Full time Breakaway staff on location
For Details or to Book Call: 1-800-465-4257 Ext. 375
Breakaway Tours
www.breakawaytours.com

Spring Break Fever we've got it
Bahamas 7 nights land only $336
Grand Cayman 7 nights land only $394
Jamaica 7 nights land only $346
Aruba 7 nights land only $479
you catch it!
Prices are based on double occupancy, U.S. and foreign departure taxes and fees are not included. Prices and availability are subject to change.
Council Travel
44 Main Street, Amherst
Tel: 413-256-1261
http://www.ciee.org/

Soap opera life continues for Tonya Harding

By Amy Corneliussen
Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tonya Harding says she foiled an abduction attempt early yesterday by ramming her truck into a tree and running away from a bushy-haired man who tried to commandeer her vehicle.

The figure skater told police the man abducted her outside her home and forced her to drive to a rural area. She said she dodged him in a chase through the woods, then jumped back in her truck and took off.

Aside from a slap mark on her face, Harding was unharmed. Clackamas County sheriff's deputies, who have responded to Harding's calls for help before, said they were taking the matter seriously.

"We'll treat it at face value and investigate it just as we would investigate anybody, but at the same time, this type of report is unusual," said sheriff's spokesman Damon Coates. "I have no reason to think it's false at this point, but it would be a poor investigation not to look at that."

The abduction report came the same day the U.S. Figure Skating Championships began in Nashville, Tenn., and 10 days before Harding's skating comeback — a three-minute exhibition program in Reno, Nev.

Harding has been banned for life from amateur competition for her role in the 1994 attack on her Olympic rival, Nancy Kerrigan, at the U.S. Championships. Harding pleaded guilty to conspiring to cover up the attack, in which Kerrigan was whacked on the knee. A judge placed Harding on three years' probation, fined her $110,000 and ordered her to serve 500 hours of community service.

Harding could not comment on yesterday's incident because of exclusive media contracts related to her Feb. 22 performance at Reno's Flamingo Hilton, said her agent, David Hans Schmidt.

"There's no abduction preclusion in the contracts. I might have to put that in from now on. God only knows," Schmidt said.

Harding provided this account to police: She had spent the evening at the Lost and Found Saloon, where Harding performed mouth-to-mouth resuscitation last October on an elderly woman who collapsed while playing video poker.

After arriving home in suburban Oak Grove, Harding walked out to her truck for some cigarettes and saw a man tinkering under the hood of another vehicle outside the house.

The man told her, "You're going to take me where I need to go," and forced her to go inside to get her keys. He waited for her in the doorway.

Then she drove for about 30 minutes south to the Mulino area with a metal object pressed to her face and her eyes looking forward, as she was instructed. At one point, he slapped her face when she offered to stop and let him out.

Then the man told her to stop on a dirt road.

Instead, she bumped the tree, grabbed the keys and ran. As the man ran behind her, she hid in some brush before darting back to her truck.

Once back within cell-phone range, she called her boyfriend, who called police at 1:51 a.m.

Deputies had Harding retrace the route, and found a fresh dent on a tree about the height of her truck's bumper. There was no sign of the man.

Over the years, police have responded to numerous calls from Harding.

While fighting to maintain her spot on the 1994 U.S. Olympic team, Harding told Beaverton police that she was assaulted one night while walking through a park.

In May 1995, Harding reported she was tailing a car driven by a man she said had been stalking her.

No one was arrested in either incident.

Schmidt agreed that his client has attracted some unsavory characters.

"It goes with the turf," Schmidt said. "It all surrounds everything that happened in 1994 and the follow. Security is something we're going to sit down and refocus. There's a lot of weird people in this world and one of them accosted her last night."

Belle admits to having lost money on sports gambling

By Ken Berger
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Albert Belle, the slugger whose career has been tainted by temper outbursts, suspensions and fines, has admitted under oath that he recently lost as much as $40,000 gambling on sports.

Belle, who left the Cleveland Indians and became baseball's highest-paid player by signing a $55 million, five-year contract with the Chicago White Sox in November, said Tuesday he bet on pro football and college basketball.

He answered the questions about gambling during a six-hour deposition in a civil lawsuit related to a confrontation he had with Halloween pranksters in 1995.

Belle's lawyer, Jose Feliciano, said yesterday his client did not gamble on baseball games.

"None of this stuff had to do with baseball," Feliciano said. "Absolutely none of it."

Gambling is a misdemeanor in Ohio, but it was unclear if Belle would face criminal charges as a result of his testimony. Cuyahoga County prosecutor Stephanie Tubbs Jones did not return a telephone message yesterday.

Baseball's rules are clear: A player is prohibited from betting on major league games. A violation could mean suspension for one year or for life if a bet is placed on the player's own team.

"There's a rule on the books about betting on baseball," said major league baseball spokesman Rich Levin, who said officials were aware of Belle's testimony.

Kevin Hallinan, baseball's security head, is investigating to determine whether Belle violated any of baseball's rules, according to a high-ranking major league official who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

Lawyer Richard Lillie, representing the guardian of a teen-ager who contends Belle injured him with his truck, said yesterday he was trying to question Belle's credibility. Lillie questioned Belle about gambling and other aspects of his past, including treatment for alcohol dependency and an assault conviction.

Belle revealed that he was fined $1,000 and sentenced to one year probation in 1992, Lillie said. Court records show Belle was convicted of domestic violence-related assault stemming from an incident that took place in Tucson, Ariz., on July 5, 1988. Details were not available because the case is so old, the file has been destroyed, a clerk at the Pima County attorney's office said.

Lillie said Belle also testified he placed wagers with friends on golf.

■ Norton

continued from page 16

his three years at UMass. Norton's still a little rough around the edges in places but is progressing nicely towards his goal of playing at the next level.

"He's got potential to play at the next level," Mallen said. "The thing is to keep improving on his defensive positioning and to play physically but within the system. He's got the size and the strength but at the next level you have to be disciplined with your positional play."

Along this line, Norton has concentrated on improving his plus–minus rating, a statistic which essentially measures how often a player is scored upon. Simply by staying in position in front of his goaltender, Norton can improve, or at least maintain his rating. The dramatic increase in his rating shows both just how he has improved and is starting to mean more to the team than just serving as a checker.

"I'm working on my plus–minus right now," Norton said about how he's specifically working to better himself. "That's my job as a defenseman, to keep the puck out of my zone and out of my net. If I can do my best at that, staying a plus player, I think I'll help the team a lot."

Norton not only helps the team through his constantly improving defensive skills, but also with his physical play. Often an NHL team's true leader isn't the flashy scorer with the "C" on his chest, but rather the scrappy hard–nosed guy who'll crack heads and drop them with anyone who threatens one of his teammates. Sergei Fedorov is Detroit's flashy goal–scorer, but a few years back it was rough and tumble Bob Probert who was the team's heart and soul. Boston Bruin fans still revere players like Stan Johnathan, Lyndon Byers and Jay Miller years after they've retired.

> "He's got potential to play at the next level... He's got the size and the strength but at the next level you have to be disciplined with your positional play."
> – coach Joe Mallen

A trail of broken bodies of Hockey East heavyweights have laid in Norton's wake at various points in his career. He doesn't go after the weaker players on the ice — he's leveled everyone from BU's 6–0 242–pound Mike Grier to Merrimack's 6–8 monster Steve McKenna.

Norton gives all he has on the ice. The average fan does not see him every day dragging himself out of the locker room after a game, hunched over like an old man due to severe back pains through which he just played 60 minutes of hard–nosed hockey. Most people don't see him always in the back row of a class room, leaning back against the wall. Norton has no spot anywhere near Conan O'Brien's over– used Wussy Wagon. For this he has the respect of his peers.

"A lot of guys on our team look to him for that physical presence and because of it he brings some leadership on the ice to our team," Mallen said.

"I love it," Norton said of hitting. "Whenever I can hit somebody I try to take advantage of it. A person of my size, that's expected. I love the physical part. I wish every game was like a small–rink game with a lot of banging. That's my biggest part of the game is my physical play."

While several aspects of Norton's play have evolved over the years for the better, the one thing that least needed to change has remained a constant.

Atlantic 10 Conference men's basketball this weekend

Tonight
St. Joseph's at Temple
La Salle at Duquesne

Saturday
George Washington at Xavier
Virginia Tech at Dayton
La Salle at St. Bonaventure

Sunday
St. Joseph's at Fordham
Temple at Rhode Island

Choices Not Chances
Free Contraception Education
Every Mon & Thurs 3 - 4:30 pm and
Tues & Wed 7 - 8:30 pm in rm. 302 UHS
Men and Women Welcome
For more information call the Health Education Office 577-5181

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro-Brews in S.Amherst • Fridge Rentals
995 West St. • South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brooks, & The Smokes
253-7745

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0156

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Win a trip to Sunset Beach!
Enter the 1-800-COLLECT "Anything Can Happen" Sweepstakes
IT'S EASY TO WIN!
Simply complete a 1-800-COLLECT call between February 3 and February 28, 1997 and you are automatically entered! Plus, 1-800-COLLECT saves up to 44%!
FIVE grand prize winners will win a trip for two to the set of SUNSET BEACH in California and a tour of the NBC Studios!
So use 1-800-COLLECT. The more calls you make, the more chances you have to win!
Tune in to Sunset Beach Weekdays on NBC
ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN AT SUNSET
1-800-COLLECT
Save up to 44%
For long distance calls • Saving: based on a 3 minute AT&T operator-dialed interstate call • No Purchase Necessary • U.S. Residents Only • Void Where Prohibited • For complete sweepstakes rules and free entry details call 1-800-RULES 4U

In the long run, the Pats win out in Parcells mess

Bill Parcells in complete control of the New England Patriots vs. Bill Parcells in complete control of a division rival; Pete Carroll coaching the Patriots; Bobby Grier in charge of personnel; and four draft picks over the next four years.

That's what it all boils down to in the end for Patriots fans. Which one leaves them in a better situation is still to be decided.

The answer is clear and it involves Parcells going back to coach in the swamp where he first became famous. No one is denying Parcells is a great coach. He is one of just two men to bring two teams to the Super Bowl, one of them a team that was 2–14 before he arrived. Having him coach a division rival makes it that much harder for the Patriots to win the division.

Jacob W. Michaels

Carroll, on the other hand, is much more of an unknown as a head coach. He had one season as head coach of a talentless Jets team and had them at 6–5 and ready to take over first place in the division before the game against Miami was stolen away in the final seconds and the Jets subsequently collapsed.

The Jets then committed one of their typical Jets moves and fired Carroll, replacing him with Rich Kotite. After that he had two impressive seasons as the defensive coordinator of the 49ers, but the fact the Jets fired him should be enough of a recommendation for Carroll.

The benefit of having Parcells being in complete control of the Jets is that he is a horrible judge of talent. Kevin Lee, Ervin Collier and Joe Burch were all high–round selections of Parcells that had absolutely no impact on the team. Add to those names Marion Butts, who came to New England as part of a trade involving the Pats' third–round selection. Also add Scott Secules, Myron Guyton, Tim Roberts, Jeff Dellenbach and Reggie White, all high– priced free agents brought in by Parcells.

The head coach also supposedly wanted Cedric Jones or Daryl Gardener in the draft. The same Jones who was sitting on the bench for the Giants and the same Gardener who wasn't doing much in Miami while Terry Glenn was catching more passes than any other rookie ever has.

Compare that with Grier, who has brought in such players as Glenn, Lawyer Milloy, Ty Law, Ted Johnson, Curtis Martin and Dave Wohlabaugh in the two years he's been taking care of the draft. Grier was also responsible for bringing in players such as Mark Wheeler and Willie Clay, who had large roles in the Patriots' road to the Super Bowl.

Toss in the fact that Chris Slade has said he would not have returned if Parcells had, and the same would be true of Todd Collins if he re–signs, and the Patriots' talent level is obviously better without Parcells.

But the equation isn't over. The Patriots also get four draft picks out of the deal. Second– and first–rounders are obviously valuable, and with the picks this year being the first one in the third and fourth rounds, they aren't bad either.

Martin, Wohlabaugh, and special teams ace Larry Whigham were all taken with picks later than the ones the Jets are giving. Vincent Brisby also would have been the first pick in the third round in 1992, but the Raiders passed on the last pick of the second round.

What it basically comes down to is will Bill Parcells coaching lower–quality players be able to out do Pete Carroll coaching more talent. The answer will be decided on the field, but the Patriots clearly think keeping the level of talent that they have and that they have coming in each year is worth more than Parcells' coaching, and it's hard to disagree.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

La Salle's Donnie Carr hoping, working for success

By David Kinney
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — How does Donnie Carr top his first eight college basketball games? He's not sure he can.

The freshman guard averaged 29.9 points a game for La Salle and led Division I in scoring. He won a pair of games with a 23-point second half against Dayton and a buzzer-beater against Duquesne. And there he was — a highlight on ESPN's SportsCenter.

"I was just sitting there amazed," he said. "Everybody was surprised, but nobody more than me."

Since then, reality has arrived. The 19-year-old is struggling, and so are the Explorers, who, after starting 7-5, have dropped to 8-12.

Carr's average is now 24.1, still fourth best in Division I, and he is the only freshman listed in the top 50. So coach Speedy Morris keeps giving his 6-foot-1 guard the kind of free reign that results in 36-point efforts — and horrible 6-for-28 shooting nights.

"Should he get 23 shots a game?" Morris asked after Carr shot 22 percent in a loss to Virginia Tech. "Maybe not. I'd rather see him take 17, 18 shots and see the other guys make some of their shots."

That's not happening. The Explorers, who finally snapped a seven-game losing streak with a win over the Hokies on Monday night, have just three men scoring more than five points a night. Overall, the team shoots 37 percent.

"Sometimes the team gets into a funk where we aren't scoring any points," Carr said. "That's when the coaches look to me. What we lack is a guy down in the post that we can dump it into to take some pressure off the perimeter guys."

Morris is working on that. He's bringing in two big men, 6-9 and 6-11, next season. Until then, Carr and junior Mike Gitzi will shoulder the scoring.

So like any other natural shooter, Carr shoots away, taking four out of every 10 La Salle shots. But he's increasingly frustrated in his role as The Player To Stop every time he steps on the court. That showed in a five-game dry spell that included a 29-for-122 stretch.

"I don't think it's my shooting," he said. "It's the tough shots I have to take because teams are making me work so hard. At the beginning of the season, I guess everybody knew I was a good player, but they didn't know what I liked to do."

Now, whenever he pulls up behind the 3-point circle or cuts through a screen, defenders know to stay on top of him. If he penetrates, he's certain to run into a double-team. That's when he looks most like a freshman — taking awkward shots instead of passing.

"That's something you know you're going to go through," said Carr, who knows he must become more of a pure shooter and better defender if he is to make the NBA.

"That's part of being a good player."

Carr, the fifth of six children raised by a single mother in a South Philadelphia neighborhood, got his first break when Roman Catholic High School offered him a scholarship. He averaged 25 points and four assists as Roman went 27-3 last season.

Carr plans to study criminal justice and hopes to work with troubled youths if his basketball plans don't work out.

"I know a lot of people who had a lot of talent who could've made it out and didn't because they made some mistakes," he said. "I just wanted to let them appreciate a guy who made it out of the inner city."

Patriots hire New Orleans' Smith as offensive assistant

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The New England Patriots continue to rebuild their coaching staff in the wake of defections to the rival New York Jets and other NFL teams.

Tuesday, the Patriots added former New Orleans Saints offensive coordinator Carl Smith to their staff. They also are expected to announce soon an offensive coordinator to replace Ray Perkins, who moved to the Oakland Raiders in the same capacity.

Both the Boston Herald and The Boston Globe reported yesterday that Larry Kennan, 52, will direct the Pats' offensive efforts. Kennan was offensive coordinator for the Seattle Seahawks for three years until 1994, then moved for a year to New Orleans as quarterbacks coach before joining Oakland last year as quarterbacks coach. He also was offensive coordinator for the Indianapolis Colts in 1989 and 1990.

Smith, 49, was offensive coordinator for the Saints for 10 years until he was fired Oct. 22, the day after head coach Jim Mora quit. Team spokesman Don Lowery said it has not been decided what role Smith will fill with the Patriots. Smith told WNOE radio in New Orleans that he will be the Patriots quarterback coach, replacing Chris Palmer, who was hired last week as the Jacksonville Jaguars' offensive coordinator.

Fred Hoaglin, the Pats' offensive line coach, was hired Tuesday as the tight ends coach for the Jaguars.

Paul Boudreau, another former Saints assistant, was named offensive line coach for the Patriots. Boudreau is an Arlington High School and Boston College graduate.

Dante Scarnecchia, a holdover from Bill Parcells' staff, will be an offensive assistant — handling either the special teams or tight ends.

New England head coach Pete Carroll still has three coaching spots to fill, including a receivers coach and a running backs coach.

Steve Sidwell already has been named defensive coordinator, former Patriot player and assistant coach Ray Hamilton is expected to work with the linemen, former 49er defensive assistant Bo Pelini the linebackers and former Redskins defensive coordinator Ron Lynn the secondary.

Best Locations!
Above it all Graduation Apartments
Above it all Graduation Apartments
Above it all Graduation Apartments

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS: 6 credits, airfare, Eurorail, Room/board ALL FOR $3299- Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8p.m. in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info. or just drop by.

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or Smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5188 for answers to your questions. Completely Confidential.

The Sisters of Delta Zeta would like to invite all university women to Open Rush on Wednesday, February 12 at 8pm ΟΖ is located at 11 Phillips St.

VALENTINE ROSES

Send your Valentine some roses! Deliveries available on-campus and in Amherst. Place your order with Mary on the Campus Center Concourse from 9am. until 5pm on February 12th, 13th and 14th!

RUSH Theta Chi Feb 3,4,5,6,10-12, 8-10pm 549-9252

TREK FANS If you are interested in joining STARFLEET International, please contact Martin A. Lessem @ 546-7003 to get membership information

Puffoe 1 bedroom apartment Take over lease. Call Melissa at 549-1091

Amherst 2 bedroom apartment for rent. Water and heat included. Take over lease. Call Angela 546-4784

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1984 Honda Accord 4-door, 5-speed, 114,000 miles, needs brake work. $500 or B/O. 253-3071

1984 VW GTI 120K. $1000 or B/O John 256-3569

1988 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap $1650 or B/O. 546-5320

EMPLOYMENT

Counselors needed for co-ed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation camp 3 hours from NYC- general, sports, drama, H20, arts (800)973-3666

Leaders Needed! Summer teenage bicycling trips- U.S., Canada, Europe. Minimum 4 week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostelling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

Exceptional Summer Opportunity- Camp Wayne, NE Pennsylvania Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialist for all land/water sports including tennis, camping, climbing/ropes, rocketry, roller hockey, sailing/water-skiing, A&C, drama, video. Campus Interviews Tuesday, March 11. Please call (800)737-9296

Tour Counselors/Tour Directors to lead teenagers on 3-6 week adventures in Canada and the U.S.A. Must be 20 years of age or older by July 1. Enormous responsibility coupled with unique travel opportunities. Contact Westcoast Connection (800)767-0227

EMPLOYMENT

Auditions for Utah Shakespearean Festival Greenshow performers, Feb 15 at 10am in Totman Gym Room 13. Full summer employment and housing. Looking for singers/dancers/actors. Also looking for jugglers/musicians. For more info. call 256-3077

Hadley office hiring for evening and weekend shifts. Flexible hours. Fun atmosphere. Start work immediately. $7-$10/hr. Call 584-0215. Ask for Mr. Cavenaugh

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7787 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

LIFE MODELS- Male/Female for Life Drawing class at Holyoke Community College $10 per hour. call David M at 253-5885 or 532-2492

SUMMER CAMP! Co-ed Sleepaway! MANY COUNSELOR POSITIONS AVAILABLE! We need role models- sensitive, caring and skilled staff members FOR THE BEST SUMMER OF YOUR LIFE! in NE Pennsylvania's Pocono Mts. call (800)61-WANDA or E-Mail towanda@intercamp.com or visit our Web Site at http://www.intercamp.com/towanda for information, application and to schadule an interview. This is a great camp and an awesome experience. Camp Towanda, Honesdale, PA

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krahow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Blue Ridge, a co-ed camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are looking for lifeguards, WSI, as well as instructors in water-skiing, rappelling, boating, art, riflery, archery, sports, drama, cheerleading and dance. For more info call Debra at 665-8463

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group: 332 Bleecker St.: D40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N5017 (We are a research and publishing company)

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info send resume and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0180

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available. Benefits. Summer or year round. (612)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryer and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses. Falmouth area (508)477-6000

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Chinchilla with cage and set-up- to a good home. $100.00 Robin 549-5124

Macintosh SE, Hard Drive, Style Writer II ink jet printer. $400 or B/O. Call 549-9188

Pentium 120 System 16 Gig 32 RAM 33S modem 64 bit Video $3000 in software. ONLY $1500. Joe 665-9112

Laptop/Notebook $99. Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 566-3324-2

STEREO EQUIPMENT

Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition. $200 Sean 546-5734

LOST

To Carla, I have your keys. Call Kevin at 6-1422

Stolen- A green wallet in Sunderland Feb. 10. Please return. No questions asked. 1050 Southpoint Dr., Amherst

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount! On- campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info.

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-4793

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1969, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 x110. Free CD to qualifying callers.

PERSONALS

"Might as well face it, you're addicted to love"- Robert Palmer. Free love and Valentines at www.mainquad.com

To the new members of Delta Zeta Toby, Robyn, Samara, Bonnie, Lori, Jodi, Beth S, Sari, Beth N, Royce, Carrie, Anne, Anna, Ashni, Cassy, Allison, Elke, and Val. Congrads and Good luck for this semester. Love, the sisters of DZ

ROOM FOR RENT

Housemate wanted to share house on the Connecticut River. No pets or smoke. $250+ 585-8593

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall '97. Call Amy 546-0706

SERVICES

PREP COURSES for GMAT Prep Courses 30 hours 3 weeks $295.00 (800)408 Prep

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available (800)773-8704 Cost $29 Applications close 2-24-97

SERVICES

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. FS0016 (We are a research and publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs.

TRAVEL

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen.

SPRING BREAK '97! CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T. Europe $188 O/W. Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations. Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Intercampus Representatives: (800)327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Best Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company. Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more. Call 256-8724

Jamaica- Spring Break Stay in beautiful Negril. Includes roundtrip airfare, hotel transfers, 7 nights lodging from $519. Don't take chances with other companies, go with the UMass Ski Club Call 545-3437

TRAVEL

Europe $155. Cancun/Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations. Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.is-i.com/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed. From $99 (800)425-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Tutor for ECE 312, ECE 364 and ECE 350. Call Amy 546-0706

We are looking for a four bedroom house or apartment for the fall. We are willing to take over your summer lease. Call 549-5362!

Sofa or Couch Wanted Willing to pay. Please call 549-6452

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used on personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, rent roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

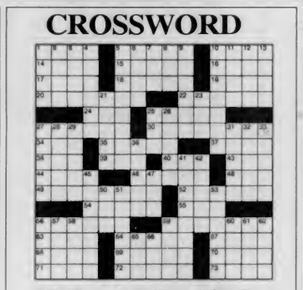
Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others



40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

N	I	C	K		E	A	S	T		L	I	N	D	A
B	O	L	O		I	L	I	E		I	N	E	R	T
A	W	A	R	E	N	E	S	S		T	A	R	O	T
		A	P	E	X		I	T	S		C	O	P	A
			A	I	N	T		S	C	O	T
	A	U	N	T	I	E	S		I	C	I	C	L	E
E	U	R		S	P	E	E	D		T	O	L	E	T
E	D	G	E		S	N	A	R	L		N	E	W	T
L	I	E	N	S		S	L	E	E	P		F	I	E
S	O	D	D	E	N		S	A	V	A	N	T	S
			U	T	E	S		D	I	N	E
S	T	I	R		O	O	H		I	P	S	O
E	E	R	I	E		L	A	M	B	C	H	O	P	S
T	R	A	N	S		A	L	E	E		E	L	I	A
H	I	N	G	E		R	E	N	E		W	E	E	D

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Lingers
5. Tennis trophy name
10. Brother of Jacob
14. Ersatz butter
15. Elicit
16. ___ tide
17. Cooking substance
18. Office clerk
19. Before take or time
20. Restricted
22. Dead ducks
24. Footed vase
25. French term of endearment
27. Joined (up)
30. Hurried
34. Intuitive letters
35. Start to have effect
37. Abroad
38. Feasted
39. Married mujer: abbr.
40. "Alley ___"
43. Jamborees go.
44. Feudal slave
46. Common Seneca author
48. Author Wallace
49. Mangoes
52. Coal cellar continuations
54. Conducts
55. Nobelist Sir John Boyd
56. Gas or milk unit
58. Land of Chile's premier
63. Potpourri
64. Squeaky sound
67. Adverse fate
68. Large number
69. Wall
70. Sundance's Place
71. Snake sound
72. Forty-___
73. Actor Connery

DOWN

1. Lounge about
2. Jai ___
3. Bacterium
4. Woodpossessive builder
5. E.G. Marshall on TV
6. Dedicated
7. One of a series of books: abbr.
8. Singer Turner
9. Suit fabrics
10. Sri Lanka timber trees
11. Bird of peace
12. Lulu
13. God of war
21. Plaid part
23. Table scrap
25. Double this and be stylish
26. The ___ Hilton (1967 Monarty film)
27. Horses
28. Adlai's running mate in 1956
29. Imitative ones
31. High-minded
32. Canvas holder
33. Attracts
36. Like most TV fare
41. Witness
42. Cultured item
45. Chaps
47. Blockhead
50. Recent: prefix
51. Rockette highleap
53. Lion packs
56. Gee whiz!
57. ___ Do Is Dream Of You (2 wds.)
58. Pinocchio's peccadilloes
59. Ordered
60. Ballot
61. Jolt
62. ___ Alpine (Midland Ilens (2 wds.)
66. Baseball stat
66. Before zero

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

Focus on building up your savings. There could be a rainy day coming up, and being prepared early in your brief course of action. Don't bid under a shadow person's chartas. There could be an ulterior motive at work—and a shady one, at that.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

You don't have to tell everything you know, even if someone asks. And this week in particular, silence would be the best course of action. Fear is a great motivator, but it also paralyzes. Think your options through and then take action.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

Gear up for a busy week. Get down to business and you'll beat a tight deadline. Don't be shy in asking for all the relevant information, either. Next time, plan ahead a little further, and your performance will be even more impressive.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

Ask for financial advice before you start a new savings program. Avoid the temptation to go on a spending spree—leave the plastic at home. An older friend has some wisdom to share about a problem that's been troubling you.

LEO
July 23-August 23

You're at your best during an unplanned meeting. A romantic reason sparks your interest in a new way. You might want to make a commitment—it's a good time for that. A mutual admiration society gives you a chance to do more than talk.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

You're footloose and fancy free this week—mundane tasks hold no interest for you. If deadlines loom, give yourself a strict time frame for being irresponsible and overdue—then force yourself to stick to it. It's hard, but you may be inspired.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

It's impossible to keep all your options open indefinitely, so resign yourself to the fact that you must make a decision, and then do it. Once it's made, don't look back. Second guessing yourself would risk all the progress you've made to date.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

A pleasant tone in your voice will sugarcoat even the bitterest pill. Be very clear, both to yourself and to others, about what you expect, and you'll be happy with the outcome. Extend a deadline if you need more time—focus on quality, not quantity.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

A burdensome situation won't ease until you take decisive action. Plan a reward for yourself for after you do something particularly difficult—treat yourself and a friend to a movie, or just take time to talk with someone you miss very much.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

Although right now it feels like you have got it all, it's important that you don't neglect the feelings of someone closer to you. Especially if you are busy at work, you could be ignoring some fairly serious cries for attention. Someone close to you gives you good advice that is pertinent to your job.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18

Don't give up your goals in response to a small setback. Instead, focus on the objectives that lead to your goals. You may be due for a difficult lesson—the more open you are to suggestions, the better off you'll be.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

Stick to family when it comes to discussing personal matters. Although it's tempting to bare your soul elsewhere, this week it would be a bad idea. Stay out of the limelight—someone could grow even more envious than they already are.

Daily Listings sponsored by: Your Ad Could Be Here. Call 545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
28 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 13, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		World of National Geographic		Mystery! "Inspector Morse"		Wait for God	Take a Letter	T. Old House	Ancestors
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent.Journal	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Moloney "Misconduct"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Moloney "Misconduct"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	High Incident "Hot Wire"		★★ "Nowhere to Run" (1993) Jean-Claude Van Damme				News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★½ "Predator" (1987, Science Fiction) Arnold Schwarzenegger		News				Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "The Long Way Around"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Cape "The Last to Know"		Baywatch Nights		News	LAPD	Pt. Patrol	Real TV
WWIT	16	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "The Long Way Around"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	30	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Martin "Goin' Overboard"		New York Undercover		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "The Long Way Around"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		T. Old House	Drs. on Call	Mystery! "Inspector Morse"		Dangerfield (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	High Incident "Hot Wire"		★★ "Nowhere to Run" (1993) Jean-Claude Van Damme				News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	★★½ "Another 48 HRS." (1990, Comedy-Drama) Eddie Murphy.				News	Martin	Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★ "Encino Man" (1992, Comedy) Sean Astin, Pauly Shore				★★ "Men at Work" (1990, Comedy)		Emilio Estevez, Charlie Sheen
A&E	33	Quincy "Suffer Be Thy Name"		Equalizer "In the Money"		Biography: Richard Pryor		Ancient Mysteries		Unsolved Mysteries		Law & Order
CNN	23	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Inside Politics	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	39	Trick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	★½ "Pee-wee's Big Adventure" (1985) Pee-wee Herman.		A-List (R)	Dream On			Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC	34	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Strange Planes		Wild Discovery: Hunters		Movie Magic	Next Step	CronkIte Remembers		Wild Discovery:	Hunters
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Northwestern at Ohio State. (Live)				College Basketball: Alabama-Birmingham at Tulane. (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	29	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Making Mr. Right" (1987, Comedy) Ann Magnuson.				Living	Mysteries
MTV	35	Ren & Stimpy	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Yo! (In Stereo)				Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	42	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Test	Odd Couple
SCIFI	61	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax "Fire and Ice"		Tekwar "Carlotta's Room"		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		Sci-Fi Buzz	Inside Space	Time Trax "Fire and Ice"
TLC	28	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime	Hometime	Real America: 48 Hours		Royal Secrets	Royal Secrets	Human Animal: A View		Real America: 48 Hours
TNT	37	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		★★½ "Alcatraz: The Whole Shocking Story" (1980, Drama) Michael Beck, Telly Savalas.
USA	32	Renegade "The King and I"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		World Wrestling Federation Raw				Wings	Wings
HBO	43	★★★ "The Tuskegee Airmen" (1995) Laurence Fishburne. 'PG-13'		★ "Ladyougar" (1992) Rodney Dangerfield.		★ "Ladyougar" (1992) Rodney Dangerfield.		★½ "Illegal In Blue" (1995) Stacey Dash. 'R'				Memphis PD: War
MAX	44	(5:00)		★★ "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" (1995)		★★½ "Days of Thunder" (1990, Drama) Tom Cruise. 'PG-13'		★★ "Mercy" (1995, Drama) John Rubinstein. 'R'				"Widow's Kiss"
SHOW	45	(5:20) "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen"		One Red Rose		★★ "Lord of Illusions" (1995, Horror) Scott Bakula. 'R'				★ "Greystoke" (1996) Anne Nicole Smith. 'R'		"Many Faces"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Cavegook By Mark McGrath

Dilbert By Scott Adams

University³ By Frank Cho

Luscious Lola's Lemonade Lampshade By Abe Cho and Mike Cabot

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I gave my girlfriend a raindrop for her birthday.
I don't have much money.

I caught it with a flower. It was pefect, clear, clean.... like a warm summer diamond.

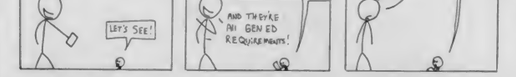
She said, "It's my birthday, Leold, ... and you give me a wet flower?"

I told her the flower was for a very very special .....

birthday salad.

I'm flexible. Life is good.

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



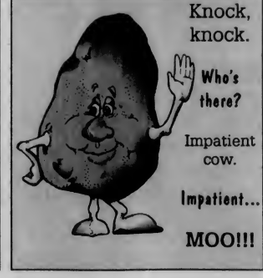
Close to Home By John McPherson

On their third date, Pam finds out if Alan is a cat person.

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley



Quote of the Day

"Yes, there are two paths you can go by, but in the long run, there's still time to change the road you're on."

–Led Zeppelin "Stairway to Heaven"

Joke of the Day

Knock, knock.

Who's there?

Impatient cow.

Impatient...

MOO!!!

Today's Staff

Jacob W. Michaels
Night Editor

Raghuram Vadarevu
Copy Editor

Jennifer Jutras
Photo Technician

Josh Sylvester
Production Supervisor

Leon W. Latino
Mark McGrath
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger
Jalapeno Shrimp & Rice
Veal Parmesan Sandwich

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Baked Ziti
Chicken Tenders

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Grilled Chicken Sand.
Veal Parm. Sand.

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp Dinner

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sand.
Bow Ties/Ital. Sausage
Lightburger

DINNER
Szechuan Beef & Broccoli
Szechuan Tofu & Broccoli
Pastabilities
Chicken Cacciatore

Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sand.
Breakfast Sandwich
Bow Ties/Ital. Sausage
Lightburger

DINNER
Szechuan Beef & Broccoli
Szechuan Tofu & Broccoli
Chicken de Carlos
Chicken Cacciatore

SPORTS

Thursday, February 13, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Norton grows into a more complete hockey player

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Every January through 1994, when Division II St. Mark's School prepared for its annual on-ice duel with mighty Cushing Academy, one of, if not the best Division I school in all of New England, the Lion players had a different theory than many teams regarding whom to watch out for.

The Penguins to beware were not Eric Nickulas, now the second leading scorer for No. 3 New Hampshire, Merrimack sniper Jayson Philbin, or even No. 4 Boston University's solid defenseman Tom Poti. Current Minutemen Steve MacKinnon, Judd Smith and Dan DiLeo missed the list too.

"Forget about those guys," was the prevailing sentiment that would echo through the stairwell in the far end of the Forbes Center during the school meeting on the morning of a Cushing game. "Just watch out for that big No. 8 kid. Just try not to get killed."

Three years later, the number on Brad Norton's back has changed, but some things have not or likely ever will. The same stigma trails UMass' 6-5, 235-pound junior defenseman throughout Hockey East to this day.

"Nummmm-ber siiiiiiix; yourrrrrrrr'e a goooooooon," the refrain incessantly rattled throughout the second and third periods from the student section at rival UMass-Lowell's Tully Forum Saturday night after Norton manhandled River Hawk skater after River Hawk skater.

If nothing else though, this chant could serve as Exhibit A in a civil suit to prove which branch of the university system has more intelligent hockey fans. Completely misunderstanding Norton's mindset, the taunt only served to fire up the defenseman, as opposed to its intention of making him run away like he had been heckled by the French taunters in Monty Python's Quest for the Holy Grail.

"I like that stuff," Norton said. "It gets me going."

With an added spring in his stride, Norton showed why he has developed into such a valuable player for the Minutemen, and not just the goon that the Tully Forum fans mistook him for. With the Alumni Cup on the line in a tied third period, Norton ensured that the River Hawks were hit where it would hurt the most.

Less than a minute into the period, Norton rifled a tape-to- tape pass from along the boards near the face off circle, across the top of the crease and right onto Chris Fawcett's stick for an easy goal; a Gary Peyton to Shawn Kemp rim- rattling alley-oop on ice. The strong pass was the sort of play that Brian Leetch and Mark Messier connect on seemingly every night for the New York Rangers and is indicative of how Norton's game has evolved from a Hanson brother style to somewhat more of a Derian Hatcher approach to hockey.

"When you talk about Brad the very first thing you have to talk about is his improvement over the past three years," coach Joe Mallen said. "He's made unbelievable improvement in terms of his skating stride, passing the puck, his positional play and his reduction of penalty minutes.

"He had to be taught how to channel his energy in the right way. We're seeing that right now, and the best is yet to come."

Norton has grown in his three years in the Pioneer Valley from being a devastating physical presence who spent much of his time watching the game from the penalty box to a devastating physical presence who is also a more complete and viable hockey player. Norton has drastically improved his skills without sacrificing the hard-nosed mentality that makes him invaluable to Mallen's squad.

JORMA KANVANEN / COLLEGIAN
Junior Brad Norton has become a strong member of the UMass hockey teams' defensive corps.

"As I get more comfortable with the level I'm playing at and stay out of the box, I'm able to still make big hits," Norton said. "Instead of running around, I'm picking my spots. If I see a big hit I usually take it.

"My freshman year I came in and thought I had something to prove. Being physical was something bad [for me]. Coming out of high school I was always the biggest kid and I came out too aggressive [here]. My skating needed a lot of work and I wasn't in the best shape coming in. My sophomore year I calmed down a lot and now I'm going further in working on my north-south game."

The all-around improvement from his freshman year was welcome. The younger Norton shattered the school's single- season penalty minute record to accompany a minus-7 rating. This year Norton is a plus-12, second only to leading scorer Rob Bonneau. Also, while he is still on pace to erase former Northeastern thug Ricco Rossi's name from the career penalty minutes section of the Hockey East record book, his numbers are well down from his first two years.

In addition to his coaching at UMass, Norton gives credit to his family and especially his brother Jeff, a defenseman for the Edmonton Oilers, the team which coincidentally holds the younger Norton's draft rights.

"He helped me out a lot," Norton said of his older brother, one of his five siblings. "He's showed me the right direction, how to make it to the next level and what it takes to get there. I look forward to that. I know it's not really up to me as much as I'd like it to be though. It's up to [the Oilers] whether or not they think I'm ready. But, it's always been a dream of mine — playing with one of my brothers and in the NHL. That would be unbelievable."

The ties are strong in the Norton household in Acton, where John and Sheila raised a pair of daughters and four sons. John can be spotted at most UMass games, home and away, and it isn't hard to see how the Norton clan has sculpted Brad's game. The behemoth UMass defenseman is the young one in the family.

Brad was everyone's little brother, and in any family of six, let alone one so heavily focused on hockey, there are certain things that the youngest one must endure. Just like what happened to Bobby Brady, Brad Norton took some sibling abuse as a child, but he benefited in the long run from the pounding he suffered. It has shaped his game on the ice.

"I was the younger brother in a family of six kids so I took a beating growing up," Norton said. "Whenever I can take my aggression out on someone else I do."

Now, little Brad has grown up quite a bit, both literally and figuratively, and his game has likewise matured. Norton stays out of the penalty box enough to be a member of the first defensive pair and logs significant time on special teams. His howitzer blast of a slap shot keys the UMass powerplay, the low bullet often redirected for a goal.

Defensively, his play has made the greatest strides over

Turn to NORTON, page 12

Home games key to improving standing

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Kelly Van Huisen and the Massachusetts women's basketball team face a pair of Atlantic 10 contests at home this weekend.

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

It's going to be a scene straight from William Shakespeare's Hamlet this weekend for the Massachusetts women's basketball team.

To contend, or not to contend.

That is the dilemma, as St. Bonaventure and Fordham come to town. At this point in the season, a two-game homestand is an opportunity for coach Joanie O'Brien's squad to pick up a couple of conference wins and get back into the jostling for position atop the Atlantic 10 East.

UMass and the Bonnies tip off tonight at 7 p.m. The Minutewomen are 14-8, 8-4 A-10, and the Bonnies are 10- 11, 4-7 A-10. Fordham (11-11, 5-8 A-10) and UMass square-off at noon on Sunday.

Last weekend, the Minutewomen took a trip to Philadelphia to wage battle against A-10 opponents Temple and St. Joseph's. Two wins would put them in position to tie St. Joe's for first place atop the A-10 East.

Temple performed to the full potential its 2-8 record might denote. The Owls posed few challenges to Massachusetts, getting trounced by the Minutewomen for the second time this season, 82-56.

UMass proved that even a weak Temple opponent brings out the best of the maroon and white, shooting 77 percent from the field in the first half. The Minutewomen used runs of as much as 20-6 to take leads of up to 30 points at one time.

Massachusetts' dominance over the Owls was a continuation of a recent trend, following a 61-45 thrashing in the William D. Mullins Center on Jan. 25.

The result of the match-up with St. Joseph's was similar to an earlier game this season as well. On Jan. 23 the Minutewomen fell to the Hawks at the Mullins Center 50- 48. Once again UMass dropped the decision by just two points, that time at Alumni Hall.

The loss was a heart-breaker for the upstart Minutewomen, seeing the opportunity of a first place finish fall short late in the second half, after overcoming a six-point lead with under a minute to play.

St. Bonaventure and Fordham, currently fighting each other for third and fourth place in the A-10 East, pose threats similar to Temple.

UMass defeated St. Bonaventure by just three points, 68- 65 on Jan. 11 in Olean, N.Y. Crystal Carroll scored 22 points in the contest, aided by a 15-point contribution from Kelly Van Huisen. The Bonnies made it a game near the end, hitting rim on a 3-point attempt with four seconds on the clock. Yolanda Rayside grabbed 11 boards in the win.

The Rams come to town to try to avenge a five-point loss at the hands of the Minutewomen earlier this season. Massachusetts defeated Fordham 51-46 on Jan. 9 in the Bronx.

The Minutewomen will round out the regular season in the next couple of weeks with two games against two Ohio A- 10 opponents. Xavier hosts UMass on Feb. 19, and Dayton visits the Mullins Center on Feb. 22 for a 1 p.m. matinee.

Softball takes field for first time this weekend

Women return 13 to boost squad

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Late last year, at one of the weekly luncheons held by the athletic department, Associate Athletic Director and Massachusetts softball coach Elaine Sortino announced her retirement from coaching.

But after Mona Stevens, who was named as Sortino's replacement took the head coaching job at her alma mater, Sortino once again took over the reigns of the Minutewomen.

And while the coach on the sidelines will look familiar, so will the players on the field. The Minutewomen, ranked No. 23 in the USA Today/National Fastpitch Coaches Association preseason poll, return seven starters and 13 letterwinners from last year's club.

That line-up will be bolstered by a trio of last year's conference award winners, a strong pair of players on the diamond corners and a rock solid co-captain leading the outfield corps.

It is odd that a pitching rotation with only two hurlers is considered one of the strongest parts of a team. But for UMass, that is just the case, as the Minutewomen return two pitchers who were in nation's top 25 for ERA.

Liz Wagner, last year's Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year, and Danielle Henderson, last year's A-10 Rookie of the Year and

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 11

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Danielle "Harry" Henderson will try to improve on last year's performance when the UMass softball team starts play Friday.

Sports Briefs

Due to a lack of information, the Collegian's weekly Sports Briefs column will not run this week. For a complete update of UMass' club, intramural and recreational sports, look for Sports Briefs in next Thursday's Collegian.

Sports Briefs is a weekly segment of the sports page that is dedicated to giving recognition to non-varsity athlete deserves at UMass.

Due to the Collegian's limited sports staff, Sports Briefs is comprised solely of contributions from the people involved. Written information pertaining to a team or individual should be submitted to the Collegian sports desk no later than 12 p.m. Wednesday for the next day's page.

Submissions can be brought down to the Collegian offices at 113 Campus Center Basement, or faxed to 545-1592.

If you have any questions about Sports Briefs, call co-Sports editors Casey Kane or Chris Stamm at 545-0719.

Travieso reaches milestone against SBU

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

With his 3-point shot from nearly 27 feet out in the second half of Tuesday's basketball game against St. Bonaventure, Carmelo Travieso assumed his place alone atop the list of 3- point shooters in Massachusetts men's basketball history.

The shot, which gave Massachusetts a 41-40 lead four minutes into the second half, boosted Travieso's career mark in the category to 222. That total passes Rafer Giles, whose previous mark had stood since 1991.

Travieso, who recently passed the 1,000 point plateau, also holds the record for 3-point field goal attempts, is sixth on the career games played list and is seventh (before the St. Bonaventure game) in 3-point percentage with .365.

Atlantic 10 NOTEBOOK

• Travieso isn't the only UMass player to recently pass a hoop milestone. Travieso's backcourt mate Edgar Padilla became the 36th player in UMass history to score 900 points in a career when he connected on his fourth point against the Bonnies.

With his two steals in that game, Padilla passed Travieso on the single season steal list. The point guard now has 50 swipes.

• The St. Bonaventure team UMass faced Tuesday is not the slouch of a team fans have come to know in the past. Last week the Bonnies surpassed their win total from last year with a 73-55 victory over Temple.

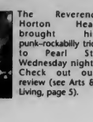
Plus, this week Bonnie Tim Winn picked up his second A- 10 Rookie of the Week award of the season. The freshman guard scored a career-high 27 points against Temple to back up his 13.1 points per game average.

Winn was ranked as the 20th best guard in the country at the end of the recruiting season, but has turned up the heat. At the end of last weekend Winn was ranked second among guards in scoring, third in steals, fourth in rebounds, fifth in 3-point shooting, sixth in shooting and ninth in assists.

• La Salle's Donnie Carr has not been a slouch lately either. The freshman has produced the top five individual game scoring highs in the A-10 this season.

He had 36 against Mount St. Mary's and George Washington, 34 against both Iowa and Drexel and 33 in his game with Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo. Carr's output against GW gave the rookie the conference single game scoring record.

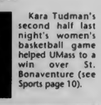
• From the superstition dept.: Temple coach John Chaney apparently believes that clothes make, or break, the man. Chaney has developed the strange superstition of giving his neckties to Philadelphia Daily News reporter Mike Kerns after Chaney's team loses.



But after last week's 73-55 loss to St. Bonaventure, Chaney decided it wasn't the ties, but the sweater he wore. So he vowed not to wear the sweater A-10 commissioner Linda Bruno gave him a as a 65th birthday present for the rest of the season.

• In honor of former Dayton Flyer Chris Daniels, who passed away a year ago (Feb. 9), the Atlantic 10 will name a most improved player this year and give him the Chris Daniels Award.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 83 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, February 14, 1997

The holy trinity

The Reverend Horton Heat brought his punk-rockabilly trio to Pearl St. Wednesday night. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Not in my house!

Kara Tudman's second half last night's women's basketball game helped UMass to a win over St. Bonaventure (see Sports page 10).

WORLD

Approval granted for new CNN in Cuba

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Clinton administration's decision to let 10 news organizations try to open offices in Cuba is part of a campaign to destroy Fidel Castro's government, Cuba said yesterday. The Cubans stressed that only one U.S. news company, CNN, has been granted approval to open a bureau in Havana and that some other applications were being examined.

"Any organ of the press that lends itself to following the U.S. policy of hostility toward Cuba is rejected immediately," Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Marianela Ferriol said at a news conference in Havana.

The Associated Press is among the organizations seeking to re-establish bureaus in Cuba.

The White House announced Wednesday that it would grant licenses for Cuba operations to CNN, The AP and eight other news outlets.

Such bureaus had been blocked by the U.S. trade embargo against Cuba, but White House spokesman Mike McCurry said independent reporting from Cuba "will bring greater public exposure to those who are advocating a democratic change.

NATION

Threat of strike ruins vacation plans

NEW YORK (AP) — American Airlines is still flying but the telephone at Caribe Travel hasn't been ringing much since Saturday.

"The business is almost dead," said Nila Rodriguez, who runs the agency and mostly books flights to the Dominican Republic.

"I sell almost all American Airlines."

Caribe Travel in New York is one of the many businesses that have felt the effect of a potential American Airlines strike — even before the pilots' tonight's strike deadline.

American canceled all of today's flights to most of Europe, Japan, the Caribbean, Central and South America, sending business and leisure travelers scrambling yesterday to get reservations with other airlines. Businesses that rely on shipments by American were also busy making alternate plans.

The U.S. Postal Service, which moves 2 percent of its mail on American and is American's biggest freight customer, is shifting mail to other airlines. American and its American Eagle subsidiary handle 70 percent of all passenger traffic in the Caribbean, together carrying 6.3 million passengers through its San Juan hub last year.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 40 LOW: 30	HIGH: 40 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Co–Op and internship fair draws large crowd to Campus Center

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

Businesses from the New England area and beyond flooded the Campus Center basement yesterday in hopes of recruiting top University of Massachusetts students for variable lengths of co-op's and internships.

Sponsored by the Mather Career Center, the Co-op Fair followed the successful Career Fair, which occurred on Wednesday. Approximately 70 businesses were in attendance yesterday.

Monica Khiani, a junior computer science major, was one of the many students who sought out prospective employers for the summer.

"Everybody has been really friendly. I think it's a good opportunity to gain experience and to apply it to your work," Khiani said.

Sam Rulli, a senior engineering major, said he had luck at the fair, especially because of his major.

"There were a lot of companies recruiting for engineering majors, so I didn't have any problem submitting my resumes," Rulli said.

A majority of students made comments along the same lines.

Businesses registered at the Co-op Fair were also satisfied with the turnout of students. Barbara-Bishop Thompson, a representative of Osram Sylvania said that the day had "gone pretty well."

One drawback of their recruiting process though, was their co-op length of half a year.

"It's been difficult because we're looking for students to commit for six months, not just your typical three month summer internship," Thompson said.

Yet, businesses like the CIGNA company, a world leading provider of insurance, healthcare and financial services, did not have any problems securing workers for their programs.

According to Nina Rude of CIGNA, today's fair was more efficiently run than yesterday's.

"Things went very well considering this is the first time we've been here," Rude said. "We had great success yesterday during the Career Fair, but today things like the registration process and lunch breaks have been more organized."

Dianna Dunn of the Mather Career Center remarked about the co-op's better utilization of time and space.

"The co-op and internship fair is a really exciting way for students to find opportunity for various positions. Things have gone very well today," Dunn said.

Students collectively felt that the less chaotic atmosphere of today's co-op fair made them feel more secure and confident when applying for a future internship or permanent job.

CHRIS CESMER / COLLEGIAN
Music makes me happy...
Ron Malinoski from So. Deerfield, livens up the streets of No. Hampton with the magic of music.

Provost's committee now accepting service proposals

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Provost's Special Committee on Service Learning is accepting proposals for 1997-1998 Service Learning Fellowships.

These $2,000 fellowships are to be used to develop new courses or revise current courses to incorporate community service into the curriculum.

"We want to encourage, recognize and support faculty to start a new course or add community service to an existing one," said David Schimmel, Chair of the Provost's Special Committee on Service Learning.

According to Schimmel, a Community Service Committee was created in 1990 to support and promote community service.

"One goal was for the majority of UMass students to participate in community service or a service learning class," Schimmel said.

"We hoped that people would eventually view community service as part of their college career," Schimmel said.

The history of service learning

In 1993, the provost appointed a special committee specifically for the purpose of encouraging and expanding service learning.

Service learning differs from community service or volunteer work in that the service experience is incorporated into course work, allowing for discussion and reflection on the students' experience and a greater understanding of the service.

"Service learning is the systematic integration of service into the curriculum, including discussion and a reflective dimension which ties the experience to the curriculum," Schimmel said.

To date, 24 courses have been supported by these service learning fellowships. They have been presented by a wide variety of departments, including philosophy, education, anthropology, environmental science, sociology, nursing, communication, theater, marketing, entomology and hotel restaurant and travel administration (HRTA).

The grants are available to all full-time faculty members, who must submit a two-page proposal to the committee by March 3.

"We're seeking proposals for at least six more courses, hopefully more," Schimmel said. "We are hoping to encourage more faculty to apply."

Faculty members who do receive a grant must agree to teach the class for at least three years and to participate in monthly seminars with other Community Service Fellows to discuss issues relating to service learning.

Faculty members' success with program

Several of the faculty members involved in teaching service learning classes in the past three years expressed their support for the program.

Professor Linda Lowry, of HRTA, is in her second year of teaching a service learning class.

In Lowry's senior seminar class, the students are working on providing the town of Amherst with a comprehensive tourism plan for the greater Amherst area.

This plan is beneficial to the community because it requires completing extensive applied research which the town would not normally be able to afford.

Lowry reported that the class has been a great success and that the students involved have benefited greatly.

Turn to SERVICE, page 2

ALANA fair offers job opps.

By Jeffrey R. Yusah
Collegian Correspondent

The 12th annual Asian, Latino, African and Native American (ALANA) Career Fair was held this past Wednesday. Called "A World of Opportunities at Your Doorstep," this event gave students an opportunity to meet prospective employers and inquire about Co-op/Internship opportunities. The event took place in the Campus Center from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Topics discussed included employer presentations, networking opportunities and resume critiquing. Some of the notable companies among the many represented included General Electric, Texas Instruments, GTE, Enterprise Rent- A-Car, American Stores Company and a booth set up by the U.S. Marine Corps.

Most of the companies focused their attention towards business, engineering and computer science majors, but many also welcomed all kinds of majors.

The student turnout was not nearly as large as the Career Fair held during the day, but with the smaller numbers, students and employers seemed to have an effective forum for productive and personal meetings.

Many students viewed the ALANA career fair as a success.

"As a computer science major I felt that many of the companies were really interested in me and genuine in what they had to say," said Mike Filosa a junior at UMass. "One company even told me about a chance for an internship in San Francisco with an apartment in the city."

The companies were open to graduating seniors, and many also offered opportunities for experience through co-ops and internships.

This event was sponsored by the ALANA Honor Society, Bilingual Collegiate Program, Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and other Minority Students, Diversity in Management Education Services, Minority Engineering Program and the United Asia Learning Resource Center.

Theft defense tips offered

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Due to a recent rash of vandalism and theft incidents in student parking lots across campus, University of Massachusetts Police Chief John Luippold wants students to become educated on how to protect their vehicles from damage.

"Students need to check their vehicles often. Don't park your car on Monday and not go back to it until the weekend," Luippold said.

The reasoning for this is so police officers can have a time frame as to when an incident occurred, according to Luippold.

"If we have a time frame then we can monitor a parking lot. If a week has gone by we have no idea when the incident may have occurred," he said.

Students should also be sure to remove all expensive items from their vehicles, such as detachable face radios. Speakers and other items which cannot removed from the vehicle should be concealed.

"I strongly urge them [students] to get a safety device for their vehicles. The Club is a great deterrent," Luippold said.

Luippold is also concerned about students who own soft- top vehicles. Since soft-top vehicles are difficult to secure, they are often targeted for theft.

"I strongly urge those owners to give some thought to how much their vehicles are needed on campus," Luippold added.

Luippold also explained that students also need to be observant when they are parking their vehicles.

"If they see anything or anyone suspicious, someone just sitting in car or walking around the parking lot, they should contact us," Luippold said. "Try to get a good description of the person and never try to approach them.

"Most of break-ins happen after dark and during those hours the student lots are full."

Police officers who are on duty at night are assigned certain areas of campus to monitor.

"The campus is divided into districts and officers are assigned to patrol those districts — security officers as well as police officers," Luippold said. "The only disadvantage to that is sometimes activities in other areas of the campus take an officer away from their district, so we get other officers to overlap on their districts.

"Clearly when we see patterns of vandalism in certain areas we start to increase the presence of security in those parking lots."

In addition, Luippold also explained when officers patrol the parking lots for the first time each night they take notice of damage done to vehicles. If the officer suspects the vehicle has recently been vandalized then he will leave a note on the car, citing the time of the detection and asking the owner to contact UMPD.

The police department also attempts to contact the owner.

Arafat, Netanyahu meet at White House

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said yesterday there is "a renewed sense of promise in the Middle East" after last month's Israeli-Palestinian agreement and urged a resumption of Israeli-Syrian negotiations to keep the momentum going.

After three hours of talks with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, Clinton said he was encouraged "that there are things worth working on" regarding talks with Syria.

Netanyahu, appearing with Clinton at a wrap-up news conference, praised the president as "an exceptional friend of Israel" and said he came out of their meeting with "renewed confidence" about the possibility of progress on Middle East peace.

The prime minister suggested Syria could show its good faith by reining in Hezbollah terrorists in southern Lebanon. He said it was no secret that Syria "has more than a minor influence in Lebanon."

Israel will not withdraw its troops from southern Lebanon because "if we simply walked away... Hezbollah and other terrorists would simply come to the (border) and attack our towns and villages," Netanyahu said.

It was Clinton's first meeting with Netanyahu since the Israeli leader and Palestinian chief Yasser Arafat ended a dangerous impasse last month by agreeing to, then implementing, Israel's long-delayed pullout from most of Hebron and parts of the West Bank.

As they opened their talks, Clinton said Netanyahu and Arafat made "a terrific effort... and I'm looking forward to the next steps."

Netanyahu, who took office in June vowing to slow down the transfer of land to Palestinians, replied, "I think we've taken bold steps for peace."

"It's time that we see such steps from our partners as well," the prime minister said.

Clinton opened the news conference by saying that Israel and the Palestinians have come a long way since Arafat and Netanyahu visited the White House in a crisis atmosphere last October after clashes in which 79 people died.

"Now there is a renewed sense of promise in the Middle East," Clinton said, referring to the Hebron agreement.

Netanyahu was the first of four Middle East leaders scheduled to meet Clinton in coming weeks. The president also will see Arafat, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Jordan's King Hussein. Clinton said he talked with Netanyahu about ways to resume peace talks with Syria. Those discussions were broken off a year ago after Islamic militants carried out suicide bombings in Israel. Syria is insisting that Israel surrender the Golan Heights, a strategic plateau along their border, as its price for peace. Israel captured the Golan in the 1967 Six-Day War.

Clinton said he was convinced that Netanyahu "has thought through a way consistent with the security of the people of Israel that a comprehensive peace might be achieved."

But he said a lot of things have to be resolved.

In the meantime, Clinton refused to pressure Israel to withdraw its forces from southern Lebanon, saying it was imperative that Israel maintain its border security.

"Therefore, I have believed that the United States should be somewhat deferential under these circumstances."

Netanyahu was said to have brought to Washington a territorial compromise on the Golan, but there was no public discussion of its details. The United States believes Syrian President Hafez Assad will not sign a peace agreement without getting back all of the plateau.

In the Hebron agreement, Netanyahu accepted the principle of pulling Israeli troops back from land claimed by the Arabs. Previous Israeli governments had supported the land-for-peace formula favored by the Arabs and the United States, and were said even to have promised Syria to leave the Golan, but Netanyahu had been a holdout until last month's agreement.

Clinton said the accord "was a brave and wise thing to do. Obviously the United States wants to make whatever contribution we can to the continuation of a peace process."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Feb. 14

Concert — The Minnesota Orchestra will perform at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 for all Five College students.

Exhibit — "Love Makes a Family: Living in Lesbian and Gay Families" (a photograph-text exhibit) opens at UMass with a special Valentine's Day reception. The reception will be held in the Campus Center Graduate Lounge from 7–9 p.m. The exhibit will remain in the lounge until Feb. 29. Co-sponsored by the Stonewall Center.

Information — The Golden Key National Honor Society will have a table in the Campus Center concourse from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. to promote AIDS awareness. Free condoms, candy, red ribbons and information on safe sex will be distributed.

Lecture — "The Eruption of Krakatau and the Processes of Explosive Volcanism," a lecture by Steve Cary, University of Rhode Island, will take place at 3:30 p.m. in Morrill II South, room 131. Part of the Geoscience Lecture Series.

Music — "Something Every Friday," a free weekly program series of special activities sponsored by the Campus Activities Office, presents John Akers at 8 p.m. in the Bluewall Cafe. Akers music includes influences from gospel, pop, folk, punk, country and zydeco.

Music — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will hold an Open Mic Night at 8 p.m. Everyone is welcome. The event is free.

Saturday, Feb. 15

Comedy — The UMass improv comedy show Mission Improvable will perform at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Basement at 8 p.m.

Hiking — Explore the Quabbin Reservoir from 9 a.m. – noon with naturalist John Green. We will discover winter bird and plant life as we walk and perhaps find animal tracks or eagles. Bring plenty of warm layers for the cold and good, warm boots. Foul weather cancels. Call 256–4543 for more info.

Monday, Feb. 17

Film — The Amherst College French Film Series presents Divertimento, directed by Jacques Rivette, in Merrill 2 on the Amherst College Campus. In French with English subtitles. Free and open to the public.

Notices

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253-0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617) 641–2303.

Astronomy — The Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association will hold free public planetarium shows at 4 p.m. every Saturday in February at Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. Appropriate for all ages. Dates: Feb. 15 and 22. For information, call Tom Whitney at 256–6234.

Health services — Confused, afraid or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available to the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Support group — Having a hard time quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? The Health Education Division at University Health Services

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Karate — The UMass Shotoran Karate Club is now accepting new members. No prior experience necessary. Come watch and join our daily training in a traditional Japanese martial art. For more info, contact Loukia at 549- 8058 or Ian at 549- 5485.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Outdoor program — Women Exploring the Outdoors will be conducting a series of outdoor adventure programs for women who are survivors of abuse. The focus of these day trips is to provide a comfortable environment within which women can increase their self-confidence, establish safe boundaries and experience their strength'in the company of other survivors. All ages, abilities and levels of experience are welcome. Programs scheduled are: A Day Hike in the Pioneer Valley on Sunday, April 13, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $20; and Low and High Ropes Course on Sunday, May 4, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $50. The cost for all three programs is $85. For more information, contact Adventures Unlimited at (413)774–3131x293.

Special Olympics — The North Valley Area Special Olympics is actively seeking special athletes for its spring sports teams. Athletes interested in candlepin bowling or basketball should contact the area office at (413) 584–9377. There are roster positions available for special athletes ages seven and up. Newcomers are strongly encouraged to join, and parents are invited to call with any questions.

Support group — A Women in Relationships Therapy Group, an ongoing therapy and support group for women who want to improve difficult relationships with friends, parents, children and colleagues, lovers or partners, led by Rebecca Reid, will meet Mondays from 7:30–9 p.m. in Amherst. Sliding scale fee. For information call 253–5494.

Volunteer work — Womanshelter/Companeras, serving the greater Holyoke, Chicopee area needs volunteers to help battered women and their children begin to live lives free of violence. If you are interested in answering the hotline, advocacy, fundraising, working with teens, of our Legal Emergency Assistance program, call Edith Jennings, Monday–Friday, 8 a.m.–4 p.m. at (413) 538–9717.

CHRIS CESNEK/ COLLEGIAN

Roses rock baby!

Many UMass students buy roses for the special someone.

■ service

continued from page 1

"They really learned a lot and they were highly motivated," Lowry said. "The students gained experience and skills that will serve them in the real world and they really loved working with the community."

Lowry said that the students were pleased with their work because they felt like they had really made a contribution to the greater community.

"They were proud of what they did and they felt like it made a difference," Lowry said. "You feel good after you've done it and you can't say that about many classes."

Lowry also felt it had been a positive experience for her and for the Amherst community.

"For me, teaching, it was wonderful," Lowry said. "It is probably one of the best experiences I have ever had.

"Everybody was pleased with it. The town was excited about the plan."

Lowry said that the biggest downside of the service learning classes are that they are more time-consuming for both students and faculty, and that there is a lack of resources available to facilitate the service experience for students.

"It's definitely more time-consuming," Lowry said.

"Also, there were no resources available to get the students to the sites. They went by foot, bus, carpooling. They had to do a lot all on their own," Lowry continued.

However, she felt that overall, the extra effort was worth it.

"I will definitely do it again in the future," said Lowry. "The experience was so positive that I can't imagine not doing it. It's such a valuable way to teach the class."

Professor Ralph Faulkingham, of the anthropology department, also expressed support for service learning classes.

Faulkingham taught a service learning class last spring, in which his students undertook four different projects of benefit to the community.

These student–devised projects were evaluating and making recommendations for improving the guidance services of Amherst Regional High School, examining the effects of alcohol and violence in Southwest Residential Area and making recommendations to improve the climate, assessing the needs of elders in the town of Amherst for the Council of Aging, and working to eliminate the use of hazardous chemicals in a Springfield factory.

Faulkingham felt that the course was a success for all involved.

"It was fantastic," Faulkingham said. "They were out dealing with real people and real issues and applying what they've learned."

Faulkingham also felt that the students were equally pleased with the outcome of the course.

"The evaluations that I received said that this (service learning) part of the class needs to be a part of the UMass curriculum," Faulkingham said. "I would like to encourage more and more faculty to incorporate service learning into their classes."

Students who are interested in taking a service learning class can find a list of classes offered at the community service program in the Mather Career Center.

Karen Elam, community service program coordinator encouraged students to take a service learning class.

"Service serves several functions for students," Elam said. "In the context of the class, it lets students develop skills and attach something practical to the theories they are learning in class."

For more information on service learning classes being offered, contact Karen Elam at (413) 545–3327. For more information on the fellowship proposals, contact David Schimmel at (413) 545–1529.

Correction

Yesterday's story about the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustee's vote to merge UMass–Worcester Medical Center with Worcester Memorial Hospital incorrectly defined the procedure. The University system will give up $300 million of its equity when Memorial Hospital runs the center (not $330 million as stated in the headline). The Collegian regrets the error.

The ALANA Lecture Series

PRESENTS

DR. JULIANNE MALVEAUX

GUEST SPEAKER

WILL LECTURE ON
SEX, LIES AND STEREOTYPES:
PERSPECTIVES OF A MAD ECONOMIST

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1997
7:00PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
UMASS AMHERST

Sponsored by: Office of ALANA Affairs, Black Student Union, Every Woman's Center, Graduate Student Senate, Residence Life and Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund.

"OFFICE OF ALANA AFFAIRS 1997"

1997 ATLANTIC-10 TOURNAMENT

MARCH 5-8, 1997
CORESTATES SPECTRUM, PHILADELPHIA

STUDENT TICKETS* ON SALE NOW

PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW FOR
THE 1997 ATLANTIC-10 MEN'S BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT
AT THE UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
LOCATED AT THE CURRY HICK CAGE.
STUDENT TICKET PACKAGES ARE JUST $40.00.
PRICE INCLUDES ALL SESSIONS (REGULAR PRICE-$110.00)
(5 DOUBLEHEADERS AND CHAMPIONSHIP GAME)
ALL 11 GAMES FOR $40.00!

*UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE STUDENTS ARE ELIGIBLE.
*MUST BE STUDENT AT AN A-10 SCHOOL.

UMASS, XAVIER, TEMPLE, GEORGE WASHINGTON, DUQUESNE, VIRGINIA TECH, ST. JOSEPH'S, ST. BONAVENTURE, DAYTON, RHODE ISLAND, FORDHAM, LASALLE.

7pm, Feb 14th+15th at the MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Division 1 Hockey East
UMass Hockey
VS
MAINE

Pick up your tickets at:
- Curry Hicks Cage
- 'TIX' in the Student Union
- Hockey Table in the Campus Center
- At the Game

Be a Part of the Action

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS

Something Every Friday

SINGER
JOHN AKERS
February 14, 1997 8:00pm
Bluewall Cafe FREE

John is a very gifted singer/songwriter. The music he writes and performs includes a very wide range of influences; from gospel to pop, and folk to punk. John was voted the "Best Male Vocalist" by Freelime Magazine. For more information check out our website:

http://www.umass.edu/compact/events/calendar.htm

The movie "The Associate" will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 8pm and again at 10pm

This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxilliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the Daily Collegian.

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Mark McGrath • Photos by Thang Vo

Do you have any special plans this Valentine's Day?

"I'm going to be honored to take a beautiful, talented, respectable woman to have an incredible time in Boston."

Christian Smith
junior, sociology
Springfield

The thing is that I'm an exchange student and all of my friends and my girlfriend are in Colombia. I think I'll just visit my brother."

Juan Manrique
junior, engineering
Bogota, Columbia

"I'm taking my girlfriend out to eat in a nice restaurant and to a movie. Valentine's Day is a great holiday."

Dan Cronin
junior, political science
South Glens Falls, N.Y.

"I have no plans for tomorrow night. My significant other is out of town. That's OK. He's going to make it up to me. It's a good holiday if you have someone to share it with."

Jill Aordkian
junior, political science
Southbury, Conn.

"I'm going to Boston to see my boyfriend. Valentine's Day is no big deal. It's an excuse to fall in love or to feel like you love someone."

Letitia West
junior, food science
Accra, Ghana

"Dinner and a movie. If you're with somebody, it's better than if you're not. I have friends who are anti-Valentine's Day. They're even having anti-Valentine's parties."

Colleen De Grandis
freshman, school of management
Pepperell

"It's a school day, so I'm going to school. I'm bringing my husband roses, and then, we'll be attending my son's basketball game."

Sandra Joquay–Wilson junior, landscape architecture
Buckland

Michael Jackson a father; wife gave birth yesterday

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The King of Pop has an heir.

Michael Jackson became a father early yesterday when his wife, Deborah Rowe Jackson, gave birth to a boy.

The whirling dervish of pop music was in the delivery room for the arrival of the Glove Child — whose name, weight and length weren't revealed.

Elizabeth Taylor, the child's godmother, had planned to be there. But she came down with the flu and couldn't participate, a source told The Associated Press.

The Jackson camp was mum about the arrival, which took place about 1 a.m. at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. A hospital source, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed the birth to the AP. Mrs. Jackson delivered without complications, the source said, adding: "Everyone's OK and healthy."

Hospital spokesman Ron Wise said the Jacksons, with their newborn, left the hospital about 8 a.m., destination unknown. Jackson, 38, announced in November that Mrs. Jackson, a 37-year-old nurse who worked with a dermatologist, was six months pregnant with his child. They wed later that month. Jackson and his first wife, Lisa Marie Presley, divorced earlier last year. Rumors that a Jackson baby was about to make its debut — Valentine's Day was the due date — sent the news media scurrying to the hospital.

Reporters, photographers and fans gathered Wednesday and yesterday for news and a chance glimpse of the newest Jackson, his famous father and his mother. Extra security guards were called in to keep away infiltrators.

"I've never seen anything like it," Wise said.

A photo of the Jacksons and son would fetch big bucks from the tabloids.

"If it's good quality, a shot of Jacko, Debbie and the baby — where we could see the baby's face — it could bring $500,000," said National Enquirer editor Steve Coz.

King's family pursues answers in assassination

By Patricia J. Mays
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Afraid that the truth about the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination will die with James Earl Ray, King's family is asking that he be given a trial to answer the questions that have haunted them for 30 years.

"The lack of a satisfactory resolution to questions surrounding the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. has been a source of continuing pain and hardship to our family," Dexter King, a son of the civil rights leader, said at a news conference yesterday with his two sisters, his brother and his mother, Coretta Scott King. "Every effort must be made to determine the truth."

Over the years, King said, "because of the painful nature of this tragedy, we have reluctantly ignored it, stayed away from it."

But now, with Ray dying from cirrhosis of the liver in a Nashville, Tenn., prison, they want the full truth known, King said.

"It was time to come forward, make a statement about this, which has haunted us for years. If Mr. Ray does not pull through, this will die with him," King said.

Ray, 68, pleaded guilty to killing King and was sentenced to 99 years in prison but almost immediately recanted his confession. He claims he was duped by a mysterious middleman named "Raoul" who arranged for a rifle with his fingerprint to be dropped near the shooting scene.

Ever since a sniper's bullet cut down King on the balcony at a Memphis motel in 1968, several theories have surfaced as to who was responsible. A 1978 congressional report concluded Ray shot King but said a St. Louis-based conspiracy of racial bigots was behind the slaying.

After the news conference, Ray's brother, Jerry, told MSNBC: "I really appreciate them asking for a trial for James, and I'm sure the whole King family, just like the Ray family and the rest of the American public, wants the truth to come out once and for all."

In order for Ray to get a trial, his attorneys must prove there is new evidence that could exonerate him. Next week, a judge in Memphis, Tenn., will hear arguments from Ray's attorneys for new scientific tests on the rifle believed used in the assassination. John Campbell, a Shelby County, Tenn., assistant district attorney, said that even if the tests are conducted, there is plenty of reason not to give Ray a trial.

"The guilty plea Ray is under has been examined seven times by other courts and affirmed every time," Campbell said. "He went into court and told the jury he was guilty. They convicted him."

Israeli leaders knew since '94 about Albright's Jewish roots

By Dafna Linzer
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli leaders knew of Madeline Albright's Jewish heritage two years before the new Secretary of State says she did, an Israeli diplomat said yesterday.

Gad Yaacobi, Israel's former ambassador to the United Nations, said a British friend of the Albrights told him of the family's Jewish roots in 1994, when Albright was the U.N. ambassador for the United States.

Yaacobi told then-Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, but the issue never was raised with Albright because they felt it wasn't significant and would not affect her approach to the Middle East.

"She didn't share it with me, and I wasn't quite sure if she even knew about it... or if she would feel comfortable discussing it," Yaacobi told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. Shortly after Albright's nomination as secretary of state in December, The Washington Post uncovered documents and established that more than a dozen members of her family were killed as Jews during the Holocaust.

Albright, 59, said she knew nothing of it, and that the information she had received last month came as "a major surprise." She was brought up Roman Catholic, and knew little about her family's past.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns appealed to the news media yesterday to respect Albright's privacy.

"It's a very emotional issue for her," Burns told reporters. "She lost three grandparents in death camps, she lost an aunt, she lost a cousin and many other family members."

"She is very proud of her family," Burns said. "She is very proud of her parents for having rescued her from Adolf Hitler and Stalin."

Yaacobi said his friend George Weidenfeld, an Austrian-born British publisher who knew Albright's father in London during World War II, had revealed Albright's Jewish background to him.

Weidenfeld, however, told The AP that he had never discussed family heritage with Albright's father and had no proof that he was Jewish.

"I never talked to him about his origin, but never questioned the fact that he, Josef Korbel, a refugee from Czechoslovakia, was Jewish," Weidenfeld added.

"I told Gad Yaacobi and many other people — indeed I said to Mrs. Albright herself — that I knew her father extremely well. I didn't say her father was Jewish."

A Czech-born former Israeli diplomat, Avigdor Dagan, told The AP that he lived near Albright's maternal grandparents in Chernikostelitz, a village in the eastern Bohemia district of Czechoslovakia.

Dagan said his father sold supplies to Albright's grandfather, who owned a general store and was active in the local Jewish community.

Later while in the Czech diplomatic service, Dagan met Albright's father and the two worked in London during World War II. Dagan eventually immigrated to Israel and was ambassador to Poland, Norway and Austria.

"Everyone knew Korbel was Jewish but he did everything to hide it. He wanted a career and he thought it would interfere or hurt his chances to reach the top," Dagan said.

"There were topics that he erased from his life and this was one of them."

CHRIS CESNEK/ COLLEGIAN

Happy Valentine's Day, UMass!

Garret LoPorto a Junior C.S.E., takes advantage of the many types of Valentine Day cards the University Store has to offer.

Check out our mondo website! http:// www.umass.edu /rso /colegian

Got a tip?

The Collegian news department is always looking for stories. If you see or hear of a possible breaking story, please contact News Editor Laura Stock at 5-1762.

A GREAT BET!

NOT YOUR USUAL DOG & PONY SHOW

LIVE SIMULCASTS!
Thoroughbreds from: Aqueduct, Suffolk Downs, Gulfstream & Santa Anita • Harness races from: Foxboro, Meadowlands & Pompano • Greyhounds from: Plainfield and now Raynham!

2-FOR-1
Dinner Entrees Every Friday Night
In Hinsdale's Dining Room!

STUDENT'S DAY EVERY FRIDAY:
FREE Hinsdale Program to college students with a valid ID.

LIVE GREYHOUNDS • SIMULCAST RACING

HINSDALE GREYHOUND PARK
SIMULCAST BETTING 7 DAYS A WEEK!
FREE PARKING • FREE ADMISSION
For Post Times & Info: 1-800-NH-TRACK
Route 119 • Hinsdale, NH
www.trackinfo.com

Choices Not Chances

Free Contraception Education

Every Mon & Thurs 3 - 4:30 pm and
Tues & Wed 7 - 8:30 pm in rm. 302 UHS
Men and Women Welcome
For more information call the Health Education Office 577-5181

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor "Position Vacant" Systems Manager
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor "Position Vacant" Circulation Manager
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Laura Stock News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Thang Vo Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Black History Month

The following is the sixth part of an ongoing series dedicated to Black History Month. Future columns will examine the Nation of Islam and W.E.B. Du Bois.

The woman behind Du Bois

"Behind every great man there stands a great woman."
-Anonymous

On Nov. 11, 1907, a baby girl was born to the Reverend David A. Graham, a minister of the African Episcopal Methodist Church, and his wife Etta in Evansville, Ind. She was born in the farm home of her great-grandfather, which had been used as a station on the Underground Railroad for escaped slaves fleeing to Canada. The house had also been visited by the great abolitionist leader Frederick Douglass. The historical significance of the birthplace of this child, who would be named Shirley Graham, marked the beginning of a long and illustrious life dedicated to the advancement of black people in America and abroad.

Martin F. Jones

Shirley Graham would grow up to become a prolific writer, musician, composer, and political activist. She once said, "I have always thought of myself primarily as a teacher. My purpose is to dispel ignorance and misunderstanding around the Negro people themselves and in their relations with others outside their race."

Eventually, she would become best known by the name of her second husband, the immortal William Edward Burghardt Du Bois, whom she married 36 years ago today in 1951.

Given her own commitment to promoting the knowledge and study of the lives of African-Americans, it is not surprising that Shirley Graham would one day marry the world's premiere scholar on African people on the continent and throughout the American diaspora. She had idolized W.E.B. Du Bois since first meeting him in 1920 at the age of 13, when her father, the organizer of a local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored people, invited him to speak at his church in Colorado Springs, Colo., to generate money and support for the NAACP.

Du Bois at that time was the director of research for the NAACP and editor of its organ The Crisis magazine. He was just returning from Paris where he had presented a plan for the decolonization of Africa to the Versailles Peace Conference. During his visit he stayed with the Graham family, discussing his Paris trip with her father over supper.

Their paths crossed again on various occasions over the next 31 years and after their marriage, she would remain his constant companion and political partner over the next 12 years until his death in 1963. From that day forward until her own passing 14 years later, Shirley Graham Du Bois would dedicate herself tirelessly towards the preservation of her husband's tremendous legacy.

Before her marriage to Du Bois, Shirley Graham had once been married to a man named Thomas McCant. After giving birth to two sons, Robert and David, Shirley Graham would become a widow three years after her marriage to McCant. Following his death, she set upon a path to further her education at a number of highly esteemed institutions. An accomplished musician, she traveled to France to study music at the Sorbonne in Paris, and completed her academic education at Oberlin College in Ohio. Later on, she entered a doctoral program at New York University on the advice of Du Bois, who was generous with his counsel to his young friends.

In later years, the roles were reversed and Du Bois began to seek Shirley's advice and counsel. In 1944, Shirley, who was a staff member in the New York Office of the NAACP, was put in charge of finding an apartment for Du Bois when he relocated from Atlanta to New York in August 1944. Du Bois had just been retired from the faculty of Atlanta University after spending the past 10 years there as the head of the sociology department. He was immediately invited by the NAACP to return to his position as the director of research, which he held during his original tenure there.

Du Bois had first taught at Atlanta University from 1897-1910 before leaving his post there to work full-time with the NAACP. He would return to Atlanta University to teach full-time again after resigning from the NAACP in 1933. That year saw a significant loss of income for The Crisis magazine, which Du Bois had founded in 1910, serving as its sole editor for the next 23 years. It was this position which served as the basis for his work with the NAACP and he refused to edit the magazine under the new authority of its executive board, which was now providing its funding.

His return to the historic civil rights organization would last less than five years, as he found himself severely restricted by the new Executive Secretary, Walter White. Despite being back in his previous position as director of research, he would not have any editorial control over The Crisis. In 1948, Du Bois was dismissed from the organization which he had helped found nearly 40 years prior.

The following winter brought another personal heartbreak for Du Bois, as his wife Nina had suffered a stroke in the winter of 1948-49, passing away later that spring. At this time, Shirley Graham was working at the Peace Information Center (PIC), a project which was initiated by the American Delegates to the Paris Peace Congress.

The Information Center sought to bring information to the public concerning world-wide efforts to prevent further wars. Du Bois agreed to become the Chairman of the PIC with an Executive Secretary attending the daily details of the organization. It was during their work at the PIC that Shirley Graham and Dr. Du Bois cemented their friendship and the two were engaged in 1951.

That same year, as a consequence of his work with the PIC, Du Bois, along with several staffers, received a set of indictments. These indictments, driven by the anti-communist hysteria of the McCarthy Period, charged Du Bois and the staffers with "not having registered as agents of a foreign principle."

The wedding of Shirley Graham and Dr. Du Bois, which was planned for Feb. 27, was moved forward in light of the indictments to insure that Shirley Graham as his wife, would have access to Dr. Du Bois pending the outcome his trial. On Feb. 14, in a short, private ceremony attended by her son David and a lawyer friend, Shirley Graham became Mrs. Shirley Graham Du Bois. The wedding would later take place as originally planned at her home in St. Albans, Long Island.

Shirley would go on to raise support and money for her husband's defense, traveling across the country and receiving support from numerous sympathizers from around the world. On Nov. 20, the trail ended with acquittals for all of the accused following the courtroom appearance of Dr. Albert Einstein as a character witness for Dr. Du Bois.

Over the next few years, Shirley Graham Du Bois became a part of history as she accompanied her husband on numerous overseas trips which included visits with Chairman Mao Tse Tung of China and Premier Nikita Krushchev of the Soviet Union.

In 1961 they moved to Ghana upon the invitation of President Kwame Nkruma to edit the Encyclopedia Africana. It was here in Ghana that Dr. Du Bois would spend his last days, with the news of his passing on Aug. 27, 1963 being announced publicly for the first time at the historic March on Washington.

Shirley Graham Du Bois remained in Ghana for the next three years until the overthrow of the Nkruma government forced her to move to Cairo, Egypt, where her son David worked as a journalist. While in Cairo she wrote a number of books dealing with Africa — Nassar, Son of the Nile, Julius K. Nyerere, Teacher of Africa and a novel, The Zulu Heart. She also wrote a memoir of W.E.B. Du Bois entitled His Day is Marching On.

In 1974, Shirley Graham Du Bois was invited to join the faculty of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst as a visiting professor following her cooperation in the establishment of the W.E.B. Du Bois Collection, the archive of her husband's life consisting of nearly 200,000 pages of documents and photographs now housed at the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. After teaching creative writing for two years, she embarked upon the final activity of her life, which involved the publication of a pictorial biography of Du Bois. This project was completed shortly before the development of cancer brought her life to a peaceful end in Beijing, China on March 27, 1977.

In the forward of the biography, her son David Graham Du Bois writes, "This volume is my mother's last completed literary creation. It is a major contribution to the legacy left to us by Dr. W.E.B. Du Bois and a fitting conclusion and memorial to the life of Shirley Graham Du Bois, whose later years were so totally devoted to promoting and safe- guarding that legacy; whose whole life, like that of Dr. Du Bois, was uncompromisingly committed to the liberation of humankind, particularly peoples of color, from all forms of racism, exploitation, and oppression."

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/ Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the rest of the Five-College Area.
Letters and columns must be typed and double spaced, with the writer's name, local address and phone number attached. This information is subject to verification prior to publication.
Anonymous submissions will not be printed.
The editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.
The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. Letters should be no longer than 450 words and columns should be about 70 typed lines.
Submissions should be sent to the Editorial Desk, c/o Mike Burke, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst, MA 01003.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Spreading the wealth

Earlier this week the Clinton administration warned against proposals to invest Social Security in the stock market. Unfortunately most of the rhetoric opposing the proposals is from uninformed politicians and journalists who are simply defending the status quo.

Most Baby Boomers know that Social Security will not be there for them under the current system. Currently people's Social Security taxes go straight to the elderly already receiving benefits.

Established during the Depression, the system has worked well until recently. But now, both the number and life expectancy of the elderly are at all time highs. To make matters worse, the Boomers, the largest generation that this country has seen, is preparing for retirement in the next decade. Social Security is going to fail.

Matthew Wurtzel

There are not enough Gen X's to pay for the Boomers to retire comfortably unless we intend to hand all our earnings away in Social Security taxes. As our parents' generation approaches retirement, and we enter the work force, the government has to take action.

A great deal of middle class couples have started to save for retirement in various investment plans like IRAs and mutual funds. Almost 50 percent of Fidelity Investment's mutual fund assets are retirement accounts, said the Feb. 10 issue of the Wall Street Journal. Fidelity is one of the nation's leading mutual fund management firms, and one of the state's largest employers.

Mutual funds, IRAs and other retirement programs invest money in a broad portfolio of assets like bonds and stocks. This is no different than the proposed Social Security reforms. The majority of Social Security reform proposals recommend the government invest tax revenue in the stock market. The uneducated shudder at the thought of the market because they do not understand it.

The uninformed cite large drops in the market thinking that this is common, rather than an exception. However, the market has always produced positive returns when risk is reduced by spreading the investment through a broad collection of stocks rather than just a few. Such diversification has led to 30 percent returns in the past two years at Fidelity and 16 percent for the past 15 years, according to the same Journal article. The entire market throughout history has outperformed all other forms of investment.

However, conservatives who understand the market, and invest in it, argue against the proposals citing so called conflicts of interest. Everyone's favorite examples are conglomerates like General Electric. GE produces such diverse products as medical equipment, jet engines, power generation and light bulbs.

Critics claim the government would have a new vested interest in making GE even more profitable, so the government might award them pork barrel contracts. However, most people who own mutual funds have no idea which firms the money is invested in, so Congress probably would not know exactly which firms the money is invested.

Other opponents fear that such a switch would socialize our economy — ironic since the original proposal of Social Security led to the same argument. The opponents suggest that the government would have a new interest in keeping all companies profitable. Obviously these people do not understand the government's economic policies for the last 50 years.

After World War II, Congress passed legislation mandating the government keep unemployment low. This law was amended in the 1970s to add a new goal of keeping inflation down simultaneously. For the past five years the government has done a good job at both. Employment rose by 271,000 jobs in January, and 261,000 in December with few signs of inflation, said the aforementioned issue of the Journal. Unemployment in this state has remained below 5 percent for the past year, and nationally it has remained below 6 percent.

Investing retirement dollars in the stock market through mutual funds is a sound practice, or millions of people would not voluntarily do it. Why should only the upper middle class and rich benefit from market investments? The government should assist the rest of the country in receiving their fair share.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Whitmore caught with bad ID

Do you smell that? That's right, women and men of the University of Massachusetts, that's the smell of a corrupt administration doing their duty all over the UMass campus.

It's all right if you did not recognize it at first, I had troubles myself. I thought maybe it was the ducks out on the pond making a stink, but then I realized that we are the ducks, bureaurocracy is the shot gun and our own apathy is what makes us such easy targets.

It's about time for open season to end.

If you are new to the campus, or just have not been paying much attention, you may not realize that the insignificant part you played in the decision making involving the all-campus card identification/debit/mass-manipulation system is nothing new. Once again, someone has attempted to solve all sorts of problems, most of them financially-based and not directly related to the student body or its needs, and has come up with a solution that will put smiles on the faces of a private firm and leave the students of this campus out in the cold.

"The bottom line is that this is just another case of the administration doing something that does not really address the needs of the student body."
Jeremy R. Adams

More specifically, the all-campus card will be usable in Campus Center and Student Union; likely excluding student- run businesses which cannot afford access to the costly system. If the co-ops go out of business we will all lose, and be forced to patronize the campus-wide monopoly of the University Store, Textbook Annex and Munchie Stores.

A 2 percent university imposed sales tax will be added on top of all transactions involving the card to cover administrative costs. The fact that there are such immense administrative costs is interesting, considering how quickly we jumped on the AT&T bandwagon without even a receiving an inexpensive deal.

One other point that has been misaddressed by the card is the meal plan system. Everybody on the 14 meal plan would rather be on the 10, but if you are on the 10 you cannot eat on weekends, which is the only time many of us can make it to the Dining Commons. The card will not ameliorate these food-service (or lack of service) problems, it will just make it easier for an undergraduate to avoid the dining halls. Ideally, the hundreds of dollars each student wastes on uneaten food would be usable in other areas with the card, but this benefit has not yet been announced.

Possibly the one thing that the administration realizes is that if presented with the option to use a debit card to get a Greenough Snack Bar sub or Antonio's instead of enduring the harsh gastro-intestinal torture of the D.C., the decision is obvious. If the card were used as a debit system at the D.C., paying per meal just as anywhere else, the food would actually have to be edible or else the D.C.'s would actually have to deal with the competition that breeds a quality product from a business.

Those admissions people who said all that jazz about big school advantages with a small school atmosphere cannot be blamed for the inefficiencies of the UMass administration, they do not sell that aspect of this school, they are only responsible for hiding it.

The all campus card system, as decided upon with so little student input or regard, is just one of the many half-assed attempts to make UMass appear to be competing with other institutions. It appears all too often that the only competition genuinely important around here occurs on the court, not in the classroom.

The bottom line is that this is just another case of the administration doing something that does not really address the needs of the student body, without seeing what we really want, and then proceeding to cover up its ineptness through poor communication with the student body.

I work at this newspaper, many students' most reliable source of information. If I do not know what is going on with the higher-ups, then it is likely that few outside of the newsroom do either. It is a sorry state that in order to get any information about what goes on around here (other than the few good stories which spring forth from the red-tape factory, a.k.a. Whitmore administration building) there has to be an in-depth investigation.

It seems like every time I enter Whitmore I am confronted by the administration's unofficial motto: no, it's not Veritas or E Pluribus Unum or any of that nobility crap. Rather it is more like Et tu, Bulger.

If the administration wants to look good for once, veiled with the happiness and serenity of the admissions publications that draw unsuspecting high schoolers into the web of red tape, it needs to disclose all of its doings to the students, through the Collegian and other media.

I do not oppose the all-campus card, rather I anxiously anticipate the potential positive changes that the card could bring about. Many of these benefits will never be realized because the students' best interests will not be a factor in the final decision making. The smoke coming from the grates all over campus have covered up the poor dealings, but the smell is getting sickening and it's about time for some change.

Jeremy R. Adams is a Collegian columnist.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY
LIMITED TO SEATING
a Denotes SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 4 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Vegas Vacation* PG
Fools Rush In* PG13
The Pest PG13
Evita PG
The English Patient R
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Dantes Peak* PG13
That Darn Cat* PG
The Beautician and the Beast PG
Star Wars PG
Absolute Power R
Jerry Maguire R

Corporate Careers
Where You'd Least Expect To Find Them
Stop by our Information Session:
February 20th
6:00pm
Campus Center
Room 903
T.J.maxx Marshalls

Arts & Living

Friday, February 14, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Oscars discover fine cinema

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

This past Tuesday marked one of the most exciting days of the year for movie fans across the globe. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences released the nominees for the 69th annual Academy Awards. The ceremony which will be held on March 24, marks a true turning point in film history. For years, the Academy has been scrutinized by many for its commercial intentions and labeled more political than artistic in their decisions. The times they are a changin' and this year's nominees are far more geared to the realm of independent and art-house cinema.

In recent years past, the Oscar winners were successful and commercially acceptable films that refrained from controversy. There was a time when this wasn't necessarily the case and more artistic films had the potential of being Oscar contenders. In 1969, John Schlesinger's Midnight Cowboy won for best picture despite its disturbing portrayal of the unlikely friendship between a male prostitute and a petty con-man.

Throughout the years, the Academy has changed direction to maintain a more audience-friendly approach. However, with the rapidly growing respect given to the Cannes Film Festival, it would appear the Academy has once again decided to acknowledge the importance of independent film. This year, four out of the five nominees for best picture strained far from blockbuster status. Even the super-hit Jerry Maguire, features an innovative script by Cameron Crowe as well as Tom Cruise's greatest performance of his career.

Aside from the well-known Jerry Maguire, the other four nominees include an excellent representation of this year's finest. Although I have yet to see Shine, as a result of its local premiere being this weekend, Mike Leigh's Secrets and Lies is my personal favorite of this years nominees. Leigh's film is a deeply moving encounter examining the lives of the members of a working class London family. The story subtly touches on the issues of race and class while expressing the importance of trust between a family.

Joel Coen's Fargo is a brilliantly eccentric tale of a police women's search to solve a bizarre kidnapping case. Best Actress nominee, Francis McDormand plays the officer and William H. Macy as the neurotic husband of the victim, is up for best supporting actor. The film has also been nominated for best original screenplay and director.

If it wins for nothing else, The English Patient is the sure victor of best cinematography. The epic tale of spies, war, and romance is a bit lengthy but absolutely stunning in appearance. Ralph Fiennes and Kristen Scott Thomas are both up for best actor and actress and their performances together were utter brilliance. The story centers on the love affair between the two central characters and the espionage surrounding a war torn Europe after the Second World War. Willem Defoe however, gave one of the most amazing supporting performances of the year and was unfortunately overlooked by the Academy.

Shine has perhaps received the most acclaim of the year. The film was made in Australia and tells the story of a gifted pianist and the harsh relationship he had with his father. The situation led to the young man's descent into insanity and the actor, Geoffrey Rush, is nominated for best actor. Shine is also up for best original screenplay.

All in all, this years ceremony will, without a doubt, be one the intense in motion picture history. The contestants are all excellent picks and for many, their faith in the Academy has been restored. Already I am immensely nervous and anxious for next month's ceremony. May the best film win!

JENNIFER BUTRACO/COLLEGIAN
The Reverend Horton Heat prayed to the heavens to take his soul for rock 'n roll last night at Pearl Street.

The Reverend praises everything that rocks

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

The Reverend Horton Heat
Pearl Street
Feb. 12

NORTHAMPTON — Reverend Heat's traveling salvation show rolled into Northampton last night, raining hell-fire and bringing redemption to the hordes of lost souls crammed into Pearl St. His two-hour long sermon on the necessary evils of liquor, women and "left-handed" cigarettes made believers out of even the most jaded hipsters. Ladies and gentlemen, you haven't lived until you have felt the Heat.

From the moment the band took the stage, it was obvious what they had come to do. The tuxedo-clad Reverend wasted no time with pleasantries; instead, he let his reverb-drenched Gretsch set the tone. The 20-odd songs which followed celebrated the roots and essence of rock n' roll. From western swing to traditional rockabilly and revisionist punk, the band smashed musical boundaries and fused genres to create a completely unique brew of hellacious sonic fury.

Drawing evenly from their four albums, The Reverend Horton Heat delivered a consistently energetic and engaging set. The cowpunk instrumental "Big Sky," the smoky, spoken-word "That's Entertainment" and the call-and-response celebration of "Beer:30" were among the highlights, as were the early Sub-Pop nuggets "Eat Steak" and "Big Little Baby." The evening's only cover, Willie Nelson's "These Walls," was an interesting diversion into straight country-western (though the Reverend himself threatened to continue playing only country if the complimentary vodka tonic didn't meet his standards — fortunately, it did), but it was their trademark rockabilly swing which burned up the already frenzied crowd.

Individually, the band members each proved themselves to be both master showmen as well as top-notch musicians. New drummer Scott Churita was concise, powerful, and managed to swing like Charlie Watts on speed without ever appearing flashy. Stand-up bassist Jimbo slapped and strummed with unflappable rhythm, even with the Reverend perched on top of his instrument (at one point, Jimbo himself managed to play while balanced precariously on his bass). Together, the two formed a brutally powerful, water- tight rhythm section.

By the time the "Psychobilly Freakout," the band's third and final encore, ended in a squall of feedback and white noise, it was obvious that the band had.

The Reverend Horton Heat has stuck again; by delivering perhaps the best live show around today, the band will continue preaching the gospel of sin, converting non-believers as they did Wednesday night.

COURTESY STEVE GULICK

Limbo Rock!

Let Throwing Muses be your Valentines tonight at Pearl Street. They'll be playing their charged sounds tonight, with especially tunes from the new album, Limbo.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
PROUDLY STARTS FRI. Curtain Daily 7 & 9:15
7 Academy Award Nomination-Inc. 'BEST'
PICTURE ★ DIRECTOR ★ACTOR★SUPPORTING ACTOR
AND
OVER 75 TEN BEST LISTS!
DIRECTORS GUILD OF AMERICA NOMINEE
SCREEN ACTORS GUILD NOMINEES
Shine
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584 8435

Happy Valentine's Day From the Arts and Living Desk!

Orchestra to play FAC

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

The Minnesota Orchestra will perform at the Concert Hall tonight at 8 p.m. under the direction of their new conducter, Eiji Oue. Renowned pianist Peter Serkin will perform with the orchestra.

The Minnesota Orchestra enjoys the reputation as being one of America's premier orchestras. It was founded in 1903 as the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and in 1907, made its first regional tour. In 1912, the Orchestra made its debut in New York City.

Tonight's concert will open with Dominick Argento's "Valentino's Dances," in honor of Valentine's Day. The piece is set in the silent film era of Hollywood, but also delves deep into the Italian immigrant experience. "Valentino's Dances" are a series of tangos from Argento's latest opera, The Dream of Valentino.

Argento won the 1975 Pulizter Prize for his song cycle, From the Diary of Virginia Woolf. He is one of America's premier composers.

Serkin will perform his own cadenzas in Mozart's "Piano Concerto No. 21 in C Major, K. 467." Serkin, who is one of the most individualistic musicians performing, was born into a musical family, starting with his grandfather, violinist Adolf Busch. Serkin made his debut at the age of 12 at the Marlboro Music Festival.

Currently, Serkin is an honorary member of the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center's Friends Board of Directors.

The concert will conclude with Tchaikovsky's "Symphony No. 4 in F minor."

Tickets for the concert are $30, $25 and $15. Age 17 and under are $10 and Five College Students are $5. For more information, please call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511 or (800) 999-UMAS.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Peter Serkin will perform with the Minnesota Orchestra tonight at the Concert Hall.

Will Academy Awards reward a real drama?

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Much has been written about the dominance of independent and foreign films in this year's major Academy Award nominations.

What the Oscar nominations also reveal is that the big studios rarely provide homes for profound dramas that illuminate the human situation.

Jerry Maguire, a slick, well-acted look at the money-grabbing of professional sports, scored the only major nominations among the year's $100 million grossers.

It was cited for best picture, Tom Cruise for actor, Cuba Gooding Jr. as supporting actor and Cameron Crowe as writer (but not as director), as well as for editing.

Look how the other members of the 1996 $100 million club fared (in order):

Independence Day and Twister — two apiece, for sound and special effects.

Mission Impossible — 0.
The Rock — 1 (sound).
The Nutty Professor — 1 (make-up).
Ransom — 0.
The Birdcage — 1 (art direction).
101 Dalmatians — 0.
A Time to Kill — 0.
Phenomenon — 0.
First Wives Club — 1 (original score).
Eraser — 1 (sound effects editing).

Contrast these event movies with The English Patient, which at $33 million cost half or less than the above films. It tallied 12 nominations, including picture, actor, actress, supporting actress, directing and screenplay.

Imagine a big-studio production boss considering The English Patient.

"Yeah, it's a nice story, but the casting is all wrong. Ralph Fiennes won't draw; they can't even pronounce his name. Make the guy an American and we'll get Tom Cruise or Brad Pitt. Forget Kristin Scott Thomas. Why not Madonna? She'll take her clothes off."

"Build up the war stuff. And for God's sake, take out the part about the hero helping the Germans; the audience won't go for that."

"Codame to think of it, the title is a turnoff. Call it The American Patient. Who's read the book, anyway?"

(Producer Saul Zaentz says that when The English Patient ran out of money in mid-production, he approached 20th Century Fox. The studio agreed to go along — if casting changes were made. Zaentz declined, and he found backing from Miramax).

For those saddled with the annual ordeal of predicting the winners, this year's chore seems easier than most. The English Patient scored so overwhelmingly in the nominations — a dozen, followed by Fargo and Shine with seven apiece — that it must be considered the front runner for best picture.

The English Patient has all the elements Academy voters favor: sweeping vistas, powerful action, strong performances, good writing. If the voters feel more parochial — it has happened — they might select the home-grown, crowd-pleasing Jerry Maguire.

Shine has an outside chance; Fargo and Secrets and Lies are less likely.

A sweep for The English Patient could provide an Oscar for Ralph Fiennes (pronounced Rafe Fines). Besides, half of his part is as a severe burn victim and afflicted roles rank high with the voters.

But that phenomenon also could favor two portrayers of mentally unstable characters: Geoffrey Rush of Shine and Billy Bob Thornton of Sling Blade.

Kristin Scott Thomas also could profit from a sweep of The English Patient. But, at this point, the favorite for best actress appears to be Brenda Blethyn, the shattered mother with an illegitimate child in her past in Secrets and Lies.

Supporting player awards are always more difficult to predict.

Although Primal Fear was not a big moneymaker, Edward Norton's portrayal of a murder suspect made a chilling impression.

He shares the lead for supporting actor with Cuba Gooding Jr. ("Show me the money!"), Tom Cruise's client in Jerry Maguire.

The voters could well display their sentimental tendencies with an award to veteran Lauren Bacall as Barbra Streisand's meddling mother in The Mirror Has Two Faces.

Other possibles: Juliette Binoche of The English Patient and Marianne Jean-Baptiste of Secrets and Lies.

Anthony Minghella seems almost unbeatable as best director for The English Patient.

In all fairness, it should be observed that major studios did sponsor films of substance in 1996.

Examples: The Crucible (20th Century Fox), Hamlet (Castle Rock-Columbia), Ghosts of Mississippi (Castle Rock-Columbia), Michael Collins (Warner Bros.), William Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet (20th Century Fox).

Yet none of these films appears to have paid off its production cost, which provides studio bosses with ample reason to avoid such films in the future.

Yippee!!!

Lookin' for LOVE in all the wrong places?
Come Down to the Collegian Arts and Living desk... and find TRUE LOVE!

Yahoo!!!

Dont just sit around... read the Collegian!!

Great Weekend Escapes for as low as $109 from MasterCard and United Airlines!

Take Off For The Weekend With United Airlines And Return The Following Monday Or Tuesday To Get Substantial Savings When You Use Your MasterCard® Card.

Weekender Zone Fare Certificate

C B A

Roundtrip Rates

Within Zone A or B	$129 roundtrip
Between Zone A & Zone B	$189 roundtrip
Between Zone A & Zone C	$269 roundtrip
Between Zone B & Zone C	$189 roundtrip
Within Zone C	$109 roundtrip

Not valid for travel to/from IL/CO/AK/HI

To enjoy these low Weekender Zone Fares - plus earn Mileage Plus® credit on your trip - just call your travel professional or United to reserve your flight and redeem your certificate.

To receive these savings, use your MasterCard® card to purchase an E-Ticket™ between Feb 1, 1997 and May 15, 1997 for travel between Feb 15, 1997 and June 6, 1997. Outbound travel must be on flights departing on Saturday. Return travel must be on flights returning the Monday following departure (An exception for travel between zones A-C. Return travel may also be on the Tuesday following departure).

Zone Definitions:
Zone A - AL, AR, CT, DC, DE, FL, GA, IA, IN, KY, LA, MA, MD, ME, MI, MN, MO, MS, NC, NH, NJ, NY, OH, PA, RI, SC, TN, VA, VT, WI, WV
Zone B - ID, KS, MT, ND, NE, NM, OK, SD, TX, UT, WY
Zone C - AZ, CA, NV, OR, WA

Not valid for travel to/from IL/CO/AK/HI

CUT CERTIFICATE HERE

Promo Code: AV0027
Ticket Designator: AV0027
Travel Complete: June 6, 1997

Use Your MasterCard® Card For Great Savings On United Airlines.

To make reservations, call United at 1-800-241-6522 or your travel professional.
Please reference Weekender Zone Fare Certificate AV0027.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS:
Promo Code: AV0027
Valid Carrier: United Airlines/Shuttle by United/United Express
Valid Routing: Round-trip travel must begin and end in the 48 contiguous United States (IL/CO/AK/HI excluded). All travel must be via the routes of UA in which UA publishes Economy Class fares. One way travel/stopovers/circle trip/open segments/standby/standby and not permitted. Open jaw permitted. (IL and CO excluded as origin/destination however connections through CHI/DEN are permitted.)
Valid Ticket Dates: Feb 1 through May 15 1997
Valid Travel Dates: Feb 15 through Jun 6, 1997. All travel must be complete by Jun 6, 1997
Blackout Dates: 1997 Mar 22, 29 Apr 5-12 Outbound travel must be on flights departing on Saturday, with return travel on flights the Monday following departure or the Tuesday following departure if the passenger is traveling between zones A, C
Class of Service: Y class (Seats are capacity controlled and must be available in the required booking inventory at the time reservations are confirmed.)
Advance Purchase: Within 24 hrs of making reservations, at least 14 days prior to departure
Min/Max Stay: Saturday-night stay minimum. RETURN TRAVEL MUST BE THE IMMEDIATE MONDAY FOLLOWING DEPARTURE. AN EXCEPTION FOR TRAVEL BETWEEN ZONES A-C. RETURN CAN ALSO BE THE IMMEDIATE TUESDAY FOLLOWING DEPARTURE
Mileage Plus Accrual: Discounted travel is eligible for Mileage Plus credit.
Ticketing: (Ticketing only electronic ticketing services)
Taxes/Service Charges: All fees, taxes and surcharges including Passenger Facility Charges (up to $12) are the responsibility of the passenger and must be paid at time of ticketing.
Cert Restrictions: Certificate is required for discount and must be presented at time of ticketing. Accept original certificate only. Non-extendable, non-combinable with other air travel certificates or discount fare offers (Mileage Plus awards/SilverWings awards/convention/group/tour/senior citizen/student/civil/travel package/travel industry discounts/ military/government/corporate/consolidator/bulk).

Not replaceable if lost or stolen. No cash value; may not be sold or bartered. Protection for flight irregularities will be on United/United Express/Shuttle by United flights only. Discount applies to new purchases only and will not be honored retroactively or in connection with the exchange of any wholly or partially unused ticket. One ticket per certificate redeemed. Void if altered or duplicated.
Ticketing Restrictions: Non-refundable. Non-transferable after ticketing. Change in origin or destination is not permitted. Tickets MAY BE revalidated for a $50 per ticket fee.

Agency Ticketing Instructions: See $*PMA/AV0027 for detailed information
1. Treat as Type 'A' Discount Certificate
-Use Fare Basis Code YE14NSTU
YE14NSTD (zones A-C)
-Use Ticket Designator AV0027
-Endorsement Box: VALID UA ONLY/Non-Ref/No Bin Changes
2. Refer to ARC Industry Agents' Handbook, section 8.0 for details
3. Failure to comply with promotion guidelines could result in debit memo

UAL ATO/CTO Ticketing Instructions: See $*PMO/AV0027

8 016 5003000045 7

UNITED AIRLINES

MasterCard

©1997 MasterCard International Incorporated.

Weekly Drink Specials

Bacardi Limon & Coke 2.00 16oz.

Vodka & Cranberry 2.00 16oz.

Rolling Rock 12oz. Bottles 1.50

Red Dog 16oz. Drafts 1.50

1/2 Price Appetizers and Nachos 3-5 and7-11 Friday & Sat

Holiday Weekend Dancing Fri-Sat-Sunday

Jamfood-spirits

THE PUB

15 East Pleasant St.

Air Force — Army invades Curry Hicks

By Matt Perrault
Collegian Staff

Coming off a huge win over Temple, the men's gymnastics team returns home to face two ranked opponents on Sunday at 4 p.m.

Air Force and Army invade the Curry Hicks Cage to take on the No. 7 ranked Minutemen, in what should be an outstanding display of talent.

UMass will be looking for another big performance from freshmen Jeff LaValle. LaValle broke three school records against Temple last week and is getting better everyday. He was named WHMP/UMass player of the week for his accomplishments. Still, he will have to be at his best again for UMass to continue its winning ways.

UMass coach Roy Johnson is expecting a tough battle, specifically from Army on the pommel horse.

"The pommel horse will be key," Johnson said.

Senior Lorenzo Macaluso, sophomore Brad LeClair, and LaValle will need to come up big for the Minutemen on the horse, which be the focal point for victory.

The Minutemen may need to duplicate their record breaking performance against Temple. Their all around score 227.45 was the highest in history, but a similar score may be needed to beat the solid Air Force and Army teams.

UMass has not had much success in meets against the military institutions, going a combined 34-40. Adding the fact that Air Force will be looking to avenge a last season loss to the Minutemen, a total team effort will be needed for victory.

Army beat UMass last season in a tri-meet with Washington by only two points at West Point. Revenge may be a motivator for the Minutemen who are trying win their ninth straight New England Championship.

This should be an outstanding meet and might be the stepping stone for a run at a National Championship for UMass.

The team is young but extremely talented. Experience gained from meets such as this will only help the youngsters get the confidence to perform in the crunch.

Women's track off to A-10's

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

All season long, the Massachusetts women's track and field team has been battling against the odds. More often than not, they have found a way to finish out on top, but come Saturday at the A-10 Championships in Kingston, Rhode Island, the Minutewomen will face their stiffest challenge of the season yet. How can their depleted roster come together to pull off the biggest upset in the A-10 this season, to knock off the powerhouse Hokies from Virginia Tech and repeat as A-10 champions.

This has been a recurring question haunting coach Julie LaFreniere, who has done a remarkable job this season adjusting to some serious losses to the core of the team.

The list of the wounded includes junior Rosey Bryan, who tallied 25 points for UMass in the A-10 Championships last season. Also missing from the mix is senior Anya Forrest who is the school's record holder in the hurdles, and one of LaFreniere's most valuable relay runners. Jamie Hedgecock, UMass' top sprint recruit is not available. As is Alison Tostevin, the top throwing recruit, and Sharon Tillotson, the top distance recruit.

"It will be real tough trying to beat Virginia Tech short- handed," LaFrenere said. "You can't just go into a championship game without players of that caliber."

To keep up with a complete Hokies squad, the Minutewomen will need to pick up the slack more than they have had to all season.

"Virginia Tech had a good recruiting class, and they have managed to stay healthy all year," LaFreniere said.

"They are very strong in the throws, and tough to beat in both the sprints and the hurdles."

In the 500m and 800m, Virginia Tech boasts the top times in the A-10. In the 800m though, UMass' Lisa Flood should be fresh and capable of contending with Virginia Tech's top runner.

In the 55 yard dash, UMass will look to pick up ground on the Hokies with the aid of extraordinary efforts from Shelanda Irish, Emma Gardiner and Raquell Shelton. Temple's Saunders is far and away the favorite to win this event, but after that it's going to be a dogfight, and UMass might be able to pick up some points on Virginia Tech.

"Gardiner and Shelton are ranked around seventh in that field," LaFreniere said. "We really need them to have a fantastic day and break into the top six."

There will be a key matchup in the 200m Sunday between Virginia Tech's Jen Cook, and Irish. Cook is considered the favorite with a top time of 25:49, but Irish is right on her heels with a time of 25:57. Irish has had little trouble pushing herself this year, and will need to do it again, and steal some huge points. Behind her will be Silifa Kenku and Melanie Bell who have a decent shot to move themselves up and win some points.

The Minutewomen's 400m crew is particularly strong with Kenku ranked No. 1 and Michelle Cooper No. 3. Once again, UMass will need a special performance from Cooper in hopes that she might steal the second position.

The 500m could be a tough event for UMass who will throw an inexperienced freshman Christine Kloiber into the Hokie-infested waters and hope she can hold her own.

LaFreniere is saving freshman Lisa Flood for the 800m. She hopes that a fast and fresh Flood can keep up with the rest of the pack, and finish among the top three.

Donaghue should win the mile and the 1000m, and LaFreniere hopes that Christy Martin can better her No. 4 ranking in the mile and slide into the top three.

Katie Greenia is favored to take the 3000m, and she must win it for UMass to stay in contention. But in addition to it, LaFreniere hopes that freshman Sally Hirsch can shave five seconds or so off her time, and move up from her eighth place ranking into a possible scoring position.

With her eighth ranking in the 5000m, veteran Molly Dunlap looks to move up and grab some points for UMass.

"This is a big event for us, and we're not expected to do much," LaFreniere said. "I know Molly Dunlap will rise to the occasion, and she can probably leap into the top four."

But the story of this event may just be whether or not sophomore Tracy Meagher can make her 5000m debut a memorable one by surprising the field and stealing some points.

In the field events, UMass looks decent in the long jump. URI's Damian Dudek owns the best jump at 19', but she only accomplished that distance once. Behind her is Irish with a top jump of 18'5". She has beaten Dudek in the past, and has a legitimate shot to do it again.

Virginia Tech's April Byrd is expected to run away from the rest of the pack in the triple jump as she has jumped over 40'. In second place is Nicole Way with a top jump of 36'2". It is crucial that she sures up a second place finish.

Shana Mitchell is close behind two URI girls in the 20 lb. division, with a chance to move up into second place.

Andrea Comeau must add a few inches onto her 5'8" high jump to defeat Virginia Tech's Katie Olendick.

"We need several things to happen for us to pull out this victory," LaFreniere said. "Anything can happen, but the girls will have to perform above and beyond what they've been expected to do all season."

Women's gym hosts Airforce & Yale Sunday

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Women's Gymnastics team prepares to take on both Air Force and Yale in a tri-meet this Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Minutewomen have been on a streak, setting numerous school and personal records in their last two meets, and look to continue this on Sunday.

"I don't expect anything but more than we've already seen. I expect to break school records again this weekend," UMass coach Dave Kuzara said.

At their last meet against Bridgeport and Rhode Island, Kuzara utilized most of the team, giving the women a chance to compete on events they didn't usually do. And even without the use of an all-around competitor, such as Tara Swartz or Lianne Laing, the Minutewomen were still able to set six new school records.

"If you have a team that has some depth, like we have, you're going to see some meets where we don't have any all-arounders," Kuzara said.

It's precisely this depth that has carried the team thus far, and what will carry them through to Nationals. After last weekend's meet, they moved up in the standings.

"Scoring high is important. We jumped back into the Top 25 this week. We've never been in the Top 25 this late in the season before. And we're trying to break school records," Kuzara said.

The Minutewoman hold the No. 1 spot in the A-10 for individual performances in three events (Denise Johnson, vault: 9.90; Tara Swartz, uneven bars: 9.925 and Anita Sanyal, balance beam: 9.9125) and are tied for first place on floor exercise (Denise Johnson: 9.90). They also have the top all-around score (Mandy Mosby, 38.80) and are No. 1 in all events for team performance.

"We have a lot of depth on floor and vault right now," Kuzara said. "We have nine people that have scored over a 9.50."

According to Kuzara, the Minutewomen have a lot of confidence going into Sunday's meet. He lauded the initiative and drive of his team, and expressed complete assurance that they would accomplish what they set out to do.

"I have a team of people who don't set limitations on themselves. They honestly believe their going to go 196 this weekend and I think they have a great chance too," Kuzara said. "They think they are the best, and that is why they are as good as they are. We've done stuff that we've talked about only dreamed of, scoring 193, and now 194.9. This year they haven't doubted themselves."

Kuzara is very optimistic about the forthcoming meet, and a strong performance will likely improve their regional standings.

"I think we are in really good position. We have moved up to No. 3 in the region. We're only a couple of tenths behind the No. 1 seed," Kuzara said. "Being the No. 1 seed would be a big feather in our cap going to NCAA regionals."

If the Minutewomen have a good meet on Sunday, it's very plausible than they will accomplish that goal.

"We're pretty happy with what's going on," Kuzara said. "We just can't get off this roll now, we just have to keep going."

Depth key to victory for men's track

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is sending the best athletes it has to Kingston, Rhode Island tomorrow to compete in the Atlantic 10 Championship.

The group, known as the Massachusetts men's track and field team, is hoping the smallest state is their territorial version of a good luck charm, as just two weeks ago they beat out the University of Rhode Island and New Hampshire in convincing fashion at the same location.

"It should be a good meet," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said. "I think La Salle, URI, Virginia Tech and ourselves should all be tough competitors. Particularly Virginia Tech and UMass.

"I see us both finishing with about 120 to 125 points, and La Salle and URI finishing with about 110 to 115. The difference between say, second and third place could be a couple of position changes. It could be a very close competition."

Last season, the Minutemen finished third in the championship. But this season, O'Brien feels that one is hard-pressed to find some weaknesses in his team, and statistics from the regular season strongly support his statement.

With athletes such as captain Christian Abbot, Ian Stevens, Alex Ampontuah, Andre Roach, Ben Baraldi, Scott Price, Tom Toye, Dave Cahill, Jon Way and Paul Blodorn, just to name a few, from various events, the opposition better have an equally deep squad or a couple of multi-talented, blue chip athletes.

"We've got all events covered," said O'Brien. "The bottom line is the strength of this team is it has two or three athletes in every event. Other teams aren't getting free points from us. We're not a team of superstars, so a team with about five of those can win a meet.

"We'd really like to improve over last season's third place finish," said O'Brien. "Of course, either a first or second place finish would do the trick, but I think we can win the whole thing."

One group to keep an eye on will be the 4 x 400 relay team. Last week, at Boston University's St. Valentine's Invitational, it broke the UMass record time of 3:18.1 with an astonishing 3:15.22 mark. The relay team consists of Neil Concepcion, Price, Toye and Cahill.

Also, Stevens goes in as the leading shot putter in the meet.

After tomorrow, next on the agenda for UMass is the New England Championship, to be followed by the IC4A's. Only qualifying athletes participate in those meets.

Critical weekend for UM ski teams

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

Opportunity is knocking for the Minutewomen, and this weekend is their last chance to open the door.

The Massachusetts men's and women's ski teams head to Berkshire East this weekend for the Smith College Tournament. The Minutewomen have to ski well enough this weekend to move into fifth place in the regional standings. If they can do it, then they'll be able to represent UMass at the NCAA Regionals and the United States Collegiate Skiing Association Regionals at the end of this month.

"Everything depends on this weekend," coach Bill MacConnell said. "It's a do-able thing if our women can go fast enough."

The Minutewomen are currently in sixth place in the regional standings with 48 points. Ahead of them is Brown University with 45 points. Leading the pack is undefeated Boston College with eight points, followed by Plymouth State College with 22 points and Smith College with 24.

Not only will the Minutewomen have to ski at or very near first place, they'll also have to hope that Brown skis poorly. The highest the Minutewomen have finished this season is fifth place, in the UMass Tournament held at the beginning of the season.

The women faced some injury problems this year, but look to have everyone back and healthy this weekend. Top skier Leah Muliero pulled a muscle in a fall last weekend, but is scheduled to return on Saturday. Junior Jill Cash has been out with a sprained ankle, but MacConnell is also looking for her to ski this weekend.

Should the Minutewomen fail to move into sixth place this weekend, some individual skiers should still be able to go to the regionals. The top 15 skiers are allowed to compete in the regionals, regardless of their team's record. All- American Muliero and sophomore Katie Keane will most likely be selected from the UMass Squad.

"It's almost 100 percent certain that Muliero and Keane will qualify," MacConnell said.

The Men's ski team has been cruising along, and should have no problems this weekend. The team holds second place in the standings, having moved ahead of third place B.C. last weekend. The Minutemen have 17 points, behind Plymouth State's 12.

The men won their second straight slalom last weekend, and took second in the slalom. They have not finished below third place all season, and are well on their way to the Regionals. Junior Tom Schaefer and sophomore Tom Holden, who have both had exceptional individual seasons this year, have been leading the way for UMass. They should be selected to go to the Regionals on an individual basis as well.

COLLEGIAN FILE

In UMass–Maryland games gone by, former Minuteman Dana Dingle goes in for two over current Terp Keith Booth.

■ hoop

continued from page 10

draws the same national spotlight that a UMass– Temple or a Duke–North Carolina attracts, but the two schools are not strangers to each other on the basketball court.

Tomorrow's game will be the sixth meeting for the teams, with UMass holding a 3–2 series advantage. The Minutemen have taken the past two games from the Terps, including last year's 50–47 win in the Franklin Bank Classic on Dec. 2, 1995.

What is odd about the Maryland–Massachusetts series, is the fact that only one of the five previous meetings has been played on either school's campus. The Terrapins reigned in that contest at their Cole Field House, a NIT first–round game, 91–81.

Maryland's other win in the series is a memorable one for UMass fans; the No. 10 seed Terps took an NCAA Tournament win over the second–seeded Minutemen 95–87 In 1994.

Luckily for the Minutemen and UMass coach James "Brulser" Flint, tomorrow's contest is not on campus either. UMass is only 6–4 at the William D. Mullins Center this season. Instead, the game will be in Worcester, where the Minutemen have never lost. UMass has posted a perfect 6–0 record at the Centrum, including wins over Memphis last year and Syracuse in the 1992 NCAA Tournament second round.

Maryland statistics do not include last night's game against Florida State.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

two teams, UNH and BU. But also, due to a minor paperwork error, coach Shawn Walsh's squad is ineligible for the postseason this year because of those aforementioned sanctions.

Up to Thursday afternoon, though, that ruling which was made last Aug. 1 was still up in the air. Ten days ago, Maine filed an appeal to lift the sanction, and after a 10 day period to consider the Black Bear question was denied.

Yet, after an off–season where the Black Bears had to face the purposeful departure of three of their star players, forward Tim Lovell (UMass), defenseman Jeff Tory and goalie Blair Allison (the Canadian National team), those sanctions could have added insult to injury.

But, not true. Maine has bounced back after a tumultuous off–season to take third place in HE all for themselves.

After Walsh's return to the team at the Denver Cup on last Dec. 27, the Black Bears have been on fire with a 9–3 record (8–2 in HE). Freshman goalie Alfie Michaud was named HE Rookie of the Month for January, going 5–0 with a 2.30 GAA and a .903 save percentage.

Leading scorer Steve Kariya (16–23–39) has stepped into the formidable Bauer's of his older brother, Paul, who was a former Black Bear and Hobey Baker Award winner, and now plays for the Anaheim Mighty Ducks.

Maine has proved to be beatable, and not just at the hands of nationally ranked squads in BU and UNH. With home losses to Northeastern, Merrimack and Lowell, the historically hostile climate of Alfond Arena has been more fond for their visiting teams than futile.

So, after all of this, the Minutemen need to address the Black Bears as a good hockey team, not as good hockey team that gets as much publicity off–the–ice as on–the–ice.

"I think our guys have to show them enough respect as a good team, but also have enough confidence to go out and beat them," Mallen said. "As we wind down from February into March, we have to start and get ready for the playoffs.

"At this point, we have to start playing with a more tighter checking style of hockey. These games become more critical in terms of picking up points, but also seeing where we stand, and how successful we could be in the playoffs."

■ win

continued from page 10

The 6–foot–2 junior responded to the pressure, expelling Brown's shot with the ruthless efficiency of a parochial school headmaster.

"There's a point when you say 'I've got to do something to turn this around. I've got to help bring my teammates up,'" Tudman said. "I hope that the momentum I can bring to the team can make a difference in the games."

Tudman's three second–half blocks four hit free–throws in the last minute of play were the momentum savers for the Minutewomen, along with the play of guards Kelly Van Huissen and Sabriya Mitchell. Van Huissen and Mitchell easily broke the press, and began feeding the ball to the post for the clutch baskets.

"I think [in the second half] Kelly and Sabriya especially did a good job getting the ball to Crystall and Kara," O'Brien said. "We just picked up our intensity."

The increased focus and intensity through key players Tudman and Carroll were all the Minutewomen needed to counter their slow start. The two 6–footers led UMass, which shot .680 in the second frame, at times showing a more mature, tournament ready team approaching do–or–die situations.

"For us this has got to be the start of our tournament time," O'Brien said. "If we've got any aspirations of playing beyond the A–10 tournament we've got to get down to business."

■ women's hoops

continued from page 10

for the rest of the ballgame.

Tudman, who struggled early in the season in the starting center role, kept up with her good play of late with 11 points and six rebounds, and her four blocks ties a career high set on Dec. 28, 1996 at Wagner. Van Huisen scored nine points and dished out six assists, and freshman Alison MacFarland scored five points and pulled down eight rebounds.

The Minutewomen shot the lights out in the second half, hitting on 17–of–25 shots from the field, for 68 percent. The Bonnies, on the other hand, went cold, shooting only 11–31 and missing on all five 3–point attempts in the second half.

"I was upset with the play in the first half," O'Brien said. "We were lackadaisical, but we picked up our intensity [in the second half]."

The Bonnies missed opportunities to put the Minutewomen away at the free throw line, hitting on only 10 of 21 from the charity stripe. St. Bonaventure was led by forward Kelly Mathews, who scored 15 points and cleaned up eight rebounds. Sophomore Hilary Waltman, who leads the Bonnies in scoring at 20 points a game, was held to just nine points in 32 minutes of action.

The Minutewomen return to action Sunday when the Fordham Rams come to the Mullins Center. Game time is

Recycle Your Collegian!!!!!!

Valentine's Day

Collegian Classifieds...

Making Your Valentine Feel Special

Dear Big guy, I'll love you forever. I promise.
Love,
Buttercup

Dear Linda Lou Happy Valentine's Day. I love you. Love Always, Jack

I Love You Pucha Always and forever
Luv Aunty

Starker,
For that which you love most in him may be clearer in his absence, as the mountain to the climber is clearer from the plain
My love,
Lynn

She is my diamond she is my pert. Bebe is everything in my world
Love,
Pete

Casey,
I love You.
Happy Valentine's Day.
Love
Matt

Josh, (RAQTZ Serra
CME Happy Valentine's Day. Beautiful! I love you. Grunt! Grunt!
Love
Joyoba

Christos If it destiny I love you! See you tonight.
Love
Pete

Tim (of the Terrific Trio),
I love draw the animal out of every woman. You are always be my "Perfect Match"
Your Valentine,
Haise

Bruce and Sneil We're trees kissing

SWEETS,
Thanks for always being there! UR the best! HUN'YA.
Josh

Steph and Nancy
Happy Black Friday.
The truth is out there, even if our valentine's are not.
Hugs and Kisses
For Mulder

Thom,
I love for all the wrong pieces. Bubba Sub-Slingin' Lovin' Machine Kind of Woman. Who is into Frank Zappa And Is Wisconsin Bring Your Gun Back
Yrs Alex

Stacy,
Thanks (lots) for being you. You are all I'll ever need.
I LOVE YOU!
Jon

Happy Valentine's Day from the Boomer Night Staff!

Dearest Itchy and Scratchy,
Thanks for making each day brighter for me! Have a great day!
Love,
Gator

Brad, Happy Valentine's Day! You have brought so much love into my life! You're wonderful.
Love,
Bridge

TSUI,
I don't know what changes lie ahead, or where our shared path will lead, but what I do know- is that I'm here for you today. To listen or talk. To applaud or console. To want, need, and to love you with all my heart.
TOM, "MEANIE"

Ebony,
I Love You...MOSTEST!!!
Love,
Jason

Hogboy,
A hug from you is like a thousand comforting blankets. Every day with you is like a thousand dreams come true. Happy Valentine's Day honey!
Love,
Bubba

Happy Valentine's Day Honey,
It's been a great year together, I hope we have many more. I love you and always will.
Your Pumpkin

K- Just wanted to let you know I love you and I'm proud of you! Let's puff and hit Blockbuster
-A

Happy Valentine's Day to UMass! We love you all today and always Pruddy's

Happy Valentine's Day to the most beautiful part of Pruddy's- Our ladies!
Wa love you!
Pruddy's

Happy Valentine's Day to all our editorial friends,
From everyone at Pruddy's

Happy Valentine's Day Tracey, Stacy, Allie, Kourtney and Lauren P.,
You guy are best!!
Love,
Mookie

You are the cutest fire engine I know and I want to give you Moonpies.
Love,
Your Princess

Snookums (a.k.a. Novio),
Happy Valentine's Day to the bastest boyfriend in the whole wide world! Your love makes my heart laugh, smile, and feel all warm and snuggly- and being with you makes me happier than seeing a whole table full of Bloomin' Onions! (That definitely shows how special you are to me) I love you honey to infinity and beyond!
Your Valentine,
Pooka

Stacy,
I love you
Jon

SARAH You're the best sister! HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY!
Love,
Jon

Dearest Swiftboy,
Love ya lots! I don't know what I would do without you! Happy Valentine's Day
Love,
Schendella

Thomas Michael B
I haven't been able to sleep since that kiss we shared last spring. Your lips pressed against mine. Your hand sliding down my...Ohhh...OH YEAH. You will be mine. You already are
Love,
The Psycho Girl

Dr. Bocker
I've seen maggots with more class than you! Happy Valentine's Day!
Love,
Amanda I. ☺

Dear Noonan,
Happy Valentine's Day!
Just 10 more months!
Love,
A Push

Evan,
For all that you do-
For all that you are-
For all that you have helped me to be-
I love you
Happy Valentine's Day!
Love,
Julianna

Todd,
You're my cupid, I love you!
Love,
Stacey

Happy Valentine's Day Tracey.
You guys are best!!
Love,
Mookie

Eric,
Even though you don't go to UMass, I wanted to let everyone know I love you
Kaba

The "Crewmor" going around is that UMass Woman's Crew is the strongest and sexiest team on campus. So come check us out one morning and see these buff bodies in action. Have a great Valentine's Day everyone.
Love,
HS LWT

Good Luck at Crash B's

Byron(a.k.a. Shmoopy):
"You and me have a better time than most can dream of." Happy Valentine's Day! I love you! Forever and Always.
Me

Angela,
Happy Valentine's Day!
I'll see you on Monday!
Love,
Kilbasa Boy

P.S. Don't break any towel bars without me!

Patrick, Laura, Little Laura, Lisa, Amanda, Josh, Scotty Frye,
I Love You! Happy Valentine's Day!
Love Ya
Jackie

Pookie,
I know I haven't been the easiest person to be around lately. I just want you to know that your love, patience and understanding have not gone unnoticed. I LOVE YOU WITH ALL MY HEART!
Snooky

Erin Mc-
Hugs and sloppy dog kisses to you and Bailey.
Your pal
Trouble

DP L
My life is different since I met you. Thank you because you have shown me every thing is possible.
Ta Estranio Always
Me

Megan,
I want to let you know that I was thinking of you. You are the goalie that makes my team complete. Happy Valentine.
John

Super Daddy,
There hasn't been a dull moment yet. Thanks for being my cheese. You're the best. I love you.
Ham

Dearest Alison, Christen, Chris, Melissa, Shannon and Tara,
Just to let you know that you are being love on this special! Well, actually every day!! Happy Valentine and I love Ya'!
AJW

Luka,
Thank you so much for everything you have done! I love you. Sweatheart!
Looking forward to Spring Break
Love
Jen

Kelli S
I hope you are having a great V-Day. Don't let Norvy steal your heart while I'm gone.
Love
Me

Carissa Mio-
Ta Queens TS

M-Star,
Have you figured out why we're still dating yet? Remember 2 things: 1) sex with friends- trouble 2) I LOVE YOU!! Happy Valentine's Day and good luck @ the A-10 meet!
Love,
The Fast One

Wombat: Happy Valentine's Day 21595. Have fun- Good Luck- Take Care- WBC

Mountain Man:
Have a wonderful day!
See you tonight for a walk in the woods
Love
Dra

To all the "awesome" men of third floor Kennedy and Emerson Basement, You guys are the greatest!!
Happy Valentine's Day! Love Always,
Alexa

TIM,
We have been so close
Would you like to go all the way?
I'll bring the oils
Love,
BEAR

Jonie,
To my only sunshine
HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY!
Love
Michael

I love the work you guys have done. I think you guys do the best parties in the valley. I can't wait until your next party on Feb. 22 at Club Metro. I luv you both.
Love,
Jen

Jen L-
You are: My soul, My inspiration, My everything! Happy B'! I love you!
Larry

CLS,
I love you too much
If I was, like, an animal
Happy Valentine's Day!
I love you
CJB

JAIME PEREZ-
You Always Know How To Keep Me Smiling. I LOVE YOU!!
MXX

Angela,
I'm glad you're in my life
I Love You!
Per

Sean,
You have been my best friend for so long and you always will be. I love you with all my heart. Happy Valentine's Day Baby!
I love you always,
Bella

Dear Eddie, Thank you for making my heart smile. I love you.
Melanie

Jaime. HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY! Happy Anniversary too! I LOVE YOU.
Bryan

Jessica and Adrienne,
You guys are the best friends a girl could ask for!
Love,
Joy

Francesca,
You tell the story, so much better than I do
Paolo 7193

Sou P -
You haven't put out in our Friday rendezvous of late, but we want you to know we'll wait however long it takes.
G+E+O

Dearest Boo- Ja Laime plus Qu'pieds
Love
Boo

Erma, On this special day I just wanted to let you know that you are so special to me. I don't know what I'd do without you. Loving You Always,
Bebe

Diana: Benvenida al centro
Feliz DIA de la amistad.
Siempre Lacc Staff

Norma & Cell,
Las chicas peligrosas del centro
Saben q las quiero mucho x las dos
Su damian y cundersen de ellas

Alyssa- Since the first moment I saw you I knew you were the one! I love you! Love always, Bill

Jen L-
You are: My soul, My inspiration, My everything! Happy B'! I love you!
Larry

Super Daddy,
There hasn't been a dull moment yet. Thanks for being my cheese. You're the best. I love you.
Ham

Dearest Alison, Christen, Chris, Melissa, Shannon and Tara,
Just to let you know that you are being love on this special! Well, actually every day!! Happy Valentine and I love Ya'!
AJW

To My Candy Man,
I LOVE YOU! Alot
I'm thinking of you!
Feed Me!
Love,
Kitty

CJB, Valentine's Day #3
I'm romping with Spot
You are so smooth,
And that you will never lose!
You are so fine,
So be my Valentine!
Love,
CLS

Chip,
Happy Fifth Valentine'
I love you
U

M.D.- I don't know what's going on. For the past week all you've been doing is spending time with this other guy. You make him meals, you clean him up, and you even sleep with him. What's going on? O.K. I guess I'm over reacting a bit. I know it's just a fling, but then, I need attention too! Anyway, I hope you have a Happy V-Day.
LL

B,
Te amo
Happy 4 months
K

Nelson,
I'm a 5 foot 3 inch, blond haired, 15 year old girl who was at Mike's Westview on Wed. night. You don't know me, but I won't forget you. Happy V Day!
Your Secret Admirer

P.S. You are a smooth dancer

M.A.P.
Happy V-Day Monkey! Smile, I love you!
JAC

To Dalibor Bebcevic, I love your long pony tail and your manly gloria. You are the man of my dreams. You Serbian Sex God. Love Always. Your secret admirer

To the guys at 156 South East St.,
You guys are so hot and your parties rock!
-Love The Ladies

Lisa D.
Remember last year?
Mam W

DAVID X YOU KEEP MY HARD DRIVE RUNNING. YOUR GRAPHICS MAKE ME WILD. YOURS, MAC

Chete, I love you!
Special K

Vivs, my sexy luv bug,
I just can't wait to see you're fuctious body this weekend, you goddess of my heart and keeper of my citizenship
Hen

Christine, Queen of De Nile,
Just twenty years, and we'll finally be together... you know who

Songstress,
The love I feel for you will last forever. I know you hate me, but I know you love me too.
-King K

Lia, just do it, and kick ass
Love,
Mike

Dear Cinderella
I miss you a lot. All you left me was a three stratta glass slipper. I'd wear it, but it might break. So please come home.
Love, Prince Charming

Aimee and Laura
You guys are absolutely the greatest!
The artist formerly known as Arts Girl

Boone,
I love you and I hope everything works out
Sang

Brigid,
Shooting out a happy valentine's day wish to you from far away.
P.S. I love you
JS

LaDonna,
I miss you a lot. I wish we could have more time together. You can be Madonna and I'll be your chief
-Leo

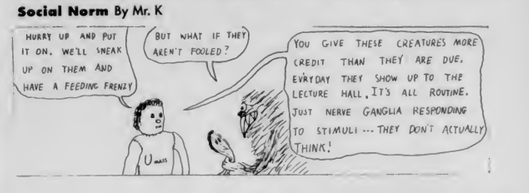
Casey & Blaise,
We love you!
TA, Room

To Ryan,
You will always be my noodles
Love, Shane

Doka,
Do all roads lead to gloody?
Powder blue is your color
So here's a big howdy
Hope you'd day is not duller
Julia R

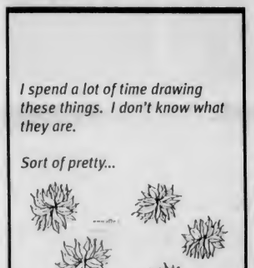
Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

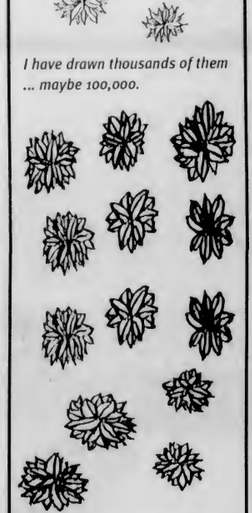


Dilbert By Scott Adams

Non Sequiter By Wiley

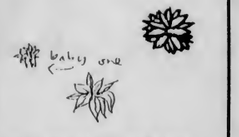


Social Norm By Mr. K



Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I spend a lot of time drawing these things. I don't know what they are.

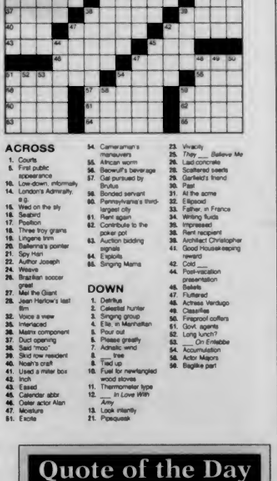


Sort of pretty...

I have drawn thousands of them ... maybe 100,000.

I wonder why I draw these things? I do it a lot.

So..... how do you dull your sexual energies?



University² By Frank Cho

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Those of you who ate the chicken at the Fowler-Doherty wedding can come with me. And we'd appreciate it if you three bridesmaids would stop chanting, 'Kill the caterer!'"

ACROSS

1. Courts
5. First public appearance
10. Low-down, informally
14. London's Admiralty, e.g.
15. Weld on the sly
16. Seagoing
17. Position
18. Three tiny grams
19. Lingers long
20. Ballerina's pointer
21. Spy Hari
22. Author Joseph
24. Weave
26. Brazilian soccer great
27. Melt the Glaciers
28. Joan Harlow's last film
32. Voice a view
35. Intersected
36. Matrix component
37. Dull opening
38. Said "moo"
39. Skid row resident
40. Noah's craft
41. Used a miter box
42. Inch
43. Erased
45. Calendar abbr.
46. Dieter actor Alan
47. Mockups
51. Exists
54. Cameraman's maneuvers
55. African worm
56. Beowulf's beverage
57. Get pursued by Brutus
58. Bonded servant
60. Pennsylvania's third largest city
61. Rent again
62. Contribute to the poker pot
63. Auction bidding signals
64. Exploits
65. Singing Mama

DOWN

1. Delirium
2. Celestial hunter
3. Singing group
4. Ella in Manhattan
5. Pour out
6. Please greatly
7. Admistic wind
8. Tree
9. Tied up
10. Fuel for newfangled wood stoves
11. Thermometer type
12. ___ In Love With Amy
13. Look intently
21. Pokeweed
23. Vivacity
25. They ___ Believe Me
26. Laid concrete
28. Scattered seeds
29. Garfield's friend
30. Pipe
31. At the acme
32. El Nopood
33. Father, in France
34. Writing fluids
35. Impressed
36. Rent recipient
38. Architect Christopher
41. Good House-keeping reward
42. Cold ___
44. Post-vacation presentation
46. Ballets
47. Flutterer
48. Actress Verdugo
49. Classifies
50. Fireproof coffers
51. Govt. agents
52. Long lunch?
53. ___ On Entiedre
54. Accumulation
58. Actor Majors
59. Bagpipe part

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
As tension to one area of your life roars, storms could be brewing elsewhere. Pay close attention to mechanical things, especially if you're planning to travel. A once-over with a mechanic could prevent a serious breakdown, and save you money on repairs.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Ask your sweetheart to help you handle a difficult situation. He or she may have just the right blend of tact and firmness to finesse a difficult person. Start sewing now for a project you've been wanting to take on—by the time you have a big enough nest egg, the time will be right.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
You may be feeling a little sensitive lately. Instead of taking it out on others, quietly seclude yourself. Don't ignore a ringing phone, though, or you could miss out on an important opportunity. A mild relationship lessons your mood toward the weekend.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Your persistence and efforts to a personal relationship are beginning to pay off in terms of increased trust and intimacy. But your communication could cause bigger problems than you might have imagined. Make sure you aren't holding back on anything this week.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Treat yourself to a mini getaway—a drive to the country could refresh you and inspire you to new heights. Invite a group of friends over this weekend for conversation and games. You could make it a new understanding with one of them, to your mutual advantage.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
If you're having trouble making something happen, be sure that you're asking the right questions. Sometimes, all it takes is a fresh perspective. Don't overwork yourself, or you'll skip over an obvious mistake. Instead, step aside and come back to things later.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
You're much too much with an early garage sale and treat yourself to something you've been wanting with the proceeds. Leave the credit cards at home or you could seriously overdraw your budget. Your partner offers some needed support and a great sense of humor.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
In matters of the heart, you need to be looking for someone more mature of fact. Follow a friend's advice when it comes to handling a tough personal choice. Spend more time than usual practicing a new skill or technique. It will be valuable in the near future.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Your funny bone is extra sensitive this week, so treat yourself to a belly laugh or two with someone you'd like to get to know better. An old friend calls with interesting news. He or she may need a favor. Offer to help in any way you can, and your own outlook will improve.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Setbacks make you crazy this week, especially if they're out of your own making. Try to be patient, and console yourself with thinking of ways you can improve this situation the next time. An evening gathering holds the possibility of a new connection.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Make a break in your routine by doing something really crazy. You don't need to be irresponsible to refresh yourself. Take a bubble bath, try a new activity, call someone out of the blue. Consider it an investment in your well-being, and you won't be disappointed.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
You may feel as though you've been going a mile a minute. Pace yourself, and you'll find your second wind. An outdoor activity gives you the opportunity to make someone very happy. If you receive an offer, make sure there are no strings attached.

Quote of the Day

"I can tell my parents hated me... My bath toys were a toaster and a radio."

–Rodney Dangerfield

Joke of the Day

Why didn't the lobster want to share?

–Because he was shellfish

Today's Staff

Seema Gangatirkar
Night Editor

Lisa Chiu
Copy Editor

Chris Cesnek
Photo Technician

Mark McGrath
Production Supervisor

Elizabeth Brown
Sandra Krauss
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Cut Sandwich
Philly Chz Stk Sandwich
Cheese Pizza

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Mac & Cheese
Tofu Fajita
1/4 Pounder

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger off Roll
Chick Cut. Sandwich
Hand-cut Cod Sub

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Light Cod w/ Basil Garlic Sauce

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Sneeze
Slappy Joe
Spag w/ Sauce
Vegan Slappy Joe

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
3 Sneeze Macaroni
Tri Bean Casserole
Italian Sweet Sausage

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Sneeze
Slappy Joe
Pizza
Spag. w/ Sauce

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
3 Sneeze Macaroni
Tri Bean Casserole
Italian Sweet Sausage

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session on 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS. 6 credits airfare. Eurorail Room/board ALL FOR $3299. Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4040

ANNOUNCEMETS

The Sisters of Sigma Kappa invite all university women to Open Rush. For times, information, and a ride, please call 256-6887

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by.

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or Smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5188 for answers to your questions. Completely Confidential

VALENTINE ROSES
Send your Valentine some roses! Deliveries available on-campus and in Amherst. Place your order with Mary on the Campus Center Concourse from 9am- until 5pm on February 12th, 13th and 14th!

TREK FANS If you are interested in joining STARFLEET International, please contact Martin A. Lessem @ 546-7003 to get membership information

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst 2 bedroom apartment for rent. Water and heat included. Take over lease. Call Angela 546-4784

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 Honda Accord 4-door, 5-speed, 114,000 miles, needs brake work. $500 or B/O. 253-3071

1984 VW GTI 120K, $1000 or B/O. John 256-3569

1986 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap $1850 or B/O. 546-5320

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Wayne sister half of brother/sister camp, NE Pennsylvania, 6/23-8/20/97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation On-Campus Interviews: March 11. Call (800)279-3019

$15 per hour minimum- Teaching S.A.T. Prep-Course Teacher needed in all parts of MA and CT. Undergraduate degree preferred, excellent math and verbal scores required. Send resume to: American Academy, P.O. Box 2062, Oswego, NY 13126

Exceptional Summer Opportunity- Camp Wayne, NE Pennsylvania. Sports oriented Counselor/Specialist for all land/water sports including tennis, camping, climbing/ropes, rocketry, roller hockey, sailing/water-skiing, A&C, drama, video. Campus Interviews Tuesday, March 11. Please call (800)737-9296

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7767 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

LIFE MODELS- Male/Female for Life Drawing class at Holyoke Community College. $10 per hour. Call David M. at 253-5885 or 557-2492

English Teachers Needed Abroad! Teach conversational English in Prague, Budapest or Krakow. No teaching certificate or European languages required. Inexpensive room and board and other benefits. For details call (206)971-3680

Camp Blue Ridge, a co-ed camp 2 hours north of Atlanta, is looking for enthusiastic counselors. We are looking for lifeguards, WSI, as well as instructors in water-skiing, rappelling, boating, art, riflery, archery, sports, drama, cheerleading and dance. For more info call Debra at 665-8463

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St. D40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N5017 (We are a research and publishing company)

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info, send resume and letter of interest to Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188

Cruise Line Entry level on-board positions available. Benefits. Summer or year round. (517)643-4333

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)278-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

Fridge Rentals 253-9747 Free Delivery.

EMPLOYMENT

Auditions for Utah Shakespearean Festival Greenshow performers, Feb 15 at 10am in Totman Gym Room 13. Full summer employment and housing. Looking for singers/dancers/actors. Also looking for jugglers/musicians. For more info call 256-3077

FOR SALE

Chinchilla with cage and set-up to a good home. $100.00 Robin 549-5124

Macintosh SE, Hard Drive, Style Writer II ink jet printer, $400 or B/O Call 549-9186

Laptop/Notebook $99. Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 566-3324-2

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941.

For Sale- Electric Guiter Peavey Star's strat copy, excellent condition. $200. Sean 546-5734

FOUND

To Carla, I have your keys. Call Kevin at 6-1422

INSTRUCTION

Performing Arts Division offers group and private instruction in Music, Theater and Dance. PAD is located in 73 Bartlett Hall, UMass. Call (413)545-0519 for info.

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. On- campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info.

LOST

J Hurteau, You left your wallet at the Collegian. Please call 545-3500

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved! Cost $35. (800)666-4793

PERSONALS

"I'm burning up for your love"- Madonna. Free love and Valentine's at www.mainquad.com

Dearest: Al, Christee, Chris, Shaneen, Tara and Melissa
This will be the last Valentine we are spending. Have a wonderful Valentine and I love you all dearly!!!

Yours AYW

To the sew members of Delta Zeta Toby, Robyn, Samara, Bonnie, Lori, Jodi, Barb S, Sari, Beth N, Royce, Carrie, Anna, Anna Ashni, Casey, Allision, Elke, and Vel, Congreds and Good luck for this semester. Love, the sisters of DZ

ROOM FOR RENT

Dee bedroom ie a 2 bedroom apt. Available immediately. On bus route. Sugarloaf Estates. Kaira (203)294-1336 Females only.

Housemate wanted to share house on the Connecticut River. No pets or smoke. $250+ 586-8593

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Business or Paranoel E-mail at AGRO-ART@MAIL.ME.COM

SERVICES

Pregnent? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Groancard programs available (800)773-8704 Cost $29 Applications close 2-24-97.

Pierciega by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Seeking Fioancial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. 1500116 (We are a research and publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs.

TRAVEL

Spring Break/ Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Panama City, South Padre. Lowest prices. Reliable Company. Asta Italian Member. Contact Matt 253-6473

Spring Break '97 Don't be left out! Space limited!! Cancun and Jamaica from $449, Florida from $139. Call STS @ (800)648-4849 for the best rates

Jomoico-Spring Break from $599. Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week. (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen

TRAVEL

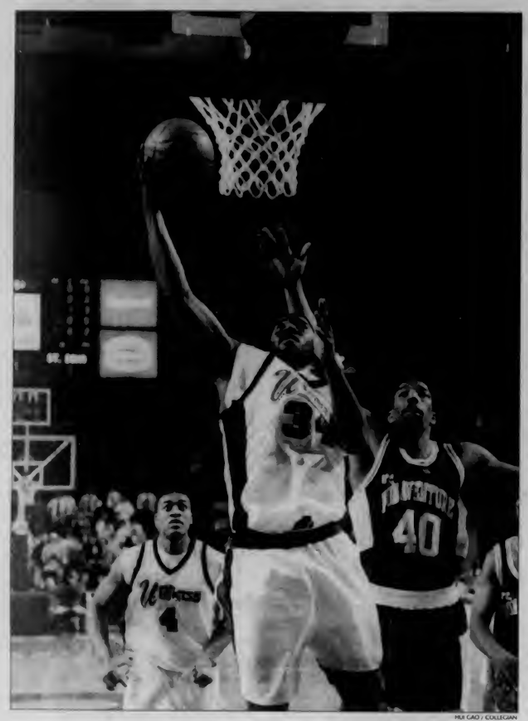
Killington- Cheap Spring Break $728 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations. Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Intercampus Representatives. (800)327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Best Deal- 100% Guaranteed Organized by local travel company. Great packages for Cancun, Florida, and more. Call 256-8724

Europe $155, Calib./Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations Airhitch, Inc (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.i-site.com.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed. From $29. (800)426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com



WANTED

Tutor for ECE 312, ECE 354 and ECE 350. Call Amy 546-0706

We are looking for a four bedroom house or apartment for the fall. We are willing to take over your summer lease. Call 549-5367!

Sofa or Couch Wanted Willing to pay. Please call 549-6452

Minutemen face tough test with No. 10 Terrapins

MAI CAO / COLLEGIAN

With three consecutive double-doubles, UMass will look for some big minutes from Tyrone Weeks as the Minutemen face Maryland tomorrow.

Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The NCAA Tournament hasn't been a widely talked about subject in Massachusetts men's basketball conferences this year — until Tuesday night.

With a win over St. Bonaventure, the Minutemen (15–10, 9–3 Atlantic 10) generated speculation about the tournament. But the Bonnies were an unranked conference foe, not an opponent the selection committee favors when considering strength of schedule.

What helps UMass is the devastatingly tough non– conference schedule, particularly the games against ranked opponents. That's what the Minutemen face tomorrow, in the form of No. 10 Maryland, at 1:30 p.m. at the Worcester Centrum.

The Terrapins (18–5, 7–4 in the Atlantic Coast Conference before last night's game against Florida State) fell from the No. 7 spot this week, following a loss to then No. 10 Clemson. But Maryland has faced a challenging schedule in its own right. In conference alone, the team has come up against the current number 2, 6, 7 and 16 teams. It is a testament to how difficult the ACC really is that four of the Terps five losses have come in conference.

Featuring three players who average in double figures, the battle–tested Terps are not want for scoring. Keith Booth leads Maryland with a 19.4 points per game average that has come on nearly 50 percent shooting.

However, the Terrapins do not have to rely on front court offensive production, with guards Terrell Stokes and Sarunas Jasikevicius in the backcourt. The pair has combined for 55 3–pointers, more than half of the team's perimeter output. Jasikevicius has turned in a 11.1 ppg average, while Stokes remains steady at 8.9 ppg. Swingman LaRon Profit has also bolstered the Terrapin scoring with 12.4 ppg.

Massachusetts on the other hand, has suffered most of its losses in non–conference games. The Minutemen are riding a hot streak that has produced nine wins in 10 games, thanks to an improved shooting effort. In those last 10 games, UMass' field goal shooting percentage has gone up by 8.9 percent, 3–point percentage by 15 percent and free throws by 10.2 percent.

A large part of that success has been a result of the Minutemen's three–guard set, which UMass incorporated Jan. 14 at St. Bonaventure. Since point guard Edgar Padilla returned to the point and Charlton Clarke took over the assignment at the No. 3 spot, the UMass guards have consistently poured in the points.

Shooting guard Carmelo Travieso leads the team in scoring with 15.0 ppg, Clarke checks in at third with 10.1 ppg and Padilla has chipped in with 9.0 ppg, while the overall offensive production off the set has increased by almost 10 percent.

But like Maryland, which has strength in both the front and back courts, UMass can push the ball inside and let the big men go to work.

Senior forward Tyrone Weeks, who has recorded 10 double–doubles so far this year including three straight, has led the frontcourt with 12.9 ppg. Weeks is also the team's leading rebounder with 9.2 rebounds per game.

Massachusetts and Maryland have not formed the kind of rivalry that

Turn to HOOP, page 7

UMass Minutemen vs. No. 10 Maryland Terrapins

At The Worcester Centrum
1:30 p.m.
On the air: ABC, WHMP 99.3 FM

Carmelo Travieso | Keith Booth

PROBABLE STARTERS
Lari Ketner	C	Obinna Ekezie
Tyrone Weeks	F	Keith Booth
Carmelo Travieso	G/F	LaRon Profit
Edgar Padilla	G	Terrell Stokes
Charlton Clarke	G	Sarunas Jasikevicius

Women rally to beat Bonnies

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Paced by 24 points from Crystal Carroll, and bolstered by a career

MASSACHUSETTS	68
ST. BONAVENTURE	58

game from junior center Kara Tudman, the Massachusetts women's basketball team turned on the juice in the second half and blew past St. Bonaventure 66–58 last night in the William D. Mullins Center. The win brings the Minutewomen to 15–8 overall, 9–4 in the A–10, and clinches a first round bye in the A–10 tournament and a home game in the second round for UMass.

The Minutewomen and Bonnies were tied as late as 17 minutes into the second half, but a Crystal Carroll layup with 2:27 left put UMass up for good. The Bonnies failed to score on the ensuing possession, and Carroll sliced through three defenders and banked home an eight–footer, putting the Minutewomen up 60–56. St. Bonaventure got it back to two, and when UMass senior guard Sabriya Mitchell lost the ball with 55 seconds on the clock, the Bonnies were in position to tie it up. But Tudman issued the last of her four blocks on the next play, and Mitchell took it the length of the court and converted. Mitchell was fouled on the play, and she converted the free throw, putting the Minutewomen up 63– 58 and sending the Bonnies to their seventh loss in the last eight games against UMass.

"My hats off to UMass," St. Bonaventure head coach Marti Whitmore said. "Crystal Carroll really stepped it up when she had to... They came out in the second half with a vengeance, like we knew they would. Their defense in the second half made it tough on us (to make shots)."

The Minutewomen started this one off rusty, shooting only 39 percent from the field and falling behind 31–23 at the half. St. Bonaventure shot 50 percent, and led by as much as 10 in the first set. A Carroll jumper with 0.4 left in the half cut the lead to eight heading into the locker room and seemed to give UMass momentum, but the Bonnies pushed the lead to 12, 41–29, early in the second half behind six quick points from sophomore guard Erin Sober. The Minutewomen got it together enough to post a 10–0 run in the next four minutes, and the Bonnies held a slim 41–39 lead at the 13:20 mark.

"We came out terrible in the first half," Carroll said. "Once we overcame the deficit, that's when we started to gain the momentum back and realize that we were going to win this game. We came to win."

Senior guard Beth Kuzmeski provided the spark that kept the Minutewomen at pace with the Bonnies. Kuzmeski knocked down two 3–pointers, her only six points of the game, to bring UMass even at 45–45. A Kelly Van Huisen free throw gave UMass the first lead at 48–47, a lead the Minutewomen kept

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOPS, page 7

Post players provide in win

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

There were no handshakes, high–fives, or premature celebrations. Crystal Carroll received the feed on the low post, faked left, turned right and knocked down the baby hook shot. Tying the game at 47 with under 10 minutes remaining, Carroll won this key match–up on the low post to continue an 18– 6 Minutewomen run, showing that after trailing by 12 points it was going to be all business for the duration from the maroon and white.

"Night and Day," was UMass coach Joanie O'Brien's comparison of the two halves played by the Minutewomen. The darkness that shrouded their first half performance was a .393 first half shooting percentage and a 13– 18 rebounding disadvantage. The trail to a luminescent second half was blazed by the suddenly unstoppable down–low combination of the reliable–as–ever Carroll and the post force come–lately Kara Tudman.

Carroll performed as expected, with her usual solid performance of 24 points and 5 rebounds. The senior forward exceeded her usual 16.7 points per game, playing the kind of clutch basketball that has become expected of the 6–foot–2 co–captain.

Tudman stepped it up on both ends of the court providing the added punch the Minutewomen attack needed to overcome the Bonnies' intensity. Her 11 points on 4–6 shooting from the field and 3–4 from the line were only half of the story. Tudman's four blocks and six rebounds were the key to controlling the paint, which was where the game was won in the second half. Tudman's second half performance took the pressure off of Carroll, allowing them both the do their job easier.

"Crystal's going to get some attention," O'Brien said. "Somebody's gotta pick up some slack."

Trailing by eight points at the break, the Minutewomen came out flat early in the second half. The St. Bonaventure full–court press posed difficulties for UMass, stealing the inbounds pass three minutes into the half after an unguarded jumper put the Bonnies up by 10.

Things could not get worse for the Minutewomen. They began their ascent from the 12 point hole, keyed by two 3– pointers from Beth Kuzmeski on consecutive UMass possessions.

The second trey tied the game at 45, and Carroll's hook on the Minutewomen's first efficient half–court offensive set of the game was all it took to swing the momentum.

From that point on UMass controlled the flow of the game. Tudman kept the Bonnies' shooters at bay, swatting away hopeful baskets like flies at the beach. At 60–58, the Bonnies' Taacha Brown penetrated the paint, leaving a one–on–one with Tudman down low.

Turn to WIN, page 7

Hockey hosts sanction sacked Bears

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

A little over two years ago, the Massachusetts hockey team accomplished their biggest win since the reinstatement of the program in 1993, if not in the school's history.

On Jan. 28, 1995, then No. 1 Maine came into a weekend series at the Mullins Center, and after taking the first game in a 7–2 romp, were extremely upset by the Minutemen the next night, 4–2.

For a team that had to accentuate the few good things in their first season in Hockey East, the win over the perennial powerhouse was huge. For a team that still had kinks to work out, only two days later a loss to a Div. III team, Holy Cross, was bad, to say the least.

Now, after two years of more than interesting developments on both teams, the Minutemen (12–17, 7–13 HE) and the Black Bears (18–10–1, 10–7–1 HE) will face off Friday and Saturday night at the Mullins Center (7 p.m.), with different objectives in mind.

Since the upset two years ago, UMass has continued to improve, and has already set season records in conference and overall wins this season. UMass needs to concentrate on wins as they near the stretch run to the Hockey East playoffs. But for Maine, the season is now all about team pride due to NCAA postseason sanctions.

To UMass coach Joe Mallen, the difference between his team then and now is more than apparent, never the less, Maine they is still a tough adversary.

"No one can dispute that we are a lot more competitive team now, than a couple of years ago," Mallen said. "Right now, Maine is still a very strong team, and they have enough players remaining from last year to make a difference. But no matter how you slice it, they still aren't as strong as they have been in the last couple of years."

With their 6–4 win to capture the Alumni Cup last Saturday against UMass–Lowell, the Minutemen are now only one point behind sixth place Merrimack in the HE standings.

If UMass leap–frogs the Warriors by the end of the season, they would not have to play either No. 3 New Hampshire, or No. 4 Boston University, in the first round of the conference playoffs — at best, a precarious position to be in if advancing to the HE finals at the FleetCenter is your goal.

If UMass did take over sixth place, a more favorable match–up would occur for the Minutemen, and they would most likely face the Black Bears... no, the Providence College Friars... or maybe, the Lowell River Hawks.

A Walsh–ian slip there, but really, why?

Well, for one thing, it is because the HE standings are packed below the top

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

After capturing the Alumni Cup last weekend Steve MacKinnon host Maine tonight and tomorrow.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 84 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, February 18, 1997

Eastwood looks lost in latest release

Clint Eastwood directs and leads an impressive cast in the new thriller Absolute Power. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Minutemen roll over No. 10 Maryland

Behind Lari Ketner's 19 points and 12 rebounds, UMass spanked Maryland 78–61 on Saturday. Get your details here (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

North Korea accepts defection of official

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese police guarding the South Korean consulate visibly relaxed yesterday, joking and chatting amiably, after North Korea indicated it could accept the defection of the senior official holed up inside.

North Korean agents, who had kept a public, round-the-clock vigil outside the consulate since Hwang Jang Yop defected last week, withdrew yesterday. North Korea did not say why.

But a spokesman at North Korea's Foreign Ministry indicated that the reclusive communist state had decided to accept the defection. Previously, North Korea had threatened to retaliate against South Korea for what it called a kidnapping.

"If he was kidnapped... we will take decisive countermeasures," North Korea's official news agency quoted the unidentified spokesman as saying. "If he sought asylum, it means that he is a renegade and he is dismissed."

The spokesman said North Korea has asked China to investigate Hwang's "disappearance."

Kang Ho-yang, spokesman for South Korea's Unification Ministry, said the comment indicated that North Korea was abandoning its earlier position in which it had rejected Hwang's defection as "inconceivable and impossible."

NATION

Virginia lawmakers singing a new song

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Not a single discordant note was sounded yesterday as Virginia's House of Delegates voted to retire a state song that critics say glorifies slavery with words like "darkey" and "massa."

The House voted 100-0 to make "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" the state song emeritus. There was no debate.

"This puts the song where it belongs — in history — and it won't be troubling us any further," Del. William P. Robinson Jr., (D-Norfolk) said.

The first repeal attempt was made in 1970 by then-state Sen. L. Douglas Wilder, a grandson of slaves who became the nation's first elected black governor.

Similar legislation became an annual fixture, rejected every year by lawmakers who said the song was an important part of Virginia's heritage.

This year, they were persuaded by arguments that the song is so offensive, it's no longer taught to schoolchildren and hasn't been performed at an official state function in two decades.

The bill, which the Senate approved 24-15 on Jan. 28, now goes back to the Senate for action on a House amendment that eliminated a provision calling for a special commission to find a new state song.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 55 LOW: 45	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

GEO storms Whitmore in protest

PHANG VO / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Members of the GEO and undergraduate allies rally outside Whitmore protesting the lack of progress in contract negotiations.

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Despite the sleet and freezing rain on Friday afternoon, the University of Massachusetts Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) and its undergraduate allies led a Valentine's Day rally which found its way into the office of Chancellor David K. Scott.

Holding signs which read "Grad student employees need child care now" and "I would eat this [candy] but I don't have a dental plan," the protesters marched from the steps of the Student Union to the halls of Whitmore Administration building, chanting and playing kazoos along the way.

The group formed the protest as a way of expressing displeasure with an administration the GEO feels is dragging its feet in ongoing negotiations.

Negotiations, which have been going on for almost a year, include issues such as child care, affirmative action, wages and health coverage.

Once the protesters reached the steps of Whitmore, the group of about 25 met up with their negotiators.

Tom Taft, one of the negotiators, updated the group on the state of negotiations, saying, "All [they've] gotten is a lot of talk," but that they "need to keep up the pressure inside the house."

"The only thing they're going to respond to is force," Taft said.

As the protesters listened to his words, a sidewalk plow disrupted the crowd on its way up the Whitmore ramp.

"This is [messed] up," said Taft before standing in the way of the plow on its second pass, "the University will use us against us."

"I think [the plow incident] was an accident, but it is symbolic," Pat Crowley, president of the GEO, said about the incident.

After learning that no progress had been made, the group, chanting "Hey ho Whitmore, time to open up the door," headed through the doors of the building, marched up the stairs and, for the first time in recent history, made it into the Chancellor's office, where Crowley presented a huge Valentine to the Chancellor's Staff, who accepted it on

Turn to RALLY, page 3

New GenEd Task Force persues revised curriculum

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Under the direction of University of Massachusetts Provost Patricia Crosson, a General Education Task Force has been formed to review the current general education requirements and make recommendations for improvements.

As outlined in Chancellor David K. Scott's Strategic Action Plan, a task force intended to be broadly representative of the University community was appointed by Crosson to examine the current general education requirements and propose a new model for the University.

John Jenkins, chair of the Task Force on General Education and chair of the General Education Council of the Faculty Senate, said that the establishment of the task force was Scott's impetus.

"In [Scott's] Strategic Action Plan, he called for a re– evaluation and re–shapement of the current general education requirements, which were established in 1986," Jenkins said.

"Although the requirements were pioneering at that time, the world has changed dramatically since then and it follows that the general education requirements need to be reconsidered," Jenkins said.

Make–up of the task force

Jenkins and Crosson worked together to select the 50 members of the task force.

The task force is comprised of faculty from many different departments, several administration members, eight undergraduates and two graduate students.

"One criteria for task force members emerged," Jenkins said. "People who really cared about general education and who could put the best interests of the whole University above their own interests."

Jenkins also said that including diverse points of view in the task force was a priority.

"Our goal is that this plan will have fairly wide–spread acceptance when we complete our recommendations in three years," Jenkins said. "That's why we have such a big, representative task force."

Martha Stassen, associate director for assessment in the Office of Academic Planning and Assessment and a member of the task force, said that she believes that Jenkins and Crosson have succeeded in assembling a diverse and representative task force.

"This is an incredibly inclusive task force," Stassen said. "The leadership is working to make sure everyone's voice is heard."

Student involvement

Jenkins said that the task force is also concerned with getting additional students' suggestions on how to improve the current general education requirements.

"We really welcome student involvement," Jenkins said. "I want students to be a vital part of this project."

Jenkins said that since the task force has just recently begun to convene, no formal ways for students to express their views to the task force have been established.

In the future, however, Jenkins said that forums will be established so that students can make suggestions and participate in the process.

"The most important thing is groups of students sitting and talking thoughtfully," Jenkins said. "I want to meet with as many students face to face as possible. With 50 members of the task force, we can meet with a good number of students."

Stassen also said that students' opinions will be solicited in surveys and other data–collection techniques as the project progresses.

Turn to GENED, page 3

Author to address UMass on race and gender issues

By Allona E. Todman
Collegian Staff

Writer, educator and economist, Dr. Julianne Malveaux will discuss issues from her newest book, Sex, Lies, and Stereotypes: Perspectives of a Mad Economist, tonight in a free lecture at 7 p.m. in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center Auditorium.

When it comes to issues that affect women as well as minorities, Malveaux has been a pivotal contributor in the sociopolitical arenas of our society.

As co–editor of the book Slipping through the Cracks: The status of Black Women, and in writing a manuscript on black women in the labor market entitled, No Images: Contemporary Black women and Work, Malveaux has continuously raised compelling issues through her research that have challenged political peers as herself. Malveaux has also been a regular contributor to USA Today and the San Francisco Sun Reporter.

COURTESY OF THE AMERICAN PROGRAM BUREAU

Dr Julianne Malveaux

Highly acclaimed by the National Council of Negro Women as a "Woman who Makes it Happen," Malveaux's research on the status of black women in the labor market led her to write columns for Emerge magazine entitled, the "Left Coast" and Essence magazine entitled, "Economics and you."

Malveaux provides radio and television commentary on shows such as "CNN and Company," PBS's "To the Contrary," and San Francisco's new talk station, KGO.

Most recently, Malveaux appeared on CNN with Jesse Jackson, discussing issues dealing with inner–city education and the controversial issue of the Ebonics dialect.

As woman of integrity, there are no limitations for Malveaux. Working as an activist as well as an economist and writer, she serves on the board of Directors of The San Francisco NAACP, and is President of the San Francisco Black Leadership Forum.

For her scholarly work, she has recently served as visiting faculty member at the University of California, Berkeley in the African–American studies department.

Inspiring and incisive, Malveaux has been described as one of the most compelling speakers of her generation.

ANNA FEDER / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Love Conquers all
Northampton residents Jamie Shea and Dianna Dunn get a first look at the photo exhibit, "Love Makes A Family" in the Graduate lounge Friday night.

Government planes bomb Bukavu, Zaire leaving six dead

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

KINSHASA, Zaire — Government planes bombed rebel-held towns in eastern Zaire yesterday, killing six people and wounding at least 20 in the town of Bukavu, aid workers said.

A Zairian defense ministry spokesman confirmed that the government had been bombing Bukavu, Shabunda and Walikale since yesterday morning. The spokesman, speaking on customary condition of anonymity, said the attacks would "continue and intensify" and called on civilians living in rebel-held territory to leave. Three jets dropped bombs on a market in Bukavu, killing five civilians and wounding many more, rebel leader Laurent Kabila said. One of the three bombs dropped failed to go off, he said.

"They are killing people very far from the front. Why?" Kabila asked The Associated Press. "It is a terrorist action."

"Very strong measures will be taken to deal with the situation," he said in Kalemie, 300 miles south of Bukavu. Brenda Barton, a spokeswoman for the U.N. World Food Program, said staff in Bukavu reported that six people had been killed and 20 wounded.

"These numbers could grow," she said from Nairobi, Kenya. "There's a panic in the town."

Kabila said the Zairian planes came from Kindu, 200 miles west of Bukavu, one of two airports in eastern Zaire controlled by the government.

It was the first reported bombing of rebel towns since the rebels routed the government troops from a long swath of eastern Zaire.

The government yesterday ruled out a cease-fire with rebels and repeated its opposition to negotiations to end the conflict. It also accused the United Nations of overlooking what it called "a campaign of extermination" against Rwandan Hutu refugees on its soil. In an angry declaration, the government said the world body had ignored the plight of Zairians displaced by the fighting and of concentrating only on the problems of aid workers and Rwandan refugees.

"This discriminatory treatment is incompatible with the missions of the United Nations in general and with the UNHCR in particular," Foreign Minister Gerard Kamanda wa Kamanda said after meeting U.N. special envoy Mohamed Sahnoun.

Sahnoun traveled Saturday to the northwestern village of Gbadolite, the isolated jungle hideaway of Zairian President Mobutu Sese Seko, presumably to discuss U.N. concerns about what it says is the blatant arming of Rwandan Hutus in the massive Tingi-Tingi camp in eastern Zaire. Sahnoun didn't comment on the visit, but Kamanda's statement indicated there had been little progress on either that subject or the question of negotiations.

Zairian officials have denied that they are arming the Hutu refugees and said insurgents were using the allegation as an excuse to attack the camp.

Mobutu, who has been holed up in Gbadolite recovering from surgery for prostate cancer, has refused pressure to negotiate an end to the conflict, despite the failure of a month-old army counteroffensive to win back substantial territory.

Kamanda described the rebels as "a group of Tutsi executioners who are pursuing a campaign of extermination against Hutu refugees on Zairian soil."

He said talks could not take place without the simultaneous departure of all foreign troops from Zaire.

Mobutu says the Tutsi-led governments of Uganda, Rwanda and Burundi provide rebel leader Kabila with men, machines and weapons as part of a plan to wipe out the majority Hutus, who have traditionally been supported by Zaire's government. The three countries deny the allegations.

Kamanda called on the U.N. Security Council to publicly condemn Uganda, Rwanda and Burundi; to order the expulsion of soldiers from those countries that Zaire says are fighting alongside the rebels; to "take appropriate measures to put an end to the extermination of Hutu refugees" and to take measures to get all the refugees back home.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Tuesday, Feb. 18

Film & discussion — A Students of Color Panel and Film, Black Is, Black Ain't, by Marlan Riggs, will be held at 6 p.m. in New Africa House. For more info, contact the UMass Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Lecture — The Five College Faculty Seminar in Performance Studies will sponsor a lecture from Peggy Phelan, associate professor of performance studies at NYU, entitled "Performance and Politics," at 4 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Curtain Theatre.

Meditation — A meditation session will be held by the Ananda Marga Meditation Club at Butterfield Residence Hall at 8 p.m. The session will introduce attendees to basic mediation and Yoga techniques. There is no fee or registration. All are welcome. For further information, contact Dayavati at 253-9553.

Meeting — There will be a general meeting of Amnesty International at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 904-08.

Meeting — WOCH cable radio is reactivating. If you would like to learn more about getting involved, there will be a general meeting at 8 p.m. in the Field Residence Hall classroom. On-campus residents only. For more info, contact Dee at 546-6913.

Wednesday, Feb. 19

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold its second meeting of the spring semester from 5:30-6:30 p.m. in University Health Services, room 304. All are welcome to attend.

Meeting — Find out how you can participate in campaigns with MassPIRG, including Earth Day, Updated Bottle Bill, Clean Air and Hunger and Homelessness. Come to MassPIRG's general interest meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174.

Music — There will be an Improv Jam Session with invited local jazz musicians at the Blue Moon Gallery Cafe at 7 p.m.

Reading — Spectrum Magazine is sponsoring a poetry and prose reading in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome to come and participate. Submissions will also be accepted for art, photography, poetry and prose during the evening.

Workshop — A Time Management workshop will be offered by the Learning Support Services from 1:30-2:45 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545-5334 to register.

Notices

SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Government are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.

Auditions — The UMass Theatre Guild will hold auditions for The Heidi Chronicles on Feb. 21 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 22 at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805. There are five female roles and three male roles. Please visit the Theatre Guild office in the Student Union if you have any questions.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253-0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617)641–2303.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Support group — Having a hard time quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? The Health Education Division at University Health Services.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPIRG, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Outdoor program — Women Exploring the Outdoors will be conducting a series of outdoor adventure programs for women who are survivors of abuse. The focus of these day trips is to provide a comfortable environment within which women can increase their self-confidence, establish safe boundaries and experience their strength in the company of other survivors. All ages, abilities and levels of experience are welcome. Programs scheduled are: A Day Hike in the Pioneer Valley on Sunday, April 13, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $20; and Low and High Ropes Course on Sunday, May 4, 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m., cost $50. The cost for all three programs is $85. For more information, contact Adventures Unlimited at (413)774–3131x293.

Once upon a pond... — WINTER CARNIVAL

Fireworks marked the official opening of the first annual Winter Carnival at the University of Massachusetts on Feb. 6, 1936.

The festivities lasted three days and included ice skating, snowshoe and skiing races, tobogganing, sleigh rides and a ball where the Carnival Queen was chosen.

The tradition of Winter Carnival was originally conceived by the Outing Club in an effort to promote outdoor winter sports, which they viewed as neglected.

In the front yard of many fraternities, sororities and dormitories, elaborate snow sculptures appeared in what would become the feature attraction of the annual carnival bringing tourists from all over and creating huge traffic jams on the roads through town.

Early highlights included a performance by big band leader Glenn Miller and his orchestra in 1939. The following year, poet Carl Sandburg read from his works and sang songs. In 1965, five women of the Carnival Queen court and a 7–foot Amherst–built snowman packed in a dry ice–filled coffin travelled to New York City for a guest television appearance on the Steve Allen show.

In later years, the Carnival Ball was replaced by more modern and informal concerts featuring acts such as the Righteous Brothers, The Byrds, The Four Seasons and stand– up comedians Bill Cosby and Johnny Carson.

Except for a short–lived attempt to revive the Winter Carnival in 1988, the last one was held in 1969, ending a three–decade tradition.

Text and photograph courtesy of Gail Giroux, Special Collections & Archives, located on the 25th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

COURTESY UMASS ARCHIVES

A snow sculpture built by Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity in the 1950s.

NOTICE

Starting Sunday, Feb. 25, the Collegian FYI section will be relocated to the Classifieds page of the newspaper. In addition, FYI entries will be limited to free Five College events only. Only entries fitting this description will run in the FYI section. All other entries must be submitted through the Classifieds Department. For information about Classifieds rates, call 545–3500.

MEET THE AUTHOR
UMASS PROFESSOR AND HISTORIAN
STEPHEN B. OATES

WILL BE SIGNING COPIES OF HIS LATEST BOOK
THE APPROACHING FURY
VOICES OF THE STORM, 1820 -1861

AT THE
UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER

WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 19, 1997
12PM TO 1:30 PM

Renowned Historian and Author of
"With Malice Toward None: A Life of Abraham Lincoln" tells how the Civil War began by using the first person voices of the thirteen of the central figures involved
Other books by the author will be available

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ Campus Center 545-2619 Mon - Fri 9AM - 5PM Sat 10AM - 5PM

Color Copies at.... CC PRINT SHOP

This Week in the Campus Center

INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND SPECIALS FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER/STUDENT UNION COMPLEX

University Store
Stop by for weekly specials!

All NY Times Hardcover and Paperback BESTSELLERS
All Binders and Filler Paper
All UMASS hooded sweatshirts
...torial Calendars
...mic Planners

In honor of the release of S... all Stephen Oates ...
FREE tote bag wh... African Am...

OPENING FEB 19
THE CAMPUS SENDER
PACKAGING · SHIPPING · COPIES · FAX

The Campus Sender, a new service located on the concourse level of the Campus Center (formerly McGregor Travel), will open on Wed, Feb 19th. Services will include: US Post Office, bus tickets, shipping via UPS, and faxing. Hours: Mon - Fri, 8:30 am to 8:00 pm.

Campus Center/Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS

rally

continued from page 1

Scott's behalf.

Crowley told them, "It is a gift of love for Chancellor Scott. We just hope he reciprocates."

Following the presentation of the Valentine, an undergraduate group, Racetalks, presented a petition, signed by 1,000 students supporting the GEO in its efforts to "improve recruitment and retention of under–represented teaching assistants and increase funding for the Office of Minority Graduate Student Recruitment."

Tina Cincotti, a member of Racetalks was pleased with what the group was able to achieve.

"I'm impressed with the number of students who signed it," Cincotti said. "It's not just a graduate problem."

The Undergraduate Employee Organization (UEO), another undergraduate group showed up in numbers. Nikki Morse, who is a member of both Racetalks and the UEO, said that all students should work together.

"It's important for graduate students and undergraduates to work together on these issues," Morse said. "The GEO has shown support for our issues, and we're in full support of theirs."

Asked to comment on entering the Chancellor's office, Crowley said, "It was interesting... if you compare it with the offices we work in. You know, to go and see the palatial estate."

GEO leadership was pleased with the event and the turnout.

"Given the weather and how quickly we put it together, I was very happy," Crowley said.

He was also grateful for the assistance of their undergraduate allies.

"They did a lot of work with us over the break," Crowley said on the undergraduate participation.

Despite their gift to him, the group isn't expecting a public response from the Chancellor.

"I think the response will be at the bargaining table," Crowley said. "And that's the response we want."

gened

continued from page 1

Timeline

The task force will meet on the first Friday of every month from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Whitmore Board Room.

In order to facilitate discussion, the task force has been broken down into three focus groups which will meet independently and report back to the task force as a whole.

Additional focus groups or subcommittees will be formed as the need arises.

The task force will both review the existing framework and examine new proposals.

"We will be considering everything about general education," Jenkins said.

Teaching techniques, class sizes, quality of instruction, the number of upper–level classes available and overall presentation to the students will be reviewed in addition to course selections and the number and area of requirements.

Stassen said that a preliminary student survey showed that the caliber of instruction was a major concern of students.

"Most of the students commented on the quality of the teaching," Stassen said.

Some of the new proposals the task force will be considering include computer literacy, community service learning, diversity and internationalism, language requirements and research in undergraduate education.

Jenkins said that although the final report will not be completed until January 2000, the task force will make interim reports to the General Education Committee of the Faculty Senate every year to discuss what the task force has found and accomplished.

In addition, pilot programs will be initiated throughout the process to test ideas.

"We want to get reactions on a smaller scale while we are continuing the study," Jenkins said.

"We don't intend to get to the end with something that people have not seen and supported," Jenkins said. "Our goal is something that we've all agreed upon."

Importance of the task force

Everyone interviewed agreed upon the importance of the task force.

Ruby Bansal, a sophomore history major and member of the task force, said that she felt the task force's report will be critical to the whole University.

"I think it's important," Bansal said. "I definitely think it's an issue and I think it needs to be re–examined."

Norman Aitken, deputy provost and a member of the task force, agreed.

"General education is important because it provides students with skills and it makes sure that students get exposure to a broad range of knowledge," Aitken said.

"This task force is going to take a very thorough look at our current requirements," Aitken said.

"The one thing that is surprisingly clear is that students think their general education is important and that alumni see it as having real applications in their life," Jenkins concluded.

"They all seem to agree that we can improve."

Correction

The next Black Affairs interest meeting will be Wednesday, February 19 at 7 p.m. This is a change from last week. The meeting will not take place Today!! The meeting has been re–scheduled for Tomorrow, Wednesday, February 19 at 7 p.m. in Collegian newsroom down in the Campus Center Basement. Sorry for any inconvenience.

Reflect councils grieving students

By Frank Compailla
Collegian Correspondent

Help is available for students who have suffered the loss of a loved one through Reflect, a Five College bereavement program based at the University of Massachusetts, which offers support groups for students who have experienced the death of a loved one.

"There are plenty of people who could use a program like ours," Co–director Shana Zatinsky said. "We are very student–centered — run by students and for students."

Reflect is intended to educate about normal responses to death, reduce social isolation and help participants memorialize their loved one.

Reflect is free and open to all students, faculty and staff of the Five College system. Support groups meet weekly for seven to eight weeks and are limited to eight people per group. They follow a structured format and are modified to meet particular needs. Volunteer doctoral students in the UMass clinical psychology program facilitate the support groups.

After the seven to eight week period, groups reconvene for a "reunion dinner" to reflect upon the experience of being in the group.

Jethro Heiko, a philosophy graduate of UMass, founded Reflect as a student in the fall of 1994. Heiko suffered the death of his father, and after taking a semester off, came back to UMass looking for a student support group. When he couldn't find one, he began posting fliers and got a response.

Heiko began conducting the sessions himself, but then realized he did not want to be a facilitator as well as a participant. Instead he posted signs in the psychology department looking for a graduate student to conduct the meetings.

Brynda Holton responded and helped run Reflect with Heiko until last year when he graduated. This year, Shana Zatinsky, in the second bachelors nursing program, and Cynthia Battle, a doctoral student of clinical psychology, are co–directing.

Zatinsky became involved with Reflect when her brother died.

"I started by being a participant and it made such a difference that I decided to take part in it," Zatinsky said. "Everyone has the opportunity to reflect their experience with someone else's."

Zatinsky said Reflect helped her deal with the pain she endured.

"The program made me feel less isolated and okay to talk about the experience with people," Zatinsky said. "I felt as though I had this tremendous weight lifted off me. Each week I went I felt better, because it was a very comfortable setting."

Reflect, which is funded by the Dean of Student's Office, recently received a $10,000, 45–year reunion gift from the class of 1952.

"We are fortunate we got the ball rolling be receiving the gift," Zatinsky said. "We are hoping that it will generate more interest and encourage others to donate as well."

Involvement with Reflect is growing as people become aware of the benefits they can receive from it.

"In the past we offered two groups each semester," Zatinsky said. "This semester we are looking at having three because we have had so many calls of people expressing interest."

Reflect is trying to expand by organizing a speakers' bureau, a newsletter and forums where professors can talk about how death relates to their field. Reflect hopes people who are confronted with loss will participate in the program and carry less of a burden.

"We are starting to break down the barriers about discussing grief," Zatinsky said. "We want to let people know that the best thing you can do is talk about it."

ANNA FEDER / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Setting the Stage
Senior dance majors Katherine Hooper and Ambere Rogers help set up for the arts festival, Acid Lounge in the Campus Center Auditorium yesterday afternoon.

Spring Quiz

Quiz, (easy!)

1. Are you interested in Concert Promotion?
2. Are you curious about this year's Spring CONCERT?
3. Are you looking for opportunities to "CHILL WITH THE STARS"?

If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, come to

UPC
(University Concerts & Productions)

GENERAL COMMITTEE MEETINGS every TUESDAY @ 6:30 pm
BARTLETT RM-61
FOR MORE INFO CALL 545-2892

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE

- Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
- Full Selection of Genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
- Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
- Fine Selection of New and Used Cars & Trucks.
- Ask About Our FREE 18 Point Maintenance Check.

PAIGE'S Amherst CHEVROLET Geo

DICKINSON ST. • BETWEEN RT. 9 & MAIN ST.
253-3444 • PARTS LINE 253-5928

AIM HIGH

CLIMB HIGH FAST AS AN AIR FORCE OFFICER.

Bring your college degree to the Air Force. Then find out if you qualify for Officer Training School. You can become a commissioned Air Force officer following successful completion of Officer Training School. From the start, you'll enjoy great pay, complete medical and dental care and 30 days of vacation with pay per year. And as an Air Force officer, you can enjoy professional growth and management opportunities. Learn what it takes to qualify. Call

AIR FORCE OPPORTUNITIES
TOLL FREE
1-800-423-USAF

AIR FORCE

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor "Position Vacant" Systems Manager
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Simheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor "Position Vacant" Circulation Manager
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Laura Stock News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Thang Vo Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

My kind of gal

Mark McGrath

If I were to tell you that the most successful American of our time was born to unwed teenage parents in Mississippi, was sexually molested as a child and gave birth at age 14 to a child who died shortly after, you'd probably call me crazy, and many have done so.

If I were to tell you that this person would become the first black billionaire in American history, owns a major studio and received an Oscar nomination for Best Supporting Actress in 1985, you might be able to figure out who she is. If I were to mention the word "fat" you'd know for sure.

When thinking about great Americans, daytime talk show hosts do not typically come to mind, but Oprah Winfrey has separated herself in such a way that she can boast having accomplished more than most any figure of our time.

Suffering through a terrible childhood, she pulled one of the most prolific turnarounds in recent memory. Even when she was successful, she faced numerous challenges, both in her personal and public worlds, which at many times merged into one.

Known primarily for her battle with her weight, Oprah has shown time and time again that she can overcome any obstacle. Her adoring fans were with her when she lost almost 70 pounds in the late '80s, they cried when she gained back more weight than she had originally lost and they dieted with her again as she lost 50 pounds, in the process becoming fit enough to run a marathon, which she also accomplished.

They again supported her when, while doing a show on drug abuse, she tearfully admitted that she has used cocaine at times in her career.

The part of her character that makes her wonderful is the fact that she is one of us, she is a battler, she knows what it's like— whatever it happens to be, and most importantly, she knows how to use her own experiences as a means of reaching out to others who share similar problems. She is not static, her character changes every day, and every day we grow closer to her. She is an original and courageous soul.

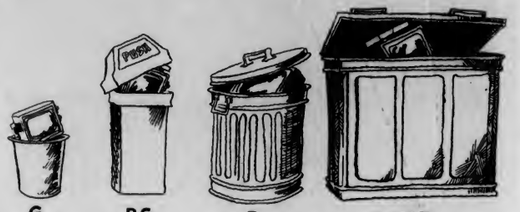
In a genre which is too often dominated by transsexuals and crack whores, Oprah has pledged to be different. In 1994, when the talk show world reached a pinnacle of trashiness, she pledged to make her show meaningful. She rose above the others and has remained queen of the television world. I guess there is something to be said for integrity after all.

Oprah's latest and perhaps most important contribution to American society may be the initiation of her monthly book club. Each month, she recommends a book to her television viewers which will be discussed at a later date on her program. From its outset, the concept has been an incredible success.

The first selection, The Deep End of the Ocean, by Jacquelyn Mitchard tripled in sales upon Oprah's recommendation, vaulting it to number one on the New York Times best sellers list and forcing its publisher to print another half million copies. If that isn't testament enough to Oprah's influence, similar events have transpired every month since, including a resurrection of Toni Morrison's Song of Solomon 20 years after its initial publication and the latest selection, She's Come Undone by Wally Lamb, whose publisher has ordered an additional 700,000 copies to meet the demand generated by Oprah's plug.

These numbers are strong testament to the fact that Oprah influences the American public more than any other figure, public or private, and uses that influence in positive ways. In a society where one out of every five adults is functionally illiterate, encouraging millions of people to read and learn to read (and having unprecedented success in doing so) has only furthered Oprah's magnificent accomplishments.

Oprah's next big project will be acting in a film adaptation of Morrison's Beloved, a Pulitzer Prize–winning novel which tells the story of an escaped slave. One would naturally expect Oprah's followers to show a similar enthusiasm toward the film and book versions of the story, bringing to public attention troubling historical issues which need to be dealt with in the modern world.



Oprah has a special gift for relating to almost anyone on some level, and with that power, she has influenced the lives of countless Americans. Greatness, to me, means more than having power, it is a reflection of what a person does with the power they possess.

Brought into this world having as little power as can be imagined, Oprah represents what is greatest about America, that given a desire to succeed, a person can overcome anything and become the most influential person in the country.

The statement that a daytime talk show host represents the greatest American success story might be a scary reflection of the times to some, but looking at what that person has done with her own life, I'd prefer putting the future of this country in her hands than those of any elected official.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

New TV Ratings

MARLETTE ©1996 NEWSDAY

All that you eat may not be safe

Samuel Johnson

Last November, two–year–old Tara Aziza of California, was listed in critical condition due to kidney failure after she drank a glass of apple juice. The juice was unpasteurized and contained the E. coli bacteria, the same bacteria that caused the death of three children and some 500 sicknesses in Washington state in 1993, at the fast–food chain Jack in the Box, after people ate contaminated hamburgers.

It should come as no surprise that two weeks ago, President Clinton proposed an upgrade in food and safety inspection in his weekly radio address. After all, the man practically keeps McDonald's in business.

The issue of closer and stricter inspection of meat and poultry came to him after the outbreak of food poisoning in four Western states in 1993 that afflicted hundreds of people and killed five children who ate undercooked hamburgers. These hamburgers were also contaminated with the E. coli bacteria, a bacteria that is present in many animals' intestines that mixes with the meat, either during the slaughter or when it is ground into hamburger. However, if cooked at the correct temperature and for the right amount of time, E. coli can be eliminated enough to pass federal inspection. Another more recent approach in getting rid of the bacteria is irradiation. That, however, is another issue in and of itself.

In July of last year the President announced a new system of detecting and guarding against the harmful bacteria found in meat. It is one of the first times since President Theodore Roosevelt began the first pure–food laws and federal meat inspection systems in 1906 after the national outrage caused by Upton Sinclair's best selling novel, The Jungle.

The Jungle includes sickening stories of the unsanitary working conditions in the meat–packing industry of the Chicago stockyards of the time in rather stomach–turning detail. For example, employees would put out rat poison disguised in bread to kill the rats which ran about the slaughterhouses, the rats would then eat the bread, some would fall into a vat of meat, and as a result the meat would become contaminated with rats and the poison.

The scary fact is that despite all the controversy back then and even recently, nothing has changed in the past 90 years. Meat is still inspected today, using the same method that dogs use, touching it and smelling it to see if it's safe. This method is termed ever–so–fancifully by federal meat inspectors as the "organoleptic method." Sounds good— nice and technical.

President Clinton's proposal last week would call for $43 million to set up a state–of–the–art early warning system for food contamination. The new system would consist of DNA "fingerprinting," which would make it possible to trace the bacteria to its source in order to stop it before it becomes a potential threat to society.

The idea of this new scientific technology, as opposed to the "organoleptic method," needs to be applied to the food chain "from the cow to the table," as one inspector put it, and Clinton's proposal will make that possible.

In 1995, the federal government spent $600 million on inspecting the safety and cleanliness of meat. But what exactly are they spending all that money on?

In recent months, ABC News's "Primetime Live" was sued by the Food Lion chain for going undercover, equipped with hidden cameras and posing as store employees, providing the public with footage of employees changing expiration dates on old meat and repackaging old chicken after coating it with barbecue sauce. Here we are provided with first–hand proof that the $600 million hasn't really done anything.

E. coli can cause severe illness with as few as 69 bacteria, according to a federal report, and no federal government meat inspector is capable of detecting it. The amount is too small. Because of this, 20,000 illnesses occur in the United States annually. That number doesn't sound like much, but what a stupid reason to suffer such a serious sickness or possibly death.

Dr. Martin Brotman, chairman of the Federal Health Agencies and the Food Committee, said in 1994 that the cost of treating the E. coli infection was between $216 million and $580 million. Just last year, Michael Taylor, administrator of the Food Safety and Inspection Service said the country could save between $1 billion and $4 billion a year in medical expenses, lost work and other costs of food–borne illnesses.

It is safe to say that the $43 million being spent on the DNA "fingerprinting" is well worth the investment. The public does not realize that while they purchasing expired products, they may be causing themselves more harm than they think. The fear lies in the fact that the bacteria may eventually become easier to spread and harder to track, and although the "fingerprinting" system may seem a bit costly, if the issue remains silent any longer, it could end up costing your life or the life someone about whom you care.

Samuel Johnson is a UMass student.

Pay attention to the cross fire

Bradley Skaught

It's easy to get caught up in the fireworks and sparkle of grand political ideas.

Everyday in the dialogues of a thinking campus, Marxists wage revolution, democracy is torn apart and put back together, and the enormous P.R. monster trucks of people like Gingrich and Kennedy rumble over sweeping congressional reforms. These are big ideas. Important ideas. Relevant ideas. But there are more immediate things too.

Anyone with an eye for local news has, no doubt, caught a whiff of the winds of war rolling out of Holyoke. There are numerous stories of police corruption, institutional racism and a plethora of accusations/lies/truths being flung across the political battlefronts of police commissioner Stephen Donoghue, city councilman Diosdado Lopez and the various factions springing up around the issues involved (these stories culminate, perhaps, in the recent, rather sensational Advocate cover story).

This may not be the bombs bursting in air, but it is certainly a rocket's sick glare hovering street level right here in the valley, and it should be sensitizing the residents of Holyoke to the issues at hand— the issues relevant to their own hometown. Too often, local politics, with all its homegrown charm and swagger, is the concern of local business people, school administration and key political heavyweights. It becomes more of an elite board game (with us general citizens as the game pieces) than a collection of issues and actions directly affecting our daily lives. Occasionally an issue will spark a fire in the community— parking issues, land, schools, etc.— but more often than not the daily workings of councils, managers and mayors go unnoticed.

City politics and intrigue ruined my mother's career. Shortly after finally quitting her job with the city of Tacoma, Washington, a short article ran in the Daily News Tribune honoring her for the time and effort she had put in to make Tacoma a better place. She worked quietly— she helped to make movies, build arenas, support the arts and a million other tiny, important events— behind the scenes work.

Unfortunately, there were other people working behind the scenes too. Political turn over, rivalry, mud–slinging, quiet war and whispered strategy turned my mother into one of the many casualties of the political furor. A complete changeover in the administrative make–up of the city had left those with ties to the old administration in hostile territory. As an ally and friend to the previous administration, my mom's job was slowly disassembled until there was practically nothing left, and they kept disassembling until they had essentially forced her right out of City Hall altogether. The political furor affected her job, and thus it affected Tacoma, but no one said a word.

It sensitized me. It made me look at the local news section differently. It made me care about speeches, amendments to city constitutions, budgets and development. It made me realize that local governments can slip through the community's fingers easily, without anyone noticing. We fight tooth and nail to make our presidents and congressmen accountable for their actions, but our city managers, mayors and council members work in relative anonymity. Get to know your town— learn the names and issues and ammunition.

Become part of the architecture in which you live. As UMass students, you hold a particularly important position in the town of Amherst— it's important for you to care about things like parking and flyers. Maybe you don't even know about parking or flyers. Perhaps the town of Amherst doesn't want you to know— doesn't want you involved. Ask yourself why? Maybe it's because you can make a difference— because you have the power to demand that the administration of this town represent you and your interest.

So I keep an eye on Holyoke. I commend councilman Lopez for his efforts. I may not be from Holyoke, and I don't pretend to know whether he is right or wrong, but the ugly little war is making people pay attention and he is slowly unveiling the inner workings of a world immediate to us— the political pavement our feet are pounding every day.

Bradley Skaught is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Letters to the Editor

GEO demands University response

To the Editor:

In the fall semester of 1991, the University of Massachusetts formally recognized the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) as the exclusive bargaining agent for graduate student employees. This recognition was not an act of benevolence toward the 6,000 graduate students whose efforts, talents, skills and time are central to the education available at UMass. It was the result of graduate employees' ability to organize, educate and mobilize themselves. This could not have been accomplished without the support and encouragement of faculty, staff, undergraduate students and each of the campus unions.

Despite continuous bargaining since last spring and the expiration of the last contract this past June, a settlement continues to remain far from sight. Establishing ad–hoc extensions, GEO has been able to preserve— albeit tentatively— the protection of the expired contract. Throughout negotiations, the administration has avoided discussion of several key issues put forth by GEO. Chief among these are affirmative action and affordable child care. These issues challenge the University to live up to the grand vision of its mission statement. Predictably, the administration's response has been to stall negotiations for as long as possible.

But the pedestrian pace adopted by the University's administration is unacceptable. Settlement of a new contract is crucial to UMass's academic health. GEO is bargaining for affordable health care, for greater access to people of color and other under–represented groups, for a stronger grievance procedure for those who have experienced sexual harassment and for pay reflecting the heavy responsibility which graduate student employees carry for the quality of every UMass student's education. With eight months since the expiration date of the last contract, it appears that the administration is dragging its feet on these vital issues. What's more, they don't have to.

The "To Dream, To Act, To Lead" campaign has certainly captured the spotlight on campus. While I do not discount any attempt to improve the conditions and quality of education at UMass, I question the implementation of a high–budget campaign while GEO meets only resistance for its vital goals at the bargaining table. Better working conditions for those who provide the education at UMass, greater action toward diversity and student retention and affordable support for students with families will improve the quality of education available at UMass far more than any glossy public relations campaign. We need to urge the administration to lead effectively, to dream imaginatively, to act responsibly and to settle its contract with GEO. Until then, it seems that Whitmore is more interested in a flashy public image than in any real and positive change on this campus.

Chris Flood
Labor Studies

Article misunderstanding

To the Editor:

I want to thank and compliment the Collegian for two articles concerning the Holocaust Commemorative Committee film showing this past weekend. However, though it may seem insignificant, I just want to go on the record that I never said Holocaust revisionists are uneducated (article from Monday). Unfortunately, I cannot recall my exact words, but I brought attention to the fact that most revisionists say the six million Jews never died, and at the same time they tend not to address the other six million victims. I believe I was just misinterpreted.

Thanks for your understanding. I hope the paper is going well this semester.

Joshua Grey
Amherst

Now you can send your letters to the editor via email.

Remember the rules:
1) Try and keep it short and sweet (400 words is a nice length).
2)Don't forget your name, address and phone number for verification purposes.
3)Send letters over e-mail to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu or to the office at 113 Campus Center, c/o Mike Burke
4) Have a cute day.

Arts & Living

Tuesday, February 18, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Eastwood's Absolute Power is absolutely horrible

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

ABSOLUTE POWER
Directed by Clint Eastwood
with Clint Eastwood, Ed Harris, Gene Hackman
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

Clint Eastwood has been heralded both as an actor and as a director, gaining quite a following through his lengthy career. He risks his reputation and loses with Absolute Power.

Eastwood plays burglar Luther Whitney, a supposed "master criminal," who is prepared to run one last job before he, in truest sense of the action–thriller cliché, gets too old for his line of work. Whitney unwittingly witnesses the sexual assault and murder of a woman while in the house he's just broken into.

The catch of the film, and presumably the same of this summer's Murder at 1600, is that the murderer is the none other than the President of the United States. Played by Gene Hackman, the president is a sexual deviant who likes physically rough extramarital sex. It's this sort of dalliance that Whitney sees through a two–way mirror as he's hiding in the young woman's house. It's also this murder that sets such an uneasy pace for the film.

There is a general sense of levity to Absolute Power, one that not only takes away from any sense of importance that the plot might carry, but casts a dubious shadow over the intentions of the filmmaker. Moments after the young woman is murdered by the president's secret service agents, jokes are being tossed off. Strangely enough, the feeling of disregard for this young woman's life doesn't come from the Scott Glenn (The Right Stuff) or Dennis Haysbert (Major League I & II). Any responsibility and blame can be credited to Eastwood and screenwriter William Goldman.

Goldman is lauded too frequently for films he penned in the '70s like Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, Marathon Man and All the President's Men and not chastised enough for everything he's done since–. Among the travesties he's partially responsible for are Chaplin and Maverick. In a decade of cultural crap like the '70s, it's understandable how someone like Goldman could gain legendary status.

The film's true shame comes with wasting such a talented cast as the one that has been put together for Absolute Power. At one point in the film, when we realize that Ed Harris is reduced to a one–joke character, the audience asks itself, "How many Academy Award nominations have been passed out to these people?" It's a waste of time, both for the audience and the actors involved.

By the film's conclusion, a sensibility not too far away from camp seems to take over the film. As the President's Chief of Staff, Judy Davis (Husbands and Wives) conveys the attitude of a drag queen, barking orders at the secret service and chewing up the scenery like weed whacker with lipstick. D

COURTESY GRAHAM BUNN

Clint Eastwood directs himself in Absolute Power.

Faulkner brouhaha brewing: Oxford cuts down Magnolia

By Stephen Hawkings
Associated Press

OXFORD, Miss. — There's a sound and fury in William Faulkner's hometown these days, all because the mayor cut down a magnolia tree to make room for another symbol of the Deep South — a statue of the author.

"Outside looking in, it beats worrying about drive-by shootings and things," said retired physician Chester McLarty, Faulkner's personal doctor. "People do take things serious around here."

Even some relatives of the Nobel Prize-winning author have turned against the plan by Faulkner's hometown, a model for his fictional Yoknapatawpha County, to honor the 100th anniversary of his birth.

"I'm against it particularly since they cut down that magnolia tree," Faulkner's daughter, Jill Faulkner Summers, wrote in a letter presented to city officials by Faulkner's nephew, Jimmy Faulkner. "Tell them I do not want the statue of my father put on the square or anywhere else."

Mayor John Leslie persuaded the city aldermen to contribute $25,000 to the project last fall and then helped raise an additional $25,000 in private funds. He insists that the life-sized bronze statue be placed in front of City Hall and nowhere else.

City Hall was formerly a post office frequented by Faulkner, and it overlooks the picturesque square where the author used to sit or stand alone in contemplation. Faulkner died in Oxford in 1962.

"My position, either put it there or I will refund all of the money raised," the mayor said.

Leslie ordered the flowering tree cut down in January, saying he had the right since he planted it there 21 years ago. Besides, "it was a fairly scrubby tree," Alderman David Magee said. At 25 feet, it was maybe 5 to 10 feet below average.

"I think Faulkner would scoff at it and say it was much ado about nothing, and something he could have predicted would have happened," said Bill Ferris, director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi a few blocks away in this town of 10,000.

Ferris said he is appalled because a magnolia was sacrificed in the name of an author "who wrote so eloquently about nature and about the beauty of the woods and life within the woods."

"It was as if the one place it shouldn't be, the mayor insisted on trying to put it there," Ferris said.

While the tree is gone, the statue doesn't yet exist.

It's supposed to be installed Sept. 25, which would have been Faulkner's 100th birthday, but sculptor William Beckwith said last week that the design has only just recently been decided: Faulkner in a sitting pose.

"I need more time than I have. It is going to really be pushing it. All of this should have been done a long time ago," Beckwith said.

Recycle Your Collegian!!!!!!

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON
$130 $245
PARIS
$202 $379
ROME
$235 $438
SAN JOSE, COSTA RICA
$277 $517
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs clearance taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

OCMP IS BACK AT THE TOC
ALONG WITH WEEKDAY MUNCHIE SPECIALS, DRAFT BEER AND MICRO BREWS
At The TOC We Are Down With OCMP
Hours: Mon - Fri 4:00PM - 12:30PM
Sat 5:00PM - 12:30PM

The ALANA Lecture Series
PRESENTS
DR. JULIANNE MALVEAUX
GUEST SPEAKER
WILL LECTURE ON
SEX, LIES AND STEREOTYPES:
PERSPECTIVES OF A MAD ECONOMIST
TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1997
7:00PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
UMASS AMHERST
Sponsored by: Office of ALANA Affairs, Black Student Union, Every Woman's Center, Graduate Student Senate, Residence Life and Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund.
OFFICE OF ALANA AFFAIRS 1997

1997 ATLANTIC-10 TOURNAMENT
MARCH 5-8, 1997
CORESTATES SPECTRUM, PHILADELPHIA
STUDENT TICKETS* ON SALE NOW
PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW FOR
THE 1997 ATLANTIC-10 MEN'S BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT
AT THE UMASS ATHLETIC TICKET OFFICE
LOCATED AT THE CURRY HICK CAGE.
STUDENT TICKET PACKAGES ARE JUST $40.00.
PRICE INCLUDES ALL SESSIONS (REGULAR PRICE-$110.00)
(5 DOUBLEHEADERS AND CHAMPIONSHIP GAME)
ALL 11 GAMES FOR $40.00!
*UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE STUDENTS ARE ELIGIBLE.
*MUST BE STUDENT AT AN A-10 SCHOOL.
UMASS, XAVIER, TEMPLE, GEORGE WASHINGTON, DUQUESNE, VIRGINIA TECH, ST. JOSEPH'S, ST. BONAVENTURE, DAYTON, RHODE ISLAND, FORDHAM, LASALLE.

COURTESY JIMMY TINGLE

Boston phenomenon Jimmy Tingle is welcomed to the Valley.

Tingle to tickle at the SUB

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

This Wednesday night, Cambridge native Jimmy Tingle will bring his one man stand-up comedy act to the Student Union Ballroom. Tingle calls his show "Uncommon Sense," an appropriate title for a social and political satirist. However, Tingle is not your average comedian, but rather one of the brightest and most provocative entertainers currently a part of the comedy circuit.

Tingle began his career as a bartender in Boston area clubs. His aspirations of success eventually led him to participate in "open mic" nights where he would perform his comedy routines. People quickly noticed his talent and Tingle began to receive more and more offers for paid engagements and college tours.

Tingle's career took a turn for the worst when he lost on Star Search. Despite this unfortunate setback, Tingle received the opportunity to appear on The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson. Tragedy occurred once again when Carson refused to allow Tingle a second appearance on his show. Tingle hoped The Tonight Show would be his big break, but later, he was told that Carson did not like him.

Rather than lose heart, Tingle pursued his career further and landed spots on other network programs including The Dick Cavett Show and Larry King Weekend. Tingle also received a comedy special on HBO entitled "One Night Stand." He has also been featured on such radio programs as "Fresh Air" and "Talk of the Nation" and starred in the documentary film Damned in the USA which examines art censorship.

Tingle has recently received a humanitarian award from his hometown of Cambridge and has taken his show on the road. "Uncommon Sense" has gained rave reviews in Boston and New York City and now Tingle will share his politically charged humor with his fans as UMass. "Uncommon Sense" is sure to be filled with intelligence and sharp wit that will leave the audience entertained and educated.

"Jimmy Tingle's Uncommon Sense" will be performed at the Student Union Ballroom on Wednesday, February 19 at 7:30 p.m. The admission is free and the event is sponsored by the Commuter Area Government.

Taylor opens bash for AIDS benefit

By Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It was Elizabeth Taylor's night, though the legendary actress didn't see it that way.

Miss Taylor, who's facing brain surgery this week, was serenaded by Michael Jackson, Patti LaBelle and others during a star-studded celebration Sunday night marking her 65th birthday.

Inside Hollywood's Pantages Theatre, the audience was also reminded of the actress' colorful life, her love of diamonds and her seven husbands with videotaped footage spanning a career that began at age 9 and garnered two Academy Awards.

Madonna even gushed when speaking about how she used to watch Miss Taylor's movies, especially A Place in the Sun.

"I was so absolutely knocked out by her beauty," Madonna said.

"I don't know what it is. I think it's this wondrous light that radiates from her and it always takes my breath away.

"Elizabeth Taylor has stopped making films but her life continues to shine in a much more wondrous passion."

That passion is AIDS, and the black-tie event raised more than $1 million for the Elizabeth Taylor AIDS Foundation from audience members who bought tickets at $500 and $1,000 each.

The foundation distributes money for AIDS research and treatment, but focuses mainly on day-to-day care for victims of the deadly disease.

Miss Taylor, who along with Jackson watched the tribute from chairs at the side of the stage, said she didn't attend the event to celebrate her birthday, but rather the cause she has devoted her life to for the past 12 years.

"I'm here to celebrate all of the people in the world with AIDS," she said. "Because of you and your generosity and your big heart, it has enabled ETAF to go all over the world... and because of you they will be touched, they will be fed, they will be nurtured with your love. And I thank you so much for that."

Jackson, who escorted Miss Taylor along a violet carpet into the theater, earlier sang a song "Elizabeth," which he wrote especially for the event and for the godmother of his newborn son.

"Elizabeth, I love you, you're more than just a star to me," Jackson crooned.

Roseanne, Carol Burnett, Hugh Grant, Elizabeth Hurley, Lily Tomlin, Cher and Arsenio Hall also paid tribute to Miss Taylor, who shunned her traditional purple outfit for a green gown and coat. Whoopi Goldberg, John Travolta and Rosie O'Donnell appeared via videotaped messages for the event. It will air as a two-hour ABC special on Feb. 24, three days before her actual birthday.

COURTESY AP

Elizabeth Taylor celebrates her birthday with a celebrity- filled party.

Outside the theater, a blocklong stretch of Hollywood Boulevard was temporarily renamed Elizabeth Taylor Way in honor of the woman who won best actress Academy Awards for "Butterfield 8" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Miss Taylor needs an operation to remove a benign brain tumor.

Her surgery was originally planned for today but was postponed for sometime this week because of lingering flu symptoms. No date has been set, her publicist Maria Pignataro said Sunday night.

The tumor on the "lining of her left frontal lobe" was detected following an MRI brain scan during her annual physical examination earlier this month. Her doctor expected a full recovery without complications, Pignataro said.

COURTESY ROSE LEE TOMPKINS

Quilts on parade

"Checkerboard Variations" is just one of the quilts on display at the University Gallery until March 14. The exhibit is entitled Something Else to See: Improvisational Bordering Styles in African-American Quilts.

It's the end of the world as they know it

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Add this to America's arsenal.

An Iraqi government newspaper has declared the Internet "the end of civilizations, cultures, interests and ethics."

The computer network "is one of the American means to enter every house in the world," Al-Jumhuriya said in an editorial yesterday.

"They want to become the only source for controlling human beings in the new electronic village."

Iraqi newspapers often blame Washington for the country's suffering under a U.N. embargo, which was imposed in 1990 after Iraq invaded Kuwait, prompting the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

There is no access to the Internet in Iraq.

Collegian Graphics.
WE DON'T LET SLEEPING DOGS LIE.

We Want to
You!!!.
Regency Hairstylist
253-9526

The Right Place to Be!
3 Barbers Everyday
Unisex Hair Styling
Amherst Barbers
Jim — Guys & Gals, Layer Cuts, Flat Tops, Fades
Clipper Cuts, Razor Cuts, Kids Cuts, $8 and up
Terri
Hours: Mon - Fri 8 - 5:15 pm, Sat 8 - 2:45 pm
Appointment Not Neccessary
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA (Next to Newbury Comics)
Proprietors: Jim Read and Terri Loncrini

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Vegetarian Potato Skins 7.25 3.63
Sweet Potato Fries 4.99 2.50
Shrimp Tempura 6.25 3.13
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Learn German This Summer At URI
June 22-August 1, 1997
The University of Rhode Island in cooperation with the Goethe Institute Boston is hosting the Seventeenth Annual German Summer School of the Atlantic. German will be the sole language of communication, and German life and culture the heart of this six week residency program of intensive language study. Earn up to nine undergraduate or graduate credits while living in the beautiful surroundings of our country campus, just minutes away from Rhode Island's magnificent beaches and historic Newport. This program is ideally suited for anyone wishing to enroll in beginning through Master's level German. Take advantage of this rare opportunity to participate in this total German language experience.
Contact: Dr. John Grandin or Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors
Dept. of Languages, URI Kingston, RI 02881
Or call: (401) 874-5911
Hearing impaired: (401) 277-5020
e-mail: grandin@uriacc.uri.edu, hedderic@uriacc.uri.edu
Web site: http://www.uri.edu/artsci/ml/germ.htm
University of Rhode Island
Providence Center
College of Continuing Education at the Shepard Building
80 Washington Street, Providence, RI 02903

Choices Not Chances
Free Contraception Education
Every Mon & Thurs 3 - 4:30 pm and Tues & Wed 7 - 8:30 pm in rm. 302 UHS
Men and Women Welcome
For more information call the Health Education Office 577-5181

Put the world at your fingertips.
Software Engineering
Systems Engineering
Computer Design
Signal Processing
Electro-Optics
Image Processing
With Raytheon Electronic Systems, you'll create the technologies that define the future of tomorrow's world. You'll maximize your Engineering and Computer Science knowledge and make an impact when you join our team. We currently have over 350 opportunities available in the technical areas listed above.
Raytheon Electronic Systems will be visiting campus soon. To find out more about the complex challenges we have to offer, please contact the Career Placement Office to sign up for an interview.
For additional information, please see our homepage at: http://www.raytheon.com/res
Interested candidates who are unable to meet with us on campus may send a resume directly to: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Professional Staffing, M/S T2SL2, 50 Apple Hill Drive, Tewksbury, MA 01876-0901. Fax: (508) 858-1163. E-mail: staffing@res.ray.com
U.S. citizenship may be required for some positions. Equal Opportunity Employer.
Raytheon Electronic Systems

Softball team struggles out west; Arizona difficult place to start

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The No. 23 UMass softball team got its season off to a rocky start this weekend, losing four of five games in the Coca-Cola Classic in Phoenix, Arizona.

The Minutewomen (1–5) opened play by beating McNeese St. 6–5 behind the pitching of Liz Wagner. UMass took a 5– 4 lead into the bottom of the sixth, and a Kirt Gutridge single would score Sam Cardenas, providing the winning run. Danielle Henderson pitched 2 1\3 innings of no–hit relief to notch the save.

On Saturday, UMass fell to Utah State 1–0 and No. 3 Fresno State 5–4. Henderson pitched five and one–thirds of perfect softball against Utah State, before letting up two singles and the only run of the ballgame in the bottom of the sixth. The Minutewomen only notched one hit, courtesy of Gutridge.

Fresno St. got ahead early, and staved off a UMass rally to hand the Minutewomen their second loss of the day. The Bulldogs scored three runs in the top of the first, thanks to six singles in the frame. Fresno St. pushed their lead to 5–1 in the fourth, thanks to the fourth home run of the year from 1996 first team All–American Nina Lindenberg. UMass scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth, but couldn't push past the Bulldogs.

Things got worse on Sunday. No. 25 Arizona St. pounded the Minutewomen 14–2, behind 15 hits and a 12 run fourth inning. Earlier in the day, UMass was shut out by Purdue 4– 0. A pair of UMass errors, two Purdue singles and a home run by Bollermaker Jen Blasnik in the bottom of the fifth led to UMass's fifth straight loss.

The Minutewomen return to action on Feb 28 in Columbus, Ga. when they take on No.7 Southwestern Louisiana at 4:00 pm. in the annual NFCA Lead–Off Classic.

Players warming up; Baseball not far away

HAINES CITY, Fla. (AP) — Better not keep your head down at the Kansas City Royals' spring training camp. Wild Thing is trying another comeback.

Mitch Williams, released by the Astros in 1994, the Angels in 1995 and the Phillies in 1996, is trying to win a job in the Royals bullpen. He's just 32, four years removed from giving up Joe Carter's World Series-winning homer.

"It's like starting over for me," the left-hander said at Haines City, Fla. "I've got to earn a spot, and I'm excited about it."

Williams was released from a minor-league deal by the Phillies last August. The Royals signed him to a minor-league contract last month.

Also competing for one or two left-handed spots are Jason Jacome — the only returning bullpen lefty from last season — veterans Ken Patterson, Dereli Lilliquist, Juan Agosto and Randy Tomlin and rookies Allen McDill and Glendon Rusch.

While Williams was assessing his own throws — with an occasional "Ahhh!" after a particularly wild one — the others talked about the competition.

Patterson has been through it before and knows how a bad outing feels.

"You go home at night and think, 'I blew it,' " he said.

Some things never change: Jose Canseco will report to spring training after the rest of his Oakland Athletics teammates. Canseco, traded back to Oakland this winter after four seasons with Texas and Boston, told the A's he'll report to spring training on Friday and participate in his first workout on Saturday. The full squad will have its first workout Thursday, though the mandatory reporting date for players is not until the end of this month.

"He said that he may have some sort of charity golf tournament," general manager Sandy Alderson said at Phoenix. "I would have been surprised if he had been here on the 20th. That's just not his style."

Canseco reported with the rest of the squad during his rookie season in 1985, but has made a habit of showing up late in subsequent seasons.

Manager Art Howe said he is not at all concerned that Canseco, who he hopes will be a team leader, won't join the rest of the squad on Thursday.

"No problem, as long as he's ready to play," Howe said.

Dennis Eckersley left St. Louis' workout early yesterday to have his sore right elbow examined. Eckersley, 42, reported the soreness after Sunday's workout. He underwent an MRI exam.

"It's just precautionary," Eckersley said at St. Petersburg, Fla. "It's just a little sore."

Eckersley appeared in 60 games last season, and saved 30 games. He is in his 22nd year in the majors and his second with the Cardinals.

Second baseman Mike Gallego was invited to camp as a non-roster invitee. Gallego, 36, played in 51 games with St. Louis last year and hit .210 in an injury-plagued season.

Cincinnati went through the formality of putting pitcher Jose Rijo on the 60-day disabled list.

Rijo, at one time the ace of the Reds' staff, has not pitched since July 18, 1995. He underwent elbow surgery that August, and since then has had surgery twice — last April to remove calcification, a bone formation and scar tissue, and in November to repair ruptured flexor tendon mass.

Rijo is in Birmingham, Ala., working with a physical therapist.

Greg Maddux spent his first day back with the Braves focusing on spring training rather than his free agent eligibility following this season.

"Free agency's something I haven't given a whole lot of thought. Right now, I'll throw on the side, get a fishing license, maybe teach my little girl how to fish," Maddux said Sunday at West Palm Beach, Fla.

Maddux, a four-time NL Cy Young winner, reported for camp a day late — but with the club's blessing. He attended his sister's wedding in Las Vegas before arriving in Florida.

Maddux will not say if he plans to re-sign with the Braves. Neither will his agent, Scott Boras.

"All I know is I've got a year left with the Braves, I like playing here and I haven't thought a whole lot about it," Maddux said. "I'm thinking about getting back to the post-season and doing a little better than last year."

Barry Bonds arrived at spring training and reiterated his desire to finish his career with San Francisco.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

minutes he has seen his team play all year. Until the 17:32 mark of the second period, when senior Warren Norris collected a pass at the top of the slot from junior Brad Norton, beating Michaud low to the stick–side for UMass' off–the–schnide goal. The Black Bear defense then decided to clamp down further on the Minutemen offense, not allowing another true scoring chance for the remainder of the game.

On Friday night, things weren't any better for UMass. Right out of the gate, Maine dominated the pace with crisp clean passing and stone–wall defense. At the 4:19 mark of the first period, a loose puck was knocked past Regan by Larose, after freshman defenseman Dean Stork fanned on a clearing attempt.

But before the smoke had a chance to clear from the surface at the Mullins Center, another goal squeezed past Regan. Again Larose capitalized on a loose puck in front of the net, and Regan was unable to stop the screened shot.

That hole kept on getting deeper as Maine posted two more goals in the second. Maine defenseman Jason Mansoff received a pass from sophomore Steve Kariya by the face– off circle, and ripped it into the net to make the score 5–1.

The one positive for the Minutemen was that they never stopped skating. At the 9:37 mark, Norris received a pass right outside of the crease and back–handed it through the five hole of Michaud. But it was to no avail, and senior captain Reg Cardinal brought the lead back to four with a power play goal at the 17:48 mark.

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

n't be shocked if anybody in Hockey East knocked off anybody else. Absolutely anything can happen."

But hey, don't look at these two losses as the sounding line of this season for the Minutemen...because on paper, their season may have ended almost a month ago.

After a sweep of Northeastern on Jan. 17–18, where UMass came back in two consecutive games, the Minutemen had an opportunity to go .500 against Boston College the next weekend. This would have been a huge accomplishment for a team only in HE for three seasons, but it was not to be, and the Eagles took a close 3–2 win at the Conte Forum.

Since then, in a important stretch of conference games, UMass has gone 1–7 (the 6–4 Alumni Cup win coming against Lowell), and have lost key sixth place positioning in HE to of all teams— Merrimack. The Warriors have gone from missing the playoffs last year to going on a hot streak the last month, beating UNH, Maine and BC in that time.

Forget about the blowouts at the hands of UNH and Maine, the detritus of the UMass beaujolais (i.e. the low point) was their 5–3 loss on Jan. 31 at home to Merrimack. At that time, the Minutemen still had a chance for an unprecedented home first round playoff spot. Now, the situation holds a slim chance to unearth their season out of a unenviable first round match with one of the nation's best.

You see, this weekend's home game versus BC still has importance. If UMass wins the rest of their games (BC at home, Maine in Orono), and the Eagles lose the rest of their games (UMass, Merrimack and Northeastern), they will get that sixth place spot...on paper. But once again, this scenario bases itself on other teams doing their dirty work for them. Fate is an inexorable nemesis, and it is pretty much pissed off at the Minutemen right now.

Fine. Great. Wonderful.

Team pride is what UMass has to play with now, and hopefully, things will fall for them. Truthfully, all that Maine worked off of was that hazy concept in their two wins last weekend. Last Thursday, the NCAA upheld their postseason sanction after a Black Bear appeal two weeks ago. So, like freshman forward Cory Larose started to do, the Maine team could have got their vacation plans ready, or they could just go out and win games.

Well, they won. But, really now, folks, that whole situation comes down to rooting for a team that's good, and very dirty, or a team that's... not as good, and clean. With a chance to at least get some positive momentum going, the Minutemen got knocked in the mush by a Black Bear offensive and defensive onslaught.

For Mallen, it's not the time to throw in the towel, but to try and get back into a winning mode — on paper, and on the ice. The playoffs are at stake, but more importantly, team pride and stability is on the line, too.

"In every game, I don't push the panic button," Mallen said. "With a loss at this point in the year, you just got to get ready for the next game, try to get your team ready and let the chips fall where they may. We got to stay optimistic, and keep working."

"You got to give them credit, and they got to find points to rally around. We're rallying around getting ourselves ready for the playoffs, and that wasn't the type of performance that is going to get us ready for the playoffs."

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ Fordham

continued from page 10

minutes of pressure."

UMass was led by freshman Kelly Van Huisen, who threw in 14 points, dished out five assists and pulled down seven rebounds. Crystal Carroll had an uncharacteristically bad night, but still contributed 10 points and seven rebounds. Senior point guard Sabriya Mitchell chipped in with seven points and four assists, the prettiest of which occurred mid– way through the first half. Mitchell drove the lane and threw a perfect behind the back blind pass to Lucia Madajova, cutting the Fordham lead to two and sending the 1,502 in attendance into a variety of "oohs" and "ahhs".

The Minutewomen continue to gear up for the A–10 tournament Wednesday when they travel to Cincinnati to face the Xavier Musketeers. The game will hold a little extra incentive for O'Brien, a native of Cincinnati.

"Wednesday will be a tough game for us," O'Brien said. "We've struggled this year with one game road trips. Plus, I can't go back to Ohio with too many losses," O'Brien joked.

■ destruction

continued from page 10

Ketner got the second half rolling for the Minutemen with a tip–in basket just 47 seconds into the frame. He added to the UMass lead with a bucket off his own rebound, that put his team ahead 45–31.

With 10:30 remaining in the game, Ketner was fouled by Terrapin Keith Booth, made both free throws and followed that less than a minute later with another hoop, pushing the UMass lead to 14.

"We couldn't stop Ketner," Maryland coach Gary Williams said. "We've played against some pretty good people this year inside who haven't done that. To his credit, he did a great job on us and if he's that good, then he's a great player."

But Clarke and Ketner were not the only Minutemen who contributed to UMass' win. Senior shooting guard Carmelo Travieso was a perfect 4–for–4 from the foul line to add 16 points the Minutemen cause. Tyrone Weeks, who sat for nearly 10 minutes in the second half due to foul trouble, also dropped in eight to aid UMass.

Travieso's help did not come only from the charity stripe, as the senior was 2–for–2 from behind the 3–point line in the first half, contributing key long–range shots when needed. His first trey came with 17:37 left in the first half, giving UMass its first lead of the game at 8–6. His second answered a dunk from Profit and jacked the Minuteman edge back nine.

Weeks' contribution was measured in terms of defense, as well as his offensive numbers. The senior forward was assigned the task of guarding Maryland's All–America candidate, Keith Booth. Booth may have scored 16, but he was held to only quicker than we did." Williams said. "They seemed to get to every loose ball situation. There is nothing we did as well as UMass that would have allowed us to win."

■ Ketner

continued from page 10

I think what they are is very good perimeter shooting with not just height, but good physical size inside and they play hard.

"They play aggressively on defense where they don't give up a lot of easy scores. With their ability to get second shots, even if they are not particularly hitting well from outside, they are still going to be a factor in scoring because they can find other ways of scoring. They are a well–rounded team."

As the Minutemen round out their final four Atlantic 10 conference games, it is their well rounded game plan that will hopefully propel UMass into the NCAA Tournament.

"I told the guys, if we win it's a big game," Flint said. "But if we don't close out the league it doesn't matter. We have to close out the league."

In the final conference games of the season, UMass faces Fordham at home, before hitting the road to face Dayton and St. Joe's. The Minutemen wrap up the regular season with Temple in the William D. Mullins Center before preparing for the A–10 Tournament.

Currently, UMass is tied with St. Joe's for first place in the A–10 East with a 9–3 conference mark.

HUI GAO/COLLEGIAN

Kelly Van Huisen and the UMass women's hoop team beat Fordham 58–45 on Sunday.

HAIR SKIN NAILS
STYLES BY DEBORAH
•HAIRCARE •WAXING
•FACIALS •MANICURES
•PEDICURES •TANNING
•FREE HAIR & SKIN CONSULTATIONS
549-5610
65 University Drive, Amherst
$5.00 OFF Consultation Style HAIRCUT Shampoo + Dry
with Cheryl -Coupon expires 3/3/97
ONE FREE TANNING VISIT with Any Other Salon Service

!! TREADMILLS !!
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
!! TREADMILLS !!

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S DRIVE-IN ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

Spring Break
Hartford Repertoire
Guaranteed Lowest Prices On Campus!
Cancun from $449
Jamaica from $449
Florida from $139
STS STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
Toll free 1-800-648-4849
http://www.ststravel.com/

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Get Involved! The Women's Health Project seeks volunteers interested in teaching and political action in contraceptive education, body image, etc. For information call 577-5181.

SUMMER IN SWITZER LAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS; 6 credits, airfare. Eurorail, Room/board. ALL FOR $3299- Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

ANNOUNCEMETS

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5168 for answers to your questions. Completely confidential

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm, in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info. or just drop by.

Congratulations to Jennifer Jarinka, Katie Trimarco, Alicia Hiller, Jeanette Eke, Jennifer Walton, Sarah Lupaczak, Lydia Yeh, Julie Galvin, Jennifer Knect, Amy Goetz, Nikki Dileo, Katie Parks, Janessa McWilliams, Stephanie Goldberg, Jen Baird, Love, The Sisters of Chi Omega

The Sisters of Sigma Kappa invite all university women to Open Rush. For times, information, and a ride, please call 256-6887

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst 2 bedroom apartment for rent. Water and heat included. Take over lease. Call Angela 546-4784

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 Honda Accord 4-door, 5-speed, 114,000 miles, needs brake work. $500 or B/O 253-3071

1988 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap. $1650 or B/O 546-5320

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info. send resume and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Job! Camp Somoset is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama, woodworking. Also hiring secretaries, kitchen and maintenance workers. Call or fax resume to Winter Office, Wellesley, MA. Phone (617)237-3017, Fax (617)237-7289

Camp Wayne(sister hall of brother/sister camp, Northeast Pennsylvania, 6/23-8/20/97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students: Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation.

EMPLOYMENT

On-Campus Interviews March 11. Call (800)279-3019

Counselors for co-ed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation camp(3 hours from NYC)- general, sports, drama, H20 and arts. (800)973-3666

Premiere Brother/Sister Camp in Massechusetts On-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all Team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball, 30 Tennis Openings; also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling, other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board and travel. June 22nd-August 20th. Call for information MAH-KEE-NAC(boys) 800-753-9118 DAN-BEE(girls) 800-392-3752. Recruiters will be On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am.-4pm at the UMass Camp Day.

$15 per hour minimum- Teaching S.A.T. Prep-Course Teacher needed in all parts of MA and CT. Undergraduate degree preferred, excellent math and verbal scores required. Send resume to: American Academy, P.O. Box 2062, Oswego, NY 13126

Exceptional Summer Opportunity- Camp Wayne, NE Pennsylvania. Sports oriented. Counselor/Specialist for all land/water sports including tennis, camping, climbing/ropes, rocketry, roller hockey, sailing/water-skiing, A&C, drama, video. Campus Interviews Tuesday, March 11. Please call (800)737-3296.

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7767 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

SugarLoaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments, free heat/hot water, new kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3656

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses. Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

Bolster your immune system, improve your energy and focus with wild, organic, Super Blue Green Algae. 90-Day money back guarantee. Call independent distributor, Matthew Vergo at 256-1331 for more information or a free tape.

FOR SALE

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers, $250/Pr. Call 253-6520

Chinchilla with cage and set-up- to a good home. $100.00 Robin 549-5124

Macintosh SE, Hard Drive, Style Writer II ink jet printer, $400 or B/O. Call 549-9188

Laptop/Notebook $99 Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 566-3324-2

STEREO EQUIPMENT Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

FOR SALE

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition. $200. Sean 546-5734

FOUND

J Hurteau, You left your wallet at the Collegian. Please call 545-3500

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons $69.95. Call (413)732-6817 in Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve.

Bertend with University Bertending 50% student discount. On- campus classes starting soon! Call (800)4-Can-Mix for info.

MISCELLANEOUS

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)665-4783

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. Available immediately. On bus route. Sugarloaf Estates. Keira (203)934-1336 Females only

Housemate wanted to share house on the Connecticut River. No pets or smoke. $250+ 586-8593

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922

SERVICES

Campus Center, 545-1995

GRE GMAT Prep-Courses 30 hours 3 weeks $295.00 (800)808 Prep

Business or Personal E-mail at: AGRO-ART@MAIL.ME.COM

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available. (800)773-8704. Cost $29. Applications close 2-24-97.

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016 (We are a research and publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs.

TRAVEL

Scuba Spring Break Earn 2 credits March 15-22. Call (800)282-0977 for info

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 O/W. Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97 CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH...CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

Jamaica-Spring Break from $599. Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $850/week. (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Inter-campus Representatives. (800)327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Europe $155, $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations. Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@interl-com.com or www.is\com fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed. From $99 (800)426-7710. www.sunsplashtours.com

Visit The Collegian on-line!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance at the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a embellishing or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to edit personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation Wanted to Rent
Wanted

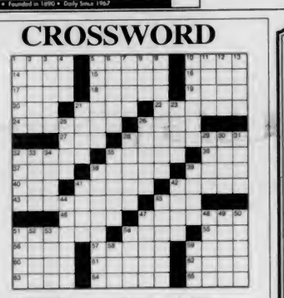
Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others



40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

L	A	G	S		D	A	V	I	S		E	D	O	M
O	L	E	O		E	V	O	K	E		B	O	N	A
L	A	R	D		F	I	L	E	R		O	V	E	R
L	I	M	I	T	E	D		G	O	N	E	R	S
		U	R	N		C	H	E	R	I
T	E	A	M	E	D		H	A	S	T	E	N	E	D
E	S	P		S	E	T	I	N		S	O	A	R
A	T	E		S	R	A		O	O	P		B	S	A
S	E	R	F		P	A	I	N	E		L	E	W
E	S	S	E	N	C	E	S		L	A	P	E	L	S
		L	E	A	D	S			O	R	R
G	A	L	L	O	N		B	O	L	I	V	I	A
O	L	I	O		C	R	E	A	K		D	O	O	M
S	L	E	W		A	B	I	D	E		E	T	T	A
H	I	S	S		N	I	N	E	R		S	E	A	N

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1. Courts
5. First public appearance
10. Laid-down, informally
14. London's Admiralty, e.g.
15. Wad on the sly
16. Seabird
17. Position
18. Three troy grams
19. Lingerie item
20. Ballerina's pointer
21. Spy Hart
22. Author Joseph
24. Weave
25. Brazilian soccer great
27. Mel the Giant
28. Jean Harlow's last film
32. Voice a view
33. Interlaced
36. Matrix component
37. Duct opening
38. Said "Hoo!"
39. Skid row resident
40. Noah's craft
41. Used a miter box
42. Inch
43. Eased
45. Calendar abbr.
46. Otter actor Alan
47. Moisture
51. Excite
54. Cameraman's maneuvers
55. African worm
56. Starbuck's beverage
57. Get pursued by Brutus
58. Bonded servant
60. Pennsylvania's third-largest city
61. Rent again
62. Contribute to the poker pot
63. Auction bidding signals
64. Explode
65. Singing Mama

DOWN

1. Detritus
2. Celestial hunter
3. Singing group
4. Ela, in Manhattan
5. Pour out
6. Please greatly
7. Adriatic wind
8. ___ tree
9. Tried up
10. Fuel for nonchanged wood stoves
11. Thermometer type
12. "___ in Love With Amy"
13. Look inanimate
21. Papaguak
23. Vivacity
25. They ___ Believe Me
26. Laid concrete
28. Scattered seeds
29. Garfield's friend
30. Past
31. At the acme
33. Ellipsoid
34. Father, in France
35. Writing fluids
36. Impressed
38. Rent recipient
39. Architect Christopher
41. Good Housekeeping reward
42. Cold ___
44. Post-vacation preservation
45. Beliefs
47. Fluttered
48. Actress Verdugo
49. Classifies
50. Fireproof coffers
51. Govt. agents
52. Long lunch?
53. ___ On Entebbe
54. Accumulation
56. Actor Majors
59. Bagilla part

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20

As tension in one area of your life eases, stories could be brewing elsewhere. Pay close attention to nonchemical things, especially if you're planning to travel. A calm over which you have control could prevent a serious breakdown, and save you money as repairs.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21

Ask your sweetheart to help you handle a difficult situation. He or she may have just the right blend of tact and firmness to foster a difficult person. Start saving now for a project you've been wanting to take on--by the time you have a big enough nest egg, the time will be right.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21

You may be feeling a little sensitive lately. Instead of taking it out on others, quietly seclude yourself. Don't ignore a ringing phone, though; or you could miss out on an important opportunity. A solid relationship boosts your mood toward the weekend.

CANCER
June 22-July 22

Your persistence and efforts to a personal relationship are beginning to pay off in terms of increased trust and intimacy. But poor communication could cause bigger problems than you might have imagined. Make sure you aren't holding back on anything this week.

LEO
July 23-August 23

Treat yourself to a mini getaway--a drive in the country could refresh you and inspire you to new heights. Invite a group of friends over this weekend for conversation and games. You could reach a new understanding with one of them, to your mutual advantage.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22

If you're having trouble making something happen, be sure that you're asking the right questions. Sometimes all it takes is a fresh perspective. Don't overwork yourself, or you'll skip over an obvious mistake. Instead, step aside and come back to things later.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23

Turn trash into cash with an early garage sale, and treat yourself to something you've been wanting with the proceeds. Leave the credit cards at home or you could seriously overshoot your budget. Your partner offers some needed support and a great sense of humor.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22

In matters of the heart, you need to be looking for someone more mature--if last Fellow a friend's advice when it comes to handling a tough personal choice. Spend more time than usual practicing a new skill or technique. It will be valuable in the near future.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21

Your funny bone is extra sensitive this week, so treat yourself to a belly laugh or two with someone you'd like to get to know better. An old friend calls with interesting news. He or she may need a favor. Offer to help in any way you can, and your own outlook will improve.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20

Setbacks make you crazy this week, especially if they're not of your own making. Try to be patient, and console yourself with thinking of ways you can improve this situation the next time. An evening gathering holds the possibility of a new connection.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18

Make a break in your routine by doing something really crazy. You don't need to be irresponsible to refresh yourself. Take a bubble bath, try a new activity, call someone out of the blue. Creativity is an investment in your well-being, and you won't be disappointed.

PISCES
February 19-March 20

You may feel as though you've been going a mile a minute. Pace yourself, and you'll find your second wind. An outdoor activity gives you the opportunity to make someone very happy. If you receive an offer, make sure there are no strings attached.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Food & Drink 'til 1 A.M.!
~Behind Antonio's~

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

20¢ Mozz. Sticks after 10 tonight

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 18, 1997

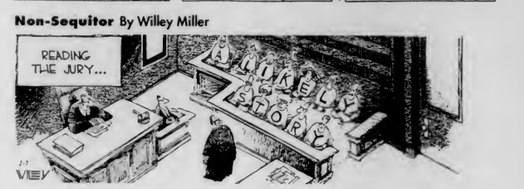
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ※		Nova "Hunt for Alien Worlds" ※		Thomas Jefferson (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 2) ※			Conjure Women ※
WFSB	3	News ※	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Promised Land (In Stereo) ※		"The Perfect Mother" (1997, Drama) Tyne Daly, Ione Skye ※			News ※	Late Show ※
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo) ※		"The Perfect Mother" (1997, Drama) Tyne Daly, Ione Skye ※			News	Late Show ※
WCVB	5	News ※	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ※	Roseanne ※	Drew Carey ※	Home Imp.	Spin City ※	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA) ※	News ※	Nightline ※
WLVI	6	Full House ※	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		※※ "DOA" (1950, Adventure) Warren Stev.					News	Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ※
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ※	Med Abo. You	Something So	Frasier ※	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo) ※	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin ※	Judge Judy ※	Real TV ※	Moesha ※	Homeboys	Burning Zone (In Stereo) ※		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV ※
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ※	Med Abo. You	Something So	Frasier ※	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo) ※	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	10	Simpsons ※	Roseanne ※	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ※	※※ "Cool Runnings" (1993, Comedy) Leon. (In Stereo) ※		Med Abo. You	Something So	Frasier ※	News	Coach ※	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ※	Med Abo. You	Something So	Frasier ※	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo) ※	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ※		Nova "Hunt for Alien Worlds" ※		Thomas Jefferson (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 2) ※			Prohibition	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News ※	ABC News	Seinfeld ※	Ent. Tonight	Roseanne ※	Drew Carey ※	Home Imp.	Spin City ※	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA) ※	News ※	Nightline ※
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld ※	Mad Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Colorado Avalanche. (Live)
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	※※ "The Sting II" (1983, Comedy) Tom Hanks. Teresa Russell.		※※ "The Money Pit" (1986, Comedy) Tom Hanks, Shelley Long.
A&E	51	Quincy "No Deadly Secrets"		Equalizer "Mission: McCall"		Biography "Thurgood Marshall"		"The Secret of Bay 5B" (1988, Mystery) John Thaw.			Law & Order "Conspiracy" ※
CNN	53	WorldView ※		Moneyline ※	Crossfire ※	Prime News ※	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ※		World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline ※
COM	55	Tick ※	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Comics Come Home 2 (R)		Young Comedians (R)		A-List (R) ※	Dream On	Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC	52	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Luftwaffe (R)		Wild Discovery "Antlers" (R)		Mystery Univ.	World-Wond	Eco-Challenge		Wild Discovery	Antlers" (R)
ESPN	50	Up Close	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Purdue at Indiana. (Live)				College Basketball: Arkansas at South Carolina. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	56	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		※※ "First Appearance" (1993, Suspense) Brian Dennehy.			Living		Mysteries
MTV	45	Ren & Stimpy	Road Rules	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Unplugged (R) (In Stereo)		Buzzkill	World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	44	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ※	Rugrats ※	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy ※	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi ※	Odd Couple ※
SCIFI	46	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Masters of Fantasy (In Stereo)		Collision Course Earth		Forever Knight (In Stereo) ※		VR.5 "Escape" (In Stereo)		Masters of Fantasy (In Stereo)
TLC	54	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime ※	Hometime ※	Treasures	America	Revolutionary War (Part 3 of 6)		Twister Two -- Terror		Treasures	America
TNT	48	In the Heat of the Night ※		In the Heat of the Night ※		NBA Basketball: San Antonio Spurs at Utah Jazz. (Live) ※					Inside-NBA	※※ "Celtic" (1916)
USA	47	Renegade (In Stereo) ※		Highlander: The Series ※		Murder, She Wrote ※		Boxing: Charles Brewer vs. Greg Wright. (Live)				Wings ※	Wings ※
HBO	59	※※ "Club Paradise" (1986, Comedy) Robin Williams. PG-13 ※				※※ "The Juror" (1996, Suspense) Demi Moore. (In Stereo) ※ ※		※※ "Norma Jean and Marilyn" (1996) Ashley Judd. "R" ※
MAX	61	※※ "Absence of Malice" (1981, Drama) Paul Newman. "PG" ※				※※ "Drop Squad" (1994, Series) Eric LaSalle. "R" ※		※※ "Money Train" (1995, Suspense) Wesley Snipes. "R" ※					"UnderSieg"
SHOW	60	※※ "Mr. and Mrs. Loving" (1996, Drama) Timothy Hutton. "PG-13" ※				※※ "Body Count" (1996) Brigitte Nielsen. "R" ※		※※ "Raising Cain" (1992) John Lithgow. "R" ※			Women		Compromising

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

Non-Sequitor By Willey Miller

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Leold was especially struck by his first lesson in his psychology 101 class as taught by Mr. Smokey Robinson on the subject of obsessive compulsive disorder as it might manifest itself in a powerful love addiction.

I don't like you, but I love you seems like I'm always thinking of you. Oh, oh, oh, you treat me badly, I love you madly. you really got a hold on me.

I don't want you, but I need you don't want to kiss you, but I need to Oh, oh oh, you do me wrong now my love is strong now.

I don't want to leave you, don't want to stay here don't want to spend another day here Oh, oh, oh, I want to split now I can't quit now.

You really got a hold on me, you really got a hold on me ....Baby! I love you and all I want you to do is Hold me, Hold me, Hold me.

University² By Frank Cho

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

First Impressions By Kenneth W.P. Scott

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Thank you, Erik, for that vivid presentation on meteor showers."

Quote of the Day

"Funny thing about weekends when you're unemployed, they don't mean so much, except you get to hang with your working friends."

–Les Claypool

Joke of the Day

How do you make a hamburger roll?

–You litter it down a hill!

Today's Staff

Mark McGrath
Night Editor

Suzanne Barber
Copy Editor

Kenneth W.P. Scott
Photo Technician

Matthew P. McCarthy
Production Supervisor

Kelvin "El torro" Torres
Joylyn Lombard
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
BBQ Pork Rib Sandwich
Vegan Falafel Sandwich

DINNER
Chinese Beef
Eggplant Grinder
Greek Style Chicken

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Grilled Chicken
BBQ Pork Rib Sandwich

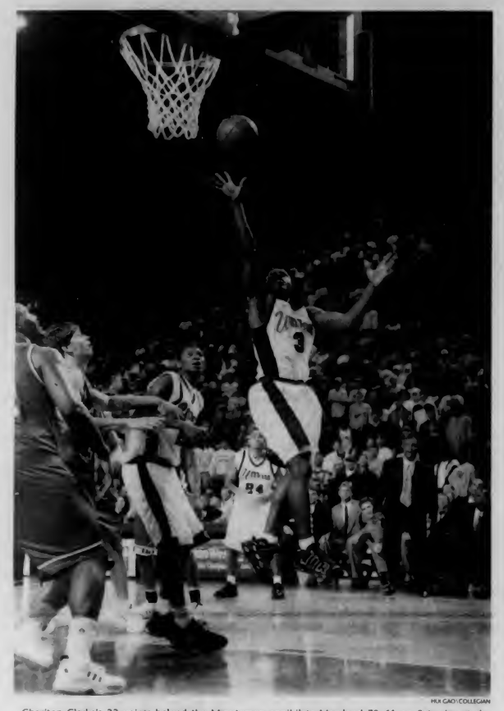
DINNER
Beef Strips
Chicken Stew

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Chicken
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Lemon Grill Burger

DINNER
Chinese Beef
Curried Chick Peas
Potato Mushroom
Veal Parmesan

Berkshire



LUNCH
Grilled Chicken
Hot Pastrami on Rye
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Lemon Grill Burger

DINNER
Pastabilities
Stuffed Shells in Sauce
Greek Style Chicken
Curried Chick Peas

SPORTS

Tuesday, February 18, 1997

UMass destroys No. 10 Maryland Terps, 78–61

HUA GAO / COLLEGIAN

Charlton Clarke's 22 points helped the Minutemen annihilate Maryland 78–61 on Saturday at the Worcester Centrum.

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — If the Massachusetts men's basketball team was looking to make a statement to this year's NCAA Tournament selection committee Saturday, it couldn't have picked a better game in which to do so.

Behind a 22-point performance from sophomore guard Charlton Clarke and a double-double from fellow sophomore Lari Ketner, the Minutemen dismantled the then No. 10 Maryland Terrapins 78–61 in the Worcester Centrum.

UMass now stands at 16–10, 9–3 in the Atlantic 10, a record that has been bolstered by 10 wins in the last 11 games.

UMass	78
Maryland	61

"It's very important to finish strong instead of starting strong," Edgar Padilla said. "We're finishing strong, which is the most important thing."

Clarke agreed, stating a win over a top-flight opponent should open people's eyes.

"Hopefully, it will open a lot of people's eyes to see that we got off to a slow start at the beginning and now we're coming along. We just want to open people's eyes to see that we're still the UMass of old, we just had a slow start," Clarke said.

Clarke was the driving force for the Minutemen in the first half, as he hit for 15 of his 22 points before the halftime buzzer. Nearly two minutes into the game, Clarke drained a 3-pointer to cut Maryland's lead to just one, and spur a 5–0 run that gave UMass a lead it would not relinquish.

After LaRon Profit nailed a trey of his own to pull the Terrapins within one, 12–11, Clarke drilled a pair from behind the arc— tying his career-high for 3-point field goals made— to up the Minuteman edge to seven points, 18–11.

Part of Clarke's success was Maryland's attempt to double team the Minuteman players in the paint. That strategy left Clarke wide open.

"Every time the ball went in the post, Profit was guarding me at the time, he just went over and doubled," Clarke said. "A couple of times I had to go over to Lari and Tyrone and say, 'they're doubling so I'm wide open on the baseline.' After one swing around, I was open on the outside, so I just kept shooting," Clarke said.

UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint was surprised to see the Terrapins double–team that left Clarke wide open.

"I was surprised, especially when Ekezie is the same size as Lari," Flint said. "I was surprised not only that they double teamed off Charlton, but they were double–teaming period."

What Clarke started in the first half, Ketner finished in the second. UMass' starting center went to the locker room at halftime with six points and five rebounds, but exploded in the second half, finishing with 19 points and 12 boards.

"I had two strong games, the Duquesne and Rhode Island games, but then I came into the St. Bonaventure game and had a rough game," Ketner said. "I definitely didn't want to have a rough game today. I just wanted to come out and play hard."

Turn to DESTRUCTION, page 7

Ketner, Clarke; the future is now

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — 5:07 remaining in the game. Edgar Padilla takes it the length of the court, finds Carmelo Travieso, who finishes with a layup to give the Massachusetts men's basketball team a 21 point lead over Maryland. The Terps call a time out, the Centrum crowd erupts. UMass wins by 17.

All in all, it's a good time to be wearing the Maroon and White.

Roughly a month ago, the Minutemen were 6–9 and had yet to string together back to back wins. Since then, UMass went on to win five straight and 10 of their last 11 making them one of the hottest college basketball teams in the nation.

"At the beginning of the season, I'm starting Ajmal Basit, Lari Ketner, Mike Babul, Winston Smith, and Charlton Clarke," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "They were going against [teams like] North Carolina, and that's a different ball game for these guys.

"You have to understand, those guys are fans too. They've never played against those guys. They walk around with their hats and jerseys on— sometimes it was the jersey that made them more afraid than people we were playing against.

"Now, they understand that because we've been through it. This is another game. Yeah, they are in the Top 10, but we're trying to get to the NCAA Tournament and win the Atlantic 10 Tournament and they're just another team in our way. We had to come out here and play.

Keeping with the month's trend, UMass clearly came to the Centrum to play. While the Minutemen's fifth consecutive win was a decisive team effort (recall a final second Ross Burns to Chris Kirkland alley–oop for the game's final hoop), two players emerged to challenge an over–confident Terrapin squad.

With 22 points and three assists, Clarke led the Minutemen in scoring. Early on, the Terps tried to cancel out UMass' shooting by double teaming in the paint, hoping that Clarke's shooting would not emerge.

So what did Clarke do?

Clarke tied a career record by knocking down 3–for–3 from downtown and came just one point away from tying a career high in points.

"We tried to double down off of [Clarke] and he made two threes, so we stopped doing that after his second three," Maryland coach Gary Williams said. "He obviously gained some confidence from that and it backfired a little bit. I would probably try to do the same thing again. We've been doing that all year without getting burned on that, and today it didn't work."

In the paint, Ketner rebounded off a poor showing against St. Bonaventure last week (four points, no rebounds) with a career high 19 points and his third double–double of the season with 12 boards.

If the box score doesn't indicate how well Ketner played, ask Gary Williams.

"We couldn't stop Ketner," Williams said. "We've played against some pretty good people inside this year that haven't done that, so to his credit, he did a great job on us. If he's that good, then he's a great player with what he showed today."

Flint was pleased with his center's play and hopes that this is a sign that Ketner is emerging to play a more consistent role on his squad.

"Lari can do that sometimes," Flint said. "I just don't want him to do with St. Bonaventure score four points and no rebounds. When he puts his mind to it he can do it.

"But he said in the shoot around today that he wasn't going to have a good game. So I said, 'O.K. it's about time.' Everybody knew he had some pretty special skills, it just takes some time when you have to sit out for a year.

Clarke and Ketner provided for a team chemistry that was too much for the Terrapins.

"I give UMass credit. I thought they played a lot

Turn to KETNER, page 7

Hockey swept by Bears at home

By Jorma Kansanen and Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

After a harsh NCAA reminder last Thursday that they are still not a clean program, the University of Maine was just plain harsh on the Massachusetts hockey team this weekend. The day before the faceoff between the Black Bears and the Minutemen (12–19, 7–15 in Hockey East), the team found out their postseason sanction was upheld after a appeal filed two weeks ago.

So, instead of planning vacations to tropical lands, Maine (20–10–1, 12–7–1 HE) treated UMass like strangers in a strange land, taking the weekend series at the Mullins Center with 6–4 and 8–1 wins, respectively.

The time for coach Joe Mallen's squad was then, and the problem to solve is what happens now. Postseason action for Maine is a moot point, but for UMass, they have to bounce back strong for their final two games before HE playoffs.

"We talked about [the ruling], and they had two choices: they could come out and fight, or lay down," Mallen said. "They came out and fought. You got to give them credit, and they got to find points to rally around."

"The funny thing is that I don't think we did anything we weren't prepared for them to do. We think that as individuals, we didn't execute. It just goes back to each man doing his job. On some of those goals, there were five men in the defensive zone, and every guy has to have one."

On both nights, not once could the Minutemen sustain any form of an offensive attack, and the Black Bears would take over the game. Freshman goalie Alfie Michaud only had to face 34 shots from UMass all weekend; while the tandem of junior Brian Regan and senior Rich Moriarty faced over twice as many, with Maine racking up 71 shots altogether.

Maine	6
Massachusetts	4

Saturday night, junior Shawn Wansborough and senior Trevor Roenick each tallied two goals to pace a 8–1 blowout. Friday's game was fresh-man night for the Black Bears, with forwards Cory Larose (2g, 2a) and Ben Guite (3a) scoring or assisting on three of four first period goals, in a much-worse–than–it–looks 6–4 win.

Maine	8
Massachusetts	1

Maine opened up Saturday night's game with six unanswered goals, leaving coach Shawn Walsh to state after the game that it was the best 60

Turn to HOCKEY page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

The UMass hockey team took it on the chin this weekend, losing to Maine 8–1 and 6–4.

Minutemen blow weekend chance

Fine. Great. Wonderful.

Officially, the two losses to Maine this past weekend for the Massachusetts hockey team has put them in seventh place in the Hockey East standings. Their two defeats, combined with Merrimack College's impressive sweep of Boston College last Friday and Saturday night, has placed them in a most precarious situation.

The last two games of the season for the Minutemen on paper could mean absolutely nothing. After two weeks with two games to prime up for the playoffs, UMass has a first round matchup against either No. 2 New Hampshire or No. 4 Boston University to look forward to. To get out of their current playoff position, the maroon and white have to rely on other teams to do the dirty work for them.

JORMA KANSANEN

Fine. Great. Wonderful.

For coach Joe Mallen, the two losses this weekend against Maine were an opportunity lost, but hopefully for this season, not an opportunity that is totally lost.

"For the third year in a row, we have earned a playoff spot," Mallen said. "Where exactly it will be, I don't know. A lot has to do with the rest of the teams, and what they do. I would-

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

UMass women wallop Fordham Rams, 58–45

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

One of the most obvious rules of basketball states that if you shoot more shots than the other team, chances are more shots will go in.

A simple theory, one that Joanie O'Brien and Massachusetts women's basketball team proved Sunday. Despite hitting only 21 of 60 shots, UMass held the Fordham Rams to only 45 field goal attempts, and went on to beat them 58–45 at the William D. Mullins Center. The Minutewomen improved to 16–8, 9–4 in the A–10, while Fordham drops to 11–13, 4–10 in the conference.

UMass	58
Fordham	45

Despite shooting an abysmal 28 percent from the field in the first half, UMass was able to take a 25–20 lead into the locker room, largely on the strength of some incredible offensive rebounding. The Minutewomen out–rebounded Fordham 10–1 on the offensive glass in the first half, allowing them to put up 35 shots, compared to only 19 for the Rams.

"[Our offensive rebounding] just gave us more attempts," UMass head coach Joanie O'Brien said. "It just kept us going. We hung in there and counted on our defense. We did a great job on defense in the first half, but we didn't finish anything [on offense]. [But], we'll take a struggling offense with a good defense any day."

Fordham hung in for much of the game, thanks to some great outside shooting. Dublin, Ireland product Suzanne MacGuire led the charge from the perimeter, hitting on six of 10 from three point land, finishing up with 21 points. Fordham went 8–for–18 from behind the arc on Sunday.

The Rams cut the lead to five, 48–43, with 4:07 left in the second half, but the Minutewomen would go on a 10–2 run to close out the ballgame. Freshman Alison MacFarland slashed inside the paint and threw home a bank shot with 2:33 left on the clock, putting UMass up 52–43. Fordham failed to score on their next possession, and Kelly Van Huisen put the Rams to rest with a jumper of her own with 1:56 left, giving the Minutewomen an 11 point lead and a season sweep of the Rams.

"Turnovers were the difference in the last three minutes," Fordham head coach Kevin Morris said, alluding to the 22 turnovers his Rams committed Sunday. "We did not make many good decisions today. The intensity [of the UMass defense] was good the whole game. They made it difficult for us to run our offense effectively. They give you 40

Turn to FORDHAM, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 85 · New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 · Wednesday, February 19, 1997

So Darn Sweet!

Pop rocker Matthew Sweet checked into Northampton Monday night to preview material from his upcoming album. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Two games to go

Tonight, Beth Kuzmeski and the women's basketball team travel to Xavier in the team's second to last game of the regular season. Check out our preview (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Seven held in Red Army crackdown

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — In raids shrouded in secrecy, Lebanese agents seized seven suspected members of the Japanese Red Army, a militant group that carried out high-profile hijackings and attacks in the 1970s.

Japan said yesterday it would dispatch officials to Lebanon to help identify the suspects and would seek their extradition if they are identified as Red Army members.

The suspects — five Japanese and two Lebanese — have been rounded up in raids since Friday by agents of Lebanon's State Security Department, said a Lebanese government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He said the arrests took place in several apartments in Beirut. But Information Minister Bassem El-Sabeh said the arrests were in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, long a hideout for such groups. Foreign Minister Faris Bweiz confirmed the arrests, but he declined to provide details, saying only that the suspects were being interrogated by Lebanese authorities. The Japanese Embassy declined comment.

NATION

Court says harrasment can be compensated

BOSTON (AP) — Three former male employees of a lumber company were entitled to compensation after being sexually harassed by two male supervisors, the state's highest court ruled yesterday.

The three workers said the supervisors constantly subjected them to raunchy comments and gestures, and appealed to the courts for help on grounds of sexual harassment.

The company, meanwhile, said the case couldn't be considered sexual harassment because all the men involved were heterosexual. Leonid Melnychenko, James Quill and Stephen LaRochelle worked at a West Springfield branch of the national chain 84 Lumber Co. between 1989 and 1990. All three eventually quit.

The men they accused, Richard Raab and Eliasel Roque, were fired once the allegations were raised.

A Hampden County judge had found Raab's conduct "revolting and positively outrageous" and said sexual orientation was irrelevant. The lumber company appealed to the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.

In a ruling issued yesterday, the justices said that sexual harassment can apply to situations where both parties are of the same gender or same sexual orientation.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 30	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25	HIGH: 55 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Author speaks on stereotypes; Public policy needs a change

By Tamar Carroll and Allana E. Todman
Collegian Staff

Dr. Julianne Malveaux addressed a group of 200 students and faculty last night in the Student Union Ballroom as part of the ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American) Lecture Series.

In her lecture, entitled "Sex, Lies, and Stereotypes: Perspectives of a Mad Economist," Malveaux spoke about a variety of issues, including political and economic activism and stereotypes of women, people of color and the poor. She focussed on trends in current public policy decisions, specifically those relating to minority groups.

Malveaux began by attacking the attitude of complacency she feels is so prevalent in American society. She urged all members of society to voice their opinions about political and economic issues.

"We should all be mad," Malveaux said. "I'm mad. They [Americans] are asleep if they are not mad. We're fiddling while we watch Rome burn."

Malveaux went on to criticize the current political leadership, including President Clinton, the 104th Congress, and the Washington bureaucracy for recent public policy decisions including welfare reform, Social Security reform and budget issues which she felt negatively impacted the minority community.

Commenting that issues of racial and gender inequalities have "gone off the table," Malveaux encouraged citizens to enter into discourse with their elected officials.

"Get to know your Congressmen," Malveaux said. "They work for you."

Malveaux discussed the tendency of society to view poverty as a self–inflicted problem, rather than a problem of the system.

"Race and gender color the lens through which we see the world," Malveaux said.

Malveaux proceeded to discuss a wide range of economic issues, including disparity of pay, wage exploitation and distribution of foreign aid.

Malveaux concluded by offering a variety of techniques for the audience to utilize in working for change in society, including public discourse, economic boycotts, use of the ballot–initiative process and participation in coalitions.

"In order to fight back, the oppressed need to have conversation about how to overcome," Malveaux said. "We can't always sing 'we shall overcome someday.' When will we overcome?"

The majority of the audience responded enthusiastically to Malveaux's talk.

Sharon Cousin, a graduate student in the school of education reacted positively.

"I think that she [Malveaux] is an excellent speaker," Cousin said. "I think she has a very clear picture of what is going on."

LAUREN KOSAY / COLLEGIAN

Dr. Julianne Malveaux.

Kenneth Lacoste, a sophomore English major and president of the Black Student Union, expressed interest in Malveaux's arguments on economic boycotts.

"Three hundred fifty billion dollars a year [the amount spent by black consumers] is a significant amount and can put any company out of business with a boycott," Lacoste said.

Nelson Acosta, director of the ALANA office, felt that the lecture was a success.

"I think it went well. We had a pretty good turnout," Acosta said.

"I found her [Malveaux] to be witty and informative," Acosta said. "She made you think about public policy issues. It was eye–opening."

The ALANA lecture series will present Reverend Eugene Rivers speaking on combatting youth violence in the cities Feb. 27. For more information, contact Nelson Acosta at the ALANA office at 545–2517.

Plans underway for future UM–Rail Trail connection

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

In conjunction with the University of Massachusetts, the town of Amherst is proposing plans to construct a 1.4 mile connector path from the UMass campus to the current Norwottuck Rail Trail that meanders through the Pioneer Valley.

"It's all on the drawing board," said Paul Westover, Amherst's conservation director. "We're at that point where we're meeting with a number of bidders to try and figure what we're liable to pay for the project."

Westover said in the Daily Hampshire Gazette that the estimated cost of the construction would range from $500,000 upwards to $1.5 million. Collectively, the UMass/ town of Amherst group would be held accountable for 10 percent of these estimated costs.

"The Norwottuck Rail Trail is a wonderful asset to the Valley, but it's missing one whole contingent to people who logically would be using it," Westover said. "There are so many open possibilities for greater recreational and common use — there's tremendous potential."

Plans were underway beginning last March once the campus/town committees were endowed with a $150,000 federal grant from ISTEA, a national organization that works solely to promote non–vehicle transportation alternatives.

"Now we're hiring firms to study the options and come out with plans for construction," said Aurthur Swift, chairman of the Amherst–UMass Bikeway Connector Committee.

According to Swift, it was a joint decision by the town and campus to initiate the rail trail extension plan.

"There has been nice cooperation between the town and University. Both sides thought it was a good idea," Swift said.

Surveying of the area and a list of proposed options about connector locations to the UMass campus will begin at the end of April.

Judith Steinkamp, a senior planner at UMass, made similar comments.

"We're very excited to be working with the town of Amherst on this plan," Steinkamp said. "From our point of view we're very happy to see a cooperative effort. This is definitely the kind of project everyone wants to stand behind."

Beverly Wood, associate chancellor of Campus Planning and Space Management spearheaded the plan. Steinkamp is part of this team who works to promote better utilization of campus areas.

"UMass is very conducive to bicyclists. The challenging part is beginning the project," Wood said.

Steinkamp elaborated on the procedure at hand.

"It's a two–step process. Phase one is to design the project, phase two is to apply for the construction grant," Steinkamp said.

Preliminary designs will follow a pre–bid conference that is scheduled for Feb. 24.

According to Steinkamp, the project has been in the making for well over a year.

"Everything takes time, but we're still very much in support of producing this," Steinkamp said.

"Bikeways are definitely part of our future planning," Steinkamp said in the Daily Hampshire Gazette.

The proposed extension would

Turn to RAIL, page 3

UM professor speaks on Asian trip & feminism

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

Recently returning from a speaking trip in Asia, Ann Ferguson will be giving an account of her trip tonight entitled, "Women's Studies in China and Korea."

The University of Massachusetts Director of Women's Studies and professor of philosophy was invited to attend two conferences at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing, founded by the Ford Foundation and organized by the Institute of Philosophy, Division of Bio–Ethics at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences.

Professor Ferguson gave lectures at the two conferences held in late October. The first was on feminist philosophy and Ferguson's talk was entitled, "What Is Feminist Philosophy and What is its Future?" The second, dealing with prostitution and HIV/AIDS, gave Ferguson the opportunity to speak about "Prostitution as a Morally Risky Practice."

While in China, Ferguson was invited to travel to Tianjin to visit the Women's Studies Center at Tianjin Normal University, where she gave a talk for students on Women's Studies and western feminism.

Her trip to Korea included a visit to Ewha Women's University in Seoul, which, housing 18,000 students, is the largest women's university in the world. This portion of her trip was sponsored by the Asian Center for Women's Studies, whose graduate program in Women's Studies sponsored Ferguson to give two public lectures.

While in Korea, Professor Ferguson also met with the Ewha Department of Philosophy and guests from other academic fields in Seoul including philosophy and theology.

Professor Ferguson will be giving a report of her trip tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Five College Women's Studies Research Center in Dickinson Hall at Mt. Holyoke College. This event is open to the public.

Albright wants brigade between NATO & Russia

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright yesterday proposed NATO form a joint military brigade with Russia to link it to the alliance as NATO expands eastward.

"We will be steadfast in offering to Russia our respect, our friendship and an appropriate partnership," she told foreign ministers of the 16–member North Atlantic Treaty Organization. "We cannot realize our shared vision of a united, secure and democratic Europe without Russia."

Albright also called for a meeting in the spring with Russia and prospective new NATO members "to give every ally a chance for direct discussion" before invitations are extended in July to former Soviet allies to join the alliance. The formal offers to expand NATO will be made at a summit meeting President Clinton plans to attend in Madrid, Spain.

Russia is concerned about the expansion. Albright's proposals for military cooperation and the spring talks are her latest effort to ease Moscow's worries.

She envisioned a council linking NATO to Russia, an idea she has been developing on her trip to Europe, that would deal with major security issues.

Albright has said plans to expand NATO to Russia's western border will proceed despite Russia's objections.

Former Russia foreign minister Andrei V. Kozyrev, among others, has lamented NATO's spread eastward, warning it could humiliate Russia and strengthen the hand of neo–fascists already in conflict with reformers in Moscow.

A growing number of former American diplomats and private analysts have questioned the wisdom of the expansion.

NATO and Russian military partners would work together "and we could begin immediately to develop a joint NATO-Russia brigade," Albright said.

Russian troops are already serving alongside NATO forces in a peacekeeping mission in Bosnia.

In her meetings with European and NATO officials, Albright could not talk European Union leaders out of opposing the controversial American law punishing countries that trade with Cuba.

At a meeting with the top EU officials in charge of foreign affairs and trade, she referred to herself as "a child of a divided Europe" and said she wanted to work to make the continent "whole and free again."

In her talks with the 15-nation EU, which celebrates its 40th birthday next month, Albright stressed the importance of the EU's plans to add as many as a dozen new members over the next decade. But she said entry into the EU should not be considered a consolation prize for those newly democratic countries that do not make it into NATO in the first wave.

The most controversial issue during the talks, however, was the EU's radically different approach to Cuba. The Europeans believe the West must talk and trade with Fidel Castro's government to make headway in human rights and democracy.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Completely Stumped!

Stanley Michell of Amherst helps remove a tree stump for the Public Works Department, Tree Division in Amherst.

Beijing looks for a quick solution to resolve North Korean defection

By John Leicester
Associated Press

BEIJING — A rare public comment by North Korea's leader, who declared yesterday that his country has no need for cowards, became the strongest signal yet that a high-ranking official may be allowed to defect to South Korea.

China, meanwhile, said it wants a quick resolution to the crisis begun when Hwang Jang Yop walked into the South Korean consulate in Beijing to become the highest-ranking official to defect from the North.

Hwang's defection has heightened tension on the Korean Peninsula and clouded Western efforts to nudge open North Korea's tightly closed society.

Hwang is a former tutor of North Korean leader Kim Jong Il, who issued a statement yesterday that was read on North Korean radio: "As the revolutionary song says, 'Cowards, if you want to go, then go away. We will defend the red flag of revolution to the end.'"

The broadcast, monitored in Tokyo, made no mention of Hwang, but came just one day after North Korea indicated it might accept Hwang's defection.

Kim, who turned 55 on Sunday, rarely comments on current events, aside from addresses to the North Korean military.

North Korea said Monday that if Hwang "sought asylum, it means that he is a renegade and he is dismissed."

It said it has asked China to investigate Hwang's "disappearance."

South Korea took the comments to mean that the North might assent to Hwang's defection if convinced that he fled willingly. The North previously had claimed Hwang, 73, had been kidnapped. South Korean Foreign Minister Yoo Chong-ha said his government would investigate the apparent "big change in North Korea's position."

He added: "If it wants, North Korea can participate in a process to confirm his intention to defect."

Hwang was a member of the North's major decision-making body, the Central Committee, and the South could learn much from his familiarity with the secretive workings of the North's government. China is caught in an uncomfortable position, caught between its longtime communist ally, North Korea, and an important trading partner, South Korea.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Tang Guoqiang told reporters yesterday that China hoped the crisis would be resolved "as soon as possible."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to The Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Wednesday, Feb. 19

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Ann Ferguson, director of women's studies and professor of philosophy on "Women's Studies in China and South Korea," at 7:30 p.m. at the Five College Women's Studies Research Center, Dickinson House, Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold this week's meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center, room 162. All those who write and appreciate poetry of any and all kinds are encouraged to come and read or just show up and listen. New members are always welcome. For more information, contact Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546-1459.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold its second meeting of the spring semester from 5:30-6:30 p.m. in University Health Services, room 304. All are welcome to attend.

Meeting — Find out how you can participate in campaigns with MassPIRG, including Earth Day, Updated Bottle Bill, Clean Air and Hunger and Homelessness. Come to MassPIRG's general interest meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174.

Music — There will be an Improv Jam Session with invited local jazz musicians at the Blue Moon Gallery Cafe at 7 p.m.

Reading — Spectrum Magazine is sponsoring a poetry and prose reading in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome to come and participate. Submissions will also be accepted for art, photography, poetry and prose during the evening.

Workshop — A Time Management workshop will be offered by the Learning Support Services from 1:30-2:45 p.m. on the 10th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. Free. Call 545-5334 to register.

Thursday, Feb. 20

Dance — UMass Hillel will sponsor Israeli Folk Dancing from 8:30-10 p.m. in Chadbourne Residence Hall Basement. No experience necessary, come and learn and have fun.

Notices

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance club invites everyone to come dance with us every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15-7 p.m. at 101 Totman Gym. Newcomer Waltz/ Chacha class begins Feb. 25. Intermediate/ advanced instruction by a pro every Wednesday, 6:15-7:30 p.m. All instructions are free. For more info, call Kevin Murphy at 549-4036.

Sign-ups — Attention all animal lovers: Sign-ups for the Livestock Classic will be located on the Campus Center Concourse during the week of Feb. 17. Any questions call 546-1942 for more information.

SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Governments are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.

Auditions — The UMass Theatre Guild will hold auditions for The Heidi Chronicles on Feb. 21 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 22 at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805. There are five female roles and three male roles. Please visit the Theatre Guild office in the Student Union if you have any questions.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253-0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617) 641-2303.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be "When Mother Comes Home for Christmas," a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Special Olympics — The North Valley Area Special Olympics is actively seeking special athletes for its spring sports teams. Athletes interested in candlepin bowling or basketball should contact the area office at (413)584-9377. There are roster positions available for special athletes ages seven and up. Newcomers are strongly encouraged to join, and parents are invited to call with any questions.

Support group — A Women in Relationships Therapy Group, an ongoing therapy and support group for women who want to improve difficult relationships with friends, parents, children and colleagues, lovers or partners, led by Rebecca Reid, will meet Mondays from 7:30-9 p.m. in Amherst. Sliding scale fee. For information call 253-5494.

Volunteer work — Womanshelter/Companeras, serving the greater Holyoke, Chicopee area needs volunteers to help battered women and their children begin to live lives free of violence. If you are interested in answering the hotline, advocacy, fundraising, working with teens, or our Legal Emergency Assistance program, call Edith Jennings, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m.-4 p.m. at (413) 538-9717.

LAUREN KOSAY / COLLEGIAN

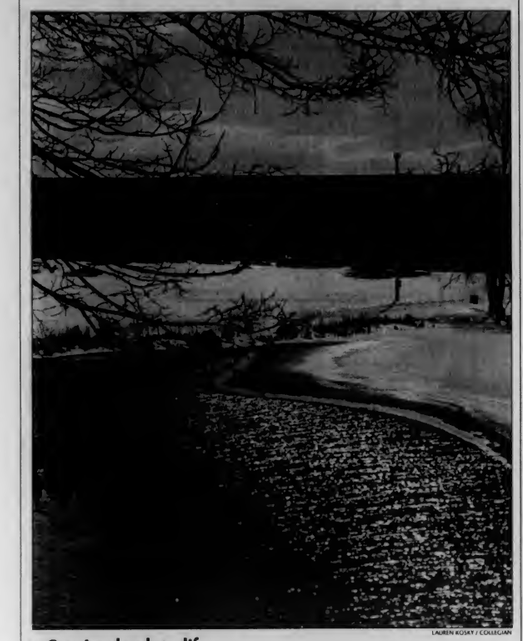
Walled in
A view of North Pleasant St. from an alley way in Amherst.

NOTICE:

Starting Sunday, Feb. 25, the Collegian FYI section will be relocated to the Classifieds page of the newspaper. In addition, FYI entries will be limited to free Five College events only. Only entries fitting this description will run in the FYI section. All other entries must be submitted through the Classifieds Department. For information about Classifieds rates, call 545-3500.

Commuter Area Government Proudly Presents

JIMMY TINGLE'S



UNCOMMON SENSE!

an Evening of Political Satire

Wednesday Feb 19, 7:30 pm
Student Union Ballroom

ADMISSION FREE

Featured in The Boston Globe

LAUREN KOSAY / COLLEGIAN

Coming back to life
The warm temperatures melt the ice on the campus pond yesterday afternoon.

■ rail

continued from page 1

connect the UMass campus, most likely by University Drive. As of now, plans call for the connector to go only as far as Massachusetts Avenue. Yet, Steinkamp and other campus officials would like to see the lane extended directly to the Mullins Center.

There is no comment yet as to whether the new bikepath would be a separate University Drive lane or an off-road lane.

Although there are various other proposals for massive extensions of the rail trail throughout the valley, this is the only one that would directly affect the UMass population.

"Our only intent right now is to provide community as well as recreational access to the Norwottuck Rail Trail. It only seems natural to open the trail up to as many people as possible," Swift said.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Personal Injury
Feb. 12
A rear-end accident on Fearing Street, caused by icy roads, resulted in injuries to George Charnota, 21, of Milldam Road, Acton. He was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton by ambulance.

Accident — Property Damage
Feb. 11
A minor two vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 71 on Massachusetts Ave.
Feb. 12
A four vehicle rear-end accident occurred on Massachusetts Avenue. There were no injuries reported.
A two vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 45 on North Service Drive.
A vehicle struck a parked vehicle on Massachusetts Avenue.
Feb. 15
A bucket loader struck a light pole in parking lot 49 on Windmill Lane.

Alarm — Fire
Feb. 14
A burning candle ignited a tapestry in Gorman Residence Hall.
Feb. 15
A trash can on the 13th floor of Coolidge Residence Hall was set on fire.

Animal Complaint
Feb. 11
There was a report of an individual trying to net fish from the campus pond.

Assault & Battery
Feb. 15
An individual reported that he was assaulted by another individual. The case is under investigation.

Assist Agency
Feb. 10
Campus Center Way was temporally closed due to a water main break.
Feb. 12
UMPD assisted Hadley police at the scene of an accident at Route 116 ramp and lower Massachusetts Avenue intersection.
Feb. 15
UMPD assisted Amherst police at the scene of an accident on Main Street.

Burglary/ Breaking & Entering
Feb. 15
There was an attempted break into an office in Boyden Gym.
Money was stolen from a wallet in Brown Residence Hall.

Drug Law Offenses
Feb. 13
Scott D. Robins, 18, of 15 Old Andover Rd., North Reading was arrested in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall for possession of class D drugs and the possession of alcohol.

Health/Safety Hazard
Feb. 10
An alarmed sprinkler was turned on in the Campus Center Garage due to a water break.
Feb. 14
There was a report of smoke in the kitchen area of Worcester Dining Common.
Traffic lights on Commonwealth Avenue were not working. A technician was called.

Larceny
Feb. 10
An individual reported a stolen cellular phone from the Conte Research Center.
Feb. 12
An individual reported that his wallet was stolen from his backpack in the Campus Center.
Feb. 13
A parking decal was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 40.
Feb. 14
A parking decal was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 65 on Natural Resources Road.
Fog Lights were stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Neil M. Harris, 22, of 34A Park St., Brookline was arrested for daytime breaking and entering and an attempt to commit a crime.
Feb. 15
A camcorder was stolen from an office in Conte Building.
A walkman was reported stolen from Brown Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations
Feb. 15
Eric M. Dillion, 20, of 28 Fairview Ave., Rehoboth, Timothy M. Sullivan, 19, of 765 Neponset St., Norwood and Carlos E. Barbosa, 18, of 6 Mohawk Cir., East Walpole were arrested on John Adams Road for under age possession and transporting of alcohol.
Jefferey J. Kurzontkowski, 19, of 11 Temple St., Medway and Jason P. D'Alesio, 20, of 40 Waterview Dr., were arrested on Unversity Drive for underage possession and transporting alcohol.
Kurzontkowski was also charged with operation a vehicle under the influence of alcohol.
Michael W. Carlin, 19, of 123 Avery St., East Longmeadow was arrested for underage possession and transporting alcohol.

Noise Complaint
Feb. 15
Adam Grouman, 19, of 603E Brown Residence Hall was arrested for disorderly conduct.

Traffic Stop
Feb. 15
Shawn P. Jean, 20, of 14 Pilgram Circle, Enfield, Conn. was arrested for operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol, speeding, operating a vehicle with a suspended license and possession of a false license.

Vandalism
Feb. 11
Racial graffiti was written on the stairwell wall in Johnson Residence Hall.
An individual from Van Meter Residence Hall reported that his vehicle doors had been glued and sand had been poured into his gas tank.
Feb. 12
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.

Change Lanes NEW ROUTE OPENED 40 Some U-Turns THE UMASS CAREER CENTER Where the Present Meets the Future RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS 30 No Limits NO ONE WAY 20 CONSULT MAPS

Students: Thanks for making Career Day and Co-op Job Fair successful.

THANK YOU

Though the fairs have passed, opportunities haven't!

Come visit us at University Career Center in the Mather Building!

Thousands of listings in our library, including:

Internships:
MTV
Late Show with David Letterman
Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce
Atlantic Video Productions
Berkshire Wildlife Sanctuaries
Boston Museum of Science
Glimmerglass Opera
Geraldo Rivera Show
New England Aquarium
United Nation Association of Greater Boston
Center for Marine Conservation

Co-ops:
Walt Disney World
Arnold Public Relations
Scholastic Magazine
Mansanto
Boston Globe
Ceasar's Lake Tahoe

And Many More!

For more information attend a Field Experience workshop:
Mondays at 2:30
Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 3:00
Thursdays at 4:00

MEET THE AUTHOR
UMASS PROFESSOR AND HISTORIAN
STEPHEN B. OATES
WILL BE SIGNING COPIES OF HIS LATEST BOOK
THE APPROACHING FURY
VOICES OF THE STORM, 1820 -1861
AT THE
UNIVERSITY STORE CAMPUS CENTER
WEDNESDAY FEBRUARY 19, 1997 12PM TO 1:30 PM

Renowned Historian and Author of "With Malice Toward None: A Life of Abraham Lincoln" tells how the Civil War began by using the first person voices of the thirteen of the central figures involved

Other books by the author will be available

UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center 545-2619 Mon - Fri 9AM - 5PM Sat 10AM - 5PM

Attention
RSOs / GSOs / Agencies

Space Allocation Procedure has Begun!

The Campus Center/Student Union Commission has once again begun the Space Allocation Procedure for office spaces within the Campus Center/Student Union Complex

Pick up an application at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union!

A person from each RSO/GSO/Agency has to sign out an application at the Campus Activities Office.

Completed applications should be dropped off at the Campus Activities Office by 4:45 p.m. on February 28, 1997.

Applications Available: February, 11, 1997, Noon
Applications Due: February, 28, 1997, 4:45 p.m.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig I. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Cuhit Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independents from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Your call is important to us, please hold

Luke Meredith

Someone once told me, "Hate's a very strong word. You can despise, detest, denounce or disdain something, but hating is something different. Hate is a whole 'nother level. Hate is a commitment that you can't renounce next week."

A very good point. Keep that in mind when I tell you this.

I hate Ticketmaster.

Here I am, a lowly broke college kid, just a squirrel trying to get a nut, if you will. I love U2, and I have since high school. I have all the albums, I play them constantly and have lived much of my life with a U2 song playing in the background. U2 announces that their going on a massive world tour, and that on that tour they will make a stop in Massachusetts. I go nuts, because I have yet to see them live. But there's a catch. U2 wants to make sure they can play anywhere they want, which means they can only go through one ticket agency. Ticketmaster. This does not make me happy, because I remember two years ago I tried to get Pearl Jam tickets through Ticketmaster. Pearl Jam played, I didn't go.

I watch TV. I get the skinny. Saturday, 10 a.m., tickets go on sale. Call the following number to get tickets. Number is flashed, I panic. It's the same number they had for Pearl Jam. This does not make me happy. But I make plans to call anyway, because somebody also once told me dreams can come true. I don't believe him, but hey, it's U2. I have to try.

I wake up at 9:50. Grab the phone.

I hit the buttons the first time.

6-1-7, 9-3-1, 2-0-0-0.

Busy. Hit redial.

6-1-7, 9-3-1, 2-0-0-0.

Busy. Hit redial 20 times in a row.

6-1-7, 9-3-1, 2-0-0-0.

Busy. I'm about to throw the phone through the wall.

6-1-7, 9-3-1, 2-0-0-0.

Busy. Shout obscenity my dad said would send me straight to hell. It's now 10:15.

6-1-7, 9-3-1, 2-0-0-0.

Silence.

"Oh my God," I shout to Dave, my housemate. "I think I got through. Hang up, dude. I got through."

Somebody from Ticketmaster speaks.

"I'm sorry, all circuits are busy. Please try back later."

Are they kidding? If I call back later, the tickets will be gone. And why did they have to tell me all the circuits were busy? I know they're busy. Do something about it, for Christ's sakes.

"Keep trying," Dave says.

I keep trying until 11 a.m. In that time, Dave and I theorize that we've called Ticketmaster over 500 times. Seven of those calls resulted in the "All circuits are busy." The rest?

Beep, Beep, Beep.

I ask Dave, in between busy signals, "Why can't they have a quiz to see how big of a fan you are. Ask things like, 'When was War released, or what is Bono's real name. We'd get first row seats."

Dave is too annoyed for wise-ass remarks by now.

"Shut up," Dave says. "I quit. I have to go to work. Keep trying."

I've had enough myself. I take a shower, get the paper, wait for the UMass-Maryland game. Maybe they'll have better luck than we did.

Two hours later, after we've beaten the hell out of the Terrapins, (3-guard offense, baby), Dave calls from work.

"Did you keep trying?" Dave asks.

"Yeah, but it's busy."

"I guess we're not seeing U2."

"I guess not."

I hang up, but when I do; I get a little frisky. I figure, "What the hell, what's one more try going to hurt."

Grab the phone.

6-1-7, 9-3-1, 2-0-0-0.

"Welcome to Ticketmaster. Please hold the line, an operator will be with you shortly."

Holy shnikees, I got through.

"To speak to a live operator, press one. For information on U2, press two."

I hit two. Ten minutes of information I already knew, followed by:

"To speak to a live operator, press one. For information on U2, press two."

I hit one this time. Wait ten more minutes. "Even Better Than the Real Thing" is playing in the background.

"Hello, Ticketmaster, can I help you?"

"Is this a real person?"

"Yes."

"I want U2 tickets."

Twenty minutes later. (It would have been 10 minutes if the lady could actually do her job), I had tickets to U2 for July 2nd. Dave and I paid $220.50 for the worst seats in Foxboro Stadium, and wasted a Saturday dialing a phone number.

I still hate Ticketmaster, but I'm going to see U2. They better be worth it.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Modern violence

Jeremy Hurewitz

I called my father at work the other day and he told me my mom was pretty shaken up about something. They were sleeping when the phone rang the previous night with the news that a co-worker, and friend, of my mother had been killed in a traffic accident.

When she arrived at work the next morning the real story came out. Namely, murder. Apparently my mother's friend had been driving home after work and got into a minor accident with another motorist. Details are sketchy but they must have had some sort of disagreement and this guy pulled out a gun and shot him, point blank. He staggered to his car and managed to call the police and tell them that his assailant was a white male, approximately 50, driving a red, Grand Cherokee, with New Hampshire plates. He died on the way to the hospital.

My dad implored me to be careful when I'm driving and not to argue with people. He asked me to call home that night and speak with my mother.

In the evening I reached my mom and she sounded somber but controlled. She told me what a nice man he was, how he was a devoted husband and father to his three children. Her voice began to get a little shaky.

I felt hollow and sick inside.

She told me how he was a big man and when she first got the news she figured he had a heart attack while driving home. She told me how he was shot at such a close range they found gun powder in his chest.

What she found most disturbing was the fact that the murderer didn't fit the profile as some killer, degenerate. He was a middle-aged man in his luxury vehicle. I heard my mother's voice coming apart as she told me this last part, and as she related his cries for help to the 911 operator. I could hear her weeping gently as she told me again how kind he was.

I felt like crawling under my bed forever, but I listened as she, like my father, pleaded with me not to mess with people when I'm driving. Even if I'm right, just forget it. She told me she was going to call my uncles and tell them the same thing. I could hear the heartbreak in her voice, the crushing thought of losing someone so close. Her reaction was to caution her loved ones into conciliatory acceptance of the random violence of our society, and to guard against the treachery of our emotions which could lead to confrontation.

My reaction was overwhelming cynicism and pessimism. What is the world coming to? Murders like this happen every day, but it takes a case like Michael Jordan's father or Bill Cosby's son for anyone to take notice. Even then, after the Newsweek and USA Today headlines, nothing changes.

In response to this violence, people flash the peace sign like a cross to a vampire and hope it will all go away ("Can't we all just get along?"). While peace is a nice idea, I don't think we can fully eliminate violence from our society. It has been with us through the ages and it is a natural reaction to the indignation we sometimes feel, but when did we take such a wrong turn to such senseless murders, over nothing, like that of my mother's friend? What happened to a good old-fashioned fist fight? I feel like if you have a problem with me, we can talk it over or even duke it out but, come on man, put the gun away!

I suppose it goes deeper than that. I told my friend the story and he called it road rage and said it was a product of our modern times. Maybe the man who murdered my mom's friend had just lost his job to downsizing, got divorce papers from his wife, found out his daughter has AIDS and his son is gay and couldn't get on to America Online that morning. Or maybe he was just the murderous coward that his actions portray him to be.

Later that night I lay in bed thinking about the dead man and his family. I felt so bad for them, but I couldn't really empathize with them and I guess I was glad for that.

I thought maybe I could say a prayer for them. I started trying to talk to God and asking for better days for the dead man's family, but I felt stupid and insincere so I stopped.

I'm Jewish, but not religious. I don't know who or where God is. I'm just a college student laying in his bed in the dark, freaked out about the death of someone I never knew. I tried again to pray but strangely, right as I started, I got really drowsy. I gave up and resigned myself to the darkness around me and though I was unsure of God, sleep came over me like a blessing.

Jeremy Hurewitz is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Books & the McDonald's principle

Tim McKeon

To hate books as an English major is a problem, plain and simple. Not that I've always hated books. I used to love 'em. I used to devour 'em. I was that kid at age eight, sitting under the covers at two o'clock in the morning reading with a flashlight, adjourning to the closet when the light wasn't good enough.

I went through my embarrassing library phase: when the employees knew not only my name but my taste. In fact, I think I made a pretty quick and easy transition from Middle Reader, to YA Novels, to Stephen King, to Stephen King look-alikes, to movies turned into books, to books turned into movies, to Novellas, until eventually I ditched my literary training wheels and became the English major you read before you.

So where did it all go wrong? When did I fall off the literary bike path and choose to walk? This past winter when I made the mistake of donning an apron and selling my soul to Lauriat's Bookstore.

OK, soul may be a little rough, but it killed any urge inside of me to want to touch anything that merited a binding. It's the McDonald's principle: You work at McDonald's five to eight hours a day, six days a week, cooking burgers, serving burgers, smelling burgers, talking burgers — the last thing you want to do is cuddle up with a nice burger by the fire on your day off. Same goes for books.

If nothing else, working at the bookstore did provide me with the opportunity to observe a large variety of readers:

• #1: The Pornography Justifiers — These are the people who buy pornos and just don't care. They don't care what you or the bookseller thinks of them, and even disregard the opinion of the elderly woman in line behind them with a basket full of "From the Heart" Hallmark cards — the pornography justifiers want their magazine.

But then there are the other group of people who are purchasing the same item, who care a hell of a lot what you think. They want you to like them. Not romantically, but they want you to think they are OK guys when they walk out of the store. And so they justify themselves — kind of like buying two drinks at McDonald's so the cashier doesn't think you're a fat pig. So you find yourself ringing up Playboy, Hustler, Penthouse and Tolstoy's War and Peace.

• #2: The Romantics — At the end of the day you would think that the sections the most mused would be horror, or fantasy right? Maybe self-help? Wrong. It's the romance folks. They are animals. By the end of the day, the section looks as though you've stumbled upon the aftermath of an orgy: Barbara Taylor Bradford is sprawled on top of Danielle Steele, who rests quietly in the arms of Fabio (yeah, he wrote a book), who is softly running his fingers through the hair of a "Days of Our Lives" tie-in. On a side note — one day I found the Kama Sutra in with Romance — a reference guide?

• #3 The Pompous Poetry Guys — I like poetry. Not as much as other stuff, but on the whole I think poetry is a pretty great thing. But I swear, I would sacrifice the whole canon of poetry if it would mean the end of the Pompous Poetry guys.

I understand that by calling myself a "bookseller," when all I really am is a literate cash register attendant, I am indulging in some pompous behavior myself. But God do I pale in comparison to these guys. I used to scoff at the stereotype, but I swear they exist, black turtleneck and all. And the way they talk... My theory is they must get everything via satellite because there seems to be a five second delay: "(pause) Excuse me."

"Yes?"

"Do you have (pause) any (pause, look around) books (pause, pause) on poetry?"

"Yeah, see the large sign right behind you. And the recovery section is next aisle over."

"(pause)."

• #4 The Don't Help Me's: Lastly is the rare variety of customer who doesn't need help but feel that they should ask for it anyway. I don't what it is, if they see you walking around and want to give you something to do, but all they really end up doing is wasting both of your time.

"I'm looking for a book like John Grisham's book."

"Like a lawyer-murder-espionage type deal?"

"Yeah, like Grisham."

"How about Steve Martini?"

"No."

"Robert Ludlum?"

"No."

"Richard North Patterson? Scott Turrow? (This is a cheese shop, sir.)"

"No, I think I'll just go with the new Grisham. Thanks for your help."

As for myself, these past few weeks away from the bookstore have been therapeutic for me, and I can already feel my hatred towards books dulling into a slight annoyance. Maybe someday I shall don my literary training wheels, pick up a Middle Reader book and start pedalling once again.

Tim McKeon is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

In search of idealism

To the Editor:

Recently I again read a column blaming the '60s for the widespread social decay we've encountered since then. According to this writer, in the late '60s hedonism and self-centeredness became ascendant and until the early '90s, the fallout from these mindsets was everywhere. Yet, I thought, is it fair to dismiss an entire decade?

Remember the protagonist Winston in George Orwell's book 1984? With Big Brother dominating all thought and even history, Winston's unhappy task was to rummage through old newspapers and remove news stories that might threaten the current regime. And still today, how easily we accept the rewriting of history. Perhaps it is too much to ask people to be free of biases. But it is indeed sad when, consciously or unconsciously, we conspire with today's ruling elites in forgetting a decade we dare not forget if we are to survive as a society.

Those who point to the multiple scourges of drugs, wanton sex and rebellion as signifying the '60s forget that conformity to power is not enough to foster social tranquility (see Nazi Germany). Those who evoke some halcyon era when the sanctity of law and God held sway forget that unexamined laws and mindless belief have produced untold savagery — for example, the Salem Witch Trials, the McCarthy Era and internment of Japanese-Americans during World War Two. And without some return to the fiery idealism and social upheaval of the '60s, how will the materialism, environmental decay and soaring violence of the '90s be countered?

Overall, we avoid really considering Winston's plight in Orwell's novel. We forget that real freedom of thought had precious little to do with umpteen cable channels on television or an explosion of shopping malls. If the '60s brought body-painting, pot and protests, it also brought Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the principled resistance to the Vietnam War and real concern for the down-trodden everywhere from Appalachia to Watts. Where has such idealism gone? Have today's Thought Police banished it? Or are most of us just sufficiently cowed to resist making waves?

R. Jay Allain
Springfield

E-Mail Us!

Remember the r...
1) Keep word c...
2) Include your ... number for verification purposes.
3) Through e-mail, send to: Letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu; through snail/ campus mail address send to: 113 Campus Center, c/o Mike Burke.

Legends prove to be 'built to last'

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

SICK OF IT ALL
Built to Last
Elektra Records

God Damn! I said God Damn! Sick Of It All, or any band for that matter has no business releasing an album this good. From the opening riff of "Good Lookin Out" to the last chord on "Jungle," this album will have you moving.

Sick Of It All's last album Scratch The Surface showed the band moving in a more technical direction, the songs were a little bit longer and a little more metal. Well, Built To Last shows this band rediscovering their roots. This is what a hardcore record should sound like, no doubt.

Overall the songs are a lot shorter and faster but Sick Of It All has managed to add melody to their sound without sacrificing any of the power or brutality that made them famous.

As always Pete Koller (guitar), Arman Majidi (drums) and Craig Setari (bass) are so tight you couldn't fit a pin between them. Of course what would Sick Of It All be without Lou Koller's trademark vocals. Notice that Lou doesn't growl or sound like the lead singer of Napalm Death, yet he still manages to bark out his words with angst.

Also Sick Of It All's lyrics separate them from most bands: "We won't go away cause we'll always feel this way, we're here to stay and our impact will be felt, we won't go away if we feel it, if we feel it, we're here to stay, Built to Last." Those words from "Built To Last" could easily replace "Clobberin Time" as the Sick Of It All anthem.

Sick Of It All is still concerned with pointing out the ill's of society on songs like "Us Vs. Them," "Burn 'Em Down," "End the Er" and "Chip Away" which deal with fighting and keeping your eyes open to the oppression that surrounds you.

However they want you to know that they will be there with you side by side. "People merge on state of mind from all different walks of life. Don't need any more stupid division, don't need to feel uptight. Brother — I'll always look out for you, if I feel it back. Sister — We'll versus them, you can always count on me, when it's us versus them, it's a global unity." In a day and age when hardcore is so divided and too many bands are spreading negative messages, it's nice to see a band that remembers hardcore is about being positive.

Of course Sick Of It All also take a more personal look at society, realizing that we need to improve ourselves and those around us before we can change anything else. "Laughingstock" is about the people within the scene who are more concerned with being seen then with the actual music or the message.

Sick Of It All leads by example here, as they have never hogged the spotlight or changed their style to fit a trend, but rather have used hard work and musical ability to earn the respect they have gained.

The surprise track on this album is "Busted," which features bassist Setari on vocals. The song is a minute-and-half blast that brings back memories of Minor Threat. In fact, the album as a whole definitely exhibits more of an Oi and old school flavor. The songs are short, fast, catchy and full of sing-alongs the way hardcore was meant to be.

The only drawback to this album, besides the fact that there are only 14 songs, is that there is no way you can stand still while listening to this, which may lead to broken furniture. Once again Sick Of It All has blessed us with a hardcore classic — get it or pose. A

The latest release by New York's Sick of It All is sure to be one of the greatest hard core albums of the year.

Complete album history of Sick Of It All

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

The following is a quick look at the Sick Of It All discography:

• "Spreading the Hardcore Reality" EP (Revelation Records) — Sick Of It All's first EP instantly became a hardcore classic. Although the sound and production are far from flawless, the material isn't. Opening up with the classic "It's Clobberin' Time," Sick Of It All secured a place in hardcore history with this 7-inch single. From the gruff vocals of Lou Koller to the hammering guitar riffs of his brother Pete, Sick Of It All proved they would be around for a long time. Songs like "Pete's Sake," "Bullshit Justice," "Pushed Too Far," "My Life" and "My Revenge" instantly became anthems for hardcore kids everywhere.

• Blood, Sweat, No Tears (In Effect Records) — Sick Of It All dropped a bomb on the hardcore community with an album that few bands have ever matched. Combining the first 7-inch with some new songs and a much improved production, Sick Of It All showed they were the band that was on your side. Just like you, they were sick of the lies and hatred which divides our society and keeps us back. They managed to display a ferocity without using a metal influence. For the first time since Agnostic Front and Minor Threat, a band managed to really represent the true spirit of hardcore.

• Just Look Around (Relativity Records) — After their last album it was difficult for Sick Of It All to match their previous work. While Just Look Around was a great album, it fell short of the expectations that arose after their Blood, Sweat, No Tears. The songs were a little bit longer, and a bit of a metal influence had crept into their sound. However songs like "We Want The Truth," "Shut Me Out" and "We Stand Alone" are classics to this day. Just Look Around also showed the band taking more of a political angle as their songs also targeted the U.S. government.

• Scratch the Surface (Atlantic Records) — Well, Sick Of It All jumped to the dreaded major label and many people who supported the band for years were quick to yell, "sell out!" Of course Scratch The Surface proved all the critics wrong, as Sick Of It All once again busted out a hardcore record that was truer to form then most of the bands on indie labels who were playing heavy metal and passing it off as hardcore. The backlash demonstrated by the few people proved to have no effect on the band as their fans still came out to witness one of the best hardcore bands of all time.

Sick Of It All is a classic hardcore band. While people have attempted to label them as sellouts or tough guys, they have constantly proved everyone wrong. They have gotten to where they are today because they worked hard and always stayed true to themselves and their fans, no matter what the trend of the day was or what people said. Sick Of It All have made a tremendous contribution to the scene and their fans.

Barenaked Ladies visit Noho

By Josh Sylvester
Collegian Staff

Tonight, the Canadian band Barenaked Ladies will bring their unique and interesting sound to Pearl Street. In the past they have been labeled as an alternative band, but their music is more of a blend of rock, jazz and folk, with a large dosage of humor.

The Ladies began in 1988 when the band's forefathers Steven Page and Ed Robertson daydreamed about "The Perfect Band." The two played as a musical/comedy pair for a few years before they were joined by Jim Creeggan on double bass, and the drummer Tyler Stewart. As Dave Bidini once commented, "together they made for a musical melange' of jazz, country, hard rock and pop, acoustically sampling as many diverse musical styles as possible."

Early in their career, they were featured on Toronto radio station CFNY's modern Music Search CD. They also won many prestigious Canadian musical awards, such as best band in 1990 in the YTV Youth Achievement Award, and the favorite overall group award at the 1991 CASBY (Canadian Artists Selected By Your Peers).

After many high selling EP's and singles, the band released their first full length studio album, Gordon, in July 1992. Within 24 hours of the album's release, it sold more than 80,000 copies. Since then the band has released two more studio albums, Maybe You Should Drive and Born on a Pirate Ship.

Now the band is touring for the recent release of their first live album, Rock Spectacle (Reprise Records) including an enhanced multimedia portion that captures the BNL live experience. Included on the album are many of their previous hits such as "Jane," "If I Had $1,000,000," "The Old Apartment" and "Brian Wilson," along with a variety of other selections all recorded live at the Rivera in Chicago and The Olympia in Montreal.

"This is as close to Barenaked Ladies live as anyone's going to get

Turn to BARENAKED, page 6

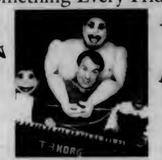
I AM A MAN!

This film by Northeastern University graduate Byron Hurt, discusses some of the complex dilemmas facing black males in America today. The film will be followed by an interactive workshop and discussion for men of color.

Feb. 22, 1997
9:00 - 10:00 introduction/greetings
10:00 - 12:00 film showing of "I AM A MAN"
12:00 - 1:00 lunch
1:00 - 4:00 interactive discussion and workshop for men of color

The film will be shown in HAMPDEN THEATER, followed by lunch and a discussion in the SOUTHSIDE ROOM.

For further info please call 545-0883. Sponsored by the Women of Color and Educator Advocate Programs of the Everywoman's Center.



Spring Break Party '97
DAYTONA BEACH
From $229 Bus & Hotel
From $99 Hotel Only
• Round trip transportation via deluxe motorcoach
• 6 or 7 night accommodations at Ocean front hotels
• Full time Breakaway staff on location
For Details or to Book Call: 1-800-465-4257 Ext. 375
Breakaway Tours
www.breakawaytours.com

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO $799
Roundtrip
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurolpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
COMING SOON!
OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS
"Something Every Friday"
VENTRILOQUIST TAYLOR MASON

February 21, 1997
8:00pm
Bluewall Cafe
FREE
Combining music, comedy, ventriloquism, audience participation, and his incurably happy optimism, TAYLOR MASON performs regularly on network and cable television, headlines every major comedy club, and has more than 750 killer college shows to his credit.
STARRING DAYLIGHT
The movie "Daylight" will be shown immediately after the performance.
For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian.

COURTESY MICHAEL LAVINE

Matthew Sweet played an outstanding set Monday night at Pearl St. featuring songs from his illustrious career.

Sweet performs an explosive set

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

MATTHEW SWEET
Pearl Street
Feb. 17

NORTHAMPTON — Don't you love it when you walk into a show with very low expectations and totally get your socks knocked off? Take Matthew Sweet, for instance. I figured he'd play his twee little pop songs in a half-empty room, giving the audience a pleasant, albeit unremarkable, live performance. I am very happy to say that I was wrong.

Currently undertaking a small club tour to rehearse and preview his forthcoming Blue Sky On Mars album, this corn-fed Nebraska boy clearly thrived in the sweaty, dank confines of Pearl Street's smaller, first-floor room. "Dinosaur Act," from 1993's Altered Beast, opened the show; its vindictive declaration of "I'm coming back" immediately set the tone for what was to follow.

For the next 90 minutes, Sweet performed what essentially amounted to a career retrospective. One of the true pop craftsmen of the '90s, he delivered one hook-filled gem after another. Although his seldom-heard, late '80s albums were ignored, everything from 1991's Girlfriend up through Mars received equal coverage. Even if some of the mid-paced songs were occasionally a bit mundane, they never weighed down the loose, festive feel of the set as a whole.

An essential element into the success of the material, though, was the band itself. Sweet fronted a crack, five- piece ensemble, and their musical chemistry and sheer enthusiasm elevated the songs, most notably the 1995 hit "Sick Of Myself," into raw, loose, rave-ups. Much credit goes to lead guitarist Ivan Julian, who managed to recreate and often exceed the standards set by Robert Quine and Richard Lloyd on the original studio cuts.

Mr. Sweet, of course, was the main focus of the evening and played the role of the frontman with ease. His rapport with the audience was peppered with snappy one-liners and he was constantly pushing the band with both verbal and body language. His singing quite simply sounded great, and his rhythm guitar propelled the music with sheer brute force and authority.

Unsurprisingly, though, the hits were the true highlights of the evening. From the menacing "Girlfriend" and "The Ugly Truth" to the newly charged "Evangelene" and "Sick Of Myself," Sweet was clearly not going through the motions just to satisfy the crowd. In almost every instance, the live material surpassed its recorded counterpart. The covers featured during his two encores closed the show by flirting with extremes — the Kinks' "Waterloo Sunset" was given a delicate, acoustic treatment, and an ace version of David Bowie's "Moonage Daydream" was swamped in deafening, distorted, guitar glory.

Blue Sky On Mars, the follow-up to 1995's 100% Fun, is due to hit the shelves in late March. If last night was any indication of what's to come, the album will be another blast of timeless pop nirvana.

Trading frenzy for Calipari & Dallas

By Tom Canavan
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — When Don Nelson picked up the phone and called John Nash about making a trade, his original proposal was to send Jimmy Jackson and Eric Montross from Dallas to the Nets for Shawn Bradley.

John Calipari not only nixed it, the rookie New Jersey coach said the only thing that would make him part with his 7-foot-6 center was basically the Dallas Mavericks' starting lineup. After a little tinkering, Nellie gave it to him and they agreed on a nine-player trade, believed to be the NBA's biggest deal ever between two teams.

From the Nets' standpoint, Calipari got a wish list.

New Jersey got four good players for two, the flexibility to become a major player in the free agent market after next season and the potential to become a wheeler and dealer before tommorow's trading deadline.

"This is rotisserie basketball at its highest level," Nash said yesterday at a Nets press conference. "That's what I get paid to do. We're trying to exercise some patience while trying to put a product on the floor that is competitive."

Right now, the Nets (15-36) are far from competitive, but this deal can help them become that — in a few years.

By trading Bradley and guards Robert Pack and Khalid Reeves to Dallas — forward Ed O'Bannon is almost a throw-in — New Jersey rids itself of three long-term contracts. Bradley, Pack and Reeves all have three years left, and Bradley is a big chunk of change in the final three seasons of a seven-year, $44.8 million deal.

The Nets, who have not made the playoffs since the 1993-94 season, were also concerned that if the 25-year-old Bradley ever developed into one of the league's top three centers, he had the right to opt out of his contract any time in the next three seasons and leave.

JOSHUA KANGAROO

Stick it

UMass Minutewoman Tara Swartz won the all-around at last Sunday's meet against Air Force and Yale.

■ track

continued from page10

Ollendick (5'11.5"). Freshman Melissa Ward came in fifth with a jump of 5'2.25".

In the long jump, Minutewomen Melanie Bell and Shelanda Irish finished third and fourth with jumps of 18'1.25" and 18', respectively.

UMass' 1600m relay team won second-place honors behind Virginia Tech with a time of 3:54.88, while the Distance Medley squad for the Minutewomen pulled in a fourth place finish.

In the triple jump, UMass received superb efforts from Nicole Way and Melissa Ward who finished third and fourth, respectively, with jumps of 35'8.5" and 34'2.25".

In the 200m dash, Shelanda Irish (25.51) was beaten at the tape in heartbreaking fashion by Virginia Tech's Rashida Dodson (25.43). Kenku finished sixth at 25.88, and Melanie Bell came in at 13th with a time of 27.14.

Shana Mitchell finished third in the 20 lb weight division with a throw of 49'3", and Stephanie Townson fell just short of Mitchell's mark with a fourth-place throw of 48'2". Freshman Erica Faginski finished eighth overall with a throw of 36'4.75".

In the 5000m run, UMass sophomore Tracy Meagher jumped into the top ten at ninth with a time of 18:46.42, while teammate Molly Dunlap finished 11th at 18:57.66.

In the 55m hurdles, Comeau finished sixth for UMass at 8.31, while Irish's 7.32 performance in the 55m dash was good enough to place her in fifth.

The Minutewomen will once again voyage to Kingston this Friday and Saturday to compete in the New England Championships at 10:00 a.m.

■ Barenaked

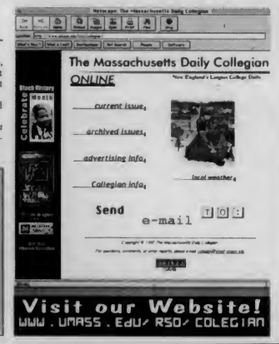
continued from page 5

without actually springing for a ticket," remarked vocalist/guitarist Ed Robertson.

The multimedia end of the CD presents 20 minutes of the inspired lunacy of BNL-TV that began on the release of their first enhanced CD, Born on a Pirate Ship. This edition of BNL-TV presents cable programming as the band imagines it should be. The CD includes imaginative programs such as "Ask Ed," a spoof on psychic hot lines, and a BNL workout program, "Sporto For Pirates."



Vocalist/drummer Tyler Stewart explains in saying, "Humor is an important part of our performance, but that doesn't always come across on CD. This is one way to let people in on the joke."

Their concert is sure to be an exciting humor filled evening, however you may choose to describe their music.

Barenaked Ladies perform at Pearl Street in Northampton tomorrow night, Feb. 20. For more information, please call the club at 584-7777.

Come write for the ARTS & LIVING Desk!

We're looking for more people to cover performances and events — if you think you have what it takes to write for us, come on down to the Collegian offices and speak with Jeremy Brothers, or call 545-1491.

Visit our Website!
WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLLEGIAN

Young Life
INTERESTED IN RENEWING YOUNG LIFE CONNECTIONS HERE IN HAMPSHIRE COUNTY?
CALL DREW
546-0748

Attention young men of color...
What Masks Are You Wearing?
A Workshop in Maskmaking
Facilitated by Rose M. Sackey-Milligan
New Africa House Library
Saturday, March 1, 1997
9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.
• This is a FREE Workshop
• Continental Breakfast and Lunch will be Served
• Wear Comfortable Clothing
• Bring a Cushion to Sit On!!
The goal of this workshop will be to demonstrate the connections between men's life experiences, their self-image and the way they present themselves to the world.
Sponsored by The Women of Color and Educator Advocate Programs of The Everywoman's Center
For further info, please call 545-0883

7pm, Feb 21st at the MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Hockey East
UMass Hockey
VS
BC
Pick up your tickets at:
☞ Curry Hicks Cage
☞ 'TIX' in the Student Union
☞ Hockey Table in the Campus Center
☞ At the Game
Be a Part of the Action

COURTESY OF NANDO SPORTS WEB SITE

You call that a three?

Wake Forest coach Dave Odom was not the only surprised spectator when ACC officials mistakenly allowed a N.C. State 3-pointer to cause a final second Deacon loss.

ACC still tops, despite officiating

Take a quick look at the AP Top 25, and it's hard to argue that there's a better league in men's college basketball this year than the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Long thought of as one of the premier conferences, the ACC has been overshadowed the last few years by surges from the Big East and the Big 10. With the loss of underclassmen to the pros and some strong recruiting classes by the other leagues, the ACC was pushed to the middle of the ratings pack.

CASEY KANE on COLLEGE BASKETBALL

But this year, the Atlantic Coast Conference is back with a vengeance. Five of the league's nine teams are ranked in this week's top 25, a number that is not duplicated by any other conference this week. The Pac 10 and the Big 10 come close, registering four teams apiece on the chart.

The ACC not only has five teams on the list, but three of which are in the top 10. Wake Forest, which has been quite close to the top of the hill all season, recently fell to No. 4 after a loss to North Carolina State. Still, fourth in the nation ain't too shabby.

Duke, which overtook Wake as the conference front- runner after the Deac's played State, stayed put in the No. 6 position. At the same time, Clemson took its spot at No. 8.

The fact that the Tigers have been in the top flight of college hoop performers is just short of amazing considering that it was not long ago they were the Atlantic Coast shipwrecks. While there was a harbinger of Clemson's success when the Tigers beat North Carolina at Littlejohn Coliseum in the infamous Rick Barnes-Dean Smith shout- and-spit match, it used to be Clemson was already written in, in pen, as N.C. State's opponent in the annual shame-game (the game between the eighth and ninth seeded teams that kicks off the ACC Tournament).

But all that has changed with Clemson's emergence as a bona-fide conference contender.

Duke has broken into the top 10, better than the preseason prognostications of mid-top 25. North Carolina, which struggled early in league play, has taken to the No. 12 spot.

Finally, Maryland, Massachusetts' fodder last weekend, has still survived among the perennial ACC giants to rank 14th in the nation.

And the conference has the marquee names, too. Look at UNC: Jamison and Carter; Duke: Landon and Capel; Maryland: Profit and Booth; Wake: Duncan and... well, do you really need anybody else?

So, if a conference is as good as the ACC this year, it stands to reason that the officials working these games are of the same caliber as the teams.

Wrong.

Lately it seems as if that is the furthest thing from the truth. Three separate incidents this calendar year, two in the past week, indicate that the officials in the ACC perhaps need to go back to school.

Perhaps the incident that has seen the most air time is the end-of-the-game guffaw by the officials in the Duke- Virginia game.

With five seconds remaining in the game and the Cavaliers up by one, Duke inbounded the ball to point guard Steve Wojciechowski, who ran the length of the court and was fouled. But the clock never started, and the officials failed to let the Virginia player who was waiting to sub into the game onto the court.

So with stopwatch in hand, the refs determined Wojciechowski would have been able to get the ball upcourt and cause the Cavalier infraction in the time the clock showed (:05). They put the Blue Devil PG on the line with 00.7 left, and Wojciechowski strung both shots to ice the game.

Time expires. Duke wins. Officials mess up.

This weekend, Wake Forest hosts N.C. State in a game that goes down to the wire. As time runs out, the Wolfpack's Clint Harrison shoots from near the arc with a shot that would have tied the game.

Instead, the refs throw the hands up and pronouce the shot a 3-pointer, giving struggling State a win 60-59 win over Wake. Apparently Sam Croft, Raymie Styons and Mike Wood, the crew working the game, thought Harrison's foot — which was actually five toes across the line — was behind the 3-point line.

With the Demon Deacons' demise, the Blue Devil beneficiaries of the previous officiating blunder took over first place in the ACC race.

Fred Barakat, the head of Atlantic Coast Conference officials, said that the mistake in the Wake game was a simple error in judgement and the officials would not be punished (those involved in the Duke-UVA game were suspended a game each).

"[Duke-UVA] was an administrative mechanical error," Barakat said. "That was what we call 'Officiating 101.' But in [Wake-State], these are judgement calls. They don't always make the right judgements, and they didn't here."

But those two aren't the only calls the league refs have loused. On Jan. 19, Maryland's Profit nailed a 3-pointer at the buzzer that gave the Terrapins a 54-51 win over Wake Forest.

Replays show that the shot was released after the final buzzer sounded, so the shot shouldn't have counted. Hmmmm...

"I'm blind! I'm deaf! I wanna be a ref!"

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

■ Gaffney

continued from page10

Cup home for the second year in a row. His development here at UMass is working in the general direction of his idols — an all-around game.

"I think [my development] has been pretty steady," Gaffney said. "I haven't made these huge leaps, but every year it seems like I'm getting better defensively, and this year, I'm starting to get better offensively. It's going well, and the offense is starting to come, but I still have so much to learn on defense.

"Defense is the biggest part of the game, and if the points come, that's gravy. I got to worry about defense. Maybe freshman year I would panic about a rush coming down, but I think I'm starting to relax a lot more over the last couple of years."

Mallen enjoys having Gaffney's offensive skills on the ice, but he does worry about the part of his game dealing with his position — defense. If there is a weakness in his game then that is the one, but Mallen sees his junior defenseman turning the corner.

"Defensively, he needs to make a lot of improvements," Mallen said. "He's got a great hipcheck that he is able to throw once in a while, but he's got to work on playing physically in 1-on-1 situations, and work on his opponent.

"But now, between his vision, anticipation and skating ability, he's able to see the seams where he can bring the puck up. He's definitely helped generate offense for us."

It's in the game

The rough and tumble job of a defenseman is not something Gaffney shies away from all the time. His mates on the backline, like junior Brad Norton and freshman Dean Stork, use their size to their advantage, while pasting opponents any time they can get. Like the advertising slogan says, "It's in the game."

But truthfully, the sounding line for the true work ethic of a defenseman lies in one question, and one question only: do you like to hit or hurt people? If a defenseman can make an opponent look over his shoulder every time he rushes the puck up ice, or skates into a corner, than his job is done. That split second can mean a world of difference, and when he gets a chance, Gaffney does his best to put the fear into his opponent.

"Hitting's great, and every once in a while I get to throw my hipcheck," Gaffney said. "I love throwing hipchecks, and I do it whenever I get a chance. It's all small stuff that I got to work on, just to get better at everything like pinning guys, and working hard down low."

The key to the Minutemen's success for the rest of this season depends on Gaffney, Norton and their defensive linemates, in addition to shutting down two high powered teams. A game this weekend versus Boston College, and last season's HE Rookie of the Year Marty Reasoner, and next week against Maine will be essential for the team. Not only will two wins going into the playoffs stimulate positive momentum, but can also get them out of a matchup with either Boston University or UNH in the first round.

If that happens, than defensive consistency will be needed against the likes of BU's Hobey Baker candidate Chris Drury, or the five-headed beast of UNH in Eric Boguniecki, Mark Mowers, Jason Krog, Eric Nickulas and Tom Nolan — all who are players who can break the 50-point barrier this season.

Eliminating the shot off the rebound is what Gaffney sees as the main thing the team needs to concentrate on. Seventeen years of skating experience from ponds to St. John's to the Mullins Center will be essential for his team's success. But when you think about the Worcester native — maybe, a little Orr and Bourque magic can be thrown in there for him, too.

"I think the most important thing [to stop] are second shots," Gaffney said. "You know, if they get a shot from the blueline, we got to make sure that we tie people up so they can't get the rebound. We have to clear the front of the net, get them out and pick up the puck and carry it out. Most goals in college hockey come from second shots, and that is an important thing that we have to stop."

Daily Collegian
It's what's for dinner

Recycle Your Collegian!!!!!!

THE #3 LAW SCHOOL IN THE COUNTRY FOR STUDENT SATISFACTION

Western New England College School of Law was ranked #3 for student satisfaction according to the latest National Jurist/ Princeton Review survey of 28,000 law students. The atmosphere is both intellectually rigorous and student-friendly. The faculty love to teach and they have outstanding academic and professional credentials. In fact, the professors were ranked in the top 25% for publication volume in the most recent Chicago Kent Law Review faculty scholarship survey.

Open House for Prospective Law Students
If you're considering going to law school, you can find out everything you need to know about admissions, financial aid, legal careers, and our unique student-centered programs at our upcoming open house.

Western New England College
School of Law

Open House for Prospective Students
Saturday, February 22, 1-4pm
S. Prestley Blake Law Center
1215 Wilbraham Road
Springfield, Massachusetts
For reservations and more information call:
800-782-6665
Visit our Web Site at http://www.law.wnec.edu

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Tonight
Retro Night
Music of the 70's and 80's
Weekly Drink Specials

16oz. Red Dog Drafts	1.50
16oz. Bacardi Limon & Coke	2.00
16oz. Vodka and Cranberry	2.00
12oz. Bottles of Rolling Rock	1.50

NEW HOURS
1/2 Price Appetizers & Nachos
3-5 pm Wed-Sat 7-11 pm
No Cover Charge
THE PUB

Learn German This Summer At URI
June 22-August 1, 1997
The University of Rhode Island in cooperation with the Goethe Institute Boston is hosting the Seventeenth Annual German Summer School of the Atlantic. German will be the sole language of communication, and German life and culture the heart of this six week residency program of intensive language study. Earn up to nine undergraduate or graduate credits while living in the beautiful surroundings of our country campus, just minutes away from Rhode Island's magnificent beaches and historic Newport. This program is ideally suited for anyone wishing to enroll in beginning through Master's level German. Take advantage of this rare opportunity to participate in this total German language experience.
Contact: Dr. John Grandin or Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors
Dept. of Languages
URI Kingston, RI 02881
Or call: (401) 874-5911
Hearing Impaired: (401) 277-9020
e-mail: grandin@uriacc.uri.edu hedderic@uriacc.uri.edu
Web site: http://www.uri.edu/artsci/mlg/germ.htm
University of Rhode Island Providence Center
College of Continuing Education at the Shepard Building
80 Washington Street, Providence, RI 02903

!! TREADMILLS !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
!! TREADMILLS !!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Are you interested in bringing a speaker to campus? Do you want to gain real-life experience working for a student organization? Come to a meeting for THE DISTINGUISHED VISITOR'S PROGRAM on Tuesday, February 25 at 7pm in Room 168C of the Campus Center Call 545-0046 for more info. Food will be served.

Get Involved! The Women's Health Project seeks volunteers interested in teaching and political action in contraceptive education, body image, etc. For information call 577-5181

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS: 6 credits, airfare, Eurorail, Room/board ALL FOR $3299. Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5188 for answers to your questions. Completely confidential.

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7 - 8pm in Campus Center Room 801. Free Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by.

Congratulations to Jennifer Jeginke, Katie Trimerco, Alicia Hiller, Jeanette Eke, Jennifer Walton, Sarah Lupaczak, Lydia Yeh, Julie Galvin, Jennifer Knect, Amy Goetz, Nikki Dileo, Katie Perks, Janessa McWilliams, Stephanie Goldberg, Jen Baird, Love, The Sisters of Chi Omega

The Sisters of Sigma Kappa invite all university women to Open Rush. For times, information, and a ride, please call 256-6887

AUTO FOR SALE

1977 Dodge Van with sticker. Automatic. Runs fine. Oversized. $400. 256-1300

1983 Red Renault Alliance 2-door, automatic, 75K miles, runs well, body in excellent condition, Clarion Stereo, new brakes. $1200 or B/O. 549-4594

1984 Honda Accord 4-door, 5-speed, 114,000 miles, needs brake work. $500 or B/O. 253-3071

1988 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap $1650 or B/O 546-5320

EMPLOYMENT

Responsible person to care for infant in our home. ON BUS ROUTE Three afternoons per week. 549-5035

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people-previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info, send resume and letter of interest to Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188

Premiere Brother/Sister Camp in Massachusetts On-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all Team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball, 3D Tennis Openings; also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling; other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board and travel

EMPLOYMENT

June 22nd-August 20th Call for information MAH-KEE-NAC(boys) 800-753-9118 DANBEE(girls) 800-392-3752 Recruiters will be On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am -4pm at the UMass Camp Day.

$15 per hour minimum- Teaching S.A.T. Prep-Course Teacher needed in all parts of MA and CT. Undergraduate degree preferred, excellent math and verbal scores required. Send resume to American Academy, P.O. Box 2062, Oswego, NY 13126

Exceptional Summer Opportunity- Camp Weyne, NE Pennsylvania- Sports oriented Counselor/Specialist for all land/water sports including tennis, camping, climbing/ropes, rocketry, roller hockey, sailing/water-skiing, A&C, drama, video. Campus Interviews Tuesday, March 11. Please call (800)737-9296

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7787 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7787 ext. A180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St - D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

SugarLoaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments, free heat/hot water, new kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Computers for sale 486DX4 100 MHz, CD-ROM, Sound Card.

486DX33 8 meg Call 6-4674 Ask for John

Bolster your immune system, improve your energy and focus with wild, organic, Super Blue Green Algae. 90-Day money back guarantee. Call independent distributor, Matthew Vergo at 256-1331 for more information or a free tape.

KLH 3-Way 260W SPKRS OBI. 12" Woofers, $250/Pr. Call 253-6520

Laptop/Notebook $99 . Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25. Steve 586-3324-2

FOR SALE

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941.

For Sale- Electric Guitar Peavey black strat copy, excellent condition $200. Sean 546-5734

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three private 1/2 hour lessons $69.95. Call (413)732-8817 in Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve.

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount. On- campus classes starting soon! Call (800)Can-Mix for info.

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your Fraternity. Yate Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, E-Mail ZBTGIBTINATIONAL.ORG or call Brett Hrbeck at (317)334-1898

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved Cost $35. (800)686-4193

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. Available immediately. On bus route Sugarloaf Estates. Keira (203)294-1336 Females only.

Housemate wanted to share house on the Connecticut River. No pets or smoke. $750+. 586-8583.

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

GRE
GMAT
Prep Courses
30 hours
3 weeks
$295.00
(800)608-Prep

WEB PAGE DESIGN
Business or Personal E-mail at AGRD-ART@MAIL.ME.COM

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available. (800)773-8704 Cost $29 Applications close 2-24-97

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. FS0016 (We are a research and publishing company)

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs

TRAVEL

Spring Break '97- Don't be left out! Space limited! Cancun and Jamaica from $449, Florida from $139. Call STS @ (800)648-4849 for the best rates!

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK/ Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Panama City, South Padre. Lowest Prices. Reliable Company. ASTA. IATAN MEMBER. Contact Matt 253-6473

Scuba Spring Break Earn 2 credits. March 16-22. Call (800)282-0977 for info.

COAST to COAST
$189/ow $289/rt*
Hartford to Puerto Rico
$149/ow $269/rt*
→ Huge savings on ALL Domestic & Int'l Fares
→ Fly the Major Airlines
→ No Advance Purchase
→ No Gimmicks
→ Express Delivery
→ Lowest Airfares, Anywhere
1-800-256-3491
DISCOUNT TICKETS Inc

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 D/W Fly the world dirt cheap ONE WORLD TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97 CANCUN BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

Jamaica-Spring Break from $599. Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

TRAVEL

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week. (413)786-7133 Parisa/ kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Best Hotels and Lowest Prices for Spring Break beach destinations. Florida, Cancun, Jamaica, etc. Call now for rooms or sign-up as Intercampus Representatives. (800)327-6013 http://www.icpt.com

Europe $155, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T Worldwide Destinations Airhitch ™ (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.is-com.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven: Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed. From $99. (800)426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

We are looking for a four bedroom house or apartment for the Fall. We are willing to take over your summer lease. Call 549-5362!

Starting Sunday, Feb. 25, the Collegian FYI section will be relocated to the Classifieds page. In addition, FYI entries will be limited to free Five College events only. Only entries fitting this description will be run in the FYI section. All other entries must be submitted through the Classifieds Department. For information about Classifieds rates, call 545-3500

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means no specific directions to dorms.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

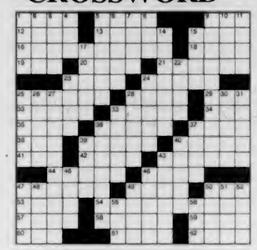
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation
Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day



All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

I	T	C	H	■	L	E	T	U	P	■	P	U	F	F
R	A	H	S	■	A	L	O	N	E	■	E	S	A	U
W	H	A	T	■	D	A	M	O	N	■	R	E	D	D
I	O	N	■	B	I	N	S	■	S	T	O	R	E	D
N	E	S	T	L	E	D	■	D	I	O	N	■	■	■
■	■	■	H	E	S	■	A	R	O	U	S	I	N	G
H	U	M	I	D	■	C	L	I	N	T	■	R	I	N
O	P	U	S	■	S	H	O	P	S	■	N	A	N	A
S	O	S	■	F	L	O	S	S	■	D	O	N	A	T
E	N	T	E	R	E	R	S	■	I	R	E	■	■	■
■	■	■	T	E	E	D	■	S	C	A	L	E	R	S
S	A	C	H	E	T	■	B	A	I	T	■	N	E	O
H	U	L	A	■	I	L	I	K	E	■	S	O	L	D
A	T	O	N	■	N	O	T	E	S	■	E	L	I	A
D	O	P	E	■	G	U	E	S	T	■	T	A	T	S

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Exile island
5. Raceway gal
9. Fatsoffa's quaff
12. Score
13. Dad's money
15. Retired for the night
16. Paul Hogan, e.g.
18. Be an omen of
19. Opponent of AES
20. On the safe side
21. Tar
23. Competed
24. ___ -fruits
25. O'Hary
28. Post Teacake
29. Network founded in 1926
32. Adjudicate anew
33. Base of a tabloid suit
34. Before long
35. Wrong
36. Answer, as reporters' questions
37. Leave it be!
38. Caddie's harn
39. Annoy
40. Kind of penny
41. Bald eagle's kin
42. Actress Jackson
43. Highball need
44. Crosshatches
46. Word with ax or dish
47. Garb
48. Burnoose or kimono
50. Oceangoing initials
53. ___ Loves Mary (Reagan film)
54. Obstacles
57. Very old
58. Sudden rush
59. Dart
60. Managed
61. Oliver or Reo
62. Emulates Horn Coles

DOWN
1. Mild expletive
2. Stanton'on
3. Vulgar
4. ___ Went" (1920 song)
5. County seat of Kerry
6. Served as king
7. Sherrill Andy Taylor's son
8. Type of towel or wagon
9. Hides
10. Pollux's mother
11. Garners locale
14. Guaranteed
15. Bind as ___ (2 wds.)
17. Drizzly
22. Final entry in some lists (2 wds.)
23. Run the gamut
24. Schedule
25. Very angry
26. Mars modern
27. Bolster
28. Colander's cousin
30. Like a gumdrop's house
31. Like a quadruplic
33. Mortgages
36. Stratocasters, e.g.
37. "Queen Mary," for one
39. Poker holding
40. Potter's apparatus
43. Like a duck's feet
45. Watermelon eater's discard
46. Author Mary Maples
47. Opened
48. Forum track
49. Unique
50. USC's rival
51. Bylaws
52. JFK landers
55. ___ Gang" (Philip Roth)
56. Frequently, to Keats

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Expect the unexpected, especially when it comes to obtaining permission for a new project. Don't waste time arguing with opposition from an unexpected direction. Hound dog and say what you believe in... then, if things don't go your way, save your strength. You'll need it again soon.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Self-discipline will be the key to achieving your goals in the near future. Call them like you see them, but be aware of the effect that your frank opinions could have on another's self-esteem. A close friend offers a shoulder to cry on after a upsetting episode.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Focus on getting out of debt as you can plan your finances around something fun. A vacation could await, if you're prudent. Extra effort at work pays off in the form of increased responsibility. If you see a gift that would be perfect for someone, don't delay- purchase it!

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A knee effort pays big dividends as you accomplish great things together. Make a note of the team members for future reference. Get professional advice when it comes to planning your finances. You could be missing out on some important breaks.

LEO
July 23-August 23
If you're feeling left out of the loop, don't fear heart. There could be a surprise for you in the near future. A kind thing you may makes a big impression, especially to a enough person. When encountering opposition, try to feet them out before you take any decisive action.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Push the envelope in a personal matter and you could forge an even stronger bond with a sweetheart. Follow it up with a commitment, if it's appropriate. Now is a good time to plan for a major investment. You could discover a new way to have fun without spending a lot.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Check your datebook to see if there's something you've missed. Get all chortles in the mail, catch up on correspondence and thru it it still feels like you're forgotten something, check with your partner. He or she will have the answer, and it could be right under your nose.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A pesky distraction threatens to ruin your concentration at a crucial moment. Take a deep breath and ask what the intruder wants. If he or she can't tell you, then pay no attention from that point on. But do it tactfully. You may need a charge in return.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Although repetition can cause you to feel sluggish sometimes, this week it's a security blanket that allows your creativity to take flight. Plan something exciting as a reward for your hard work and to break out of the routine—too much of anything isn't good for you.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Ask for advice when planning how to tackle a big problem. Someone could have a better saving trick that you would never have thought of. Also: you could be able to trade your brains for someone else's bronze. Use the time you save to plan a special treat for someone you like.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
An erotic possibility is closer to becoming a reality, so if it's something you want—go for it! Tempt out the competition clearly before you take on an impossible task. Your interesting diplomatic skills are a sure fire key to some important information.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Your careful saving and investing begin to pay off, but don't blow it all on a wild spree. Instead, discuss it with your partner: you could come up with an exciting and inexpensive possibility that will mean more. Relatives have some startling advice. Follow it if it feels right.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P ✪ Open Every Night 'til 1!
Down the Alley

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
15¢ Wings tonight after 10

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 19, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		Thomas Jefferson (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)			National Geographic's Inside the White House
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Nanny	Pearl	"Murder in My Mind" (1997, Drama) Nicolette Sheridan,			News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Pearl	"Murder in My Mind" (1997, Drama) Nicolette Sheridan,			News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Nick Freno	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	News	Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Matrimony"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Sentinel "Drop Dead"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	LAPD	R. Petrol	Real TV
WWIT	16	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Real Copy	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Matrimony"	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Hsms imp.	Seinfeld	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "Intervention"		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Wings	Chicago Sons	Newsradio	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Matrimony"	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		Thomas Jefferson (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)		Heroines-Sky	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Sentinel "Drop Dead"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	NBA Basketball: Celtics at Warriors
WTBS	17	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball: Portland Trail Blazers at Orlando Magic. (Live)				Inside-NBA	"The People Under the Stairs"
A&E	33	Quincy		Equalizer "Shadow Play"		Biography: G. Gordon Liddy		American Justice (R)		20th Century (R)	Law & Order "Mother Love"
CNN	43	WorldView		Moneyline		Crossfire		Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live	World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	29	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	"Moving Violations" (1985, Comedy) John Murray,				A-List (R)	Dream On	Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC	48	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Strange Planes (R)		Three Minutes to Impact (R)				Eco-Challenge		Three Minutes to Impact (R)
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Maryland at Georgia Tech. (Live)				College Basketball: St. John's at Villanova. (Live)				Sportscenter
LIFE	49	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Secret" (1992, Drama) Christopher Plummer,			Living	Mysteries
MTV	39	Rein & Stimpy	TBA	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Unplugged (R) (In Stereo)		Real World	Real World	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	42	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	45	Star Wars Tril.	Sci-Fi Trader	Time Trax (In Stereo)		Tekwar "Cyberhunt" (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Fatal Mistake"		Sightings (R) (In Stereo)		Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime	Hometime	SeaTek	Pop Science	Revolutionary War (Part 4 of 6)		Londolozi		SeaTek (R)	Pop Science
TNT	30	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		"An Eye for an Eye" (1981, Adventure) Chuck Norris,					"Double Impact" (1991, Adventure) Jean-Claude Van Damme,
USA	35	Renegade "Rustlers Rodeo"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		"Talk to You Later, Headed You're Dead" (1996) Corbin Bernsen,			Wings	Wings
HBO	50	"Last of the Dogmen" (1995, Adventure) Tom Berenger, PG		"Necessary Roughness" (1991) Scott Bakula. PG-13		"Black Sheep" (1996) Chris Farley. PG-13		Comedy Hall		Larry Sanders	Tracey Takes	"Rambo: First Blood Part II"
MAX	51	"Necessary Roughness" (1991) Scott Bakula. PG-13		"Tales From the Hood" (1995, Horror) Clarence Williams III. R		"Tis Die For" (1995, Satire) Nicole Kidman. (In Stereo) R
SHOW	52	(4:35)		"Dos Chu and the Philly Flash" (1981) PG		"Dead Presidents" (1995, Drama) Larenz Tate. R

Quote of the Day

"What a waste it is to lose one's mind. Or not to have a mind is being very wasteful. How true that is"

–Former Vice President Dan Quayle

Quote of the Day

"Love will save you from the cold light of boring reality..."

–M. Gira

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

Non-Sequitor By Willey Miller

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

We live in a small apartment building and the apartments look alike. One time I slept the whole night in the wrong apartment.

My mom doesn't like me coming home late at night, so before she turns out all the lights and rearranges the furniture to try to make me fall when I tip toe in.

In the morning I had breakfast with these two nice old people. They sat very still at the kitchen table, spoke softly and were calm and peaceful.

They told me not to worry about being in the wrong apartment because we were relatives.

They said we were related by rent checks.

Actually, they do look a lot like me.

How cool.

Now I have family in the building.

University² By Frank Cho

Social Norm By Mr. K

Close to Home By John McPherson

The hazard of rolling over in a bed with flannel sheets while wearing a flannel nightgown.

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Today's Staff

Mike "Rabbit" Burke
Night Editor

Lisa "Kanga" Oliveri
Copy Editor

Lauren "Roo" Kosky
Photo Technician

Josh "Tigger" Sylvester
Production Supervisor

Matt "Pooh" Guilmette
Dan "Christopher Robin" Bodah
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chix Cutlet Sandwich
Turkey Bacon Swiss Pita
Meatball Grinder
Wheatball Grinder

DINNER
Turkey Tenderloin
Roast Beef w/ Pepper
Beans and Rice
Grilled Chix Sandwich

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Chix Cutlet Sandwich
Tacos
Scrod au Gratin

DINNER
Turkey Tenderloin w/ Citrus Glaze
Roast Beef w/ Black Pepper Crust

Worcester

LUNCH
Tacos
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Veggie Tacos

DINNER
Turkey Tenderloin
Roman Rice and Beans
Pastabilities
Stuffed Shells in Sauce

Berkshire

LUNCH
Tacos
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Veggie Tacos

DINNER
Turkey Tenderloin
Roast Beef w/ Pepper
Roman Rice and Beans
Veal Parmesan

SPORTS

Wednesday, February 19, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Women's track: 2nd at A 10's

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's track team ended an injury- plagued season Saturday with a satisfying second place finish at the Atlantic 10 Championships in Kingston, R.I.

Though an incredible effort was given all season long, one could not help wondering what could have been if UMass hadn't had to go into battle without the services of standout veterans Anya Forrest (sprints/hurdles) and Rosey Bryan, in addition to freshman impact performers Alison Tostevin (throws), Jamie Hedgecock (sprints) and Sharon Tillotson (distance) due to injury, in their attempt to win back-to-back A-10 titles.

The Hokies of Virginia Tech (161 pts.) beat the Minutewomen (111.5 pts.) handily en route to their first ever A-10 Championship. Rounding out the top five team finishers were Rhode Island (95.5 pts.), St. Joseph's (54 pts.) and Temple (51 pts.).

UMass distanced itself from Rhode Island with the help of three first-place finishes to the Rams' two.

Junior Rebecca Donaghue convincingly won the mile with a time of 4:57.66. Her junior counterpart Christy Martin, ran an outstanding race breaking the top five in fifth with a time of 5:11.68, finishing only fractions of a second out of the fourth place slot behind St. Joseph's Liz Reeser.

Junior Silifa Kenku edged out Dayton's Kaamilya Davis to take first-place honors in the 400m dash. Kenku's time of 57.23 bettered Davis' mark of 57.53 by less than half a second. Trailing close behind in the same event was UMass' Michelle Cooper who finished third at 58.70. Freshman Mary Eaton crossed the finish line 12th at 1:02.98.

The use of Lisa Flood by coach Julie LaFreniere proved successful, when she held her talented freshman as the lone UMass entry in the 800m dash. Flood (2:15.56) promptly went out and won the race, defeating St. Joseph's Lauren Molyneux by a near four second margin.

When Virginia Tech's deep and talented squad began to pull away from the pack, the Minutewomen showed an impressive display of heart and determination while receiving some huge performances from some unlikely sources.

Freshman Sarah Hirsch shaved over 10 seconds off her 3000m time of 10:10.73 while finishing second overall. In an exciting turn of events, Hirsch closed in on the leader and eventual winner LaSalle's Johanna Grochowalski, and nearly caught her, finally faltering by just one second. Senior Katie Greenia finished seventh for UMass at 10:31.08.

In the high jump, UMass freshman Andrea Comeau (5'6") finished second overall behind an unbelievable jump from Virginia Tech's Katie

Turn to TRACK, page 7

COURTESY OF MEDIA RELATIONS

Veteran sprinter/hurdler Anya Forrest was one of a handful of injured members of the women's indoor track team unable to compete in last weekend's A-10 Championship meet.

UMass falls to 4th in A-10 mens track

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

As it turns out, Massachusetts did a little worse than it thought it would and Virginia Tech did a lot better than everyone though it would.

Those and a few other factors resulted in the Hokies winning the Atlantic 10 Mens' Indoor Track and Field Championship, while the Minutemen came up short with a fourth place finish at the University of Rhode Island's Mackal Field House.

After Virginia Tech (161 points), the runners-up included LaSalle (116), Rhode Island (109) and the Minutemen (92). UMass actually did worse than last season, when it took third place.

UMass coach Ken O'Brien and some of his athletes, like junior Dave Cahill, were hoping to improve this time around, to no avail.

"Almost everyone had a bad day," said Cahill. "Teams like Virginia Tech and LaSalle performed really well, and they were just too much for us on that given day. But we've got to put it behind us and move on."

There were some bright spots. Sophomore Albie Vasquez tied his own school record when he won the pole vault with a vault of 14'9" while sophomore Ian Stevens became the A-10 champ in the shot put, with a winning toss of 50'6 3/4". Both were named to the A-10 All-Conference team.

"I was pleased," said Stevens of his winning throw. "It was three feet less than my best but I was happy just to win it because everyone was having a bad day. I thought the team was going to do really well but we all came out so blah.

"I had a feeling Virginia Tech would be good, but we should have beaten URI and La Salle."

Coach Russ Whitenack of Virginia Tech, which won five individual event championships, was named the A-10 coach of the year, while LaSalle's Troy Harry and Rhode Island's Jeremy Collins earned A-10 Most Outstanding Performer Awards.

The Minutemen will be in action next on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 21-22, when they travel to Boston for the New England Championships. Boston University will host the meet which starts at noon.

"We've got a lot of kids that will do well there," Stevens said. "It's a different kind of meet. It'll be easy for a lot of us to place high because there are so many teams competing there."

Men's gym sweeps Air Force & Army at the Cage

By Matthew J. Perrault
Collegian Staff

Entering to the chant of U — Mass, the No. 7 men's gymnastics team entered the Curry Hicks Cage ready to take on the military academies of Army and Air Force.

Massachusetts appeared confident as they prepared to tackle two very good teams. The Minutemen knew that if they performed up to their ability, this meet would end in victory. UMass did just that and took care of their opponents with skill and precision.

With freshmen power Jeff Lavalle away at the Winter Nationals, sophomore Steve Pryor stepped up and had a great meet.

Pryor placed first and tied the school record on high bar with a 9.7, won the vault with a career best 9.65 and tied for first on floor with 9.4. He finished up with an all around personal best of 56.40.

"Steve Pryor had an excellent meet," UMass coach Roy Johnson said. "His all around score was a career best for him and broke the old school record as well."

The Minutemen had outstanding performances from seniors Gabe Columbus and Ruslan Shupak. Columbus tied for first on floor (9.4) and Shupak won the rings (9.7) and tied for second on the vault (9.55) with junior Michael Sangiardi.

Although sophomore Phil Lieberman had some difficulty on the high bar and vault, he still pulled off first place finishes on floor (9.4) and parallel bars (9.5).

The Minutemen placed first on floor (37.55), pommel horse (37.10), still rings (38.80), parallel bars (37.15) and high bar (37.15). The team's mark of 37.15 in the vault set a new school record.

It was the third consecutive meet that UMass has reset the school record on vault and second consecutive sweep of all events.

UMass' lead increased after each event. The final score was UMass 224.40, Air Force 213.25, and Army 211.55. UMass improves to 6-0 on the season.

"Overall it was a good performance," Johnson said. "Some guys were sick but we still did OK."

The Minutemen return to action today against Springfield at the Curry Hicks Cage at 1 p.m.

Over confidence shouldn't be a problem for this team. Coach Johnson will have his troops focused for the meet.

"We are trying not to take anyone too lightly. They have some kids that we would love to have on our team," Johnson said.

Women's gym takes first

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team came out on top with a score of 194.850 in last Sunday's tri-meet in the Curry Hicks Cage. The Minutewomen are now 6-2 overall, with one home meet left in the season.

Their competitors, Air Force and Yale, scored a 187.125 and a 179.750, respectively.

"We know that we are the number one ranked team in the region, which is the first time that's happened since we've been under NCAA," UMass coach Dave Kuzara said. "That's a first step. Now we have to maintain that number one ranking."

Once again the Minutewomen have outdone themselves, setting more school records and obtaining career bests.

Senior Tara Swartz gave an outstanding performance on the uneven bars to finish first, tying her own school record of 9.950. Swartz also took first place in the all-around with a 38.975.

As a team, the Minutewomen set a new school record on the balance beam with an overall score of 48.850. Sophomore Anita Sanyal finished first with a 9.90, followed by senior Lianne Laing, who scored a career best of 9.875 and sophomore Betsy Colucci, who also obtained a career best of 9.825.

Colucci also scored another personal best at the tri-meet — a 9.70 on vault.

"There's no reason to expect why we won't continue to do what we've been doing," Kuzara said.

With the season just about half-over, the team looks to keep their focus, and to keep on improving their scores, and Kuzara said they are pleased with their performances and scores so far.

"Last year our highest score was a 191.9, and now we've got three meets in a row where we've gone — Michigan 193.7, Rhode Island 194.925 — and we then comeback with a 194.850, "Kuzara said. "We are ecstatic."

Nevertheless, there is always room for improvement, and with a big meet coming up on Friday, the Minutewomen are looking to do better than they have so far.

"We had 18 routines out of 24 that I think we can improve on and that's what we're focusing on," Kuzara said.

UMass has a lot of depth on both the vault and floor, and with this depth, and their continued outstanding performances, look to come out on top in both this Friday's meet against Minnesota, Vermont and MIT, and against New Hampshire next week.

"It sure would have been easy to coast at the Air Force and Yale meet, and we never coasted, they fought and they scraped for everything that they could do," Kuzara said.

Gaffney's offensive–defensive prowess assists UMass

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

When you think about Massachusetts school boy hockey, what you think about is the Beltway: or, more specifically, inside the Beltway. In almost all areas of reference, the world ends outside of Route 495. But, for those heathens who live and play past Exit 11A on the Turnpike and the yellow illumination of the Hallowed Land, there is a world to offer.

Junior defenseman Mike Gaffney had a world of offensive skills to offer the Minutemen from his school boy days, and it was not from the Thayer Academy, Catholic Memorial or the Matignon's of our hockey world. Central Massachusetts was where Gaffney lived and played, with Worcester, and neighboring St. John's, his stomping grounds.

The three-time Catholic League All-Star did not only help beat up on long-time conference rivals like the Guardians of St. Peter-Marian, but any others that got in their way. For teams like Algonquin Regional, Marlboro High or cross-town rival Shrewsbury, whatever their record was, the game you had to win was against the Pioneers of St. John's. Most of the time, the loss would come their way, and that was the kind of program Gaffney called home for four years — often hated, but always respected.

The switch he had to make from regional stardom to national anonymity was another game altogether, and it has been a tough road. But this season, Gaffney has emerged from being one of the boys to being one of the men. The backliner has put up career best numbers (6 goals–13 assists), while helping the Minutemen to their best season since the reinstatement of the program in 1993.

For Gaffney, the hockey experience at one of Worcester County's top parochial schools helped him make the jump to Div. I college hockey.

"The best thing about playing [at St. John's] was that we played Boston schools a lot," Gaffney said. "Playing Catholic Memorial, B.C. High, Matignon and all those teams gave me a lot of experience playing at the Boston level of hockey. To play against all those guys was the best thing about [St. John's].

"At that age, UMass was not even around, but I always dreamed of playing in Hockey East. It could have been anywhere, and I would have loved it."

In a sea of defensmen that are more apt to crush an opponent than rush past them, Gaffney is a offensive optlon for coach Joe Mallen he has not possessed in the past. But these changes did not come over night.

"When he left high school, he was definitely an offensive defenseman, and could rush the puck from end to end," Mallen said. "His first couple of years, he found out that there is a big step up in Hockey East, and it is much more difficult. He has made that step."

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Junior defenseman Mike Gaffney has been an offensive catalyst from the backline for the Minutemen this season.

From Bobby to Raymond

In true puckhead fashion, Gaffney has led the life of hockey since his formative days. From hitting the local pond stumbling at three years old, and then going from PeeWee action to the Worcester Crusaders, while still following the hockey laureate team of New England, the Boston Bruins, he has walked the walk.

In true offensive defensemen fashion, Gaffney's idol from the Black and Gold is no other than the man who invented the position — Bobby Orr. He never saw Orr play in person, so the next best thing was the Bruins' all-time leading scorer, Ray Bourque.

If you are going to live and bleed the game of hockey, those are some pretty good examples to follow. If you want those influences to develop into your game, then following examples pales in comparison to implementing them. Even though Orr was a offensive dynamo, he also could back- check with the best; while Bourque could be considered the best pure defenseman the league has ever produced, he also has the Bruins' scoring title all to himself.

Gaffney realizes that he has to counterbalance his offensive creativity with defensive reliability. Flat out, his scoring ability wins games, as seen in the Minutemen's dramatic 6-4 Alumni Cup win over Lowell two weeks ago.

His end to end rush nine minutes into the third period left the River Hawk defense befuddled, at best, and his gamewinner brought the

Turn to GAFFNEY, page 7

Minutewomen at Xavier

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team draws nearer to the conclusion of its season and the start of the Atlantic 10 tournament tonight. Xavier hosts the Minutewomen in their last away contest and second-to-last game of the regular season.

Massachusetts is 16-8 overall and 10-4 in conference. The Minutewomen have clinched a top-four seed in the A-10 tournament, giving them a home quarterfinal game after a first-round bye. A victory in the quarterfinals would send UMass to the campus site of the highest remaining seed.

Xavier is 9-15 overall and 4-10 in the A-10. The Musketeers are in position to secure fourth place in the A-10 West division, but could fall into sixth if they lose their remaining games to UMass and Rhode Island.

Should Xavier end up in sixth place, they would face the third seed from the East division for the right to play UMass at the William D. Mullins Center in the quarterfinal round.

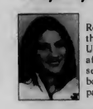
With all of those indefinites in place surrounding a home-and-home series between the Minutewomen and the Musketeers, the tip-off tonight will be just their second meeting ever.

The Musketeers joined the A-10 last season, and dropped their inaugural match-up with the Minutewomen 75-56. UMass stifled the Xavier offense, allowing just .306 shooting and forcing 20 turnovers. Octavia Thomas was the top performer for the Minutewomen, leading all scorers with 23 points.

UMass shot .519 in the contest, including .444 from 3- point land. Shooting above .500 has been key for the Minutewomen this season, especially as of late. They have hit more than half of their attempts in three of their last four games, including a .644 performance at Temple.

The Minutewomen are the top 3-point shooting team in the conference, at .392, but will have their hands full containing Xavier's deep threat Kiesha Brown. Brown ranks in the top 10 of the A-10 with a .372 mark from downtown. UMass has had difficulties against teams with strong outside games this season, dropping a big game to George Washington in which Colonial Lisa Cermignon shot the Mullins Center lights out at the nationally televised game, going 4-4 from behind the arc.

The Minutewomen have one remaining home game this season, against Dayton on Feb. 22 at 1 p.m. UMass recently improved its home record to 6-4, with wins over St. Bonaventure and Fordham this past President's Day weekend. The 66-58 result against the Bonnies secured the Minutewomen's second place A-10 East finish. The 58-45 disciplining of the Rams just confirmed Massachusetts' dominance over 11-13 Fordham.



A win at Xavier and a solid defense of their Mullins Center turf against Dayton could tie the Minutewomen with A-10 East leader St. Joseph's. Because of the Hawks' two conference wins over UMass, they will have the first seed.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 86 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, February 20, 1997

Sights set on Sydney

Junior Angelique Rodriguez is one of the best divers in UMass history, after only three seasons on the boards (see Sports, page 14).

UMass once again goes to shootout

Radio is a time of uncertainty and our Arts & Living staff takes a look at an old medium that struggles to survivein a high technology age. (see Arts & Living Page 5).

WORLD

Commander pleads innocent of slaughter

ARUSHA, Tanzania (AP) — A former Rwandan army commander and the former director of a radio station pleaded innocent yesterday to charges they participated in the 1994 slaughter of a half-million people.

The U.N. court established to try suspects in Rwanda's 1994 genocide accused Lt. Col. Anatole Nsengiyumva and Ferdinard Nahimana of encouraging Hutus to kill their Tutsi neighbors in one of the worst episodes of ethnic bloodletting this century.

The two were transferred last month from Cameroon to this northern Tanzanian town where the U.N. Criminal Tribunal is based.

Nsengiyumva, 47, is accused of presiding over a meeting during which he ordered participants to start killing Tutsis. Prosecutors say Nahimana, also 47, was the head of a private radio station in the Rwandan capital of Kigali that broadcast messages encouraging the population to kill minority Tutsis.

NATION

Reebok back pedaling from shoe's misnomer

BOSTON (AP) — So you're a bunch of highly paid creative types brainstorming a name for a new athletic shoe. Michael Jordan? Taken. Chuck Taylor? Ditto.

Here's an idea: Name a women's running shoe after the mythical demon Incubus, who had sex with women in their sleep.

Reebok did. Now it's doing some major backpedaling.

"I'm horrified and the company is horrified," Reebok spokesman Kate Burnham said. "How the name got on the shoe and went forward, I do not know. We are a company that has built its business on women's footwear, so to do anything that's denigrating to women is not what we're about."

Incubus has been on the market for about a year, and Reebok officials said there have been no customer complaints. Instead, they learned of the name's meaning from ABC, which aired a story about it Tuesday.

Reebok said yesterday it is looking into ways of wiping out the offending name, which appears not on the $57.99 shoes themselves but on the boxes. There are no plans to recall the 53,000 shoes shipped to U.S. retailers.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 55 LOW: 45	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 12
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 14

Campus debate on privatization continues at SCERA open forum

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Concerned students, faculty and staff filled the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union yesterday afternoon to attend an open forum about potential privatization of the Student Union.

The forum, run by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), was created for the purpose of informing students about the pros and cons of the controversial referendum question that will appear on the March Student Government Association (SGA) election ballot.

The question that will be posed to students is whether or not they are in favor of permitting private companies to run businesses in the Student Union — for example, letting McDonald's or Antonio's Pizza rent space in the Hatch.

SCERA Student Coordinator Jason Vecchio said the forum did not promote either side of the issue, but rather covered both sides evenly.

"We were directed by student government to educate the student body at large," Vecchio said. "We're taking an objective approach so that students are aware of the issue, and all sides are heard."

Five speakers (two for and three against privatization) were allowed to voice their opinions. Each side had a total of 10 minutes at the podium.

After a coin toss to decide which side would be argued first, Brian McManus, a SGA senator (Southwest Area), opened the discussions, arguing for privatization.

"I believe that, if approached responsibly, privatization can be a very, very good thing for this campus," McManus said.

McManus said he believed in what was "best for the students," and that in his research, he found that "students are very, very unhappy with the quality of food on campus... it sucks."

McManus said that allowing private companies on campus would "provide consistent, quality food."

"If we let Dunkin' Donuts on campus, then we will know what Dunkin' Donuts will serve," McManus said.

McManus added that privatization could create more jobs for students, and promote competition between University and private businesses. He said that Barnes & Noble coming on campus would result in cheaper books than ones in the University Store or Textbook Annex.

Charlotte Coates, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Local 1776 (AFSCME), warned that students may not know what they are getting into with privatization.

"Be clear on what you're looking for," Coates said.

Coates said that if privatization occurs it could result in a loss of jobs (namely union workers), but that was not what she was advocating at the forum.

"Students have every right to quality food and quality services, but I can guarantee it's going to cost you more money in the long run... like $400-500 more a semester," Coates said.

Francis Martin, vice president of AFSCME Local 1776, challenged McManus' claim that food and products would be cheaper and better.

"The comment about Barnes & Noble being cheaper than

Turn to PRIVATIZATION, page 3

You are what you eat ....

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Lisa Rudnick, an intercultural communications major, ate lunch with Camille Mata, a post-graduate intern, at Earthfoods.

Motion to remove senator halted by Speaker Tirrell

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

At last night's Student Government Association (SGA) meeting, Senate Speaker Brian Tirrell exercised his power to stop a motion's action on the senate floor.

The motion, submitted by Senators Dan Backer, representing extra residents off-campus (EROC), and Amy Pellegrino (Southwest Area), called for the removal of Sen. Tom Sadlowski (Southwest Area) as chairperson of a select committee on Title VII.

Title VII concerns the relationship between the SGA and other organizations on campus, including registered student organizations (RSOs), agencies, the Greek system and student businesses. The SGA Constitution currently has an incomplete version of Title VII which calls for a version to be written.

Backer and Pellegrino claimed that Sadlowski has failed to perform the duties of chair and has arbitrarily decided what would and would not be in Title VII, without consulting the committee or seeking input from student leaders.

"[Sadlowski] is not doing his duty, and it is detrimental to students," Backer said.

"[Sadlowski] arrogantly told me that SGA had no business writing their own constitution," said Pellegrino.

Pellegrino also said that the committee would like to start over and elect a new chairperson.

Sadlowski was not present at last night's meeting.

In an effort to stop this motion from passing, Sen. Jennifer Casasanto (Southwest Area), chair of the Finance Committee, called for quorum and then left the meeting. Quorum is reached when exactly half of the voting members of the Senate are present.

Other senators who left the meeting included Seth Avakian and Lisa Cook (Southwest Area), Jennifer Keller and Edwin Seah (Northeast Area), Peter Chan, Darren Glidden and Jurry Kang (Commuter Area), and Luis Quirama (ALANA).

Tirrell, who broke his gavel at the end of the meeting in frustration, would not allow for debate on the motion.

"To hear debate on this motion would be detrimental to the Senate. The proper course would be the Judiciary," Tirrell said.

There was a motion to overrule Tirrell, but so many people had left the meeting, quorum was not reached. Therefore, the vote to overrule did not count.

Sen. Resa Singleton (ALANA), who opposed the motion against

Turn to SGA, page 3

Sexual harassment suit filed against professor

By Leigh Faulkner and Daniel E. Levenson
Collegian Staff

A graduate student at the University of Massachusetts, Cynthia M. Lennon, has filed a sexual harassment lawsuit against Gary Malaney, a faculty member of the school of education, and the University.

According to court documents, Lennon began her studies as a graduate student at the University in the fall of 1995 and was assigned Malaney as an academic advisor. Additionally, she took one rudimentary class in which Malaney was the instructor.

Lennon's complaint states that in the fall of 1995 "Defendant Malaney spoke often with Plaintiff on a personal level. He made many comments about her appearance and clothing that Plaintiff felt uncomfortable with. He invited her, along with other students in her Department, to social outings in bars and restaurants."

In addition, the complaint stated that Malaney was "obsessed" with Lennon, and that he "... persistently proposed that they begin an intimate relationship..."

In her complaint, Lennon stated that she had repeatedly attempted to make it clear to Malaney that she was not interested in him romantically. She allegedly told him this in person as well as through e-mail.

Lennon said that after she told Malaney she was not interested, he sent her an e-mail message saying "... that he understood her point and that although it would be difficult for him, he would cease his advances..."

Despite this response from Malaney, Lennon said she felt it was in her best interest to drop her independent study with him because of alledgedly previous broken promises to cease his pursuit of her.

Malaney's alleged effect on Lennon was so profound that "... he created an environment so intimidating, hostile and humiliating that she felt compelled to drop her class and switch academic advisors, despite a great disadvantage to herself."

Malaney "admitted his wrong doing" to superiors and was disciplined with a verbal warning and a letter of reprimand which was placed in his personnel file.

Malaney's alleged behavior towards Lennon constitutes sexual harassment according to Massachusetts General Law Chapter 151C, 2(g), which outlaws sexual harassment in an educational environment, according to the

Turn to HARASSMENT, page 2

Deng Xiaoping, China's leader for two decades, dead at age 93

By Charles Hutzler
Associated Press

BEIJING — Deng Xiaoping, the last of China's Communist revolutionaries who abandoned Mao's radical policies and pushed the world's most populous nation into the global community with capitalist-style reforms, died yesterday.

Xinhua, China's official news agency, said he was 93, although the birth date in most records would have made him 92 when he died. Though Deng retired from his last official post in 1990 and had not been seen in public for three years, he spent much of the past decade orchestrating Chinese politics from behind the scenes with a loosely defined title: "paramount leader."

While he put an end to the iron rice bowl — lifetime jobs for all — he ruled with an iron fist. The military suppression of the 1989 Tiananmen Square pro-democracy protests — believed to have taken place on his final orders — killed hundreds, perhaps thousands, and put a blot on the economic progress Deng had achieved.

He died at 9:08 p.m. (8:08 a.m. EST) of respiratory and circulatory failure brought on by lung infections and the Parkinson's disease that had stricken him long ago, the state-run Xinhua News Agency announced early today.

The first test of Deng's legacy will be whether his handpicked successor, Communist Party General Secretary Jiang Zemin, and the other younger technocrats he installed in the 1990s will weather political maneuvering that is expected to intensify in the coming months.

A meeting of China's national legislature next month, the return of Hong Kong to Chinese rule on July 1 and a party congress to reshuffle top posts due in the fall will provide chances for the politically ambitious.

No one is expected to supplant Jiang, who received a boost in claiming Deng's mantle by being named chairman of Deng's 459-member funeral committee.

Yet the younger aspirants lack Deng's clout, especially with the all important military and the few remaining powerful party elders. Successors will have to continue to manage by building consensus among influential constituencies.

The announcement of Deng's death came about 3 a.m., when most of Beijing was sleeping. It took about six hours before it was broadcast on state-run television or radio, relatively quickly for China. When Mao died in 1976, the announcement took two days. China's Central Committee proclaimed "with profound grief to the whole party, the whole army and the people of all ethnic groups throughout the country that our beloved Comrade Deng... passed away." Xinhua said.

There were no signs that leaders dispatched large numbers of troops or

Turn to DENG, page 3

New technology speeds up taxes

Massachusetts a pioneer in using machines to speed up process

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Department of Revenue has begun the process of computerizing their entire tax collection system, saving everyone time and money.

Yesterday morning, Mitchell Adams, the commissioner of the Department of Revenue, spoke to two finance classes at the University of Massachusetts about the department's use of information technology.

The department began the endeavor in 1995 with a phone filing system called Telefile.

In 1996, 400,000 residents filed through the phone system, over three times the number of those using it in 1995, said Jeffrey Busha, the department's assistant communications director.

Over 1.5 million state tax payers are eligible to use Telefile, and the department expects over 500,000 people to respond this year. People eligible must be filing any version of the W-2 or 1099.

In addition to Telefile, last year the department began using Imaging technology to scan all paper returns capturing about 50 percent more information, said Mitchell Adams, commissioner of the Department of Revenue.

"No one did this before us," Adams said, referring to the imaging technology.

Imaging technology eliminates the need for people to actually type people's returns into the computer, so less mistakes are made, Adams said.

The third part of the department's use of information technologies includes filing through personal computers which began last year. Tax payers can download the software to file electronically from the revenue department's web site at www.magnet.state.ma.us/dor/dorpg.htm.

The use of information technology has saved the department money and resources.

The scanning system alone saved the department about $1.5 million, and eliminated the need for about two acres worth of storage area for paper returns, Adams said.

Overall the use of computer systems helped the department downsize by about 30 percent, said the commissioner. In 1991 the department employed 2,118 people, but employment dropped to 1,530 in 1996.

The use of these technologies has increased collection of delinquent taxes by over $30 million in the past two years.

Overall revenue has increased by about $1 billion between 1995 and 1996, twice as large as revenue increases before Telefile, according to Department of Revenue statistics.

Tax payers are receiving their returns significantly sooner since electronic filing began. In 1994 the year before Telefile started, tax refund turnaround was a mere 10 percent faster than 1991, but last year the turnaround was over 35 percent faster than in 1991.

"We are considered to be in the forefront of this technology," Busha said. "We're ahead of other states using it."

Other states' revenue departments call and even visit the commissioner's office to learn from the Massachusetts system, said both Busha and Adams.

Currently 10 other states have phone filing systems, and one other has a personal computer filing system. In about five years, almost all the 50 states will have some form of electronic tax filing system, predicted Adams.

"We have the reputation right now of being the most advanced tax system in the nation," and we intend to stay that way, Adams said.

The computer systems not only save the Department of Revenue time and money, but can also save taxpayers time.

Filing through the phone takes less than 10 minutes, and returns come in the mail in less than four days, Busha said. For those who may owe the state money, they can even pay electronically using a credit card.

Telefile only requires tax payers to fill out two pages before making the phone call, and is available any time of the day like banking on the phone. The department recommends avoiding filing between 5 p.m. and 9 p.m.

The phone and computer filing systems are safer than sending returns through the mail, Adams said.

The system only allows people access if their personal identification number matches their social security number, and the phone system requires a voice signature.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thursday, Feb. 20

Dance — UMass Hillel will sponsor Israeli Folk Dancing from 8:30–10 p.m. in Chadbourne Residence Hall Basement. No experience necessary, come and learn and have fun.

Lecture — Dr. Vera Whisman, a professor of sociology and women's studies at Hobart and William Smith colleges and author of Queer By Choice, will present a lecture "The Question of Choice." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. Part of the GLBT Lecture series sponsored by the Stonewall Center.

Friday, Feb. 21

Discussion — Dr. Brian Walker, director of the Institute of Irish Studies at the Queen's University of Belfast, will meet with all interested students, faculty and staff from 11 a.m.–noon in Bartlett Hall, room 474, to discuss the new M.A. in Irish Studies program just underway at Queen's. For more info, contact Jim Kelly at the Du Bois Library, 545–0058.

Music — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will hold an Open Mic Night at 8 p.m.

Saturday, Feb. 22

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe will hold Mission Improvable, an improv comedy show, in the Campus Center basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Concert — UMass Hillel will sponsor a concert by Klezamir at 8 p.m. in the Bluewall. Great music and dancing with Klezamir music. Suggested donation $3–5 (all donations will go to charities).

Notices

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance club invites everyone to come dance with us every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15–7 p.m. at 101 Totman Gym. Newcomer Waltz/Chacha class begins Feb. 25. Intermediate/ advanced instruction by a pro every Wednesday, 6:15–7:30 p.m. All instructions are free. For more info, call Kevin Murphy at 549–4036.

Sign–ups — Attention all animal lovers: Sign–ups for the Livestock Classic will be located on the Campus Center Concourse during the week of Feb. 17. Any questions call 546–1942 for more information.

SGA nominations — The Elections Committee would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Government are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.

Auditions — The UMass Theatre Guild will hold auditions for The Heidi Chronicles on Feb. 21 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 22 at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805. There are five female roles and three male roles. Please visit the Theatre Guild office in the Student Union if you have any questions.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in South Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316.for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617) 641–2303.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Support group — A Women in Relationships Therapy Group, an ongoing therapy and support group for women who want to improve difficult relationships with friends, parents, children and colleagues, lovers or partners, led by Rebecca Reid, will meet Mondays from 7:30–9 p.m. in Amherst. Sliding scale fee. For information call 253–5494.

Volunteer work — Womanshelter/Companeras, serving the greater Holyoke, Chicopee area needs volunteers to help battered women and their children begin to live lives free of violence. If you are interested in answering the hotline, advocacy, fundraising, working with teens, or our Legal Emergency Assistance program, call Edith Jennings, Monday–Friday, 8 a.m.–4 p.m. at (413)

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Footprints
Signs of grass and dirt can be seen on the well traveled paths around the Campus Center.

■ harassment

continued from page 1

complaint.

In the second portion of her complaint pertaining to the lawsuit against UMass, Lennon stated that, "UMass failed to take sufficient actions to deter Malaney's actions and provide guidance to Lennon when she complained to faculty members, the department of education administrators and the UMass affirmative–action program."

John Pucci, Lennon's attorney, said, "We are looking forward to our day in court."

Lennon declined comment on the advice of her lawyer, as did Malaney.

Spokesperson for the University Kay Scanlon said, "The University never comments on pending litigations."

Correction

In yesterday's issue, the date for the Barenaked Ladies performance at Pearl Street was incorrect. The actual date of the performance was last night.
The Collegian regrets the error.

Your Ad Could Be Here
Reach an aduience of over 20,000 by advertising with the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

NOTICE

The Newest D.J. and Dancing in the Area AT KAI CHI
Introducing Klub Kai
Thursday, Friday and Saturday Nights 9:30 - 1:30 a.m.
TONIGHT
YOU'RE INVITED TO OUR GRAND OPENING PARTY!!
FRIDAY & SATURDAY-FEBRUARY 21ST& 22ND
FREE FOOD&GIVE-A-WAYS
20% OFF ALL FOOD ITEMS
DRINK SPECIALS
THURSDAY NIGHT International NIGHT Everyone Welcome!
FRIDAY NIGHT Ladies NIGHT No Cover Charge for the Ladies!
SATURDAY NIGHT College HOUSE PARTY All 5 Area Colleges are welcome!
Kai Tai Ice Tea Sex on the Beach & more 12 oz. $2.00
Mt. Farms Mall Rte 9, Hadley 586 - 2774
FRIENDLY • CLEAN
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING • DRAFT BEER SPECIALS
POSITIVE I.D. AND PROPER ATTIRE REQUIRED . . . DRESS TO IMPRESS

TOC Bar & Grill
Munchie Specials Mon - Fri 4 - 7 PM
Thursday Feb. 20 at 7:00pm
UMASS vs. Fordham
A-10 Conference Game
Free Popcorn Draft Beer Drink Specials & Micro Brews
UMass basketball
11th Floor Campus Center
Mon.-Fri. 4pm - 12:30am
Sat. 5pm - 12:30am

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring Bud & Bud Light 30-pack $15.99
Super Buy! Genuine Draft bottles $9.99/case
"MICRO MADNESS" CONTINUES!
Pete's - 10 different flavors including the new "Mardi Gras"!
Devil Mountain - Golden, Black Ale, & "Five Malt Ale"!
Long Shots - Pale Ale, Black Lager, & "Hazelnut Brown"!
Red Hook - E.S.B., I.P.A., Porter, Rye, & "Hefe - Weizer"!
Middlesex - Oatmeal Stout, Brown Ale, & "Raspberry Wheat"!
Mix & Match "TWO" 6/PKS . . . $9.95
Wow!
Vodka 80 $8.99 1.75 Liter
Jose Cuervo gold $11.49 750 ml
Micro Brews 7 flavors (your choice) $3.99 6 pack
Check out Russell's many In-Doors Specials
•All Beers Plus Deposit• OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS
"Something Every Friday"
VENTRILOQUIST TAYLOR MASON
February 21, 1997 8:00pm Bluewall Cafe FREE
Combining music, comedy, ventriloquism, audience participation, and his incurably happy optimism, TAYLOR MASON performs regularly on network and cable television, headlines every major comedy club, and has more than 750 killer college shows to his credit.
STALLONE DAYLIGHT
The movie "Daylight" will be shown immediately after the performance.
For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian.

Craft Center looks to improve

CHRIS CESMER / COLLEGIAN

Joe DiSanto, a senior art major, worked on a project with Karen Gargiulo, an undeclared sophomore, in the Student Union Craft Center.

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

Innovation has swept through the University of Massachusetts' Craft Center this year bringing changes both subtle and dramatic.

Changes range from simple renovations and arrangements of the clay room and work areas improvements in operational and administrative matters. More noticeable among the changes is the addition of Paula Hodecker as the new director at the Center.

Hodecker, once a professor of art at Springfield College, graduated from UMass in 1990 with her BFA in sculpture. After three days on the job, Hodecker says she is learning her way around by following Assistant Director Nam Mokwunye.

Mokwunye, a university student currently working towards a Masters in Fine Arts, has been a staff member in the Craft Center for the last three years.

In addition to Mokwunye, 16 staff members have been responsible for running the Craft Center for the last four months when there was no director present. Mokwunye has been training the staff on not only the basics of running the Craft Center but of how to run a business.

Through increased channels of communication such as e– mail and a new web site created by staff members Bill Porter and Joe Disanto, Craft Center employees are better able to understand the management of the center.

Of her first impression of the staff, Hodecker said "I have been most impressed with the level of commitment and respect among the staff members."

Despite the amount of work the staff has put into improving the center, it is rarely recognized, according to Mokwunye.

"Many times there is a misnomer placed on the Craft Center," said Mokwunye. "The Craft Center is a place to relax for the students who come to use the center, but this is not the case for the student staff, who work hard to keep the center running smoothly."

Although there never seems to be enough staff to supply the 6,000 members who frequently use the Craft Center, the entire staff remains committed to their goal of providing a service to the entire Five College community.

Recent improvements in upholding this goal have been to make the Craft Center more accessible to those students who, due to busy schedules, cannot find time to come in during drop–in hours. In this case, special workshops have been designed to allow groups such as registered student organizations, residential clusters and floor socials to use the Craft Center outside of scheduled times.

"These new workshops allow groups to request any special interests they would like to learn which are not already offered," Mokwunye said.

Mokwunye encourages this new opportunity due to his strong belief that students should be free to create whatever they desire since "humans are limitless."

One old expectation which the Craft Center staff constantly upholds is to keep the cost of the materials cheap which is what makes designing crafts more appealing than buying them in the store.

In addition, new students are always welcome to drop in and see what the Craft Center has to offer. The Craft Center is free to UMass students who are only required to purchase the materials they need. New students are encouraged to sign up for workshops at 11 a.m. sharp on Tuesdays, which costs between $5 – $15, so that they may be able to get more one– on–one help, but they are not required to take a workshop.

Already 25 years old, the Craft Center was first established when Penny Worman, a traveling craft teacher, picked up a hitchhicker who told her about a job position at UMass. The Craft Center has persisted since then and there are few craft centers as dynamic and extensive within the nation.

Future goals for the Craft Center include opening up to the Pioneer Valley community. The online address to access the Craft Center is: www.umass.edu/rso/craft.ctr/

■ rally

continued from page 1

the University Store is preposterous," Martin said.

"We don't want this to be us versus the students," Martin said of the union members. "There is considerable room for cooperation."

SGA Sen. William Serwetman (Southwest Area) spoke pro–privatization, claiming that the University has a monopoly on campus business.

"Right now the University has a simple monopoly," Serwetman said. "The can charge whatever they want, because there's no competition."

Serwetman said that the money generated from private businesses could "help pay for a new Student Union complex."

Tony Gno Baptist, a co–manager at People's Market and a member of the Board of Student Businesses, addressed the concerns of student businesses as he spoke against privatization.

"What we have here is a goldmine — a co–curricular education where students can develop business skills," Baptist said. "Why should we allow well established companies to come in and compete with out student–run businesses?"

Baptist said that UMass is a learning institution, and that if privatization comes students are going to lose jobs and experience in running businesses.

During the open–mic session which followed the scheduled speakers, students were allowed two minutes to express their views and ask questions.

Peter Kilbourne, associate speaker of the SGA, challenged the statements of the pro–privatization speakers.

"Not one thing they said is true," Kilbourne said. "Students will not be paid $7 an hour to work at Barnes & Noble. Let's stop dreaming here, folks."

Kilbourne reiterated the threat privatization could pose to student–run businesses.

"This is the last University I know in this country with student–run businesses," Kilbourne said.

He added that if privatization resulted in the closure of student businesses, "students are not going to learn how to manage, not going to learn how to buy or sell."

■ SGA

continued from page 1

Sadlowski, said "you need to be represented when a case is brought against you. This is no place to publicly slander someone. We are supposed to be doing things for the students."

Sadlowski was unavailable for comment.

"I hope this issue is not resolved in the Senate," Tirrell said. "It needs to be dealt with through the Judiciary. I don't think [the Senate] is the proper place to resolve allegations of one senator against another."

Pellegrino said, "This will be resolved. Too many people invested time for it not to be. We are going to handle it the best way we can."

By Victoria GrovesAli Anastasio, member of the UMass Baha'i Club, said "[The conference] is open to the whole campus; every volce is of importance.

"The Baha'i faith is an "independent world faith to safeguard rights of the human race," Anastasio said.

The Senate also unanimously voted to confirm the President Maurice Caston Powe's appointment of Frank Mozell to the position of Secretary of Public Policy and Relations. This position was vacated last week when Peter Kilbourne assumed the position of Associate Speaker.

■ Deng

continued from page 1

police posted around the city. About 10 uniformed guards in green padded coats, carrying AK-47s, stood watch outside the alley to Deng's home near the palace where China's emperors ruled for 500 years.

The extra security likely was aimed at protecting the top leaders and aging revolutionaries who are expected to visit Deng's family in coming days.

The funeral committee announced a mourning period, to begin immediately and end after a memorial meeting, Xinhua said. It gave no date for the ceremony, but the committee said no foreign dignitaries will be invited.

Plaudits from abroad, however, poured in immediately.

President Clinton called Deng "an extraordinary figure on the world stage" for the past two decades and credited him with being "the driving force" behind China's decision to normalize relations with the United States.

Confirmation of Deng's death came after days of rumors that his health had worsened — not an unusual occurrence in recent years. Deng succeeded Mao Tse-tung in the nearly two-year power struggle that followed the revolutionary leader's death in 1976. China was riven by fear and poverty after the decade-long Cultural Revolution, an experiment in radical policies during which millions were persecuted or killed for political reasons.

Deng immediately put China on the road to a market economy, seeking foreign investment and encouraging the world's most populated country to set about making money.

"It doesn't matter if a cat is black or white, as long as it catches mice," was his most famous saying.

He abolished farming communes, allowed some private enterprises and established special economic zones to produce goods for export. Under his reforms in the 1980s, peasants and workers could afford such luxuries as televisions, refrigerators and washing machines for the first time. Many city residents now own private cars and mobile phones.

Deng, who married three times and had five children, was born to a landowner in the southwest province of Sichuan on Aug. 22, 1904. At 16, he went to France on a work-study program and joined the Communist Party.

Back in China, he became a guerrilla leader and party officer. Purged briefly in the 1930s for backing Mao's unorthodox guerrilla tactics, he joined the 1934-35 "Long March" flight from Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists.

Noted for his sharp intellect and superior organizational skills, Deng became a political commissar in the Communist army, fighting the Japanese from 1937-45 and the Nationalists in the 1945-49 civil war.

Three years after the 1949 founding of the People's Republic of China, Deng became vice premier. By 1956, he was on the Politburo Standing Committee — the most powerful ruling body.

But Deng's economic pragmatism, and his ties to Mao's rivals within the Communist leadership twice put him in political disfavor during the Cultural Revolution. Sent to work at a tractor factory, he returned to the leadership in 1973, only to be purged once again in 1976.

In 1977, he was rehabilitated and once again named vice premier, which gave him the power he needed to get his reform plans moving. Former U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who worked with Deng and China during much of the 1980s, said Deng was tempered by his days as a Communist guerrilla and never lost sight of them.

"He could be tough. He could also be brutal," Shultz said. "And you could see the spark of creativity that allowed him to put China on a new and productive path. He has transformed China and thereby has had an immense impact on the shape of the future."

Xinhua ended its lengthy obituary urging future generations of Chinese to remember that: "Eternal glory to Comrade Deng Xiaoping."

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan
COMING SOON!
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.- Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692
Shop Scott's & Save Lot$! THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE
Corona 12-packs bottles $8.39 +dep.
Busch & Busch Light bar bottles $9.49 +dep.
Latrobe Craft Beers 6-packs $4.99 +dep.
LowenBreau 12-pack bottles $6.99 +dep.
Milwaukees Best (Reg. & Light), 30-packs $9.99 +dep.
Red Hook 6-packs $4.99 +dep.
Check out our Other Great In Store Specials
Tangueray Gin 750ml $12.49
Absolut Citron 750ml $13.99
Southern Comfort 750ml $7.99
Midori Melon Liqueur 750ml $13.99
Cuervo Gold Tequila 750ml $10.99
Bacardu Limon 750ml $8.99
Go Women
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER Tele-Check for your personal check
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
BEST BEER BARGAINS IN TOWN
Mike's Big One
16 ounce Bud Ice $1.00
16 ounce Bud or Bud Lite $1.50
Cocktail of the Week
Midori Sour
Thursday Nite Raffle Nite
GREAT PRIZES
Mike's Tee Shirts and Mad Money
Friday Afternoon Come Meet the Black Haus Girls at our T.G.I.F. Party
Free Appetizers 5 to 7

New at Alfredo's
POSTERS - A variety of subjects ranging from your favorite professional athlete to exotic landscapes.
SPORTS PHOTOS - Up close shots that capture the heat of the moment
REASONABLY PRICED AND CONVENIENTLY LOCATED IN AMHERST CENTER
39 S. PLEASANT ST.
413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareyu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Editor's Note: This is part 7 of a series commemorating Black History Month. Future stories will be about W.E.B. Du Bois and the future of affirmative action.

Black Poets Guild

The year was 1994 and I was doing a leadership conference at the University of Texas. Throughout the week I listened to a plethora of different speakers and lecturers. I grew quite bored with all of them. The last day of the conference, we were scheduled to hear poet and master of the spoken word, Reg E. Gains.

At the time, I didn't know much about poetry or what it meant to be a poet. When I thought of poetry, I recalled what I had been taught in school. I knew that Shakespeare was a poet and that Edgar Allen Poe wrote a few.

I would also recall how I could never understand what they were saying. The type of English that they used was confusing at times. How was I supposed to know what "or hear Triton blow his wreathed horn" meant?

Humphrey brown III

Who the hell was Triton? Needless to say, I was not enthused about hearing another poet get on stage and sonnet me into a deep sleep.

Such was not the case with this poet. Gains was not the kind of traditional poet I had been conditioned to know. He didn't speak in that King James version kind of tongue. He spoke like I did and talked about things that I could understand and relate to. From economics to Air Jordans, Gains spit out poetry that I could get into and understand.

I had never heard anything like that before. I didn't even know that we had a stake in the world of poetry. We were never taught about black poets in school.

As it turns out, we've been writing poetry for centuries. During slavery, we wrote folk poetry. These were poems that told of the peace found in catching some shade under a tree and the chaos that followed if the slave master found you there.

They were poems that expressed the desire of slaves to one day be free of the chains that bound them. Folk poetry is the root of literary poetry, like that of Langston Hughes and James Weldon Johnson.

The first literary black poets tried to write like white poets for white audiences. They sent their poems to white publications and entered them in white poetry contests. Phillis Wheatley is a well-known poet of this era. Wheatley had a tendency to imitate Poe and his style.

As time went on, black poets began to step away from mainstream poetry and develop a new style of their own. During the Harlem Renaissance, poets like Langston Hughes and Jean Toomer set the model for literary black poetry. Their mastery and use of colloquial black speech and form influenced the likes of Robert Hayden, Margaret Danner and Gwendolyn Brooks.

During the '50s and '60s, black poetry took another turn. Black poets used the techniques and styles of the post– Renaissance era and applied them to the new state of black existence around them. With all the turmoil and strife that was plaguing African–Americans at that time, black poets wrote about what they saw and what it meant to live in hard times.

Those four black girls blown up in that Alabama church remind me of five hundred middle passage blacks, in a net, under water
in a Charleston Harbor
so redcoats wouldn't find them.
Can't find what you can't see can you?
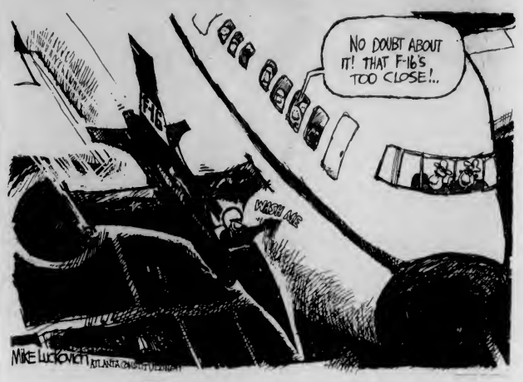
–unknown

The black poets of that time used poetry to express what it meant to be black in a racist Amerikkka. Nikki Giovanni, Michael Harper and Yusef Iman were poets of the '60s that have a major influence on black poets today.

Of course, no one can deny the impact that Maya Angelou has had on the advancement of black poetry. She is, without a doubt, the most renowned poet of our time. Much of Angelou's poetry transcends the boundaries of race and touches the heart of the woman's struggle. Her Phenomenal Woman has been read thousands of times over by white and black women alike.

There are a number of black poets on the loose and making moves today. Cats like D–Knowledge, Touch of R.E.A.L.I.T.Y. and (as aforementioned) Reg E. Gains are some of the latest players in the black poets guild.

You can also find a host of black poets in a little musical arena called hip–hop. Today's rappers are some of the most influential poets in modern times. Never has this been more evident than when every major news publication in the country, observed the passing of one of hip–hop's greatest street poets, Tupac Shakur.



When my heart can beat
no more
I hope to die for a principle or a belief that I have lived for
I will die before my time because I already feel the shadow's depth
So much I wanted to accomplish before I reached my death
I have come to grips with the possibility and wiped the last tear from my eyes
I loved all who were positive in the event of my demise
– 2Pac, 1992

Today, hip–hop's influence can be seen on television shows, movies and advertising. Although many have tried to stop hip–hop's growth and acceptance, it still remains a part of black culture and an example of modern poetry at its finest.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Peru in context

For the past two months I have been monitoring the coverage of the crisis in Peru. Members of a Marxist guerilla army, the MRTA, have been holding 72 hostages, primarily Peruvian business and military leaders, inside the residence of the Japanese Ambassador. Their first demand is the release of several members of their group from notoriously brutal Peruvian prisons. Their second demand, more vague but far more important, involves the roll back of neoliberal economic policies.

The American mainstream media have vehemently suppressed discussion of this second demand in order, I suspect, to downplay this protest as an isolated incident. To do so, however, ignores the wave of protest against neoliberalism that has been waged for 15 years by community groups, unions, environmental and human rights organizations, and scholars around the globe. The actions of the MRTA reflect wide–spread disgust with these policies throughout Latin America.

Sam McAfee

Neoliberalism can be understood as a belief in the central role of the market in an economy with as little government intervention as possible (derived from economic liberalism, not political liberalism). This may sound familiar to readers, since conservative economists in the United States have been pushing for much the same. In the developing world, however, the proponents of these policies are the two international financial institutions, the World Bank (WB) and the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

Both institutions were set up by the allies after World War II. Every country that contributed to the original fund has a vote proportional to the donated amount. The United States, having donated the most, dominates the policy directions of both the WB and IMF. Originally designed to aid in the reconstruction of Europe, the WB had begun to lend money to most of the developing world by the late 1960s.

When, in the early 1980s, much of Latin America experienced a massive debt crisis, the IMF stepped in to provide emergency loans for repayment of the debt. Attached to these loans was the condition that "clients" abide by stringent economic reforms known in neoliberal language as Structural Adjustment.

Under the Structural Adjustment program, a government is expected to do anything that frees up revenue to insure repayment. This usually included any public goods upon which the impoverished population desperately depends. Targeted for cuts were food subsidies, health care and education. Since the IMF is thought of as a seal of credit worthiness by all other financial institutions, to refuse their "help" would mean economic siege.

Governments were encouraged to attract foreign investment and shift to a more privatized economy. Relying on imported food from the United States and expensive private health care and education, the standard of living of the vast majority of the population fell through the floor. As the public sector was cut, many were laid off swelling the ranks of the unemployed and driving down wages. Less government also meant less environmental and safety regulations. Prime conditions for multinational corporations and abysmal living conditions for workers have been the main results of neoliberalism in Latin America.

In addition, neoliberalism has had, and usually does have, a disastrous impact on the environment. One of the ways governments are forced to come up with revenue is by auctioning off rights to oil and timber in their countries. Last year, I wrote a column detailing the destruction caused by Texaco in the Ecuadorian rainforest. The Ecuadorian government allows this not because they are evil, but because they have no choice.

As I alluded to in the beginning of this column, these so–called reforms have not been without protest. People have engaged in a range of rebellious actions from community organizing to armed struggle. However, with the full support of the United States on the side of neoliberals in power, many protesters don't stand a chance. After all, it was neoliberal programs against which the Sandanistas in Nicaragua were rebelling. The Contras were trained and paid by the U.S. military to restore a government that would be friendly to U.S. economic interests.

In many Latin American nations grassroots organizing against neoliberalism has been similarly repressed, and Peru is a perfect example. President Fujinori assumed power in 1989 with the help of the military and executing dissent, dissolved the meddlesome democratic institution called "Congress." This same autocratic dictator has been supported by Republicans and Democrats alike as a champion of economic reform. That champion has starved his own people to fatten his pockets.

It is intriguing that the policies prescribed by the IMF, and supported by the U.S. government, have benefitted multinational corporations to such a great extent. Or is it?

Although it has not been as harmful, the same thing has been happening in the developing world as more and more government services are cut to pay off our debt to treasury bond holders (the vast majority of people who hold US bonds are already filthy rich).

It is worth noting, in order to avoid confusion, that neoliberalism is not just in Latin America. The authors of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which has cost thousands of jobs and made already rich corporations much richer, were neoliberals. The legislators who give UMass less funding so we are forced to take money from the private sector are also neoliberals.

We live in a country whose lawmakers and business leaders are consistently hostile to the needs of its population. They would rather build prisons than schools. They would rather us all invest in the stock market rather than providing for us with our own taxes. And they would really prefer if we just didn't notice. Have a nice day.

Sam McAfee is a Collegian columnist.

Let's play nice, shall we, kids?

You know who you are, so there's no need for this to get any uglier than it has to. This will be kept as short and sweet as Augustus Glump in the chocolate river.

This Friday, when patrons, with me amongst them, go to either of two mall–housed local movie theaters, there had better be one John Singleton film starring one ex–Marcellus Wallace and one ex–Midnight Cowboy — or, as Joe Montana look–alike Peter Weller said in Paul Verhoeven's last good film, "There will be trouble."

C. Taylor Conner

I apologize for making obscure Robocop references, but the recent trend by the two Hadley film houses of relegating black films to Springfield theaters truly plunges beneath my epidermis. From what I've noted, there is little evidence to suggest against the racially motivated nature of these actions.

For instance, unless you're trying to open an F. Gary Gray flick in French Lick, Ind., chances are his pictures will rake in loads of poppin' fresh dough for your theater. His first effort, Friday, nearly quadrupled its production cost — and that's not just due to the so–called "urban market."

My bet is that, from the S'westiest of S'west boys to the most reclusive of Northeast engineers, the frequency and popularity of Friday screenings on Housing cable has caused just about every kid at UMass to know at least one Chris Tucker quip.

Perhaps theater owners should take this into consideration the next time something like Cutthroat Island looks like an enticing draw. Can anyone get in the ring and recall any line spoken by Geena Davis? Frank Langella? Even Matthew Modine (the guy who seems to appear in my every other column — I think I have a problem)?

Didn't think so, ye film buffs. Like many of us, you'd get knocked the f—— out on that Trivial Pursuit question.

Ironically, however, both Cutthroat Island director Renny Harlin and Gray released new films — The Long Kiss Goodnight and Set It Off — this past fall. One guess who got the nod for the cineplex play around these parts, and the first two guesses don't count.

I pose another challenging question: Guess whose film made the larger margin of profit when it was all said and done? One guess, and the first five don't count.

Personally, my guess is that some folks never learn.

Equally as disturbing, however, is what I've noted happens with area releases of films by Spike Lee. You know, the black filmmaker. Dubbed as the "black Woody Allen" by some, the prolific Lee sure doesn't get the same treatment up here as the bespectacled incestuous one.

Now, don't get me wrong — I like Allen's films, for the most part. Hell, I even sat through Scenes from a Mall. But what I don't understand is why his low–budget, deeply personal, critically acclaimed works premiere out in Northampton, where they're sure to enjoy a lengthy run by virtue of a highbrow crowd, while Spike's low–budget, deeply personal, critically acclaimed works are doomed to open to a crowd who've just spent an hour in line for tickets to Dante's Peak?

M–M–M–Mookie, it doesn't seem fair, does it?

In fact, Lee's last film, Get on the Bus, was rushed so quickly out of Five College Land, I hear some folks had to travel to Springfield just to catch the second half of the movie.

What this whole charade all boils down to is the consumer base these theaters want to include — and, of course, those they want to exclude. All an owner needs to hear is one news report of an isolated incident involving blacks in a Detroit or Kansas City movie theater, and suddenly something as light–hearted as the upcoming Booty Call will not be on the bill for the weekend openings.

Employing the same logic, most bars would go out of business if they tried to determine and alienate each and every type of "problem" customer who might start any one of the average evening's series of brawls.

So now, my attention again returns to you, les deux theatres. Will you take the easy road and fell Singleton's Rosewood with a reactionary axe? If you do so, you and this branch of the AMC chain border on thinly veiled censorship for those without access to faraway theater locations.

If you do the right thing (hmm, that'd be a great movie title), all credit to you. Area film lovers without cars will thank you.

Just don't get carried away and try to suck us in with a digitally remastered cut of Phat Beach, okay?

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Escape to the Stars

I was seven years old the first time it happened.

I sat in a darkened theater and watched as sights and sounds I could have never imagined in my few years lit up the screen in front of me. I had seen Star Wars for the first time.

Bob Dunn

Yes, it's just a movie. Yes, it set an uncomfortable standard for blockbusters to follow. Yes, some people take it too seriously, but I still saw it and knew nothing would be the same afterwards.

I realize that I'm dating myself, but in 1977 there was no better place for a kid who had dreams of being an astronaut and someday stepping foot on the moon or Mars than planted on a canvas seat, popcorn and soda in hand and watching a far off galaxy duke it out for a couple of hours.

I was 27 the second time It happened.

I thought I was going back because I was a fan. I thought I was going in order to have the experience of seeing it on a big screen again. I own the films on video. When I was a kid, I collected the toys and so on. But only in retrospect, do I think that maybe I went for different reasons altogether.

The first time, Carter was President, gas prices prevented traveling often or far, and movies were something my parents went to, unless it was specifically for kids (Disney fare, etc.) and the nation was still reeling from the fallout of Watergate. Not that any of this mattered to me at the time. All I knew was that someone else felt the same way about adventures and heroics and breaking the bonds of Earth as I did. Someone else knew, someone else understood.

I was seven years old and so anxious to be let in on the story that I tried to plow through Lucas's dense and sometimes obtuse novelization of the film. I never made it past the first chapter, but I carried that book around with me like a talisman. If I was feeling bored or began to lose interest in multiplication, I'd crack it open and gaze at the photos from the film that were placed in the middle. I can still remember the corner that had teeth marks embedded in it, from where my dog had gotten a hold of it, and the indentations made by a ball point pen when I needed something to write on.

I was seven and it would still be six years before I had to face the loss of a loved one. Eight years before I lost my virginity. Nine years before I got my first car. Ten years before I wrecked said automobile. Eleven years before I had to cope with divorce. Twelve years before I joined the Navy. Fourteen years before I went to war. Sixteen years before I came back to school, and 20 years before I fell in love and was making plans to graduate from college.

At the risk of stating the obvious, things are much different now than they were back in 1977. Now, Jimmy Carter hops all over the globe, playing Monty Hall, cutting deals between world leaders before breakfast. Gas is still expensive but there doesn't seem to be a crisis–inducing shortage (yet), kids movies rarely make it to theaters, opting for the mass–produced straight–to–video market and Watergate has become little more than a yardstick to measure the scandal of the day.

Now, instead of having nothing to worry about except spelling bees and keeping my "good" shirt clean, I'm deluded with car repairs, grade–phobia, relationship bumps, graduation plans, resume dilemmas, job stress, money woes, coping with five people living in a space more appropriate for two or three, and having to get up some mornings and come up with a good reason to drag myself to class.

It's then that I realize that, I didn't just want to go back and see the movie again, I needed to. I needed to go back and be seven in a dark theater again. I needed to be whisked far, far away and see a world (albeit, imagined) where not only were good and evil clearly defined, but where the good guys actually win sometimes. A world where faith in yourself and your friends is enough to get by.

Afterwards, the lights came up and we were unceremoniously dumped back into reality. Evil was trounced, good had triumphed, the new footage looked great and my foot was stuck in some kid's old bubble gum. You may not be able to go home again, but I suppose you can drive by every once in a while.

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

BROADCast VIEWS

RADIO RADIO RADIO

a brief history of modern rock radio

"It's the same, same song. The DJ sucks –– makes me sad"
— R.E.M., "Radio Song"

1989 to 1991. That was the heyday of alternative rock radio as we know it. It's all been down hill ever since.

Think about it — at the turn of the decade, R.E.M., the Cure, and the Replacements, three of the biggest underground acts of the '80s, were beginning to cross over into the mainstream. A decade of shoestring existence on the fringes of popular music was starting to pay off for both artists and stations. The sounds first broadcast on college campuses had spawned a movement which was now influencing the corporate domain of album–oriented rock (AOR) radio. Vindication was at hand. And then that song came out. And that album. And everything immediately changed.

Josh Hendrickson

As cliched as it may seem, so far, where you were when you first heard that Kurt Cobain blew his face off is to the '90s as where you were when JFK was killed was to the '60s. However, how many of you remember where you were the first time you heard "Smells Like Teen Spirit"? I was visiting a friend at American University over Columbus Day weekend in 1991. His roommate had just bought Nevermind. The three of us spent the whole weekend listening to the damn song over and over. It was a truly bizarre moment — something akin to punk rock was being played on commercial radio. By Christmas, Nevermind had bumped Michael Jackson off the top of the charts. The message was clear –– there was a new sheriff in town.

Turn to HISTORY, page 6

Strict formats limit radio possibilities

Alright, use your imagination. We're in a car — a big car, one that can fit thousands of us. It's sort of an older car, mid to late '80s model, with only an AM–FM band radio. CD players and tape decks constantly available with cars would come later, in the '90s. We are driving in the '90s in an '80s car, and all we've got is a radio. It's Friday night, around 9 p.m. — peak listening time.

Joshua Boyd

What to do, what to do. No choice of which tape or CD to toss in to customly score your little journeys. All we have is the radio. Somebody shouts out far in the back of the room, "I want Tuvan throat–singing!" Sorry, buddy, no can do. Not unless you tune in to such–n–such a radio show at such–n– such a time when Neptune is aligned with Mars. Some fellow shouts out "how about some dissonant free jazz noise?" That would be a hard stretch, too. "Polka? It's Friday night — that's polka night, isn't it?" Well, buddy, I hate to break it to you, but you've got to wait 'til Saturday morning on WMUA.

Look, people, I'll give you the choices that the big radio corporations leave us. Here they are, clear as day:

• Top 40: yes, that's right; Billboard's charts blasted to your radios mostly around the clock on stations in this format. This type of radio is for people who love to get tortured by the same 40 songs many times in one day. The variations aren't there, either: it's mostly R&B, whether you take it hard or soft. They throw in some rap and

Turn to FORMATS, page 6

Student–run radio offers high diversity

Adam Dlugacz

What's the biggest difference between college radio and mainstream radio? Sure, college radio has less commercials and the DJs are all your peers, but there has to be something that makes WMUA (91.1 FM) so different then what you can hear on regular radio.

Perhaps the biggest difference between WMUA and any of your local stations is the wide variety of different shows that showcase a plethora of musical styles and tastes. Most radio stations do not incorporate different styles of music throughout the day. As most people can attest, it leads to a lot of Hootie and The Blowfish, Dave Matthews Band, No Doubt, and when they're feeling racy maybe a little Snoop Doggy Dogg or Green Day. This can be frustrating to the average listener, especially if their taste in music runs away from the mainstream.

Turn to WMUA, page 6

ARTS & LIVING Thursday

Layout & Design by Marc Dionne
Illustrations by Matthew Mitchell

■ formats

continued from page 5

then No Doubt or The Cardigans (the two flashes in the pan of the moment) for a little variety, because those are non-R&B songs that marketing has pile-driven into everybody's heads making them think they like them.

• Alt-Rock: The hot '90s format (like disco was for '70s radio... and, oh my, disco's dead too, what a coincidence!) Bush, Silverchair, Live, No Doubt (because, after all, they aren't just a Top-40 band. What eclecticism in a band!), and something "old" by Nirvana for the sake of some history, and then... well, back to Bush and Silverchair, and then some Weezer and Nada Surf (Oops, I'm sorry, that last band is done for now. "Popular" is so yesterday!). The marketing for this format thrives on what the high-school kids that pierce themselves right and left and hang around at the mall will like.

• Easy Listening/Soft Rock: Come on — Michael Bolton, Celine Dion, No Doubt ("Don't Speak" finds itself in some weird company, I'll tell you!), Whitney Houston, the soft side of Bryan Adams. Gotta love it. Especially when "It's All Coming Back To Me" is played about 4 times in the space of an eight-hour workday. And it can't be any other song from Celine. It must be that one! No risks taken! Can't afford it! The listener will thrive only on the familiar! Also, throw in some hints about the work-day. Keep repeating the words "work" and "office" to hypnotize people into thinking this is right, this is good! Work music! Ever hear of the "versification" in 1984? That's what you're listening to.

• Classic Rock: Only "In-A-Gadda-Da-Vida" from Iron Butterfly. Only "I Want You To Want Me" from Cheap Trick. They can afford a little variety from Led Zeppelin, though... and Pink Floyd, too. They can play "Money" and "Time" and even "Another Brick In The Wall, Pt. II" (by my word, I've only heard the mellower "... Pt. I" a few times, and the harder "Pt. III" never). They play lots of Aerosmith, too — gotta support the local boys, right? But where's "Little Miss Lover" from Jimi Hendrix, Mr. Classic- rock radio man? "Well, c'mon — don't we give you enough with 'All Along The Watchtower' and 'Purple Haze'? What more do you want from us?" Sorry for asking. Wouldn't want to play something you've never played before, would ya?

• Country: First of all, modern country screams two words to me: hair spray. The production on it gets too slick and bright, very poppy, and there is just no originality in most of these people. Plus, most Country radio stations supported the whole Billy Ray Cyrus thing, so that tells you something right there. No soul. Let's all just go line-dancing and forget about it, right, Mr. D.J. man? Then again, most of y'all Northeasterners just ain't into country, are ya? Hmm, city folk. What can you do?

• College radio: The savior. College radio is mostly divided into separate radio shows, and each show usually presents something a little different. College radio also gives a break from playlists and strict formats. Even during genre- specific shows, you typically don't get too much repetition. Heck, you can even hear Tuvan throat-singing on world- music shows! But, if you're away from a college-generated radio station, you're mostly bound to the four above.

Basically, my point here is that generally no matter where you go on FM radio, you'll end up encountering a format. Formatted radio lives like parasites off of playlists, constricting their ability to bring music to the people. Yes, they do play music, but only certain music that they're told to play by record companies.

How many times have you heard "The Crunge," from Led Zeppelin's Houses Of The Holy album, on classic-rock radio? Barely any, right? Okay, how many times have you heard "The Ocean?" Tons! Heard any other Cardigans' songs lately? How many people have tuned in during peak listening hours (7 a.m.-hidnight) and heard klezamir music? Or crazy free jazz? When stations do play jazz, most stay safe with bebop-like tunes.

Radio is a powerful media, and it should use its power of broadcasting to many people to let them really know what's out there. De-format the airwaves, please. Otherwise, to be cool, everyone will continue to have to follow Elvis Costello's cynical advice: "You'd better do what you were told/you'd better listen to the radio!"

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

From college radio faves to topping the Top 40 — Nirvana.

COURTESY CHARLES PETERSON

■ history

continued from page 5

Nirvana did not kill the alternative rock format, though. The opportunistic parasites at the major record labels did. Overnight, hair metal was rendered obsolete. It had been the only form of guitar-based music on the Billboard charts for much of the late-'80s/early '90s. So I suppose you can't blame the labels for what happened next, but they're the easiest target. First it was Seattle and the "grunge" sound. Nirvana led to Pearl Jam, who in turn led to Alice In Chains and Soundgarden and WHAM! — you've gone from post- punk to post-Zeppelin in three easy steps.

All of this happened so fast that the sorry bastards holding the positions of program directors at radio stations didn't even see it coming. By '93, the majors had firmly entrenched themselves into the alternative market. And they were signing bands like it was going out of style. Which, actually, it was. Any band with a goatee was snatched up, but only a few actually sold records. Grunge had peaked; Pearl Jam issued a moratorium on touring due to their Ticketmaster stance and the final nail in the coffin, so to speak, came when Cobain did himself in.

So what was the antidote to the grunge hang-over which palled the industry throughout the spring of '94? If you look at it from a pop-cultural standpoint, it took an assassination to prepare America for the Beatles; the country needed a massive, light-weight distraction and pick-me-up. The same thing was true to a degree in the music biz post-Cobain. Things had become too bleak. Instead of musicians on smack moaning about child abuse, how about kids stoned silly on pot and speed singing happy pop songs about masturbation, paranoia, and just being stoned silly on pot and speed? Enter Green Day.

And so Green Day, the Offspring, and Rancid all found success. The "new-punk" wave crested for about a year until that too inevitably crashed. And Bush and Silverchair and recycled grunge crap were pushed on the stations, who at this point couldn't do a damn thing because of the flooded market. Alternative stations were no longer anomalies. Competition grew stiffer as more established AOR stations in their region began to play some of the same artists, often completely changing their formats to what was now known as "modern rock" (thankfully, the "alternative" tag was dropped). Even such underground stalwarts as Sebadoh and Pavement had been sucked up into the radio vacuum. The well was dry.

So who knows what the next big thing is gonna be? With all the geek-pop outfits signed in the wake of the success of Weezer stiffing royally, it seems the focus is now shifting to the U.K. This year will bring new albums from Oasis, Blur, Radiohead, and Pulp. And you can bet they're gonna be huge over on this side of the pond. The situation within the "modern rock" format has become so stifling and dictated that it is nearly impossible, except for very isolated incidents, for stations to break bands themselves. Thankfully, though, format-free college radio still exists, and hopefully the pendulum will swing back. As R.E.M. sang in "Radio Free Europe," the song which started the underground radio revolution back in 1981, "Radio station — decide yourself."

John Hendrickson is a Collegian columnist.

■ WMUA

continued from page 5

WMUA provides the listeners with a wide range of music shows to choose from. There is a show hosted by Johnny Hush that deals strictly with jungle, trance, hardcore and every other style of techno that you could imagine. There is also a hip-hop show called Five Piece Chicken Finger, an alternative show, and even a ska show. What is perhaps most special about WMUA is the Neato Punk Rock show hosted by Melissa Emert airing Monday night from 12 a.m. – 3 p.m. The show is a nice break from the processed punk we hear on the radio. On this show you can hear anything from Screeching Weasel to Agnostic Front and pretty much anything in between.

We had a chance to have a few words with The Neato Punk Rock show host, Melissa Emert.

"I've been involved in the punk scene since sophomore year in high school and it's a big part of my life and I want to play the music I really enjoy for other people. I'd also like to promote bands from the West Coast and other areas here on the East Coast," said Emert, when asked why she does the show.

To make her show stand out from the other radio shows Emert said, "I bring a different, more West Coast approach to the scene out here and incorporate that with the sound out here. I try to promote local bands on the show and have different people come down and play the punk that they listen to as guest DJ's."

According to Emert, having bands on her show "let's people hear the bands for free and the band can answer people's questions over the phone so that they can get to know the bands."

Emert feels that the biggest things that separate her radio show and WMUA from commercial radio is, "On my show I don't have to play the bands that make the most money or are the most popular in the mainstream. I can play a wide variety from a band that has five fans to a band that tours all over the world. So I can put all the bands on the same level, unlike mainstream radio. WMUA offers so many different types of music that you won't hear on mainstream radio because there's such a wide variety of listeners who can now listen to things that they normally wouldn't be able to hear."

Emert is an excellent representative of the attitude displayed by WMUA, providing an excellent service for the students of UMass. Why listen to the mainstream radio when you can hear what you want to on WMUA?

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

HAIR SKIN NAILS
STYLES BY DEBORAH
•HAIRCARE •WAXING
•FACIALS •MANICURES
•PEDICURES •TANNING
•FREE HAIR & SKIN CONSULTATIONS
549-5610
65 University drive, Amherst

$5.00 OFF Consultation Style HAIRCUT Shampoo + Dry
with Cheryl -Coupon expires 3/3/97

ONE FREE TANNING VISIT with Any Other Salon Service

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO $799 Roundtrip
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs/immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
347 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

NEW VENUE
EQUINOX PRODUCTIONS PRESENTS
U.S. CLUB TOUR '97
NEW VENUE
Saturday, February 22, 1997
At Club Metro, 492 Pleasant St. Northampton, MA
This will be a filmed event distributed to MTV.
Sponsored by
THE UMASS DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Newspaper.
MDC
CLUB METRO NORTHAMPTON, MA
• 18 to party 21 to drink
• Tickets $10 at the door
• Doors Open 9:00 p.m.
• Music by D.J. JUSTIN TIME from NYC's The Tunnel, Polladeum & Club Expo
• For more information call 413-582-9898
Guest Host T. STYLES, one of the most popular entertainers in the United States and abroad. STYLES has appeared on MTV, INSIDE EDITION (NBC), RICKI LAKE and ROLONDA, among others.
"U.S. CLUB TOUR is New, Exciting & Explosive. The music is electrifying. STYLES is phenominal!"
-Peter Roth
Washington Square News
U.S. CLUB TOUR is a copyright of Equinox Productions.

The island of Jamaica: a tropical getaway

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

With Spring Break less than a month away, now is the time to plan for a getaway from the Happy Valley. Due to the attempted strike by American Airlines pilots, the airline has drastically reduced the price of airfare to the Caribbean and tropical destinations such as Cancun, Bahamas, Puerto Rico and Jamaica.

Described by Christopher Columbus as "the fairest land mine eyes have ever seen," Jamaica has remained the crown jewel of the Caribbean for over 500 years since Columbus' "discovery" of the island Xaymaca, named by the indigenous Arawak people.

Due to disease and exploitation, the Arawak population disappeared completely but the Arawak's peaceful, fun-loving, easy going spirit has never left the island of Jamaica. To this day, the beaches of Jamaica are filled with relaxed, tanned tourists and locals preaching the word of Rastafarianism.

From the music of the island's national hero, Bob Marley, to the political ideology of Marcus Garvey, Jamaica has a deep rooted history that predates Columbus. Unlike much of the typical spring break options, Jamaica is filled with a culture that is as exciting as its most beautiful beaches.

While Kingston is Jamaica's center of industry and population, most of the popular vacation spots appear on the Northern coast including: Ochos Rios, Montego Bay, Port Antonio and Negril.

Of these beach destinations, Negril and Montego Bay have shared the enormous Spring Break crowds that flood the sandy white beaches every March.

Located on the western tip of the island, the tiny town of Negril (population: 1,166) is known for its seven-mile strip of white beach — the longest continuous strip in Jamaica.

Tourists will find several quality bars and motels situated right on the beach. What you won't find are tall buildings; Negril has passed a law prohibiting any structure to be built taller than the tallest palm tree. Efforts like this preserve Negril's charm — even when overrun with college students.

As evident by the minuscule population, Negril is a young town. Up until 30 years ago, there was little more than a lighthouse. But legend has it that hippies in the early '70s fell in love with the area's beach and laid back attitudes of the locals. And Negril the tourist sight was born.

Throughout the year the Negril nightlife has a party atmosphere, actually a beach party atmosphere with all of the bars located right on the beach included Risky Business and Alfred's Ocean Place.

Spring Break finds the town at its busiest and boisterous. Imagine the atmosphere of thousands of college students taking over a resort town. During the evening, live reggae bands adorn the oceanside stages for hours of free entertainment — exciting enough for MTV to send a film crew.

While the beach offers a prime partying space for spring goers — the cliffs offer wonderful views of the sun setting and even chances to go cliff diving at Rick's Cafe — a popular Spring Break activity, especially after a couple of Red Stripes, Jamaica's national beer. Up the road, on the West End, adventurers can explore caves and take advantage of the crystal clear water for prime scuba diving.

Fortunately there is more to Negril than the beach bars; take a walk away from the hotels and you can find tiny huts run by families. Even if buying fresh yams is not your favorite Spring Break activity, these huts offer an intriguing look into the real Jamaica outside of the tourist traps.

The local bars serve as excellent places to learn the history and culture of Jamaica from Rastaferianism to Marcus Garvey. Plus the prices can not be beat.

Shoppers are also advised to avoid the typical tourist traps that flock the main road and adventure into the two Craft Markets where locals sell their homemade items ranging from wood cuts to dolls to musical instruments. Take a few hours to look around and talk with the craftsmen — you are guaranteed a pleasant discussion or two.

Since there is just one road in the entire town, Norman Manley Boulevard, transportation is quick and easy. Nearly all of the hotel accommodations and restaurants are located on this road.

Since tourism is the base of Negril's economy, the town opens its arms to college students on Spring Break. Special accommodations can be found at nearly every establishment including satellite television to keep updated on the NCAA basketball tournament and exclusive concerts like Ziggy Marley and the Wailers.

While Negril's beaches are indeed beautiful, and the rum can not be beat, the people of Negril make the town a special spot.

Living the nation's motto, "Out of Many, One People," tourists are often surprised with the extraordinarily warm welcome offered by the locals. Spend a few hours in a bar not designed for tourists, and you will leave with new friends and insight into the Jamaican culture and lifestyle.

And the Jamaican laid-back lifestyle is not an imaginary, Hollywood creation. There was probably no word for stress in the Arawak language and even today few Jamaicans suffer from such an American disease.

In this sense Jamaica offers the near-perfect Spring Break option: stress-free living for a week on the beach besides plenty of bars well-stocked with Red Stripe and rum. And don't forget the thousands of other college students ready to party the week away.

As for expenses, Jamaica is reasonably priced. With the excellent airfare options currently available through American, now is the prime time to travel to the Caribbean.

Palm trees offer shade on the sunny beaches of Jamaica.

COURTESY DANIELLE R. HAYES

Vacation-goers enjoying Negril's seven-mile strip of sandy-white beach.

COURTESY DANIELLE R. HAYES

Thats Right!
Screen Printed T-Shirts On 100% Cotton!
Many Colors to Choose From!
PRINT SHACK & APPAREL UNLIMITED
322 Russell Street • Hadley, Mass.
Call Today 586-6933
3A Minimum Includes: 1 side 1 color Ex 4.31.97

NOW ON EXHIBIT
WORDS & PICTURES MUSEUM
140 Main St. Northampton MA 01060
CALL TO REGISTER FOR CLASSES TODAY! 413-586-8545
Thru April 6th, 1997
Fax from sarajevo
by Joe Kubert
April 10th-June 1st
Paul Mavrides

Spring Classes
No Experience Required
Would you like to have all the tools necessary to be a Comic Artist? Join us for the nine week intensive that will give you all that and more. Back by popular demand the Museum is once again hosting the Comic Art Intensive that covers it all. From supplies to etiquette, shading and mood, composition and story development, this class spends in-depth time in these areas and more. Mark Masztal invites both beginner and advanced artists to join him for this challenging class and completion of a final project.
Date(s): Wednesdays: March 5 - April 30
Time: 4:00 pm - 5:30 pm
Ages: 10 years and up
Cost: $80
Creator's Forum
The Museum is pleased to present a new and exciting program designed for artists and writers looking to get into the field of comics. The forum is an opportunity for aspiring comic book creators to share experiences, find the missing writer or artist for a project, and to critique work in progress. The museum will provide the space, refreshments and a speaker from the field to kick off each meeting. All you need to bring are your ideas and creative energy! The first meeting is scheduled for February 27th at 6:30pm with Paul Jenkins, writer for titles including Hellblazer (DC) and Construct (Caliber). Paul will talk about his experiences writing for comics and his relationships with artists.

We know were your jive is at, and we're not affraid to put it in writing... so write for Arts and Living or something... yeah, that's it!

Over ~500~ Microbrews
Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines
BEER SPECIALS
MICROBREWS
Sam Adams Old Fezziwig $4.99/six (American Pale Ale, Bohemian Lager, Bavarian Black)
New Amsterdam $4.99/six (Raspberry Wheat, Brown Ale, Oatmeal Stout)
Longshot Black Lager $2.99 22 oz. bottle
Rogue Ales $2.99 22 oz. bottle
Bud Dry 12 pk cans $8.99
Molson Golden 12 pk bottles $8.99
1/2 KEG SPECIAL
Miller Genuine Draft $39.99
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Arrow Coffee & Blackberry Brandy $13.99/1.75L
Mt. Gay Eclipse Rum $10.99/750ml
Sauza Gold Tequila $9.99/1 ltr.
Glenfiddich $20.99/750ml
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
551-5360
Rt. 9 East College Street one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 116

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
"HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU KID!" ON THE GIANT SILVER SCREEN
LATE SHOW THIS FRIDAY & SATURDAY AT 11:15 PM
$5.00 - TICKETS IN ADVANCE FROM 1:00 PM TO SHOWTIME
SOME THINGS JUST GET BETTER AS TIME GOES BY

Humphrey BOGART
Ingrid BERGMAN
Casablanca
with HENREID RAINS VEIDT GREENSTREET LORRE
A HAL B. WALLIS PRODUCTION Directed by MICHAEL CURTIZ
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Sling Blade is worthy debut

By Matthew Ludvino
Collegian Correspondent

SLING BLADE
Directed by Billy Bob Thornton
with Billy Bob Thornton, Lucas Black, and Dwight Yoakam
Playing at Pleasant St. Theatre

Billy Bob Thornton's directing debut, Sling Blade, is a nice breather from the overwrought hatchet jobs that make up the bulk of independent cinema these days. He has replaced the slick design, and the complicity to pop-culture with dusty wide open spaces and an affection for southern mystique.

After co-scripting and starring in the underappreciated thriller One False Move, and penning the low-key racial drama, A Family Thing, Thornton is finally getting some recognition in this already overpopulated business, and has earned himself a nod from the Academy for his performance. His sloping forehead, clear unmoving eyes, and stiff jaw continually struggling between grimace and grin match perfectly with the guttural sounds that punctuate his protagonists' dialogue.

Thornton plays Karl Childers, a recently released mental patient who was committed while he was still quite young for brutally killing his mother and her lover with a sling blade. After a brief period of adjustment to the outside world, Karl settles for a job at a repair shop in his hometown, where his infamy still lies in the outskirts of local consciousness. He befriends a boy named Frank (Lucas Black), and is drawn slowly into his family's life. Frank's mother (Natalie Canerday) lonely after her husband's death becomes involved with a manically unaffected and abusive man named Doyle, played with anxious reserve by singer Dwight Yoakam, and befriends Vaughan (John Ritter), an openly gay man in a blunt backwoods town.

Despite the sharp performances by the supporting cast, Thornton is the center of attention. Karl's simple-minded honesty, and basic observations are endearing, which, coupled with his nefarious past and his voice that "sounds like a racecar," gives the picture charming flashes of humor. The film, more about moral convictions, and the fog that shrouds them, than it is about answers, never bothers to trick its audience as it moves steadily toward its conclusion. We know where we are going, but are compelled to watch the anticipated climax.

Sling Blade, like its odd hero, moves slowly and precisely, and could readily be compared to a Winders' film (especially Paris, Texas). Thornton sticks to his roots patching together a still life of Arkansas as he remembers it. Sunlight catches the grime in the air and burns its impressions on the camera lens. But Sling Blade isn't memorable for its visuals as much as it is for its ability to tell a story.

Only a sympathetic actor could feel comfortable enough to let the cameras roll unmoving for minutes at a time. Thornton relishes the art of storytelling; filling his movie with monologues, and anecdotes seeping with regional metaphor, and colloquialisms. Our first introduction to Karl Is his blithe account of the events leading to his mother's murder as told to a high school journalist, Lit only by a small desk lamp, Thornton's gritty exterior is washed in shadow and gold.

There is nothing quite like a murder story in the dark, but then that's why movies remain so contagious. We creep into dark theaters looking for myths and fairy tales as much as we did when we were children, and Thornton seems to understand that. And while Sling Blade is by no means amazing, it is at least conscious of our strange admiration for these flickering lights and shadows called motion pictures. B+

COURTESY CHRISTY BUSH

Veruca Salt, from left to right, Nina Gordon, Steve Lac, Stacy Jones and Louise Post.

New releases from Veruca Salt and super–trio DFA

VERUCA SALT
Eight Arms To Hold You
Outpost / Minty Fresh

Back in 1965, the Beatles made their second movie, Help! The original title, Eight Arms To Hold You, was left as an obscurity in the annals of rock history, until Veruca Salt exhumed the expression for their new album. What a waste of a rock myth. All of the charm and promise displayed on their 1994 debut, American Thighs, was for naught. In a nutshell, this album sucks.

What is the one essential ingredient to a good rock record? Easy — good rock songs. Catchy riffs, hummable choruses, maybe a few clever lyrics, and for good measure, some enthusiasm and a bit of attitude. American Thighs had these qualities in spades; "All Hail Me," "Seether," "Forsythia," "Spiderman '79," and "Number One Blind" served as just a few of the highlights. Eight Arms, though, has absolutely nothing of the sort. Not a single memorable song. Nothing that grabs you and makes you want to hear it again. Nada. Zippo. Zilch.

The album itself is a mix of contrived rockers and plodding ballads. "Volcano Girls," the record's first single, is engaging until an astoundingly lame rip-off of the Fab Four's "Glass Onion" derails it. "Straight" also starts with some promise, but the banality of the lyrics eventually kills that too.

Another problem with Eight Arms is the sound. Metallica producer Bob Rock has definitely done his trick; he's turned Veruca Salt into a hard rock band, and in doing so he's squashed the lo-fi dynamics which made Thighs such a treat. Everything is compressed and glossed over with layers of sheen; the guitars and drums may sound gigantic, but they've lost all of their bite. Studio overtampering has even ruined Nina Gordon and Louise Post's trademark sugary harmonizing– — an utterly stupid move on Rock's part.

If Veruca Salt are allowed to make another record, they should follow their own advice. On American Thighs, they drop another Beatles reference by calling a great original song "Get Back." Time to take your own advice and do just that. D– (John Hendrickson)

Trax On Trax Off

Turn to TRAX page 9

I PROCLAIM THE LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR!

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS

★★★ Presidents Sale ★★★

Downhill Skis, Snowboards, Boots & Bindings
LOWEST PRICES OF THE YEAR!!
CROSS COUNTRY SKI PACKAGES AS LOW AS $79.99
ALL SKI & SNOWBOARD CLOTHING 50% OFF
WHILE THEY LAST!
Jackets • Pants • Hats • Gloves • Turtlenecks
SKI BIBS AS LOW AS $14.99
AIR ADJUST FORCE $79.99 Reg. $129.99 SAVE $50!!
OTHER SELECTED STYLES 50% OFF
ALL HOCKEY SKATES & EQUIPMENT UP TO 50% OFF
Hampshire Mall Hadley Route 9

Taipei & Tokyo
Chinese & Japanese Restaurant
Dine-In or Take-Out
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1996
Gift Certificates Available
Open 7 Days
Northampton, MA 01060

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
• 14-9 ft. Tables
• 60" Big Screen T.V.
• Live Entertainment Every Fri. & Sat.
• All Sporting Events
• Every Thursday Night $10 Cash 8-Ball Tournament 7:30 pm
$6/Hr Everyday Unlimited Players!
10A Belchertown Road Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Saturday Night - Trick Knee

OUR SALES ARE REAL HEAD-TURNERS! COME SEE FOR YOURSELF!
LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive
GENESEE BEER 30 PACK REG. ICE CREAM ALE CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS MAIL-IN-REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $6.49 +DEP
RED DOG & ICEHOUSE CASE OF 18-12 OZ. CANS $9.49 +DEP
OREGON BEERS ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 +DEP
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.49 +DEP
KILLIANS IRISH RED 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.49 +DEP
SHARP'S NON ALCOHOLIC 12 PK. CANS $5.99 +DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUT LT, MICH, MICH LT, MICH AMBER BUCK, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, LITE $39.99 +DEP
INGLENOOK VINEYARDS CHABLIS, BURGUNDY BLUSH, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE 5.0 LITER BAG-IN-A-BOX $8.49
CITRA WINES MONTEPULCIANO, TREBBIANO, SANGIOVESE 1.5 LITER $5.49
ST. FRANCIS CHARDONNAY 750ML $7.99
VENDANGE WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 LITER $4.99
HAYWOOD CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $5.99
BOONE'S WINE ALL FLAVORS 750ML $1.99
LIQUORS 44 VODKA 1.75L $8.99
CANADIAN MIST WHISKEY 1.75L $11.99
JAMESON PREMIUM IRISH WHISKEY 750ML $13.99
JACK DANIELS 750ML $10.99
Old Smuggler SCOTCH WITH A BOUQUET 1.75L MAIL-IN-REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $9.49
MYERS'S RUM Original Dark 750ML MAIL-IN-REBATE -5.00 FINAL COST $5.99
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/20/97 THRU WEDS. 2/26/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Best Locations! Move-In Specials Start April 21th Offices for Lease Historic Manor Robert Lane
Lincoln Real Estate
25 N. Pleasant Street
253 - 7879

Velvet Underground reissue worth its weight in gold

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

THE VELVET UNDERGROUND
Loaded: Fully Loaded Edition
Rhino

They were so far ahead of their time, that no one paid much attention to them when they were alive. It has been rumored that only 1,000 people bought their first album The Velvet Underground with Nico, but each one of them, after hearing the album, started their own bands. Today, they are legends, nearly 30 years after the release of their fourth and final studio record.

They have influenced countless bands from all genres of rock and roll and Rhino's rerelease of their last album Loaded is proof that they will not fade away peacefully.

The Velvet Underground's sound was considerably distinct and few other bands of the late '60s could compare to their raw intensity. When the fad of the time was flower power and acid rock, VU chose a more controversial and artistic path to voyage upon. Throughout their untimely career, the songs of frontman Lou Reed varied from cross-dressers and drug addiction to shock treatment and french literature.

Artistic differences led to VU's demise until the death of pop icon Andy Warhol, who also served as the band's surrogate father. After decades of battered egos and quarrels, Reed and bassist/pianist John Cale agreed to enter the studio together once again. The album they recorded was entitled Songs for Drella, and stood as passionate and innovative as anything they had made previously. A musical biographic homage to Warhol, Songs for Drella became the first step to VU's revival.

The success of Reed and Cale's collaboration led to a small VU reunion tour in 1993 with former band mates Sterling Morrison and Mo Tucker. A live album was recorded at the Olympia club in Paris containing an impressive reflection of their career. Perhaps the greatest gratification came last year when VU was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame to be forever remembered for their contributions as one of Rock history's prodigal bands.

Recently, a box set of digitally remastered recordings of each of VU's four albums was released which also included rarities and outtakes. Now, the first special edition rerelease of a VU album will shortly be available on a two CD collection. Fully Loaded contains the original VU recording along with earlier and previously unreleased versions of each song. Also included are outtakes and demo versions of other VU songs including Mo Tucker's classic sing along "I'm Sticking with You." The most significant aspect of Fully Loaded however, is VU versions of certain monumental songs from Reed's solo career such as "I Love You," "Satellite of Love" and "Sad Song."

Although often criticized by fans as the least memorable of VU's four albums, Loaded is still a brilliant and yet sorrowful album. It begins with the bitter sweet "Who Loves the Sun," and then continues with a collection of intriguing character studies. Reed's songs examine the lives of both the bored and broken hearted with haunting melodies and disturbing lyrics. He describes the lonely life of young Jenny "whose life was saved by rock 'n' roll" and the ballad of Jane and Jack where Reed chants "those were different times, when the poets studied the rules of verse and the ladies rolled their eyes."

All in all, Fully Loaded is an essential piece of rock nostalgia. It is an exquisite reminder of the powerful musical force of the late 1960s which was called The Velvet Underground. A

COURTESY OF

A rare moment... Velvet Underground frontman Lou Reed smiles.

■ trax

continued from page 8

FUNKMASTER FLEX
Mix Tape Volume II
RCA

All hip–hop fans are, and should be, wary of mix tapes distributed by a major label. A general rule of thumb regarding mix tapes is if you're not at an underground record store or a beat–up stand on the street, then don't buy it. The only exception in recent memory is The Funkmaster Flex Mix Tape Volume I.

Flex's second installment in his mix tape series should be added to this list. Mixing new R&B songs, older hip–hop joints, party jams, and freestyles by an unbelievable array of rappers with current hits, the Mix Tape Volume II is the hottest mix tape to hit since Doo Wop's Summer Jam '96.

Flex proves his scratching genius in the transitions and his impeccable taste in the selections. There are not many DJs who could put out a mix tape featuring songs that haven't been heard since MTV's 1992 season (Naughty By Nature's "Hip Hop Hooray," Redman's "Time 4 Sum Aksh.un," Run–DMC's "Here We Go," Slick Rick's "Mona Lisa," and Cypress Hill's "How I Could Just Kill A Man") alongside songs by Parliament and The Gap Band without sounding stale, but Flex pulls it off.

It's nice to see an artist push his work to the limits and Flex separates himself from the style of Volume I by playing more R&B and busting the hottest rap jams for less than thirty seconds. Often, only the best lines from popular songs are played before Flex cuts the next song into the mix. This style is truly for the hip–hop aficionado with a short attention span. The hypest parts of the tape are the freestyles by such popular rappers as Nas, Redman, Li'l Kim, Foxxy Brown, Boot Camp Click, Akinyele, Das Efx, and more backdropped by some extremely dope and vaguely familiar (45 King?) beats.

This tape isn't for everyone however. It will, as all of Flex's work will, make the listener wonder just how much Flex likes to hear his own voice. The album would be more enjoyable if Flex would just mix and stop reminding everyone what it is that they're listening to. By no stretch of the imagination is this tape as good as the underground tapes of Flex's that the Tape Kings have been putting out for years. Also, if you're not a big fan of R&B or are a big fan of listening to songs in their entirety and not hearing a mix or a scratch every six seconds, you probably shouldn't spend hard–earned money on this. Not everyone enjoys Flex' unique take on the whole hip–hop Nation. B+ (Gabe Rosenberg)

DANKO/FJELD/ANDERSEN
Ridin' On The Blinds
Rykodisc

After much critical acclaim for their 1992 self–titled debut, the trio that consists of The Band's original and current bassist and singer Rick Danko, Norwegian singer/songwriter Jonas Fjeld and folk singer/songwriter Eric Andersen, team up once again for a collection of acoustic ditties and standard rockers, and this time they bring a whole bunch of friends with them.

The opening title track introduces the listener to the voices: Danko's detailed but shaky elocution; Andersen's straight–ahead drawl; and Fjeld's deep country moan. They combine in harmony on the country–rocker. The trio then acoustically reworks Jaime Robbie Robertson's Band tune "Twilight" with help from Band keyboardist Garth Hudson. Fjeld provides a dark and inciteful lead vocal to writer'David Olney's strong "Women 'Cross The River" with help from Hans Fredrik Jakobsen's Norwegian flute and an instrument called the Hardanger fiddle, played here by Halvard T. Bjergum.

Danko's awful attempt at singing alto (think Robin — Kermit the Frog's nephew) taints the otherwise beautifully haunting "All Creation," dedicated to the memory of The Band's pianist/vocalist Richard Manuel, who took his own life in 1986. "Outside Track" is simply staggering in its magnificence with Jakobsen's flute back for more. All these songs are terrific acoustic workouts. However, when this collection of musicians plugs in, the imagination seems to seep out, as is hinted at on "Come Runnin' Like A Friend" and the anti–heroin tune "Every Man Is His Own Hero." The songs float right along like Acadian driftwood. B (Joshua Boyd)

All-news network looking beyond breaking news

By David Bauder
AP Television

ATLANTA — Everywhere you turn at the CNN Center, there's a risk of running into a contractor.

New offices are constantly being created to make room for the network's burgeoning empire — CNN Interactive, the financial network CNNfn and the CNN-SI sports channel. There's even staff to produce news reports to flash on pagers and for televisions in airports.

It's a good thing, too, because these aren't easy times for the Cable News Network itself, which started the whole franchise 17 years ago.

Increased competition from MSNBC, the Fox News Channel and ever-expanding local newscasts have combined with a relatively slow news period. The result? Sagging ratings and questions about whether CNN can thrive in times of noncrisis.

"That's a great concern to me," said Ed Turner, executive vice president of CNN. "What do you do when the earth isn't on fire?" CNN's reputation as a go-to network when there's a big news story was confirmed the night President Clinton's State of the Union address conflicted with the verdict in O.J. Simpson's civil trial. Its ratings were double what they are on a normal night. But unfortunately for CNN, these nights come far too infrequently.

Nielsen Media Research has given the network some ugly numbers lately. The average number of homes that tuned in to CNN, for instance, dropped from 572,000 in 1995 to 327,000 in 1996, Nielsen said. Prime-time ratings sank 33 percent in 1996.

In contrast to 1992, when CNN took advantage of Larry King's new status as the favorite interviewer of presidential candidates, the network suffered last year from the public's lack of interest in the Clinton-Dole campaign. International stories didn't pick up the slack either.

CNN's ratings also may have been artificially high in 1995 because of O.J. Simpson's criminal trial, said Larry Gerbrandt, a media analyst with Paul Kagan Associates.

To try to tweak this year's ratings, the network is making some changes.

"Burden of Proof," the midday program with Roger Cossack and Greta Van Susteren that was an outgrowth of the Simpson trial, has joined the glut of prime-time legal shows. It will be repeated at 8:30 p.m. on weekdays, and will go live when the stories are compelling.

Two of CNN's up-and-coming anchors, Joie Chen and Leon Harris, will be teamed to host the 10 p.m. news hour.

And on March 2, CNN will debut "Impact," a weekly newsmagazine that is a collaboration between journalists from CNN and its new corporate partner, Time magazine.

There also have been trade publication stories saying CNN is talking with other network's news executives about coming in and shaking things up.

Improving ratings while maintaining CNN's reputation as a hard-news source is a delicate job. It can hype news stores — All O.J! All the time! — but runs the risk of turning off the serious news junkies that are CNN's bedrock viewers, Turner noted. A greater emphasis on talk shows could move CNN away from what it does best and blur the distinctions between it and newer rivals MSNBC and Fox.

"If you're going to be an all-news network, you better pretty much be an all-news network," Turner said. "We are limited in what we can do."

Given the main network's ratings woes, it's natural to wonder whether CNN is stretching itself too thin.

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Kegs in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
569 West St. • South Amherst
Minutes from NBX Valley, The Brewha, & The Boulders
253-7745

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
NOW SHOWING Curtain Daily 7 & 9:15
7 Academy Award Nomination-Inc. 'BEST' PICTURE★ DIRECTOR ★ACTOR★SUPPORTING ACTOR
AND IN
OVER 75 TEN BEST LISTS!
DIRECTORS GUILD OF AMERICA NOMINEE
SCREEN ACTORS GUILD NOMINEES
Shine
ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584 8435

Be a Resident Assistant!
Help Shape Your Piece of the World
Applications for 1997-1998 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.
Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Receive an Application:

February 12	7:00pm	McNamara Main Lounge
February 18	7:00pm	Webster Classroom
	7:00pm	Stonewall Center, Crampton
February 20	7:00pm	Coolidge 5th floor
	7:00pm	Baker Classroom
February 24	7:00pm	Campus Center 165-9
February 26	12:30pm	Campus Center 165-9
	7:00pm	Knowlton Main Lounge
February 27	7:00pm	Hillel House
	7:00pm	Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge
March 3	7:00pm	Campus Center 804-08
March 4	7:00pm	Patterson Main Lounge

For more information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0472.

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
MONDAY-SATURDAY 9:00 - 11:00
Not responsible for typos
VISA DISCOVER MasterCard
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS

SAM ADAMS 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 +dep.	HARPOON 24-12oz. bott $17.99 +dep.	J.W. DUNDEE Honey Brown/24-12 oz. bott $14.99 +dep.	ST. PAULI GIRL 24-12 oz. bott $18.99 +dep.	ROLLING ROCK 24-12 oz. bar bott. $13.99 +dep.	MICRO KEGS! SAM ADAMS OREGON SARANAC HARPOON J.W. DUNDEE Plus Lots More!	KEGS!!! BUD LT, BUD ICE, LITE, RED DOG, M.G.D., MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT., LOWENBRAU DK, ICEHOUSE, MICHELOB BOCK $39.99 +dep.
BUSCH & LT "30 pks." $11.99 +dep.	MEISTERBRAU 24-12oz. cans $7.99 +dep.	MILWAUKEE'S BEST "30 pks." $10.49 +dep.	KEYSTONE LT "30 pks." $10.99 +dep.	M.G.D. + LT 24-12 oz. bott. $9.99 +dep.		BUD LT Keg of the Week! $38.99 +dep.
GORDONS VODKA "30 pks." $10.99 1.75L	SEAGRAMS 7 Whiskey $13.99	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	GOLD SCHLAGER Schnapps $14.99 750ml	LET'S GO SPORTS	ICE! 10 lbs.....$1.29 50 lbs.....$5.99 100 lbs.....$9.99	Natural Lt/Ice $34.99 +dep.
RABBIT RIDGE "ZIN" $7.99 750ml	WILLIAM HILL "Chard" Reserve $10.99 750ml	SANTA RITA "120" $4.49 750ml	MELINI "Chianti" $5.99 750ml	WE DELIVER 584.8174	Sale Thru 2 29 97

Spring Break Party '97
DAYTONA BEACH
From $229 Bus & Hotel From $99 Hotel Only
• Round trip transportation via deluxe motorcoach
• 6 or 7 night accommodations at Ocean front hotels
• Full time Breakaway staff on location
For Details or to Book Call: 1-800-465-4257 Ext. 375
Breakaway Tours
www.breakawaytours.com

The elegant Shirley Horn. COURTESY LARRY ROSEN/CA

Despite modern touch to her music, Jazz great Shirley Horn still succeeds

Jazz/Blues Weekly

BY JOSHUA BOYD

It's night, and you are alone. It's maybe later in the Spring, no, in the middle of winter. A light breeze blows in your bedroom. You sip wine and croon to yourself so you don't feel lonesome. You either are Shirley Horn or you are a deadly imitator of her mood.

Horn's new Verve release, Loving You, portrays such a reflective, warm feel that it is unlikely you won't feel a little different after you listen. You may find yourself thinking of relationships and romance. That's right, people, Loving You is an album of "smooth love songs."

Horn doesn't sing many toss-away tunes here, as she is definitely no toss-away artist. She's been on the jazz vocal scene since 1960, and she's loved by many of her colleagues like Miles Davis and Carmen McRae.

Horn treasures many old songs on Loving You (she may be quite a singer, but she doesn't seem to write any songs herself). Her voice throughout the album is a nice alto that sometimes sinks deeper to get to the real heart of a song. Blues singer Lil Green's "In The Dark" is morosely beautiful, especially with the thick guitar of George Mesterhazy adding the indigo blues to it all. "I Am in Love, Me" by Cy Coleman, is a jovial, bright wish accompanying herself on piano.

Unfortunately, Loving You is a contemporary jazz record and it suffers contemporary problems: cheesy synthesizers and effects, mostly from Mesterhazy. From "The Man You Were" through "Love Dance" and ending at the closer "All Of A Sudden My Heart Sings," Horn's sad alto echoes on elevator walls of Roland electric piano and synthesized orchestral accompaniment.

Not necessarily all modern technology in jazz taints "America's classical music," though. The record label Knitting Factory Works gives a glimpse of the present and a hint of the future with a new compilation New York Downtown: Jazz And Other Sounds. Ah, how refreshing! Something contemporary that doesn't either sound like elevator music or rely on bebop sounds! Music that sounds like Miles' ahead-of-its-time 1969 album Bitches Brew actually had an effect on the minds of modern jazz musicians!

The Other Sounds to cut over to the jazz quickly, features dare-devil sounds from Samm Bennett's History Of The Last Five Minutes (rock superimposed on trip-hop rhythms), Rebecca Moore (Sinead O'Connor-ish gloom pop), Suck Pretty and Fertile Crescent (alterna-pop), and Laurie Gallacio (spoken word).

The jazz on this album bubbles with a toxic vengeance. Don Byron Quintet's "Next Love" has some phat clarinet over a vamp-like melody. Myth Science's "Space Fling" features the motoring organ of Anthony Coleman and the wailing sax of Briggan Krauss. Wayne Horwitz & Zony Mash show their love for organ-jazz with a punk feel. Matt Dariau's Paradox Trio comes up with the best jazz on the album with their tune "Rufus" that highlights Rufus Cappadocia's eerie electric 5-string cello and Dariau's intense sax-playing. Finally, back to the future with jazz!

Back to the past with blues, though. Last week in this space I mentioned RCA's "Bluebird Blues And Heritage Series." Besides the Tampa Red 2-CD set reviewed last week, Sonny Boy Williamson and Big Maceo Merri-weather are also honored with this re-issue treatment.

Neither men ever attained the success of Tampa Red, but both had a big part in influencing the Chicago blues sound as their contemporary. John Lee "Sonny Boy" Williamson (the original "Sonny Boy" — Rice Miller is the latter; more popular "Sonny Boy Williamson" whose "Bring It On Home To Me" was covered by Led Zeppelin) played mostly acoustic blues that followed a straight pattern. At the age of 23, in 1937, he recorded his own composition, "Good Morning School Girl," which went on to be covered by The Grateful Dead, Junior Wells and many others. That is on his 1937–38 Bluebird Recordings as are other greats like "Got The Bottle Up & Gone" and "Decoration Blues."

Big Maceo, one of the greatest left-handed pianists ever, influenced Chicago pianists Otis Spann and Johnnie Jones with his playing on songs like "Can't You Read" which is a rocking duet with Tampa Red, "County Jail Blues," and "Anytime For You." However, he influenced all of blues and rock 'n' roll with his original "Worried Life Blues," which has been covered dozens of times by dozens of artists, notably by Eric Clapton on 24 Nights.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Tour the Valley with cross–country skis

Before it is too late, tour western Massachusetts on a pair of cross–country skis. Although Mother Nature's premature "spring fling" has warmed this week up with mild temperatures there are still a handful of cross–country ski resorts in full operating condition.

Thanks to last weekend's snowstorm, Western Massachusetts is covered in white and full of endless possibilities for cross–country skiing. However, due to the sun's growing magnitude, now is the time to trek out on cross–country ski adventure.

Located high in the foothills of Western Massachusetts is Stump Sprouts Cross–Country Ski Center. Reporting an 18 inch base, Stumps Sprouts is in full operating condition offering the public 25 km of trails, ranging from gentle rolling groomed and track–set loops to challenging back– country routes.

Due to its elevated location, Stump Sprouts is able to maintain an impressive base of natural snow that is protected by dense woodlands, full of pine, maple and oak trees.

A fine destination at Stump Sprouts is the summit of Lone Boulder Hill where a large glacial boulder stands guard near a breathtaking 3–state vista. (Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut)

Not only is Stump Sprouts a fantastic place for an intense workout full of picturesque vistas, but it is also a case history of the 18th century's simplistic era. Its land has been farmed for generations and is covered with hand–crafted stone walls and weathered barns that embody the spirit of the past.

Cross–country skiers can replenish the calories they expend on the trails with the kitchen's home made bread, pies and soups. From late December to mid–March Stump Sprout offers ski packages including six meals, accommodations in a cozy bunk house and "back door" skiing.

For those of you who do not want to make your cross– country ski adventure and over–night excursion, resort tickets are $8 plus $11 for a cross country ski unit, including skis, boots, poles, and bindings.

As spring approaches and the snow slowly turns into patch work Stump Sprouts will organize, at no charge, ice skating parties as well as tours of local maple sugar houses.

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Easily accessible to residents of the Pioneer Valley, Stump Sprouts is a quick 45 minute drive from the UMass campus. Just drive up interstate 91 north, get off at the Greenfield Exit, and get on route 2.

Follow route 2 paying attention to signs for Stump Sprouts and you will be on your skis in no time. To make weekend reservations or find out about ski conditions call (413) 339– 4265.

Another delectable outdoor winter experience is cross country skiing through Brookfield Orchards located in North Brookfield. Rating from easy to challenging descents Brookfield Orchard is packed with miles of diverse terrain.

As its name implies Brookfield Orchards main business is apples. At its country store skiers not only can buy a resort ticket but also homemade pies, fresh cider, and of course apples.

The trails are not groomed, so skiers will build up a hardy appetite cutting their own tracks. Brookfield Orchard's resort ticket is only $5. For more information about current snow conditions skiers are advised to call (508) 867–6858.

To get to Brookfield Orchard from UMass take the Mass. Pike east to Exit 9 in Sturbridge. Go east on Route 20 to Route 9 to East Brookfield. Turn right onto Harrington Street and follow the signs to Brookfield Orchards.

Of course if you are short on time and money, and need some practice before venturing out to resorts, such as Stump Sprouts or Brookfield Orchard, the Pioneer Valley offers a variety of skiing options. (Pr vided that there is still snow sticking around.)

There are a dozen of private and municipal golf courses in the Pioneer Valley that are super for cutting cross country ski trails. The paved Norwottuck Rail Trail and the Northampton bike path are also a lot of fun. Snowmobiles are prohibited.

The Connecticut River Valley is covered with municipal parks and conservation areas that are excellent for cross country skiing, such as the Amherst Conservation Parks, Springfield's Forest Park, Look Park in Northampton, and Stanley Park in Westfield.

If you are interested in cross–country skiing, but you do not have the equipment, then take advantage of the UMass Outing Club. Rent a cross–country ski unit from their locker. For more information about cross–country equipment call the Outing Club at 545–3113.

Act now, get a pair of cross–country skis, and explore Western Massachusetts while it is still covered in snow. This is the weekend to enjoy the last days of winter on skis in spring–like temperatures at Stump Sprouts or Brookfield Orchard Ski Resorts.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS WORK PLACE ONE TODAY
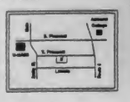
545-3500

Congratulations, Emma!

The Collegian is proud to name Emma the first "Spirit Girl of the week

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

Y'all Come!
A Night in Nashville
with
Tennessee Dance Theatre
Mark O'Connor &
Riders in the Sky
An afternoon in Amherst becomes an unforgettable night as the Music City, with Tennessee's world-class dance company, America's favorite band, and the fiddling genius of Mark O'Connor. Join Nashville's best cats as they raise the roof with down-home music, gravity-defying dance and foot-stomping fun.
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, FEBRUARY 23, 3PM, FAC CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF WRSI 95.3



The Good Doctor is Back!
Fletcher Henderson Scholarship Concert
BILLY TAYLOR TRIO
& SHEILA JORDAN/
STEVE KUHN DUO
Join Dr. Taylor and his trio along with jazz diva Sheila Jordan and her accompanist Steve Kuhn in an evening of melt-your-soul jazz. And support the next generation of jazz masters.
WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 8PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF THE DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE AND COOPERS AND LYBRAND

One Electrifying Experience
THE KODO DRUMMERS
OF JAPAN ONE EARTH TOUR
You can drive to Boston to see and hear Kodo, or you can catch them in their only other New England performance—at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall in Amherst. It's your one chance to see one of the most astonishing performances world music has to offer, right here in the Pioneer Valley. There are still some seats available, so call today and be part of a singular experience you'll never forget.
FRIDAY, MARCH 7, 8PM, FAC CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF THE VILLAGE COMMONS AND THE VALLEY ADVOCATE
CALL 545-2511 OR 1-800-999-UMAS FOR TICKETS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE AT HTTP://WWW.UMASS.EDU/FAC/FAC.HTML
CELEBRATE THE RHYTHMS OF LIFE
THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385

• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Put the world at your fingertips.
Software Engineering
Systems Engineering
Computer Design
Signal Processing
Electro-Optics
Image Processing
With Raytheon Electronic Systems, you'll create the technologies that define the future of tomorrow's world. You'll maximize your Engineering and Computer Science knowledge and make an impact when you join our team. We currently have over 350 opportunities available in the technical areas listed above.
Raytheon Electronic Systems will be visiting campus soon. To find out more about the complex challenges we have to offer, please contact the Career Placement Office to sign up for an interview.
For additional information, please see our homepage at: http://www.raytheon.com/res
Interested candidates who are unable to meet with us on campus may send a resume directly to: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Professional Staffing, M/S T2SL2, 50 Apple Hill Drive, Tewksbury, MA 01876-0901. Fax: (508) 858-1183. E-mail: staffing@res.ray.com
U.S. citizenship may be required for some positions. Equal Opportunity Employer.
Raytheon Electronic Systems

sports notice

The Massachusetts women's basketball team was in Ohio last night, where they fell to Xavier, 59–52.

Kelly Van Huisen led UMass with 13 points, Alison MacFarland had 11 and Crystal Carroll followed with 10.

The Musketeers had four players in double digits in the win. Kristie Stuckenberg led all scorers with 17 points, while Nikki Kremer and Sheila Flint scored 10 apiece, while Jenny Rauh had 11.

The Minutewomen were nearly perfect from the line in the game, shooting 90 percent from the charity stripe. UMass struggled, however, from downtown, hitting only 14.3 percent.

■ Rodriguez

continued from page 14

not the, top diver in UMass history."

While Rodriguez took to the sport comparatively late, she feels that her late arrival on the diving scene is one of the factors that fuels her competitive desire.

Rodriguez reflects, "When I came here and started diving, I was getting fours and fives. I got pretty frustrated and started thinking that I wasn't good enough."

Keep in mind that the last time she was judged in an athletic competition was at an elite national level where fours and fives where unheard of.

"I was at a level in gymnastics where I would get a 9.2 or 9.5," Rodriguez said. "In gymnastics, good enough is an 8.0 or an 8.5. In college diving, you never get more than an eight. And for an eight, you have to be what I consider perfect."

I love this game

Hand in hand with her late entry into the diving world is Rodriguez's constant push for perfection. Two years ago her athletic ability made up for her relative lack of experience. Now, with two and a half years of collegiate experience under her belt Rodriguez looks to her team mates and competitors for competition.

"When I started, I didn't even care how good [my dives] looked in the air, now I do. But then it was how many flips I could do in the air," Rodriguez remembered. "If people were doing one and a halfs on my team, I wanted to do doubles or two and a halfs.

"I always want to be better than everybody else. If I see someone do a dive in tuck position, I'm going to do it in pike. If everyone else is doing a double, I want to do a two and half, even if I'm going to crash it."

How has Rodriguez come so far so fast?

The way she sees it, there are two major components that draw her to the boards — fear coupled with the fact that there is always another, harder dive to master.

"That is the thing I love the most about diving, being able to overcome the fears," Rodriguez said. "That's what gets me off the board. I don't just want to do what my team mates are doing. If the girls in the Olympics are doing two and a halfs, I want to do two and a halfs."

Unfortunately, given the nature of the sport, improvement does not come without some element of pain. And again, this is where her competitive spirit surfaces.

Sometimes willingly launching yourself off a plastic board over 10 feet in the air to twist, turn, flip and otherwise contort your body before hitting the water meets with messy results. While smacking the water at an unpleasant angle would turn many away, Rodriguez finds this as one of the most appealing aspects of her sport.

"I don't mind smacking," Rodriguez boasts. "I'm not afraid of it. It hurts for two seconds or five seconds, but how happy you feel after you do a new dive or a hard dive. I look at it as a good thing, because you are getting better. You feel much stronger about yourself."

Higher, faster, stronger

While Rodriguez is currently competing in the Atlantic 10 Championships, and looks to take her collegiate career as far as possible, this will be her last season as a Minutewoman. Already at the top of A–10 diving, that push for perpetual success has the young diver thinking about a post–college career — namely Olympic competition.

Already a member of the Puerto Rican national team, when her years of NCAA diving end, Rodriguez hopes to represent her country in that great international festival of sport.

"If I make the scores, I'll go to the Olympics," Rodriguez predicts. "Right now, I'm the only [female diver] my age. So that I know of, it's me. You can send two from your own country, so if I get the scores, I'm there.

Making the process easier, with so few Olympic caliber divers, Rodriguez does not have to worry about beating out dozens of competitors for a spot on the team.

"I don't have to go through Olympic trials," she explains. "That's the hard part about [diving for] the United States, because in the United States, there are like 20 [divers] and they can only take two.

"[In Puerto Rico] there are not many divers, and I'm the national team pretty much. I told them my list of what I was doing and my scores. Between my freshman and sophomore years, I went to Puerto Rico and trained with them. I've been on the team ever since, even though I have not represented my country in competition yet," she said.

Unfortunately, reaching her Olympic potential means leaving UMass behind. Despite her three–season A–10 tenure, the league is not competitive enough for this aspiring diver. In order to get better, Rodriguez feels she needs to compete at a higher level, not just in meets, but on a daily basis. As a result, the spunky junior will most likely make recruiting visits to some larger (and most likely warmer) Div. I programs when the current season concludes, and transfer next fall after representing Puerto Rico this spring in a national competition in Mexico.

"I love my coach here," Rodriguez half–heartedly explains, "and he knows that I push myself a lot, but sometimes I feel like I can't push myself over the limit. I need to be pushed not just to dive for sevens, but to dive for nines. My freshman and sophomore years I came to dive just because I was having fun, but I wasn't thinking about getting any better."

In just two years, Rodriguez's focus has shifted from diving "for fun," to becoming the best diver possible and competing for Olympic gold.

"I want to get to a point where I know that all the sacrifice I did, it was worth it. I don't just want to get to the Olympics," she explains. At the same time, she realizes that to do so, she will have to compete against divers that have been diving since they were young. But like everything else that requires conquering tough challenges, she is drawn to it.

"I know I'm lacking a couple of years and I'm very impatient. I want to be there so I work twice as hard," she said. "Even though I am representing my country, I do it for myself, I don't try to put any more pressure on myself. If I do good job I did it for my country, but I also did it for myself."

■ NHL

continued from page 14

offs, all said statements in this column are null and void. If the Bruins make the playoffs over the lesser New York franchise, though, I want the total and utter obeisance of all Scmilsander fans. No, no, no, no. Just kidding.

I already know that we are the more real franchise.

Playoffs or not, we still have the better tradition — Bourque vs. Potvin (win), Esposito vs. Bossy (win), Cheevers vs. Smith (tie), Original Six vs. uh, uh, uh, Al Arbour? (win). That's 3–0–1 right there, and I won't even start on Nassau Coliseum.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

■ men's swim

continued from page 14

was a defining one for both swimmers. Wisniewski set a school–record while winning the 100 backstroke at a finishing time of 50.85, and was also a part of the school–record setting 400 medley relay team which finished at 3:24.53.

Anderson captured three Atlantic 10 titles last year. He won the 100 free (45.86), the 400 medley relay alongside Wisniewski and, of course, the 50 free, in an Atlantic 10 record time of 20.51.

Other swimmers this year who produced throughout the whole season and who will be expected to help the team's outcome are sophomore distance swimmer B.J. Brannan, senior Dave Dornaus, junior Matt Davey, sophomore David Koritkoski, freshman success Billy Hunter, sophomore Geoff Gear, and of course, the senior tri–captains Chris Martin, Matt Getty, and John Koritkoski. Martin will be there for moral support, because he will not be participating in the meet due to medical reasons.

In the championship last year, John Koritkoski swam for a school–record time for second place in the 200 free relay at 1:23.02. Martin was part of the school–record setting 400 medley relay and the 200 medley relay.

In addition to UMass' great swimmers, the divers are also a very important part of the Atlantic 10 Championship. Freshman Ed Hefferon and sophomore Derrick DeMaio are the young guys who will have to produce some quality points when push comes to shove.

The tournament begins today, and runs through Saturday.

■ NBA

continued from page 14

onship title dreams will result in second– round elimination nightmares. Now is the time for "Slam Dunk Champion" Kobe Bryant and the rest of the Laker Young Guns to step up to the plate. Will "The Lake Show" be cancelled this season? Tune in.

• The firing of ex–Orlando Magic coach Brian Hill is another incident in a new and quite unfashionable trend that is developing among NBA general managers. They seem to put the blame on the coaches for not having the players to win games.

Hill took an expansion team that was four years old to the NBA finals two years ago! Yet, because his stars players are injured, he must shoulder the responsibility of a dreadful season. With players like Donald Royal and David Vaughn, I'd like to see Riley try and come away with a winning season. The league needs more coaches and players, and fewer businessmen.

• The All–Star break put a lot of players in the spotlight. Rookies that hogged the spotlight were Bryant, Marcus Camby, and Allen Iverson.

However, Iverson's press was not good. He has been constantly chastised for his lack of respect for veteran players. Going up against landmark players like Jordan and Barkley isn't a smart move. Just because you've got talent, doesn't mean you're automatically entitled to respect. That you have to earn. Even Nike and Reebok can't buy that.

• The second half of the NBA is now underway. The playoffs look like they're going to be a lot more interesting this year than they've been in the past few. With the deep competition in the East, the NBA playoffs might finally garner the ratings that TV giants have been panting for.

Gregory Casimir is a Collegian columnist.

Intramural action is already underway

Editor's note: Sports Briefs is a relatively new column to the Collegian, but so far it has been very successful. The column is designed to give attention and credit to the athletes who don't play at the collegiate varsity level, but instead on club, intramural and recreational teams.

The feature runs every Thursday, and is comprised of information sent in from these teams and athletes. Submissions for Sports Briefs should be sent to the Collegian offices, and are due each Wednesday at noon. Submissions can be sent, brought down to the offices at 113 Campus Center Basement or faxed to 545–1592.

If there are any questions call co–sports editors Casey Kane or Chris Stamm at 545–0719.

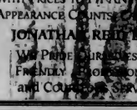
Intramural action for the semester has begun, with basketball and Wallyball underway. Basketball is currently in its third week, with games on Monday through Thursday evenings at 6 p.m. in Boyden gym.

Wallyball games are held at the Boyden handball/squash courts 26 and 28 at 5 p.m. on Wednesdays.

The Weekend Wrestling Tournament will be held this weekend in the Boyden wrestling room, beginning at 6 p.m. on Friday and 10 a.m. on Saturday. Entrants are required to weigh–in on Thursday in Boyden 225 from noon to 5 p.m.

Wrestling officials are needed, inquire in 215 Boyden.

• Entries are being taken for men's, women's and co–rec softball, co–rec soccer and co–rec volleyball are now being taken in 215 Boyden. All undergrads, graduate and continuing ed students, faculty and staff members are eligible. Stop by 215 Boyden or call 545–2693 for more information.



Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staffmember Casey Kane.

Golden Key National Honor Society
General Membership Meeting
*****
Where: Campus Center*
When: February 24, 1997
Time: 7:00 P.M.
*Please check at information Desk

The Institute of Political and Economic Studies
The Institute of Economic and Political Studies
London and Cambridge, England
This academically-challenging program for American undergraduates is an excellent opportunity to learn about the economic, political, historical and legal issues that shape our world. It is taught by recognized scholars who are specialists in their fields. Courses include such titles as Politics and Culture, State and Society in Contemporary Europe, International Business Cultures and The Political Economy of the European Union. The program also includes:
✦ courses available in a wide range of subject areas including economics, geopolitics, literature, political science and law
✦ access to library and student social facilities in Cambridge and London
✦ student housing in London and Cambridge
✦ program-arranged cultural and social activities
✦ Beaver College advising, support services and academic transcript
Speak to your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs or call for a free catalog today.
Study Abroad with Beaver College
1.888.BEAVER-9 (1.888.232.8379) cea@ beaver.edu • http://www.beaver.edu/cea/

Announcing a Research Project on Anorexia Nervosa Focus:
Effectiveness of nutrition counseling methods in the treatment of anorexia nervosa
Who May Participate:
Anyone who has been treated for anorexia nervosa
Participation Includes:
Completion of an anonymous questionnaire evaluating various aspect of nutrition counseling in the treatment of anorexia nervosa
(estimated time to complete: 30 - 60 minutes)
Directors:
Dr. Joanne Curran-Celentano, Ph.D., R.D.
Marcia Hintz, Graduate Student, Animal and Nutritional Sciences, University of New Hampshire
Please share your experience and become part of our research team!
For more info all Marcia @ (603) 862-2573.

Jonathan Reid
THE COMPLETE MEN'S STORE HAMPSHIRE MALL HADLEY, MA
We Specialize In Dressing Men for Interviews, Banquets, or Day Casual Outing, with Prices to Fit Any Budget. When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathan Reid!
We Pride Ourselves On Friendly, Professional and Courteous Service

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Wednesday, February 26, 1997
Room 804
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass
I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?
If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services Health Education at 577-5181 or General Medicine 2 at 577-5233

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Are you interested in bringing a speaker to campus? Do you want to gain real-life experience working for a student organization? Come to a meeting for THE DISTINGUISHED VISITOR'S PROGRAM on Tuesday, February 25 at 7pm. in Room 168C of the Campus Center. Call 545-0046 for more info. Food will be served.

Got involved? The Women's Health Project seeks volunteers interested in teaching and political action in contraceptive education, body image, etc. For information call 577-5181.

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS 8 credits, airfare Eurorail, Room/board ALL FOR $3299- Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION ALL UNIVERSITY WOMEN! Join the Sisters of Tri-Sigma for Open Rush, Thurs. 2/20. Call Tara @ 546-1623

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm. in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by.

Congratulations to Jennifer Japinga, Katia Trimarco, Alicia Hiller, Jeanetta Eka, Jennifer Walton, Sarah Lupaczak, Lydia Yeh, Julie Galvin, Jennifer Knect, Amy Goetz, Nikki Dilao, Katia Parks, Janessa McWilliams, Stephania Goldberg, Jen Baird Love, The Sisters of Chi Omega

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Large Studio Apartment Amherst Center. Available now. 253-0245

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Plymouth Sundance Excellent body, runs very well. $1800 or B/O. Call 549-4435

1988 VW Jetta 5-speed, sunroof, good condition. $1800 586-0383

1977 Dodge Van with stickar Automatic. Runs fine. Oversized. $400 256-1300

1984 Honda Accord 4-door, 5-speed, 114,000 miles, needs brake work. $500 or B/O 253-3071

1988 Honda Civic DX 5 speed, runs perfect, small dents, cheap $1650 or B/O 546-5320

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Wayne/sister half of brother/sister camp, Northeast Pennsylvania 6/23-8/20(97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students. Pre-requisits: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation. On-Campus Interviews March 11. Call (800)279-3019

LEADERS NEEDED! SUMMER TEENAGE BICYCLING TRIPS. US, CANADA, EUROPE. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

Counselors for co-ed Northeast Pennsylvania overnight Jewish Federation Camp(3 hours from NYC)- general, sports, drama, H20 and arts. (800)973-3666

LIFEGUARD- Private beach on Cape Cod. Free beachside room. Memorial Day- Labor Day. WSI Certification. 253-6619

EMPLOYMENT

Responsible person to care for infant in our home. ON BUS ROUTE Three afternoons per week. 549-5035

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info, send resuma and letter of interest to: Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188

Premiere Brother/Sister Camp in Massachusetts On-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all Team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball; 30 Terms Openings, also Golf, Archery, Riflary, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling; other openings include Performing Arts; Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board and travel. June 22nd-August 20th. Call for information. MAH-KEE-NAC(boys) 800-753-9118 DANBEE(girls) 800-392-3752. Recruiters will be On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am.-4pm. at the UMass Camp Day.

Exceptional Summer Opportunity- Camp Wayne, NE Pennsylvania Sports oriented Counselor/Specialist for all land/water sports including tennis, camping, climbing/ropes, rocketry, roller hockey, sailing/water-skiing, A&C, drama, video Campus Interviews Tuesday, March 11. Please call (800)737-9296

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7757 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7757 ext. A180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. on bus route. Heat and hot water included. $322/month. Call 546-0262

SugarLoaf Estates- Ultra modern two bedroom apartments, free heat/hot water, new kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst Great specials! Call 665-3856

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Bolster your immune system, improve your energy and focus with wild, organic, Super Blue Green Algae. 90-Day money back guarantee. Call independant distributor, Matthew Vargo at 256-1331 for more information or a free tape.

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS OBI 12" Woofers; $750/Pr. Call 253-8570

Laptop/Notebook $99. Hard drive $10, CD Drive $25, Stereo 566-3324-2

STEREO EQUIPMENT
Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0541

Color Printer $99. 546-8963

INSTRUCTION

Boxing Three privata 1/2 hour lessons. $69.95. Call (413)732-8817 In Amherst Tues. and Thurs. eve.

Bartend with University Bartending 50% student discount! On- campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity. Veta Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, E-Mail ZB1@INTERNATIONAL.ORG or call Brett Hrbeck at (317)334-1898

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666 4793

MISCELLANEOUS

11th Floor
Campus Center
Mon.-Fri.
4th - 12:30th
Sat.
5th - 12:30th

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. Available immediately. On bus route. Sugarloaf Estates. Keira (203)294-1336 Females only

Housemate wanted to share house on the Connecticut River. No pets or smoke. $250+ 586-8593

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall '97 Call Amy 546-0706

SERVICES

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

GRE
GMAT
Prep-Courses
30 hours
3 weeks
$795.00
(800)909-Prep

WEB PAGE DESIGN
Business or Personal E-mail at: AGRO-ART@MAIL.ME.COM

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available (800)773-8704. Cost $29. Applications close 2-24-97.

Pierclays by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton (413)585-0859

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. FS0018. (We are a research and publishing company).

www.smartbomb.com Serving all your smart drug needs.

TRAVEL

Scuba Spring Break Earn 2 credits March 16-22 Call (800)282-0977 for info

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $189 O/W Fly the world dirt cheap ONE WORLD TRAVEL 582-0629

Jamaica-Spring Break from $589 Go with whom you can trust Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97 CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $191 GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $850/week. (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

COAST to COAST
$ 189/ow $289/rt*
Hartford to Puerto Rico
$149/ow $269/rt
- Huge savings on ALL Domestic & Int'l Fares
- Fly the Major Airlines
- No Advance Purchase
- No Gimmicks
- Express Delivery
- Lowest Airfares. Anywhere

1-800-256-3491
DISCOUNT TICKETS Inc.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Europe $155, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009. airhitch@netcom.com or www.istcom.it/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed. From $99. (800)425-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. This means dorm room numbers, as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals or a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Failure to obtain correct or incorrect information is subject to an administration fee.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

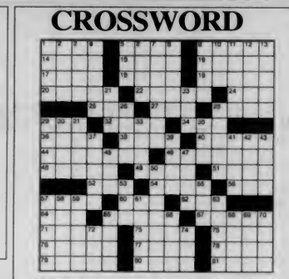
Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment
For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates

$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day



All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

E	L	B	A		T	R	O	T			A	L	E
G	O	A	L		R	U	P	E	E		A	B	E	D
A	U	S	T	R	A	L	I	A	N		B	O	D	E
D	D	E		A	L	E	E		S	E	A	M	A	N
			V	I	E	D		T	U	T	T	I
I	N	S	A	N	E		S	A	R	A		N	B	C
R	E	T	R	Y		L	I	B	E	L		A	L	A
A	W	R	Y		F	I	E	L	D		S	T	E	T
T	E	E		P	E	E	V	E		W	H	E	A	T
E	R	N		A	N	N	E		W	H	I	S	K	Y
		G	R	I	D	S		D	E	E	P
A	T	T	I	R	E		R	O	B	E		U	S	S
J	O	H	N		R	O	A	D	B	L	O	C	K	S
A	G	E	D		S	U	R	G	E		F	L	I	T
R	A	N			R	E	E	D			T	A	P	S

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Free from a habit
5. TV's "71 ___ Street"
9. Dressing, for one
14. Fixed charge
15. Latin actor (2 wds.)
16. Country on the Red Sea
17. Singer Burr
18. The King of Babalu
19. Watered silk
20. Appeal
22. Abra
23. Diamond or Changha
25. Generic addressee
27. Wind dir.
28. Assemble for action
29. Before bone or breaker
32. "I Must Be Him" singer
34. Sheltered side
36. Shortening
38. Speak cheekily
40. LaPorte or Lafbelly
44. Goes on horseback
46. Tyro
48. Shankar's guitar
50. Partial gamble
51. American, to a Brit
52. Not pos.
54. Whisper's antonym
56. Mors, to Duran
57. Hautboy mouthpiece
58. Summer, in Arles
62. Women's ___
64. Expedia teammate
65. "Boot" country
67. Self quantity
71. Elizabeth II's wear
73. Actor James
75. Scarlett's home
76. Carriers introduced in 1850
77. Scandinavian capital
78. Coffee type
79. Monocle
80. Son of Noah
81. Plants seeds

DOWN
1. Judicial decree
2. Waterspout spot
3. Egyptian deity
4. Abodes for birds
5. The head Clampett
6. Shoshoneans
7. Cads
8. Conducts to tracks
9. Exercise rooms
10. Olden czar
11. Author Zola
12. Strange
13. Prepared to propose
21. Command to a dog
23. Du Pont Co.'s home base
24. Sound like a heavy smoker
26. Substantial
29. Portions of outdoor exercise
30. Turkish regiment
31. Wipe
33. Allergic reaction
35. Conservationist gp.
37. Chan portrayer Warner
39. ___ Time, New Year
41. Cubs or Bears
42. Bluefin or bonito
43. Annoys a little
45. Drizzle or limonite, e.g.
47. Stream of song
50. Peeper protector
53. ___ lost
55. Something to button or zip
59. Uses a cradle
60. Actor Flynn
61. Destroy slowly
61. Mexican treats
63. Nibbles
66. Pressman's needs
68. Where Bill met Hillary
69. Defiance group: abbr.
70. Raven's kin
72. Painter Hofmann
73. Gum lump
74. ___ de guerre

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If you fall to go to this week, it'll be for-Europe, so take a close look at the object of your affection before giving your heart away. If you're thinking of a major purchase, now would be a good time to bite the bullet and make a down payment.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
An old dream gains new life this week with the return of someone from your past. Take them outside for some R&R and some quality time. You'll both appreciate the opportunity to catch up on past events. Gather all the information before offering your opinion.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Don't allow yourself to be distracted from a big decision. The time to act is now. A negative trend reverses itself, bringing new insight into another's behavior. Trust the judgment of an expert when it comes to your finances.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
To turn a dreary day into a happy one, try anticipating the needs of another person. Your thoughtful gesture could be the start of a new or renewed friendship. A romantic relationship flourishes in silence— nonverbal communication carries the moment.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Break out of an old rut, and you could find renewed enthusiasm for a whole range of activities throughout your life. Lean on an old friend if you're feeling unsure or insecure. But don't ask for advice—the answer to your question is closer than you think.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
It's a good time to plan a social event. Your personality is at its most magnetic, and you could end up drawing a dynamite crowd. Avoid taking center stage at work, however. The wrong people could be watching.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
An outdoor event turns into an adventure. To help things turn out for the best, try planning further ahead than usual. Catch up on your exercise. You could use a little extra energy in the near future, and physical activity will help you find it.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Start an anti-stress campaign to relieve tension at home. Just a little bit of relaxation will make a big difference. But remember—change begins with you. If you want to change your lifestyle, it's best to do one thing at a time, instead of several.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
To add zest to your social life, consider adding a new activity or hobby to your calendar. You could discover a new passion. Don't be afraid of failure. Just learn from your mistakes, and you can't lose.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
An athletic activity reaps great benefits for you—both physically and socially. Turn your energies to a project that's been on hold for awhile. Then, treat yourself to something really indulgent—a bubble bath or a gourmet dinner.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Although a situation might seem hopeless, channel your feelings of frustration into a positive effort for change. You could be surprised at the results. A loved one has a pleasant surprise—if you're not too distracted to listen to them.

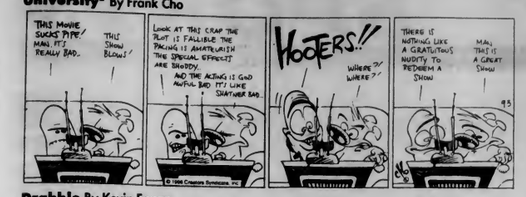
PISCES
February 19-March 20
Avoid the temptation to be a couch potato—there's too much going on. You're exceptionally ripe for learning experiences, so go out and try something new. You could discover a real talent. A little privacy also helps you renew your energies in time for a distasteful situation.

Starting Sunday, Feb. 25, the Collegian FYI section will be relocated to the Classifieds page. In addition, FYI entries will be limited to free Five College events only. Only entries fitting this description will be run in the FYI section. All other entries must be submitted through the Classifieds Department. For information about Classifieds rates, call 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

We Accept Credit Cards ✪ Drink 'til 1!
Eat 'til 1! Check it out!

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network



2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 Nachos After 10 Tonight

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 20, 1997

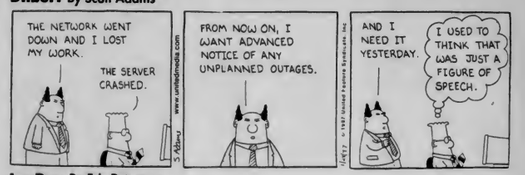
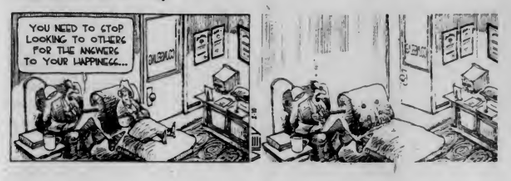
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Queen Elizabeth: 76 Years		Mystery! "Inspector Morse"		Wait for God	Keeping Up	T. Old House	Ancestors
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Moloney "Deep Cover"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Moloney "Deep Cover"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	★★★★ "Unforgiven" (1992, Western) (PA) Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman. (In Stereo)						News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★½ "Red Heat" (1988, Drama) Arnold Schwarzenegger.				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "Faith" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Cops (In Stereo)		Baywatch Nights "Ascension"		News	LAPD	N. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "Faith" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Martin	Living Single	New York Undercover		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Single Guy	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	ER "Faith" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		T. Old House	Drs. on Call	Mystery! "Inspector Morse"		Dangerfield (In Stereo)		Charlie Ross (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	★★★★ "Unforgiven" (1992, Western) (PA) Clint Eastwood, Gene Hackman. (In Stereo)						News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Med Abo. You: NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Chicago Blackhawks. (Live)							Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★½ "Hudson Hawk" (1991, Adventure) Bruce Willis, Danny Aiello.				★★½ "Fletch" (1985, Comedy) Chevy Chase, Joe Don Baker.
A&E	69	Quincy "A Dead Man's Truth"		Equalizer "Innervew"		Biography: Houdini		Ancient Mysteries		Unexplained		Law & Order "Guardian"
CNN	43	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Rus.	Moneyline
COM	53	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TY Nation	★★½ "Soul Man" (1986, Comedy) C. Thomas Howell.				A-List (R)	Dream On	Daily Show	TY Nation
DISC	67	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Red Star (R)		Wild Discovery: Arctic		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Cronkite Remembers		Wild Discovery: Arctic
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball: Michigan at Iowa. (Live)									Sportscenter
LIFE	63	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Hostage" (1988, Drama) Carol Burnett, Carrie Hamilton.				Living	Mysteries
MTV	70	Ren & Stimpy	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Unplugged (In Stereo)		Yo! (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	68	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Love Lucy	M.Monsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	66	Collision Course Earth		Time Trax (In Stereo)		Telwar "Zero Tolerance" (R)		Forever Knight "Pilot"		Sci-Fi Buzz	Inside Specs	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	62	Furniture Renovation		Hometime	Hometime (R)	Real America: 48 Hours		Revolutionary War (Part 5 of 6)		Electric Skies (R)		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	54	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		★★★★ "In the Heat of the Night" (1967, Mystery) Sidney Poitier, Rod Steiger.						★★★ "Duel at Diablo" (1966) James Garner.
USA	59	Renegade "Muscle Beach"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		Figure Skating: Reflections of Ice.				Wings	Wings
HBO	44	"In the Line of Duty: Street War" (1992, Drama) Ray Sharkey.				"Crossworlds" (1997) Rutger Hauer. PG-13		★★ "Serial Killer" (1996) Kim Delaney.				Gang War: Little Rock
MAX	45	(5:00) ★★★ "The Brady Bunch Movie" (1995) PG-13				★★ "Just Another Girl on the I.R.T." (1992) R		★★★ "Waiting to Exhale" (1995, Drama) Whitney Houston. R				"The Sweeper"
SHOW	46	(4:30) "Daddy"	★★★ "Urban Cowboy" (1980, Drama) John Travolta, Debra Winger. PG-13					★ "Showgirls" (1995, Drama) Elizabeth Berkley. (In Stereo) R				★ "Kazaam" (1996) PG

University® By Frank Cho



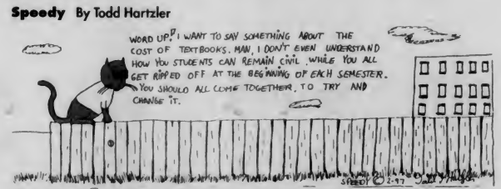
Robotman By Jim Meddick



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Non-Sequitur By Wiley



LeeDee By Eric Petersen

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

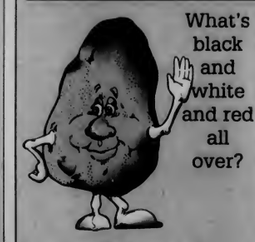
Generation X By Chris Lehman

Close to Home By John McPherson

Dave opens up his birthday gift from Mamie.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Frumpy The Clown By Judd Winick



Quote of the Day

"I've got enough ones to kill an elephant"

-Pizza Guy

Joke of the Day

What's black and white and red all over?

-A: A nun in a blender

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

Today's Staff

Jacob "spark plug" Michaels
Night Editor

Raghuram "fuel injector" Vadarevu
Copy Editor

Jennifer "muffler" Jutras
Photo Technician

Marc "distributor cap" Dionne
Production Supervisor

Sam "fanbelt" Smullin
Leon "driveshaft" Latino
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Hamburger, Cheese Pizza, Fiesta Rice and Cheese
DINNER: Chicken Tenders, Green Stuffed Guppy, Lemon Grill Burger, Bagel Dog

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll, Grilled Chicken, Macaroni Cheese
DINNER: Breaded chicken Tenders, Broccoli Stuffed Flounder

Worcester

LUNCH: Hamburger on a Roll, Bow Ties, Red Beans*, Oatburgers*
DINNER: Breaded Chicken Tenders, Lentil Chili*, Pastabilities

Berkshire

LUNCH: Cheese Pizza, Hamburger, Spicy Black Bean Burgers*
DINNER: Tenders, Green Stuffed Guppy, Lentil*, Noodles

SPORTS

Thursday, February 20, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Gym to pool transition works for Rodriguez

Junior on top of three UM lists

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

When athletes reach their junior and senior years in high school, most focus their attention on finding that perfect mix of school, coach, program and dollars — finding that combination which will allow them to reach their full athletic potential.

However, when Massachusetts diver Angelique Rodriguez reached the end of her high school career at Academia Perpetuo Socorro in Guaynabo, Puerto Rico, she had already forgone that stage.

Growing up in her native Puerto Rico, Rodriguez dedicated her life to gymnastics for eight years. As her high school gym career came to a close, she had already landed a spot on Puerto Rico's junior national team and represented her country at the national level. When injuries to her lower back struck from the constant pounding and jarring of gymnastics, she left parallel bars and balance beams behind her to focus on her second love, dancing.

At a time when other athletes of her caliber were looking at schools in the United States to rise to a higher level of competition, Rodriguez turned her attention to finding a school where she could major in dance in addition to an academic subject. When all was said and done, she left behind tropical Guaynabo for frosty Amherst. Not to compete in athletics, but to dance and study in UMass' School of Management.

Once at UMass, Rodriguez's competitive fire did not peter out.

In the beginning

"My brother graduated from high school with two or three from the water polo team. I knew Alex [Mujica, UMass class of 1996] and Frankie [Mariani, '96] since the seventh grade and from them I knew that they had diving," Rodriguez said. "So I said, 'If they are willing to take a gymnast, I'll try it' because I couldn't go back to gymnastics."

In her mind, diving seemed to combine two things she loved — the athleticism of gymnastics with the artistic grace of dance.

She was right.

In just two years of competitive diving, Rodriguez set three career UMass records, including the all-time record for one meter diving (10 dives) with a mark of 380.5. Overall, she boasts 13 individual first-place dual-meet finishes and holds the Atlantic 10's best score in the 10-attempt one-meter dive and the second-best score in the 11-attempt three-meter dive.

Turn to RODRIGUEZ, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Angelique Rodriguez, who is one of the best divers UMass has ever seen, has her sights set on the Olympic Games in Sydney.

UM not overlooking A-10 in bid to make tournament

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team should feel a bit better about its NCAA Tournament hopes than it did a month ago.

With a 16–10 record that includes a 9–3 mark in the Atlantic 10 conference, the Minutemen have all but solidified their chance to be on the floor in the big dance.

But before UMass waltzes into a first round match–up, it first has to finish its conference slate, including a game tonight against Fordham at the William D. Mullins Center (7 p.m.).

UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint knows the importance of wrapping up the league schedule with a strong performance.

"We gotta close out the league," Flint said. "We've got four more games in the league and it's a tight race. So we've got to close it out."

The Minutemen can ill afford a let down following their 78–61 stomping of then–No. 10 Maryland. But they have had nearly a week of rest, ample time to prepare for the Rams.

UMass, which was in the Also Receiving Votes category in this week's AP top 25 poll, had an easy go of it when it last met Fordham, stomping the Rams 75–54. The Minutemen shot a season–high 55.6 percent from the floor in the Feb. 3 meeting at Rose Hill Gym.

In that game, the Minutemen jumped out to a 40–26 halftime advantage, and held a second–half lead as large as 29 points, before finishing off the Rams.

UMass will look to continue its dominance of this series tonight. A win would give the Minutemen their eighth consecutive 10–conference win season, a mark that would tie UMass with West Virginia for the second–longest 10– conference win string in the Atlantic 10. Temple holds the top mark at nine seasons.

UMass is currently being led by sophomore big man Lari Ketner. The center claimed last week's Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week honors for his contributions in the Minuteman victories over St. Bonaventure and Maryland.

Ketner is averaging 11.5 points per game and 7.5 rebounds per game, while adding 2.0 blocks per game.

Ketner has been helped in the frontcourt by senior forward Tyrone Weeks, who has been a relatively unheralded leader in the paint for UMass this year.

These two players will be the cause of much concern for the Fordham bench, as the Rams were literally unable to stop UMass' attack down low. Weeks recorded 17 points and nine rebounds in 20 minutes of work in the first game, even though both he and Ketner faced foul trouble.

After tonight's game with Fordham, the Minutemen are off on a two–game road trip, on which they will visit Dayton and St. Joseph's.

William D. Mullins Center
7:00 p.m.
Massachusetts
vs.
Fordham
Radio: WMMP FM & WMUA FM

UMass swim teams head to Atlantic 10s

Minutemen hope to repeat as conference champs

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

Well, it's that time again. Time for the Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team to head out to Buffalo, N.Y., and compete in the Atlantic 10 Championships.

Today, the Minutemen splash west to defend their A–10 title in what coach Russ Yarworth, now in his 18th season, expects to be a grueling meet. The top opponents should be Fordham, which UMass just beat in a close dual meet two weeks ago, and LaSalle, George Washington, and St. Bonaventure.

Last year, UMass went into the meet with no expectations other than capturing the title. This year, they are the team to beat, and are looking to keep the championship where it belongs, here in Amherst.

Swimmers like sophomore Brian Wisniewski and junior sprinter Sean Anderson will be expected to lead their squad through the rough waters in Buffalo. Last year's championship

Turn to MRN'S SWIM, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior John Koritkoski and the UMass men's swim team will try to defend its A–10 title at the league championships, which start today.

Minutewomen relying on young and old alike in meet

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team, this is what a season of work and dedication has been about — the Atlantic 10 Championships.

After a third–place performance last year, the Minutewomen begin their quest for a league crown today at Erie Community College in Buffalo, N.Y.

With a strong contingent of swimmers and divers, the UMass squad is not resting its hopes on any one person, but rather looking at the meet as a team effort.

Senior Jessica Farley and junior Angelique Rodriguez bring experience from last year's meet to this year's championships. Farley took home fourth in the 200 individual medley last year, while Rodriguez captured third place in the three–meter dive and sixth in the one–meter.

This year, Farley has turned in the best time in 14 individual dual–meet events and has recorded nine individual second place performances.

"Jessica is ready to finish her career in fine fashion," coach Bob Newcomb said. "She's been one of our top swimmers for the past four years and we expect her to finish her career at the top at the A–10 meet."

Rodriguez, meanwhile, has compiled 13 individual firsts and has recorded the A–10's best score in the 10–attempt one–meter dive.

But the Minutewomen also have a solid corps of younger swimmers ready to take a crack at the A–10 Championships. Freshman Lia Lansky has 11 first place finishes this year and holds the third best time in conference for the 200 butterfly this year (2:08.76).

Freshman Andrea Spencer has been a part of seven victorious relay teams this year, and added to it with 13 first place finishes of her own. In addition, Spencer holds the A– 10's seventh best time in the 100 fly this season (1:00.17).

"She is one of our best freshman swimmers," Newcomb said. "She should really make her presence felt at the championship meet."

Junior Barbara Hickey, junior Karen Sonnwald and senior Krystin Capenter are all upperclassmen who will lend some depth to the UMass group.

Can Avalanche afford Sakic?

Show me the money...

The Colorado Avalanche further solidified their potential dynasty this week, signing Swede Peter Forsberg to a three–year, $14–million contract.

Don't need Jerry MaGuire to get that kind of money for Forsberg, his talent explodes all over the ice. He has game, and is also on the verge of being the best overall forward in the NHL.

Ask the Bruins' Jozef Stumpel. He got schooled by Forsberg last Tuesday night — getting stick–checked, then body–checked, while watching him set up a scoring chance from his sore butt parked on the boards.

But the question remains: what do you do with Joe Sakic?

The reigning Conn Smythe Award winner is still un–signed for next season, and one wonders where the 'Lanche is going to find the money. This team is losing their jersey playing at "Ronald" MacNichols Arena, and postseason cash will be at a premium.

You see, Sakic just came off of a scary injury, where the cut from opponent's skate blade just missed ripping through his Achilles tendon. That would have been a disaster of mythic proportions, but his loss was not a disaster for Colorado.

JORMA KANSANEN ON THE NHL

Up to Tuesday's night game with the Bruins, the team went 14–4–2 without his inimitable services. The team is already so deep with quality role players that, like Freddy Krueger, a wound like the loss of Sakic almost heals instantaneously, like they then beat you then a bloody pulp.

A line with Sakic centering it is a mega–mega–bonus, but the line of Valeri Kamensky–Forsberg–Claude Lemieux is clearly the top one of the team. Yet, on Tuesday night, it was the heads up play of the Burnaby, B.C. native that won them the game against Boston.

With :11 left in overtime, Sakic was the one who kept the puck in the offensive zone. At the same time, he throws the puck on net, setting up the gamewinner from Lemieux with a couple of ticks on the clock. This player will make these kind of special plays for a team... all season long.

What do you do? Of course, sign Sakic at all costs. But salary cap restrictions come in, and you risk losing those role players who have helped you to the top. It is a very intriguing situation, and it can only get more interesting.

The key will be how far Colorado goes in the playoffs, and how many fans buy up all that beautiful 'Lanche merchandise. The franchise will need as much income as possible to resign Sakic to Forsberg–esque numbers.

Actually, I'm stuck on the proposition of buying a Forsberg jersey myself (because he is awesome), but that all goes to national affiliation. If you don't already know, I'm a Finn, and the Finns don't like the Swedes too much.

If I buy a jersey with a Swedish name on it I could be literally hunted down by my homies, and then be made to draw a sleigh naked over the frozen tundra of Lapland.

But, oh my God, I digress...

• I hereby use this space to state that if the New York Islanders make the playoffs over the Boston Bruins this year, I will recant all negative comments I have made about said sad team over the course of this year.

I received a letter from an obtuse, I mean, upset Mike Milbury (aka a freakin' psycho fan) this week, confronting me about my negative comments concerning said sad team. I knew it wasn't him, but Nassau Coliseum was spelled wrong. But at my own judgment, I will use this space if said sad situation occurs to admit that the other New York minor league franchise is better than Boston's minor league franchise. Yet, there is an escape clause here...

A la MaGuire, if both teams do not make the play-

Turn to NHL page 11

Nets–Mavs deal before deadline

After the All–star break comes one of the most exciting times in the NBA: the trade deadline.

The operative word in this phrase is "dead," because once midnight strikes, teams will have literally resurrected themselves for a good playoff berth or buried themselves until judgement day at the draft.

Two teams that wasted no time in capitalizing on the deadline were the desperate Dallas Mavericks and the ever– pitiful New Jersey Nets. New Dallas general manager Don Nelson proved he was the shrewd businessman he was reputed to be by acquiring from the Nets: Robert Park, Ed O'Bannon, Khalid Reeves, and a legitimate center in Shawn Bradley.

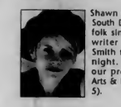
Gregory H. Casimir ON THE NBA

And it seems that the treacherous Coach Cal finally caught a conscience and decided to do right by his new team by acquiring some players with talent. The Nets now have Jimmy Jackson, George McCloud, and Chris Gatling — all proven scorers. This acquisition may be just the prescription to help jump start this ailing team.

In other news...

Yeah, the Bulls are still winning.

The New York Knicks are doing well but their situation just got a lot more hectic. Pat Riley, being the coaching strategist that he is, picked up Jamal Mashburn in this whole Nets–Mavs trade, adding yet another cannon to the "good ship Miami Heat." Their shot at beating the Bulls for Eastern Conference champs just improved.



In lieu of all this excitement, the sad news comes to the Los Angeles Lakers with Shaq's injury. Unless he gets well soon, their champi-

Turn to NBA, page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 87 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, February 21, 1997

No Repairs needed

Shawn Colvin, the South Dakota–born folk singer– songwriter lullabies Smith this Sunday night. Check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Just another day at the office

Tyrone Weeks tied his career–high with 22 points UMass' pounding of visiting Fordham last night (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Parliament debates abortion in Portugal

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Despite the impassioned arguments of the church, the Portuguese are considering easing restrictions on abortions in their Roman Catholic country, where an estimated 16,000 illegal abortions are performed each year.

The argument moves to Parliament yesterday where lawmakers were to consider proposals by the Communist Party to legalize abortion through the 12th week of pregnancy in all cases and through the 22nd week in the case of "serious illness or deformation."

Noting that the vote could go either way, the Lisbon daily Publico carried the front-page headline: "Tension until the end."

Hundreds of anti-abortion campaigners took part today in a silent march on Parliament. Some held placards saying, "Thank you, Mother."

Dozens of pro-choice activists unfurled banners on the steps of Parliament late yesterday. They planned a larger vigil outside Parliament today.

The Roman Catholic Church has been outspoken in its opposition to any relaxation of abortion restrictions.

"All and any attacks on human life must be repelled," said Januario Torgal Ferreira, secretary of the church's Episcopal Conference.

NATION

Students evaluate college honor code

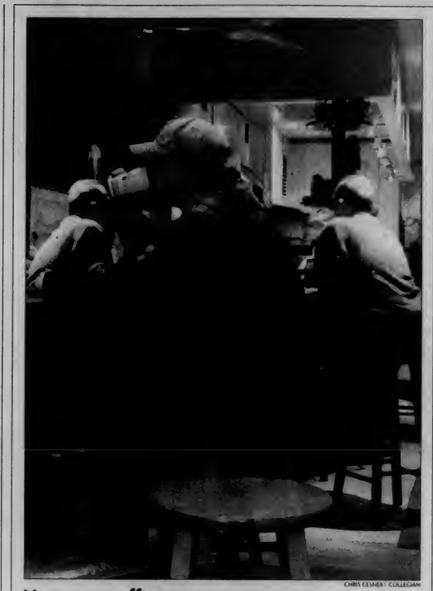
STAUNTON, Va. (AP) — It's an atmosphere of trust that few people experience.

Students at Mary Baldwin College can leave books, laptop computers and other possessions unguarded without fear of theft. They can schedule their own tests during exam week and can take them without a professor watching.

No one watches, because the 1,200 women who attend this liberal arts college pledge they will not lie, cheat, steal, or pass off others' writing as their own. No one watches, that is, except other students, who police student conduct and try their peers as elected members of honor councils.

Such is the honor system, a carryover from the 19th century, when elite Southern notions of honor blended with efforts to bring self-government to the campus. Students in jeans, sweat shirts and even T-shirts on an unseasonably warm Wednesday gathered at the white-columned campus to reflect on whether the system works as well as it should.

They asked whether a system based on trust may foster mistrust because of the secrecy that marks its working and the absence of fixed penalties. Students don't always know who gets punished or what the penalty is, or who gets off or why.



"I turned in someone who cheated on a final exam," said Suzanna Hicks, 22, a senior from Indianapolis. "That person was back the next year."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 45	HIGH: 65 LOW: 55	HIGH: 30 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

CHRIS CESNER/ COLLEGIAN

Mmmm... coffee.

Scott Traister, a sophomore S.O.M. major, enjoys a tasty warm beverage.

Trip to China & Korea recounted; Ferguson explores Asian feminism

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

Ann Ferguson, Director of Women's Studies at the University of Massachusetts, shared her experiences in Asia with an audience of about 25 women at the Five College Research Center last night.

Ferguson began with the disclaimer, "I am not an expert in Far East studies. I am speaking from the perspective of a tourist." On that note she distributed photos of several tourist sites she visited in China and Korea.

Ferguson noted that "Women's Studies in China did not start with the Beijing Conference in 1995," but actually with Women's Studies pioneer, Li Xiaojiang's model of the problems of Women's Studies in a Marxist society. Xiaojiang's theory did not reject Marxism but offered a critique. The ruling Chinese "believe they already have the last word in Women's Studies because they have Marx and Engles' views," said Ferguson.

Xiaojiang's model helped to open Chinese people's minds to theories other than Marxist.

"She figured out a way to do something seen as marginal that had huge effects on women, said Ferguson. The Tianjin Normal University, based on Xiaojiang's model, allowed women to do extra work with Chinese literature, oral history projects with rural women and lectures.

During her stay in China one of the immediate similarities Ferguson noticed between China and the United States was the "Generation X problem," that is created by the commercialization of the beauty industry in the media.

"There is a generation gap between the younger generation and the older generation who went through the cultural revolution," Ferguson said.

While in China, Ferguson gave two talks, one on feminist philosophy and the other on prostitution and HIV/AIDS. She also spoke to students at Tianjin Normal University on Women's Studies and Western Feminism.

Key points of debate in China was the fact that feminist philosophy challenged disciplinary ideas. The Chinese believe that feminist philosophers should be philosophers first instead of rejecting their discipline for Women's Studies.

"Feminist philosophy shouldn't reject disciplinary ideas, but should add to and tell the truth about them," said Ferguson. She added the Chinese were also surprised to hear that American "ethics of care were challenged, which challenged the traditional caring roles of women."

Ferguson then traveled to Korea, where she only spent two days. She visited Ewha Women's University in Seoul where the discussion was much more "democratic."

Ewha Women's University, was established in 1886 by the Christian missionary Mary F. Scranton and became a Christian private enclave that became feminist orientated. They established their first Women's Studies program in 1975, about the same time as the U.S., according to Ferguson.

Graduates of Ewha University were lesbian and housewives who found there were no jobs in Women's Studies, which Ferguson found "ironic compared to the United States."

These women either became activists, organizing women's shelters, protested prostitution or remained housewives seeking more power in traditional families," said Ferguson.

While in Korea Ferguson found that people were more open to discussion about sexuality than the Chinese. Some Chinese feminists were worried that "once women's friendships are sexualized women will lose power," said Ferguson, because by reinforcing patriarchy women will be threatening men.

Ferguson concluded her talk by stating, "Western feminists need to understand our ignorance. We should not assume our theories are higher than others. We can learn from them."

Passamaquoddy leader speaks on native stories, culture, languages

By Andee Fu
Collegian Correspondent

An ex–tribe leader hosted a gathering, sponsored by the University of Massachusetts anthropology department last night, to increase appreciation of the art and culture of Native American peoples.

Allen J. Sockabasin, 53, shared with students and faculty about the stories, cultures and the languages of his tribe, the Passamaquoddy.

Sockabasin was born at the Passamaquoddy native village of Peter Dana Point, near Princeton, Maine, in 1944.

Living in a family of 11 children, Sockabasin left school after completing the sixth grade to support his father, older sister and younger brother.

According to Sockabasin, a lack of schooling contributed to his self–consciousnes with public speaking.

"I used to have such a hard [time] when it came to public speaking, because I always speak the wrong words at the wrong place," Sockabasin said.

However, last night, in front of the students and faculty, Sockabasin delivered a presentation on the Passamaquoddy culture without hesitation.

Sockabasin said that the Passamaquoddy people were a part of a group of tribes referred to commonly as the Wabanaki

Turn to ALLEN, page 2

Faculty Senate approves of UM membership in AAU

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate voted yesterday to support Chancellor David K. Scott's Strategic Action goal of the University of Massachusetts achieving membership in the Association of American Universities (AAU).

The AAU is a group of 60 major research universities in the United States and Canada known for both the quality and the quantity of their scholarship and research. There are currently 20 land–grant universities with membership in the AAU, including the Universities of Arizona and California, Michigan State, Ohio State, Penn State and the Massachusetts Institute for Technology (MIT).

Scott said that he believes the inclusion of UMass in the AAU as a land–grant institution would place the University in an excellent position for leadership in higher education.

"The idea of the AAU land–grant is continuing our investment in teaching and learning, research and discovery and outreach and public service," Scott said.

Scott said that in order to obtain membership in the AAU, the University needs to rank highly in comparison to other AAU universities in a variety of areas, including student/faculty ratio, federal funding of research, the percentage of freshmen in the top 10 percent of their high school class and the average SAT score of enrolled freshmen.

Scott noted that the process of admission to the AAU will require both effort and time, and estimated a 5 to 10 year period for gaining entrance.

The first step to moving towards this goal, according to Scott, is to gather data and information to allow the University to make decisions on how to best allocate the University's resources.

"We have begun to compile data to [allow us to] make wise decisions on where we make investments in the University," Scott said. "Infrastructure, the library, an honors college — all these things will be considered."

The Faculty Senate also voted to recommend to the University administration that the Honors program at UMass be transformed into an Honors College.

The majority of the Faculty Senate responded enthusiastically to the Special Report of the Academic Matters Council of the Faculty Senate, which recommended the creation of an honors college from the current honors program.

"This is for the good of our students, for the good of our faculty and the good of the commonwealth," said Professor Kandula Sastry of the physics department. "And this is the right time to do it."

Scott noted that the creation of an Honors College at UMass Amherst would fulfill many of the goals of the New England Board of Higher Education (NEBHE) in the creation of a Commonwealth College.

The Provost's office is currently working on a proposal for the creation of an honors college and will be submitting to the NEBHE in the near future.

Provost Patricia H. Crosson said that the proposal to the NEBHE will include many of the recommendations of the Special Report of the Academic Matters Council.

Ramos explains research to Latino women in Springfield

By Kiera Meehan
Collegian Correspondent

Flavia Ramos, a doctoral candidate at the University of Massachusetts Center of Education, spoke yesterday about her research involving elderly Latino women.

While working in Springfield with a group called Latinos Unidos, Ramos felt that the women of the group would benefit from a separate forum and organized a group of elderly Latino women.

She taught them to use a concept which she calls "Foto Dialogo" to discuss issues affecting their lives. Foto Dialogo is a term derived from Foto Novella, which Ramos describes as "cartoon soap operas printed in Spanish media."

According to Ramos Foto Dialogo is a projective technique applied to dialogue skill development in groups and individuals through community mapping, the use of story telling and life lines in interviews, the use of pictures to illustrate life stories, and the use of pictures and text to discuss oppression theory.

Ramos conducted one on one interviews with each of the women in the group.

"I would draw a life line and ask them to tell me their stories... I would think about what they were saying and draw the pictures myself. Then I would bring the pictures to the group and they would make up stories even though the pictures came from their own life," Ramos said.

The women discuss issues such as domestic abuse, access to education, housing and health care, substance abuse, the death of relatives due to AIDS, drug abuse, or crime, lack of support systems, loneliness, mental illness and emotional instability (many of the women were at one point institutionalized), faith and spirituality racism and horizontal oppresion (intergroup discrimination).

"One woman will look at a picture of a hospital situation and describes her own experience as a patient in a mental hospital... A picture of a boy smoking leads a woman to describe how her son got involved with a gang and had to flee to Puerto Rico," Ramos said.

The themes of there stories "are interwinved with questions of faith, Santeria and menopause. One women describes her hot flashes as a spell put on her by her husband's lover," Ramos said.

Ramos hopes that through her work she will be able to investigate individuals perceptions of social reality, create a safe environment for women to share their life experiences, to make connections with and discover commonalities in womens lives, and to help the women move away from a blame the victim mode.

"These women are learning to come together to take action... to see their part in the changes in the area of Springfield where they live," Ramos said.

Ramos is also the author and illustrator of children's books, several of which have been published in her native Brazil.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Flavia Ramos spoke to a group of elderly Latino women in Springfield yesterday.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person, to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Friday, Feb. 21

Discussion — Dr. Brian Walker, director of the Institute of Irish Studies at the Queen's University of Belfast, will meet with all interested students, faculty and staff from 11 a.m.–noon in Bartlett Hall, room 474, to discuss the new M.A. in Irish Studies program just underway at Queen's. For more info, contact Jim Kelly at the Du Bois Library, 545–0058.

Meeting — The Campus Crusade for Christ will hold a "Real Life" weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in room 126 Hasbrouk Lab. We will have an ethnic student panel with a discussion on "Racial Reconciliation."

Music — The Blue Moon Gallery Cafe in Amherst will hold an Open Mic Night at 8 p.m.

Saturday, Feb. 22

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe will hold Mission Improvable, an improv comedy show, in the Campus Center basement at 8 p.m. Free.

Concert — UMass Hillel will sponsor a concert by Klezamir at 8 p.m. in the Bluewall. Great music and dancing with Klezamir music. Suggested donation $3–5 (all donations will go to charities).

Sunday, Feb. 23

Concert — A benefit for the Amherst Survival Center will be held at 4 p.m. at the Nacul Center, 592 Main St., Amherst, featuring music by Flaherty/ Colbourne/ Downs, Sax/ Drums/ Bass, and Brett Larner, Solo Koto, and a film by Maya Deren and Stan Brakhage. $3 donation and 2 cans of food for admission.

Meeting — The Hindu Students' Organization of UMass will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 917. For more info call Anant at 548–9097.

Meeting — The Massachusetts Coalition for A Democratic Future/Young Democrats of Massachusetts (MCDF) will be holding their monthly meeting at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center. Anyone who is under 35 and interested in getting involved in Democratic politics is encouraged to attend.

Monday, Feb. 24

Meeting — The Golden Key National Honor Society will hold a general member meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 901. Please bring your ideas and suggestions.

Tuesday, Feb. 25

Lecture — Michael Thelwell, professor of Afro–American Studies, will be lecturing on Civil Rights Activist Kwame Turé, formerly Stoakley Carmichael from 7–8:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. The event is free and open to the public.

Notices

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www–ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance club invites everyone to come dance with us every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15–7 p.m. at 101 Totman Gym. Newcomer Waltz/ Chacha class begins Feb. 25. Intermediate/advanced instruction by a pro every Wednesday, 6:15–7:30 p.m. All instructions are free. For more info, call Kevin Murphy at 549–4036.

SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Government are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.

Auditions — The UMass Theatre Guild will hold auditions for The Heidi Chronicles on Feb. 21 at 7 p.m. and Feb. 22 at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 805. There are five female roles and three male roles. Please visit the Theatre Guild office in the Student Union if you have any questions.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Support group — Overeaters Anonymous, a group of individuals who share an addiction to food and suffer from compulsive eating and other eating disorders, will hold weekly meetings on Saturdays at 10 a.m. in the Campus Center. The only requirement for membership is the desire to stop eating. There are no dues or fees. Donations are strictly voluntary. For more info, call (617)641–2303.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Support group — A Women in Relationships Therapy Group, an ongoing therapy and support group for women who want to improve difficult relationships with friends, parents, children and colleagues, lovers or partners, led by Rebecca Reid, will meet Mondays from 7:30–9 p.m. in Amherst. Sliding scale fee. For information call 253–5494.

Volunteer work — Womanshelter/Companeras, serving the greater Holyoke, Chicopee area needs volunteers to help battered women and their children begin to live lives free of violence. If you are interested in answering the hotline, advocacy, fundraising, working with teens, or our Legal Emergency Assistance program, call Edith Jennings, Monday–Friday, 8 a.m.–4 p.m. at (413) 538–9717.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage

Feb. 19
A two vehicle accident occurred in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

Animal Complaint

Feb. 19
In injured opossum was taken to Tillson farm on Thatcher Way.
A bat was removed from Baker Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior

Feb. 18
An individual from Brett Residence Hall reported being threatened.
There was a dispute between roommates in James Residence Hall.
Feb. 19
An individual was causing a disturbance in the Worcester Dining Hall.
There was a report of an intoxicated individual on a PVTA bus.

Assist Agency

Feb. 19
UMPD assisted Hadley police at the scene of an accident on the Route 116 exit ramp.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering

Feb. 19
A vehicle was broken into in parking lot 22 on University Drive.

Health/Safety Hazard

Feb. 20
A tree fell down across Eastman Lane. Amherst Health and Safety was notified.

Larceny

Feb. 18
Staff in the Fine Arts Center reported that a refrigerator was stolen last weekend.
An individual in Kennedy Residence Hall reported that her license stolen.

Traffic Stop

Feb. 20
Benjamin D. Regan, 18, of 16 Homestead St., Brockton, was arrested on North Pleasant Street for operating a vehicle on the sidewalk, failure to use care when starting, stopping, turning and backing up his vehicle, operating under the influence of alcohol, transport and possession of alcohol and possession of a fake I.D.

Vandalism

Feb. 18
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 22 on Massachusetts Avenue.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 63 on Stockbridge Road.
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Feb. 19
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 22 on University Drive.

■ Allen

continued from page 1

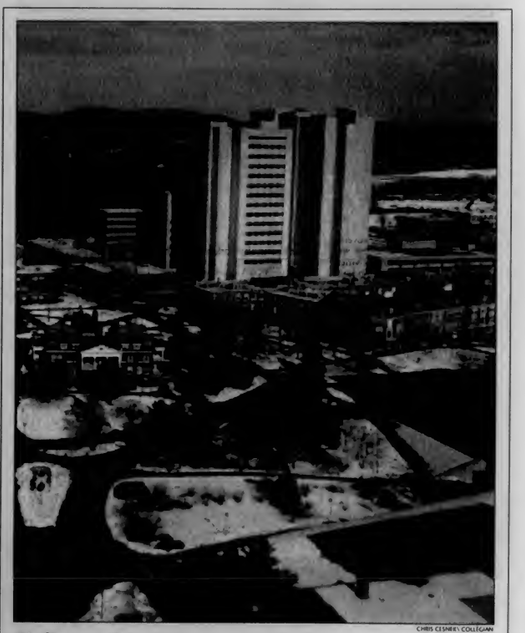
Confederacy, or the People of the Dawn.

The confederacy also included the Maliseet, the Micmac and the Penobscot tribes.

Sockabasin also spoke on the difficulties growing up as a Native American; as he was constantly caught between white injustices and his Passamaquoddy heritage.

"I remembered sitting in a movie theater, but not being able to sit with the white kids," Sockabasin said. "It's not because these white kids don't want to sit with me. It's because the parents of these kids taught them not to sit with me. Just because I'm a Native [American]."

Sockabasin passed around an eagle feather he earned as a young man. He encouraged the attendees of the gathering to share what they learned with others.



The feather was passed around a circle composed of the attendees. According to Sockabasin, native people believe that there is a "tremendous" amount of positive energy within the circle.

Therefore, Sockabasin said, native people like to gather together in a circle.

Many Native American student were moved to tears by Sockabasin's courage.

According to Sockabasin, the struggles of Native American people have not become less difficult.

Sockabasin said that although everyone has their own circle of life to complete, individuals can learned from each other in order to live a peaceful and harmonous life with the Earth.

CHRIS CESMER/ COLLEGIAN

Bird's eye view...

A typical view for any bird when flying over the UMass campus.

NOTICE

Starting Sunday, Feb. 23, the Collegian FYI section will be relocated to the Classifieds page of the newspaper. In addition, FYI entries will be limited to free Five College events only. Only entries fitting this description will run in the FYI section. All other entries must be submitted through the Classifieds Department. For information about Classifieds rates, call 545–3500.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
COMING MARCH 5!
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESENTS
"Something Every Friday"
VENTRILOQUIST TAYLOR MASON
February 21, 1997
8:00pm
Bluewall Cafe
FREE
Combining music, comedy, ventriloquism, audience participation, and his incurably happy optimism, TAYLOR MASON performs regularly on network and cable television, headlines every major comedy club, and has more than 750 killer college shows to his credit.
STARRING IN DAYLIGHT
The movie "Daylight" will be shown immediately after the performance.
For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm
This program is made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian.

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Mark McGrath • Photos by Kenneth W.P. Scott

How do you feel about privatization on the UMass campus?

"Privatization is something that might bring businesses more revenue, but I think it would be helpful to guarantee student jobs, especially at the management levels, keeping students busy and giving them the experience they will need upon graduation."

B.K. DeLong
junior, BDIC
Wilbraham

"I think it's fine as long as you're increasing [the] quality of services while not draining from the University or its students."

Brad Graff
graduate, chemical engineering
Bridgeton, N.J.

"I think it will be detrimental to the University if outside businesses start to come in and take over. I'm more for supporting student businesses because it's good experience for them. The corporations come in to take money from students, where students should be supporting students."

Rhonda Robinson
senior, Russian
Springfield

"I would support the privatization. I think that the companies would give us better quality and prices."

Chris Brittain
sophomore, urban forestry
Lee

"I think it's a real shame. Student businesses are great. They really add to the whole culture of the University. It would be a real shame if we lost them. Privatization is all about dollars and cents and not about community. It's like making money the bottom line."

Kennet Dall
senior, BDIC
Hanson

"I don't think it would be so great because on campus, smaller places are more a part of the University and they're not so commercialized. Places like People's Market give students more opportunities to be part of the business."

Karyn Lawrence
sophomore, pre-communications
Wrightstown, Penn

"I wouldn't be impressed with bringing McDonald's to campus. It would take away from other businesses like [People's Market], which is a student co-op. It wouldn't be right to have a monopolizing company come in and take away from what's already here."

Chris Schilling
junior, wildlife/fisheries conservation
Dennis

Parent workshops to be held child raising methods taught

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

This February, the University of Massachusetts Commuter Services and the Housing Resource Center are teaming up respectively with the HCAC Amherst Family Center and the Amherst Children's Services Department to offer a series of workshops that will provide instruction in child raising and child care.

Starting on Feb. 23, the first of an eight–week series of workshops for parents will begin at the Bangs Center on Boltwood Walk in Amherst center.

These sessions are funded by the School–Linked Initiative Services Project and the Executive Office of Health and Human Services.

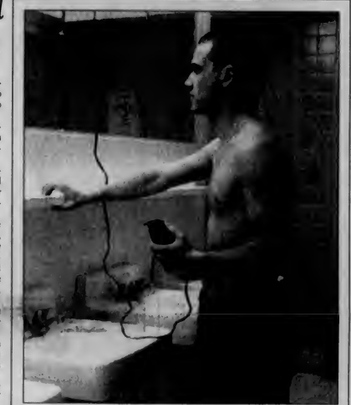
Some topics that will be covered during these weekly meetings will incorporate child–parent activities, information on how to help your child excel in school, stress–busting techniques, and managing time with children. Daycare will be provided for children K–6.

This sequence of workshops will be held from 12:30–3 p.m. every Sunday. Brunch will be provided to the participants, free of charge.

"This is a hopeful venture," said Joanne Levinson of UMass Commuter Services. "These are the first set of family based programs to be introduced to UMass."

According to Levinson, the workshops were jointly invented to help parents prepare their children to do well in school.

"We'll be providing theater activities and storytelling for the children while the parents attend the workshops," Levinson said.



The second assortment of workshops, set to begin on Feb. 24, will provide dinner–time workshops for families with babies and young children. They will run from 6–9 p.m.

Continuing every consecutive Monday evening for eight weeks, these workshops will cover an array of topics including children's literacy, analyzing child behavior, and health care tips for children. A free dinner and daycare will be provided, as well.

These particular workshops will be held at the Amherst Family Center (AFC), which is located at the intersection of Rte.63 and Pine St. in North Amherst Center on the Sunderland and South Deerfield bus lines.

Transportation can be arranged for registered participants of either set of workshops.

These workshops are free and open to the public. Any parents interested in registering are encouraged to call 545– 2309 or 549–3590. Space is limited.

CHRIS CESMER/ COLLEGIAN

Take it all off

Tyler Adams, a sophomore Econ major, is about to take a one-fourth inch of hair off his head.

10,000 to attend memorial in honor of Deng Xiaoping

By John Leicester
Associated Press

BEIJING — Ten thousand people — none of them foreigners — will be invited to a memorial service for Deng Xiaoping next week that will gather his successors together as they begin to govern without Communist China's greatest reformer.

On Day 1 of the post-Deng era yesterday, there were few outpourings of grief for the tiny man whose economic revolution transformed China from the rice-roots up. That the stock markets still traded, that offices still hummed, reflected the greater freedom Deng gave people to improve their lives.

Deng's successors in the Communist Party want to keep it that way — business basically as usual — during six days of official mourning that started yesterday with flags at half-staff and will end with Tuesday's memorial.

A 459-member funeral committee led by Deng's handpicked successor, Communist Party leader and President Jiang Zemin, ordered sirens throughout China sounded for three minutes when the memorial starts Tuesday morning in the mammoth Great Hall of the People beside Tiananmen Square.

The 10,000 invitees will include members of the Communist Party, government, military and other influential groups. For Jiang and the collective leadership he heads, the memorial will serve to rally officials as they embark on a future without Deng.

No foreigners will be invited because Deng, who retired his last post in 1990, officially was a private citizen — a party member with no title higher than "comrade." But Xinhua, the government news agency, reported tributes flooding into China from leaders worldwide.

U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright cut short a visit to China that had been scheduled for Monday and Tuesday. State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said in Moscow yesterday that Albright would compress her talks with senior leaders into one day, Monday, and leave for home early Tuesday morning.

In keeping with his wishes, Deng's eyes will be donated for transplant and his ashes scattered at sea. In a letter to the Communist Party, his family asked that there be no traditional bowing before Deng's corpse and that "our grief should be expressed in the simplest, solemnest way."

The low-key memorial, with Deng's ashes to be placed in a casket covered by the Communists' red flag, reflects Deng's rejection of the slav-

Judge says new technology can decide whether or not gun killed King

By Woody Baird
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — New technology exists that could determine whether James Earl Ray's rifle killed the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. in 1968, a judge said yesterday.

Judge Joe Brown's decision must now be reviewed by the Tennessee Court of Criminal Appeals before Brown can rule on Ray's request for a new test of the weapon.

Ray is asking for that test in an attempt to take back his guilty plea and go to trial.

Brown could not say when the appeals court will make its review. Ray, 68, pleaded guilty to murder in 1969 but reversed himself almost immediately and has been requesting a trial ever since. He claims he was set up to be the fall guy for the real killers. He contends the hunting rifle found at the murder scene with his fingerprints on it was put there by conspirators trying to frame him.

To have new tests, Ray's lawyers must first convince the courts that improved technology can determine if the rifle found at the scene killed King. They would then have to show that test results in Ray's favor help prove his innocence.

Ray has drawn support in his bid for a trial from civil rights leaders and from the family of King. Both his widow, Coretta Scott King, and son Dexter King urged Brown to put Ray on trial. "Even if no new light is shed on the facts concerning my husband's assassination, at least we and the nation can have the satisfaction of knowing that justice has run its course in this tragedy," Mrs. King said at yesterday's hearing.

Robert Hathaway, an assistant forensics examiner for Rhode Island, said new technology could prove another rifle fired the shot that killed King on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in April 1968.

That technology is a scanning electron microscope, which Hathaway said wasn't available until the mid 1980s.

"Knowing that the magnification is much greater and better it is an additional tool that can be used to possibly resolve the conflict over whether it was fired from this gun," said Hathaway, who spent 17 years in the crime lab for the Connecticut State Police.

Hathaway said the FBI used technology available at the time to test the bullet and rifle, but there has been "no matching of the death slug to the rifle itself."

The U.S. House Select Committee on Assassinations had the King rifle tested in the 1970s, but because the slug was so mangled, could not establish beyond a scientific doubt that it was the murder weapon.

Tests showed, however, that King was killed by the same kind of gun and that lead in the death slug matched unspent bullets found with the rifle.

Hathaway proposed a committee of three firearms experts fire test shots from the weapon and compare those with the bullet in evidence.

Ray's attorney, William Pepper, said he expects the tests on the rifle "to exclude it for all time as the murder weapon." Before the hearing, prosecutors had said Ray has used up his appeals in Tennessee courts.

"He's the confessed killer. Nothing else out there can really be looked upon as credible evidence," said John Campbell, a state prosecutor.

State and federal courts have upheld Ray's guilty plea seven times.

Conspiracy theorists have argued for years that Ray, a bungling, petty criminal, could not have pulled off the assassination alone. And their theories, some of which include allegations of government wrongdoing, often note that authorities have never proven that Ray's gun was the murder weapon.

Having a guilty plea overturned on a claim of innocence is difficult, since the law assumes a person knows if he's guilty or not at the time the plea is given.

Usually, when a court throws out a guilty plea it's because it was coerced or a defendant's rights were violated in some other way. The courts have held that Ray's plea was freely given. "There might have been other people involved. But to say because others were involved Ray should be released from jail is just nuts," Campbell said.

Ray contends he bought the rifle in Alabama and brought it to Memphis on instructions from a shadowy gun runner he knew only as Raoul. He says Raoul apparently arranged for it to be dropped near the murder scene.

Authorities have never established that Raoul existed.

The Newest D.J. and Dancing in the Area AT KAI CHI
Introducing
Klub Kai
Thursday, Friday and Saturday Nights 9:30 - 1:30 a.m.
YOU'RE INVITED TO OUR
GRAND OPENING PARTY!!
FRIDAY & SATURDAY-FEBRUARY 21ST& 22ND
FREE FOODS&GIVE A-WAYS
20% OFF
ALL FOOD ITEMS
DRINK SPECIALS
THURSDAY NIGHT International NIGHT Everyone Welcome!
FRIDAY NIGHT Ladies NIGHT No Cover Charge for the Ladies!
SATURDAY NIGHT College HOUSE PARTY All 5 Area Colleges are welcome!
Kai Tai
Ice Tea
Sex on the Beach
& more
12 oz.
$2.00
Mt. Farms Mall
Rte 9, Hadley
586 - 2774
FRIENDLY • CLEAN
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING • DRAFT BEER SPECIALS
POSITIVE I.D. AND PROPER ATTIRE REQUIRED . . . DRESS TO IMPRESS

TOC Bar & Grill
Tonight at The TOC
Karaoke
Hours: Mon-Fri 4:00PM-12:30
Sat 5:00PM - 12:30PM

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 8 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Vegas Vacation *
Fools Rush In
The Beautician and the Beast
Rose wood *
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Dante's Peak
That Darn Cat *
The Empire Strikes Back*
Star Wars
Absolute Power *
Jerry Maguire

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor Position Vacant Systems Manager
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Laura Stock News Editor Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Thang Vo Photography Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Black History Month

This is part eight in a month long series dedicated to Black History Month. Next week's articles will focus on W. E. B. Du Bois and the Nation of Islam.

The future of affirmative action

Martin F. Jones

The affirmative action debate has become increasingly charged over recent years, despite a relatively sound economy, with race as the primary focus. Although affirmative action has, over time, most benefitted white women (such as professional journalists Jane Pauly and Cokie Roberts), it is still labeled as reverse racism. For that and other reasons this column will take a look at the future of affirmative action by recognizing it as a class issue, and one that it defined primarily along racial lines.

The best way to begin a clear examination of affirmative action is to revisit the Reconstruction period following the Civil War. It was during this period that affirmative action began in its base form. The very first "affirmative action" would best be represented by the enactment of the Emancipation Proclamation on Jan. 1, 1863, which had been sign by President Abraham Lincoln 100 days earlier. Following the passage of the 13th Amendment to the Constitution in 1865, the legal provision which forever abolished slavery in the United States and its territories, the Freedmens Bureau was established to help the former slaves make the transition from slavery into the existing labor market. One of the first major undertakings to provide education for America's new citizens. It was during this time that the first historically black universities were established, and many blacks elected to Congress.

Unfortunately, the Reconstruction movement was sabotaged by the emergence of a hostile white backlash against the attempts by the Republican Party to create genuine economic and political parity between blacks in whites in America. The Democratic Party, which dominated southern legislatures, would eventually totally destroy the progress initiated by the Freedmens Bureau. This sabotage of black progress was accompanied by a wave of terrorist activities against blacks, by the Ku Klux Klan in which thousands of African Americans were lynched and intimidated from exercising their newly acquired constitutional right to vote.

In 1896, the United States Supreme Court voted to uphold the policy of separate but equal in the historic case Plessy v. Ferguson. For the next 50 years, America would exist as an apartheid state, and the black underclass that was emerging from slavery found itself further entrenched into second-class citizenship.

Following the end of Second World War in 1946, President Harry Truman would sign an executive order ending the practice of racially segregated troops in the military. This action marked the first "affirmative action" of the 20th century. Like the 13th Amendment, the subsequent 14th Amendment (which guaranteed citizenship, and equal protection under the law), and the 15th Amendment (also passed during reconstruction, and to secure voting rights for blacks), the decision to end segregation in the military was in part, prompted by the heroic contributions that blacks had made during World War II, as they had made significant military contributions during the Civil War. Another factor was a change in attitude towards racism in the aftermath of the Jewish Holocaust. The ethnic atrocities which had been committed against Jews in Europe during the war were so severely unconscionable, that it became more and more difficult for people to maintain the status quo acceptance of racism as a benign concept.

Over the next 20 years, from 1946-1966, African Americans, through extensive political activism, secured full legal protection, which was extended to the state legislatures, of their civil and voting rights. Now, after nearly 100 years, the constitutional provisions of the 14th and 15th Amendments could be fully enforced with the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

In the immediate aftermath of the passage of these two pieces of landmark legislation, America entered what could be clearly identified as a Second Reconstruction. As with the first Reconstruction following the Civil War, government provisions were needed to help the formerly disenfranchised African Americans one day make the full transition in a integrated American society. As it stands, that goal has not been reached. And as with the first Reconstruction, the gains of African Americans have been sabotaged by a number of even more sophisticated tactics by those who would maintain America's racist class structure.

Despite its good intentions, affirmative action initiatives in the workplace and in college admissions have seen only marginal success, primarily with a growing black middle class. However, that success story has been increasingly offset with a rise in unemployment among young black men (45 percent in the inner city), an exploding prison population due to mandatory federal drug sentencing, and a decaying public school system. White flight to the suburbs have, in fact, produced a school system which is even more segregated than in 1954, the year that the Supreme Court decision Brown v. the Board of Education declared separate schools to be unconstitutional. Many of the former indus al jobs have been lost to down zing and overseas exploitation of Third World Labor (much of it comprised of young children). Today, the post-industrial "information age" that America is entering is leaving behind an entire generation of African-Americans to enter into a revision of the old post- slavery sharecropping system, now constructed in the form of prison labor, and the new Welfare Reform work programs.

And so, as we can see, the old adage still rings true: history does repeat itself. Apparently it looks as if 1996, like 1896 marks a resurrection of the old Plessy v. Ferguson decision, this time in the form of the California anti- affirmative action initiative Proposition 209.

Clearly, the new onslaught against affirmative action is racially motivated, which is why there must not be any yielding to the new attempt to undermine the progress of historically exploited and disenfranchised people in our nation, many of whom have given their life to defend America's so-called "freedom," only to be denied it for themselves. Moreover, current affirmative action initiatives must be expanded to create more available opportunities for those who need it, instead of generating racial hostilities by forcing whites and blacks to compete against one another for a shrinking pool of job and educational opportunities. The Federal government owes it to those exploited historically to further invest in these opportunities, instead of continuing its current practice of subsidizing corporate profits for the wealthy who fund the election campaigns of our national lawmakers.

The future of affirmative action, however is not infinite. It was never intended to be a permanent phenomena in our public social policies, but rather to transform America by guiding her through the final and most delicate stage towards becoming the true democratic and egalitarian society idealized by the founding fathers. Perhaps, after another 15 years of solid work and progress towards this end, a review of affirmative action could prompt steps to gradually phase out the practice over an additional 15 years. Even then, it would probably take another 30 years of alternative policies which would replace affirmative action, measures which would focus more on class discrepancies across the board as opposed to those which currently focus on race or gender, before the goals of affirmative action are fully completed. Considering the 100 years it took to fully enact the constitutional rights of people of color in America, it is more than certain that affirmative action will be with us for many more years to come.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist

The legacy of Deng Xiaoping

Andee Fu

Deng Xiaoping, China's foremost leader passed away Wednesday night due to complications with Parkinson's disease at 9:08 p.m., Beijing time. He was 92 years old.

Called the architect of modern China, he was most known for introducing reforms in China after Mao's death. His death leaves many unanswered questions. What will be the fate of Hong Kong after China regains control after British colonial rule in just five months? What will happen to Taiwan, the rival island next to China? And finally, what of China? Will it move in the direction of more Democratic reforms or back to the traditional Communist ways?

In 1949, Mao Zedong liberated China from both of the Imperialists and the Nationalists factions. The society of "commune" was established by Mao, which later became "Communism." Mao incorporated Marxism into the development of his new strategies and goals. Deng worked with Mao throughout the struggles and the battles for the fate of China.

He was a brilliant man while fighting as comrade along- side Mao. He witnessed the bloodshed of revolution; He endured the hardship of the Communist defeat by the Nationalist. He experienced the glory of the liberation. Like Liu Shaoqi, former Chairman appointed after Mao resignation, Deng's thinking was not as radical as Mao's. It was because of this that he was sent into exile to the province of Guangdong.

After coming back from the exile, he became Mao's successor after his death in 1976. Since then, Deng ruled China with an iron fist. And he freed thousands of people who were abused and imprisoned unjustly during Cultural Revolution.

1989 was a tough year for Deng. The college students across the whole China united together in honor of Hu Yaobang, a government official who supported radical reforms in China, who had passed away. This memorial snowballed into an unorganized movement for Democratic reforms. With either side's refusal to step down, Deng was forced to crush this peaceful movement with violence and bloodshed. Due to this violent act, Deng ruled China in isolation once again.

Deng made many promises in his life time, and kept most them. But the one promise he can no longer fulfill is to be present while the Communist Five Star flag flies over Hong Kong in July of this year.

Now after Deng's death, what will become of China? According to other news sources, Jiang Zeming, current leader of the Communist party, will take over as the leader of China. But, with the rough undercurrents from the political realm between the hardliners and the moderates, China's fate is hanging in the balance.

The issue of conflict with Taiwan will not die either. With internal disagreements among the different parties in Taiwan, as well as between the indigenous Taiwanese and the Nationalist Chinese, who migrated after their defeat in the Chinese civil war, China and Taiwan both agree that the two must be united, since they are both inherently Chinese. The one thing that they cannot agree on is how the country should be run, and thus their fate is still undecided.

During the first Taiwan presidential election, in which several candidates ran on a platform of Taiwanese independence, Deng ordered a couple of warning missiles to be detonated off the coast of Taiwan. And when Li Deng-hui (Taiwan's president) came to Cornell University to speak, Deng expressed extreme anger that the United States recognize Taiwan, (if even in the form of a Taiwanese visitor. Deng was not happy with the Clinton administration.

As for Foreign policy, Deng was a better player than Mao. He met with Henry Kissenger during Vietnam War period, and also met President Carter and the former Soviet leaders. Under Deng's rule, China emerged as a strong economic powerful house due to economic reforms.

Mao may have liberated China, but Deng established China. Today, China while still holding Developing Nations and Third World status, also holds its own powerful political and economic agenda. Economically, China is being seen as "Camelot," the new frontier, with foreign business signs visible within all the major cities.

Deng Xiaoping left behind many things — unsolved mysteries between China, Hong Kong and Taiwan, questions concerning China's political and economic fate, but also a strong powerful nation, ready to compete with the rest of the world.

Andee Fu is a Collegian columnist.

Undressing prostitution

Jason Wiesenbach

For a few minutes, imagine yourself as a man (scary, huh?). You meet a woman and later willingly decide to have sex. But, because you have no desire for a relationship, you pay her $20. An hour later, you part. You're happy; she's happy. Except you're only happy for five minutes because the local police arrest you.

You have engaged in the only illegal form of consensual sex: prostitution. But, have you ever wondered why it is illegal? Is it because of disease? Fear of overpopulating the Earth? No. Prostitution is a religiously based crime that implies that sex should not occur without love.

Well, what if, while sitting in the jail cell next to a murderer, you realize that this is the only way you will ever have sex? But, the law says: you cannot exchange money for sex. Indirectly, the law says that you cannot have sex.

What ever happened to the idea of freedom in this country? Does the cross stand next to our flag? No, the Head of the Senate Judiciary Committee argues, but prostitution "denigrates marriage, it denigrates courtship, it denigrates family, it denigrates young women." Who is he to define what a family is solely through religion? Forcing all Americans to adhere to a religious code does not better our society; it restricts our freedom to make choices.

In rebuttal to the Head of the Senate Judiciary Committee, admitted prostitute and current porn star Veronica Moné questioned our laws during the Jan. 31 edition of "20/20." She asks, "Why is it legal for me to have sex for money in X-rated movies, but illegal to take money in private?" So, our government is in effect telling us when we can or cannot have sex.

Do not misunderstand me — I do understand the argument that prostitution and violent crime go together. But as Terrence Halanan, San Francisco District Attorney, says, "If you have it operating in a legal method; you don't have pimps involved in it, you don't have drugs involved in it, and you don't have crime involved." Also, the government can begin taxing prostitutes and gaining money for our country, instead of wasting money on court fees, police patrols and extra jail cells.

This is a country of majority rules — a democracy. I may not like our president, but he was elected by us. Joe MacNamara, a police chief, says "Americans never learn from history." To understand what he means, just look at alcohol prohibition during the '20s and early '30s. Consumption did not decline, and instead crime rose immensely. Just because the government feels something can be justifiably illegal will not stop people who want something from getting it. A New York conservative politician states, "If you have an unpopular, unenforceable law, you destroy respect that citizens have for law."

Some prostitutes are given citations five times in one night, and even when they are put in jail, they are released the next day. Why not put them on trial, you ask? As MacNamara tells us, "99 out of 100" jurors in San Francisco will acquit them.

Do you realize, though, that 75 percent of prostitution does not start on street corners? Julian Bradley, former owner of an upscale brothel, believes legalizing prostitution does not contribute to the decline of America. As she says, "Prostitution has been around forever."

Interestingly, America has stricter laws on prostitution than most countries. However, one state, Nevada, has stepped forward and legalized prostitution in rural areas. A spokesperson of one of the 35 licensed brothels says legalization "eliminates the exploitation of the [women] because they become "independent contractors." He says there are no violent crime problems and that his establishment is as "safe" as any other business. This is because, unlike in typical street prostitution, these places are in complete control and know that safe sex is being used.

Legalizing prostitution forces no one to participate — if you don't like it, don't do it. I believe prostitution should be legal for anyone over 18. If you can legally kill yourself with cigarettes at this age, why can't you have sex with anyone you want? Even if you despise cigarettes or prostitution, you should respect a person's decision to engage in any private act she/he wants. As "20/20" commentator John Stossel says, "Part of being in a free society is that we tolerate things we don't like."

Jason Wiesenbach is a UMass student.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Smith to host Colvin

Grammy-winning singer at Greene Hall

By Amy Risley
Collegian Correspondent

This Sunday, Grammy-winning folk singer-songwriter Shawn Colvin will perform at John M. Greene Hall on the Smith College campus.

Colvin's latest release A Few Small Repairs, hosts 12 new original songs that exemplify her mature and pleasantly expressive impact on the expanding culture and success of today's female musicians. Noted not only for her beautiful voice and honest, compelling lyrics, Colvin's innovative guitar style and striking humor blend to create an emotionally moving and provocative product.

Born in Vermillion, S.D., Colvin began teaching herself to play guitar at the age of 10. She edged into the performing arts scene through various high school theater productions, and formed her first band after leaving college. Her solo artist status emerged in 1983 as she played small gigs in New York and Boston, quickly forming a dedicated following of fans. With the help of radio play of her first recording, Colvin attracted the attention of Columbia Records who would soon host the release of her debut album, Steady On.

Since her early days Shawn Colvin has stood apart from many artists in her field, and her individuality has not gone unnoticed. She won a Grammy for Best Contemporary Folk Recording for the powerful Steady On in 1989, and A Few Small Repairs has two nominations simmering in anticipation of this year's awards.

A flourishing career in the music business wasn't enough to fulfill Shawn Colvin's multi-talented outlook. She has appeared in numerous theater productions, as well as contributing to the scores for major Hollywood pictures such as Tin Cup and Head Above Water. Colvin can also be seen in her motion picture debut in Universal Pictures' Grace of My Heart.

Colvin's visit to Northampton brings her back to an intimate phase of her career in the early '90s, where she recorded parts of a stunning live album at The Iron Horse. Her well overdue return promises to reveal the same passion and incomparable talent she once brought to The Valley, and is sure to impress.

Shawn Colvin will be performing at John M. Greene Hall at Smith College on Sunday, Feb. 23. Doors open at 8 p.m.

COURTESY KATHERINE WESSEL

Shawn Colvin brings her delightful voice and music to Smith College on Sunday.

COURTESY JAZZ ALLEN

Sax-man Sonny Fortune to burn the Iron Horse with his firey playing on Saturday night.

Sonny Fortune toots in NoHo

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

Coming to the Iron Horse Saturday night for one set only is saxophonist Sonny Fortune and his quartet. A veteran saxophonist, he started out his career in the '60s, but has still never attained the pop successes of sax wailers like Branford Marsalis, Joshua Redman or Michael Brecker).

Despite this lack of household fame, he still has a steady, flowing sound of his own that often carries a listener from serenity to chaos in the matter of four minutes. He's a man you must pay attention to.

Also, Fortune definitely has his credentials set for him. In his early 20s, he started playing in various R&B groups around his home turf of Philadelphia (many classic jazzmen, like Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, and John Coltrane, started out in regional R&B groups). His tastes turned to jazz in the early 1960s, in his mid-20s, and in 1965, he made his co- leading debut on a Prestige album with organist Stan Hunter. A couple of years after that, he made the big move to New York City.

In the Big Apple, he played in combos led by pianist McCoy Tyner and drummer Elvin Jones, both of whom had played with Coltrane, the Supreme Soul of Saxophone in the early '60s. Certainly, Fortune had some ability if he was able to work with these two over-talented individuals.

The '70s came knocking soon after, and with that decade, so did Davis, knocking on Fortune's door. Both men knew something was happening in jazz that was different than ever before. Davis had pioneered "fusion" jazz.

This meant that bassists were abandoning the fat, natural sounds of the old stand-up for the thin, but mean, sounds of the Fender electric bass. Keyboardists were slamming down the covers on their old Steinway grands and taking to the haunting, bitter sounds of the Fender Rhodes and Wurlitzer organs. Even Davis started attaching microphones directly at the bell of his trumpet and putting the mic signal through a wash of effects like wah-wah and distortion.

Turn to FORTUNE, page 6

Film exposes Rosewood's tragic history

By Dolores Barclay
Associated Press

In January 1923, a violent gang of poor white thugs ravaged the prosperous black community of Rosewood, Fla., burning it to the ground and slaughtering many of its residents. The mob had been incited by a white woman's false accusation that a black stranger raped and beat her.

The residents who survived the attack fled to the swamps and never again returned to their homes or their land. And for more than 70 years, their story remained a dark and tragic secret. Now, John Singleton (Boyz N the Hood) retells that brutal slice of American history in Rosewood.

What richly deserved to be a powerful story, however, is greatly diluted in Singleton's Hollywood distillation. His use of a mysterious stranger who rides into town and helps save Rosewood's women and children turns the movie into a formula, and he weakens things even further by adding a lame romantic subplot.

Worse still is his reliance on stereotypes, right down to the obligatory "mammy" — in this case, Esther Rolle as family matriarch Sarah Carrier — and cartoon white bigots. These guys were crazed and frightening terrorists, but Singleton's whites are straight out of central casting.

The movie opens with a sweeping shot of the pristine village of Rosewood, with its neat, wooden houses and vegetable gardens made up of tidy, straight rows. The streets are clean and uncluttered, the houses well-maintained. Inside the Carrier house, a china closet holds blue china and fine crystal, and an upright piano stands in the living room.

Rosewood is a prosperous, proud community, very unlike the poor white trash enclave of nearby Sumner.

The white residents of Sumner hate, and are jealous of, thriving Rosewood, and any excuse to obliterate the town will do. They find their answer when Fanny Taylor, a white married resident who sleeps around, is beaten by her white lover. She claims a black man did it. And though everyone knows this is not the case, her allegation provides a reason to destroy Rosewood.

Much of the two-hour and 22-minute movie is devoted to the burning and destruction of the town and the slaughter of its residents.

Also near the forefront are the romance between Mr. Man (Ving Rhames) and Scrappie (Elise Neal), a young schoolteacher, and the story of John Wright (Jon Voight), a white shopkeeper who lives in Rosewood.

Wright recently has remarried after his first wife's death and is struggling to deal with his new relationship, as are his sons. He absorbs the collective guilt of his white neighbors and becomes a buffer between their rage and the defense of the Rosewood blacks. In the end, he teams with Mr. Man.

As the mysterious stranger, Rhames is a strong, attractive presence. But is he a romantic leading man? More compelling is Don Cheadle (Devil in a Blue Dress) as Sylvester Carrier, a gentle piano teacher who stands up for his rights and those of his family.

Bluewall hosts Klezamir band Saturday

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow evening, the Bluewall will host a dancing Tzedakah party with Klezamir, a five-person band which plays traditional Yiddish and Hebrew music and instrumental dance tunes.

The performance is sponsored by three different Hillel committees: the social committee, the community service committee and the cultural committee, which all joined together to form one committee to promote this event.

"Tzedakah" is the Hebrew word for charity, and this event is a fund-raiser. According to Louisa Shein, the vice- president of Religious and Cultural Affairs at Hillel, and an organizer of this event, tomorrow's performance has three different goals.

First, it is a fund-raiser for two different organizations. Fifty percent of the proceeds will benefit The United Jewish Appeal, and the other 50 percent will go to the Amherst Survival Center.

Second, according to Shein, the event hopes to bring Yiddish and Jewish culture onto campus in ways that it hasn't been before.

Lastly, Shein said she hopes the Klezamir concert will build Jewish community on campus, and let people have a good time.

The last time Klezamir performed on campus was for Purim, a joyous springtime festival where traditionally people dress in costumes and have a big party. Purim celebrates Queen Esther's saving of the Jews from the king's evil consul Hamin.

"This time, we wanted to open it up to a larger community by having the show at the Bluewall," Shein said.

Klezamir consists of five members: Rhoda Bernard, who has her degree in jazz vocal performance; Jim Armentl, who plays the clarinet, guitar, mandolin and sings; Amy Rose, a pianist and flutist; Neil Zagorin who plays drums and Joe Blumenthal, and acoustic and electric bass player.

Klezamir will be performing tomorrow evening at the Bluewall in the Campus Center at 8 p.m. and is open to the five colleges and the community. The event is free, but a $5 donation is suggested. For more information call Louisa Shein at 549-4138.

COURTESY KLEZAMIR

Klezamir will have you stepping to their music this weekend at the Blue Wall.

Arts....Arts....Arts....Arts!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
"HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU KID!" ON THE GIANT SILVER SCREEN
LATE SHOW THIS FRIDAY & SATURDAY AT 11:15 PM
$5.00 - TICKETS IN ADVANCE FROM 1:00 PM TO SHOWTIME
SOME THINGS JUST GET BETTER AS TIME GOES BY
Humphrey BOGART · Ingrid BERGMAN
Casablanca
HENREID RAINS VEIDT GREENSTREET LORRE
A HAL B. WALLIS PRODUCTION Directed by MICHAEL CURTIZ
ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8435

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
NOW SHOWING Curtain Daily 7 & 9:15
7 Academy Award Nomination-Inc. 'BEST' PICTURE ★ DIRECTOR ★ ACTOR ★ SUPPORTING ACTOR
AND TO
OVER 75 TEN BEST LISTS!
DIRECTORS GUILD OF AMERICA NOMINEE
SCREEN ACTORS GUILD NOMINEES
Shine
ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584-8435

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...
We are here !!

JOSH SYLVESTER-COLLEGIAN

The Barenaked Ladies rocked Pearl St. this past Wednesday night.

Barenaked Ladies seduce Pearl St.

By Josh Sylvester
Collegian Staff

BARENAKED LADIES
Pearl St.
Feb. 19

NORTHAMPTON — On Wednesday night, Barenaked Ladies fans were awarded with an amazing, and as always in BNL style, an unpredictable show. Playing for a sold-out packed house upstairs at Pearl Street, the Ladies had the crowd dancing and singing along all night.

Opening for the 'Ladies was Odds, another Canadian band. Starting off the night, and getting the crowd pumped for the 'Ladies, Odds rocked the house. Leaving the stage, the Odds' lead singer commented that "The Barenaked Ladies are the second most popular sport in Canada." After experiencing the Ladies' energy filled set with that edge of comedy, one can see why.

In between classic songs such as "Jane," "Brian Wilson," "Hello City" and "The Old Apartment," the 'Ladies kept the crowd laughing with their spontaneous humor. The 'Ladies had the crowd in an uproar when they broke out dancing, mimicking famous bands such as The New Kids on the Block, Madonna and popular songs like "The Macarena."

In an explosion of the spontaneity of their show, the Ladies brought a guy up on stage from the crowd, who proposed to his girlfriend in front of everyone. She said yes, and the Ladies broke into song, congratulating them.

Coming back on stage for the first of two encores, the ladies played their most popular song, "If I Had $1,000,000," and on cue, in the middle of the song, the band was pelted with uncooked Kraft dinner. This caused the lead singer Steven Page to go off on a hilarious tangent, midsong, about a coupon on the back of one of the boxes.

For their last encore, the band played their own rendition of "Reo," by Duran Duran, and their latest hit, "Shoebox."

With Pearl Street being their last concert tour stop, the band plans to go into "hibernation" to make a new album, hopefully "due out for Chanukah" this year.

Comedy troupe do weekend gigs

Mission Improvable provide entertainment with several skits

By Julia Casson
Collegian Staff

Looking for a night of comedy and humor? Search no further, for this and every Saturday night the improvisational group Mission Improvable offers hilarious impromptu entertainment and plenty of laughs.

In the past, Mission Improvable had performed chiefly for Theater 100 classes with few performances for the general public. After being well received in these classes and being in high demand, the improv group began to perform on a weekly basis.

The 13 group members not only work off of the audience's suggestions and ideas, but also off of each other. To accomplish this type of comedy successfully, there must be a certain chemistry between the members of the group. Mission Improvable certainly achieves this bond to create true humor.

Jeff Durand, a junior majoring in math, has been with the group for about a year and a half and feels that the success of the group is in part because it is "free, good entertainment, and always different."

The popularity of this UMass comedy group has grown substantially within the past few months. The audience attendance continues to grow each week and Durand hopes that they will continue in this growth so that more people in the area will have the chance to view the show.

In a few months, in addition to performances every week, troupes from around the area and different colleges will be performing in an AIDS benefit program.

With no script and no lines to memorize, the group members never know what will be coming next. To some that would be a truly terrifying and nerve-wracking experience, but Durand states that "it's a lot of fun just to go up there and having no script makes it interesting."

Mission Improvable performs every Saturday night at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Basement. Rooms change weekly but follow signs once downstairs.

Skatalittes find home in NoHo

By Tim Gleeson
Collegian Correspondent

Take yourself out for a nice time, dance party courtesy of ska originals, the world renowned Skatalites. They will be bringing over 34 years of experience with the energetic, upbeat, horn dominated music which they helped innovate in Jamaica so long ago.

The Skatalites formed in late 1963 and made a successful run until 1965 when they disbanded. However, this was only the beginning of their good fortune and the legacy of music they helped create. The members of the original Skatalites went on to pursue solo careers. In their short run together, they had managed to record many albums and play as well as play as the studio band for the famous Jamaican producer Coxsone Dodd and his legendary Studio One.

During this time the Skatalites played for and influenced such stars as Bob Marley, Peter Tosh, Jimmy Cliff, Desmond Dekker and Toots Hibbert as they began their musical careers. Indeed, it was the Skatalites who began a new wave of Jamaican music which would go on to reach the whole world. From the birth of ska, to rocksteady, and then reggae, the Skatalites, with horns blazing, could be heard.

The band eventually reunited in 1983 at the Reggae Sunsplash Festival in Jamaica. Since that time they have been playing throughout Africa, Japan, Europe and North America. A 1993 release, Hi Bop Ska, marked the 30th anniversary for the Skatalites. This album features original members, including the renown Tommy McCook and Roland Alphonso as they trade of innovative, jazz-influenced tenor sax solos. The album, filled with new and old material, also features guest vocals by such artists as Toots Hibbert and Prince Buster and, showing respect to the ska originals, was nominated for a Grammy for best reggae album.

Now known as the "dream team of ska" the Skatalites continue their journey. Proud elders to not only the reggae beat but also the British ska outburst and the American ska age, the Third Wave. The next stop is Pearl Street so don't miss these musical legends as the liven up the beat on Saturday night.

The Skatalites will be playing at Pearl Street on Saturday, Feb. 22. Doors open at 8 p.m.

A hard-working occupation

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Call them Lords of the Lot. Embraced by some, scorned by others, car jockeys poised in front of trendy restaurants, boutiques and hotels jump into the driver's seats of the most pampered metal in town — machines called Ferrari, Bentley and Jaguar.

Think of Alicia Silverstone. As a wealthy Beverly Hills teen-ager in the movie Clueless, she's asked if she wants to practice parking for her driver's test.

"What's the point?" she asks. "Everywhere you go has a valet."

And she's right. In this image-conscious town, stepping out of a $200,000 luxury car and nonchalantly tossing keys to a valet signals you have truly arrived — in every sense of the word.

"We're the caviar," said Chuck Pick, owner of the area's premiere parking outfit Chuck's Parking Service, official valet service for the hip eateries Eclipse, Morton's and the Bistro Gardens.

The blue-jackcted Chuck's valets also cater to private parties. They've even parked cars for O.J. Simpson's Brentwood guests ("That was a while back") and the Los Angeles Lakers players ("You should see THOSE cars!").

And in a town where cars confer status, parking attendants become the ultimate arbiters of star treatment. Pull up in a battered Toyota and it, along with your reputation, will be banished to oblivion, or at least to another another lot.

The Rolls-Royce, Porsche, Mercedes-Benz and Dodge Viper, meanwhile, get the conspicuous, up-front parking spots. The parking pecking order satisfies the customer and supplies an air of elitism to the establishment.

It also encourages bigger tips, which range from nothing to $200 and more, though the average valet earns about $12 an hour, tips included.

"They are great tippers. Over the years, many give $100 bills. (Frank) Sinatra used to give $100 bills," Pick said.

Parkers are taught to smile, always open the woman's door first, run, park with the wheels straight and never, never change radio stations. No autographs, either.

"I feel very comfortable with valet parking attendants, especially when driving a car such as my Ferrari," said legendary custom car builder Boyd Coddington. "In fact, valet attendants take better care of my car because it is a high-profile vehicle. In most instances, it is parked right up front."

Another advantage for up-front parking?

"I don't want to move that car that much," Pick says. "If it doesn't move much, there's less of a chance something will happen to it."

Jenny McCarthy, formerly of MTV's "Singled Out" and now with her own upcoming MTV series, fears muggers so she's happy to let valets park her new Jaguar. Doesn't she worry about joy-riding parkers?

"No, because if I found out I would kill them," she said, adding she always says, "Baby, here's the keys, park it for me."

But some in the you-are-what-you-drive crowd grimace when they steer toward an entrance and see valets are the only option. Imagine handing a complete stranger the keys to a car that cost more than most homes.

"OK if I park it myself? Here's $5," is the standard line.

Motor Trend magazine editor C. Van Tune is one of those. "Because I prefer to park my own car, I offer attendants double the cost of the valet charge to self-park and keep my own keys. With the number of very expensive cars that Motor Trend tests, I consider this cheap insurance," Tune said.

General Motors even outfits its Corvette ZR1 muscle car with a special valet switch that keeps the engine from going more than a few miles per hour to help combat joy-riding parking attendants — or perhaps teen-age children at home.

Dan Phillips, associate publisher of Robb Report magazine, which caters to the affluent, is astonished by the carelessness of some movers and shakers.

"A Fortune 500 guy, lawyer or actor can leave all sorts of things behind. The more expensive the car, the higher the exposure. You think most of these people are outstanding citizens, but let's face it, some aren't," he said.

Star Wars at head of re-issue race

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The unexpected box-office power of Star Wars should have competitors licking their wounds over moviegoers lost to a 20-year-old film.

And it could have them licking their chops over the potential for exploitation of their own studio film libraries.

Not so fast on either count, say industry executives, exhibitors and observers.

Star Wars has enjoyed spectacular success in its return to theaters, remaining one of the biggest-grossing films in U.S. history. Yet experts say its impact may be less dramatic and more singular than first appears.

Part one of George Lucas' space trilogy hasn't done serious box-office damage to other movies or release plans, they say. And betting on other mothballed pictures to do as well in re-release would be risky.

"There just aren't that many Star Wars," said Phil Barlow, distribution president for the Buena Vista unit of Walt Disney Inc. — which knows a thing or two about re-releasing movies.

When Star Wars returned Jan. 31, 20th Century Fox was cautiously optimistic. But it took just two weeks to rival Gone With the Wind's 1967 $70 million reissue gross and hit a record total $400 million.

Fox was said to have hoped for $100 million from the trilogy, including The Empire Strikes Back (out today) and Return of the Jedi (March 7). Now, $250 million is not a pipe dream, according to observers.

While it seems Star Wars is pushing other movies around like a bully with a Darth Vader complex, the result is more bruised egos than injured bottom lines.

Star Wars did cheat the $115 million Dante's Peak out of the chance to debut at No. 1, but the volcano movie did manage to set a record February opening with $18.1 million.

"If Dante's had opened in the $7 (million) to $10 million range, you would have said, 'Wow, this isn't good.' But the level it opened at was the level you would have expected," said Richard Fay, president of AMC Film Marketing.

Clint Eastwood saw his Absolute Power come in an also-ran to Star Wars last weekend, but the new movie took in an impressive $16.8 million in its debut. That's on a par with other Eastwood openings: $15.2 million for In the Line of Fire in 1993 and $15 million for Unforgiven in 1992.

Damage may have been done to smaller films, said John Miller, general manager for Springfield, Ill.-based Kerasotes Theatres.

"I think some pictures got lost in the shuffle in the past couple of weeks," Miller said, suggesting the comedy Fierce Creatures probably fell off screens sooner than it might have. In general, Star Wars has contributed to a box-office expansion. Last weekend was one of the biggest four-day moviegoing weekends ever with about $120 million total, said Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

One studio, however, has blinked at the prospect of facing thespace adventure and its sequels: Paramount Pictures' The Saint, starring Val Kilmer, will debut April 4 instead of March 14.

"One has to react to the phenomenon of Star Wars," Wayne Lewellen, Paramount distribution president, told Daily Variety. The move also avoids competition with Paramount's own Private Parts, the Howard Stern film bowing March 7.

For now, others are standing their ground. Sony's release date for the crime drama Donnie Brasco with Al Pacino and Johnny Depp remains Feb. 28, the week after Empire returns. The Tim Allen comedy Jungle 2 Jungle from Buena Vista is unchanged from March 14.

The only studio publicly toying with the idea of changing its schedule was, ironically, Fox itself. Its plan to release the trilogy in quick succession may mean the studio doesn't milk each film for all it's worth; a bigger window between Empire and Jedi was at least briefly scrutinized.

"They're stepping on themselves almost worse than anyone else," said Buena Vista's Barlow. "Which has to make them actually quite happy."

However the Star Wars bonanza ends up, it seems huge enough now to whet the industry's appetite for reissues.

"I imagine there is a lot of reassessment going on," Barlow said. "I don't know if looking at things calmly it will cause a spate of these things."

Some already were in the pipeline. Steven Spielberg's Close Encounters of the Third Kind was long planned by Sony for a 20th anniversary re-release this year (the date is as yet unannounced). The studio, however, is considering marketing the film more aggressively post-Star Wars. Such an effort can be costly: Fox is spending $15 million to support each part of the trilogy.

The 25th anniversary of The Godfather will be marked by Paramount with a limited 20-screen reissue on March 21 using new prints made from the original negative. Paramount also reportedly is weighing reissues of Grease and Saturday Night Fever.

A new version of Das Boot, with an hour of footage added by director Wolfgang Petersen to his World War II submarine drama, is planned by Sony's Columbia Repertory.

But can other movies hope to match the heady success of Star Wars?

■ fortune

continued from page 5

Fortune's sound never got affected electronically by this revolution, but he did feel comfortable enough to add a fiery atmosphere to Davis '74-'75 funk-jazz period. Y. Fortune led his own bands exploring the many areas of jazz that were being covered in the '70s, especially Afro-Cuban rhythms, and he carried that exploration into the '80s. Fortune hopped on the bandwagon, but with an inspirational, cooking movement to it all. His 1994 album, Four In One, was a tribute to Thelonious Monk, on which he played more obscure Monk compositions than the standards "Straight, No Chaser" and "Round Midnight." His newest album, From Now On, is being hailed as "one of the best jazz albums of 1997."

The Sonny Fortune Quartet will play tomorrow night at the Iron Horse at 7 p.m. Call the club at 584-0610 for more details.

Recycle Your Collegian!!!!!!

Weekly Drink Specials
Bacardi Limon & Coke 2.00 16oz.
Vodka & Cranberry 2.00 16oz.
Rolling Rock 12oz. Bottles 1.50
Red Dog 16oz. Drafts 1.50
1/2 Price Appetizers and Nachos 3-5 and7-11 Friday & Sat
Weekend Dancing Fri-Sat-Sunday
Seafood Family THE PUB Amherst
15 East Pleasant St.

Resist the Dark Side. Use the Force! Write for Mrs. Luke...

UMass Collegian Graphics
The best in '97

New Spring Break
Hartford Designs
Cancun from $429
Jamaica from $429
Florida from $139
Student Travel Services
Toll free: 877 460 1849
http://www.ststravel.com

We style GUYS hair too
Regency Hairstylists
253-9526

MASSACHUSETTS 75, FORDHAM 58
FORDHAM (6-17, 1-12)
Berrios 4-12 1-2 9, Curtis 7-15 3-4 17, Ziskunov 0-2 0-0 0, Carroll 2-10 4-4 9, Harmaniuk 2-6 0-0 5, Mack 3-5 3-4 7, DiMascio 2-5 3-5 9, Pugh 1-4 0-0 2. Totals 20-59 14-18 58.
MASSACHUSETTS (17-10, 10-3)
Clarke 2-4 2-4 8, Weeks 9-13 4-6 22, Kotner 4-6 7-9 15, Padilla 4-7 0-0 12, Travieso 5-8 2-2 9, Smith 0-1 1-2 1, Babul 0-1 0-1 0, Kirkland 0-1 0-0 0, Basti 0-2 3-4 3, Norville 2-4 0-0 5, Burns 0-1 0-0 0, Maclay 0-1 0-0 0. Totals 24-49 19-28 75.

Halftime — Massachusetts 38, Fordham 25. 3-point goals — Fordham 4-14 (Berrios 0-2, Carroll 1-4, Harmaniuk 1-3, DiMascio 2-5), Massachusetts 8-16 (Clarke 2-2, Padilla 4-7, Travieso 1-5, Norville 1-2). Rebounds — Fordham 32 (Berrios 9), Massachusetts 40 (Kotner 16). Assists — Fordham 13 (Harmaniuk 5), Massachusetts 20 (Clarke 6). Total fouls — Fordham 20, Massachusetts 15. Attendance — 9,493.

Highlights...

Senior big man Tyrone Weeks led the Minutemen in scoring with 22. Lari Kotner put up his second consecutive double-double with 15 points and 16 rebounds. His 16 boards set a William D. Mullins Center record for rebounds (the previous mark of 15 was set by Lou Roe and Donta Bright once and Marcus Camby twice). UMass led throughout the first set, running the score up to as much as 21 for a 69-51 lead at the half.

In the second half, junior forward Inus Norville knocked down a 3-pointer. The last time Norville drained a trey was last year against the Rams in the Madison Square Garden.

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

"Right now my confidence is pretty high," said Kotner who led UMass with a double-double against Maryland (19 pts, 14 rebs) last week. "I don't come out with any set plan, I just want to come out and play hard, do what I do best which is mostly blocking shots and playing defense.

When injuries plagued UMass early in the season, it was Weeks who provided the Minutemen with points and leadership while Kotner shook off the rust of sitting out last season. However, as UMass has won 12 of its last 13 (six straight) Weeks and Kotner have played enough minutes together to work out a symbiotic relationship.

"I find myself open more, a lot of one-on-ones," Weeks reflects. "Earlier in the season, I got off to a good start so teams started to double team me and leave Lari. Now, they don't double team either one of us, so one of us is going to score. Lari has just come out on fire the last three games scoring, rebounding and blocking shots. So me and him is a good combination in the paint."

In some respects, the play of the two UMass big men has echoed this youthful Minuteman squad. Shaky at the start, but with time, rising above injuries and the doubts of pessimistic naysayers to put the maroon and white back where it belongs. At the top.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

JORMA KANJANEN / COLLEGIAN

BU's Bill Pierce beats BC's Greg Taylor to score the Beanpot game-winner earlier this month. BC visits UMass Saturday night.

Tiger Holland

Keith O'Connell

Judd Smith

this a highly successful season. The team has done well so far this year, setting a high for wins and establishing a league-wide presence. But, playoff wins, which will come easier with both some momentum and an opponent other than UNH or BU, would make this a great season as opposed to one where the team played well.

Saturday will also have the added bonus of being Senior Night, with nine Minutemen suiting up for their final home contest; Rob Bonneau, Gerry Cahill, Tiger Holland, Rich Moriarty, Warren Norris, Keith O'Connell, Tom Perry, Judd Smith and Dennis Wright, the first class of four-year seniors since the reinstatement of the program, will don their home sweaters one final time.

The group all came to UMass at the last minute after the announcement came in April, 1995 that a new Hockey East program was starting up in the Pioneer Valley, putting a lot of faith in a completely new situation.

The nine will go down as the founding fathers of the new hockey program.

"This senior class had to come in here on a hope and a dream, and I think they got a lot accomplished," Mallen said. "These seniors have got a lot accomplished and I hope they'll take special pride in putting that shirt on in a home contest for the last time, and give the best performance of their four years."

7pm, Feb 21st at the MULLINS CENTER University of Massachusetts Amherst
Hockey East
UMass Hockey
VS
Hockey East
BC
Pick up your tickets at:
Curry Hicks Cage
'TIX' in the Student Union
Hockey Table in the Campus Center
At the Game
Be a Part of the Action

■ hoop

continued from page 10

have a difficult time at the start of the game, because the teams that are really good try to get after us at the beginning of the game. They just came out early in the game and blitzed us."

Fordham (6-17, 1-12 A-10) had no answer for the inside combination of Weeks and sophomore center Lari Ketner. Ketner set a Mullins Center record with 16 rebounds, to go along with 15 points and five blocks, and Weeks tied a career high set against Virginia early in the year with 22 points, and nine rebounds.

Fordham made a series of brief runs, but never really threatened UMass. The Rams got to within 11, 36-25, at halftime by going on an 8-0 run to close out the half. Senior point guard Padilla fouled Fordham's Chris DiMascio behind the three-point line with :35 seconds left, and DiMascio converted on all three. But any Ram glimmer of hope was squashed 19 seconds into the second half, courtesy of a vicious Ketner block, one of five for the 6-foot-10 Philadelphia native. UMass regained it's focus, and a 22-9 run by the Minutemen gave them a 58-36 lead by the middle of the second half.

"We wanted to jump on these guys like we did in New York," Ketner said.

UMass beat the Rams 75-54 in Fordham on Feb. 3 by jumping out to a 40-26 halftime lead.

"Once we got up by 21, we started show-timing, and they got it back to 13," Ketner said. "Coach [Flint] talked to us because he didn't want us to overlook them. This is one of the teams he's scared off."

According to Ketner, the starting five for UMass wanted to get out to a big lead so some of the less utilized Minutemen could see minutes. Freshman Winston Smith pulled down three minutes in 16 minutes of playing time, and Mike Babul saw five minutes of action late in the first half.

In a moment that seemed to epitomize the evening for the Rams, junior center Inus Norville drained only his second career three pointer with :55 seconds left. Norville, who's other three came incidentally enough against Fordham last year, launched a bomb from the right side and hit nothing but net, sending the 9,493 in the Mullins Center into a loud roar. Norville then tried another three the next time down the court, but it hit the rim.

"I just jumped off the bench and threw my hands up, because I knew it was good," Weeks said. Norville finished with five points and two rebounds.

Padilla scored 12 points and dished out four assists, and backcourt mate Travieso added nine for the Minutemen. Sophomore guard Charlton Clarke rung up eight points and six assists, and Ajmal Basit added three points and three rebounds.

Minutemen hoping for top performances at track NEs

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The grand finale has arrived, as the Massachusetts Minutemen head to Boston University tonight to compete in the New England men's indoor track and field championships.

UMass has one top seed in the event, the 4x400m relay squad, comprised of Tom Toye, Scott Price, Dave Cahill and Neil Concepcion. Sophomore Jan Stevens, a shot putter, is seeded second.

"I think the odds-on favorite to win is UConn," said coach Ken O'Brien. "They're a good team, and are fresh off of winning the Big East.

"URI is also a very strong team. And I think Maine and New Hampshire will fare a little better than last year.

"They'll be some teams fighting for second place, ourselves included.

"Our goal is to finish in the top five. And I think we can do that. We'll need a good day."

Last year, UMass finished 10th in the meet, while UConn was the winner. Boston College placed next, followed by URI, BU and Northeastern. O'Brien feels this season's standings could be similar.

Other Minutemen seeded high for the trials tonight include: Brian Chabot (No. 7) in the 1,000 meters; Andre Roach (No. 6) and Alex Ampontuah (No. 7) in the triple jump.

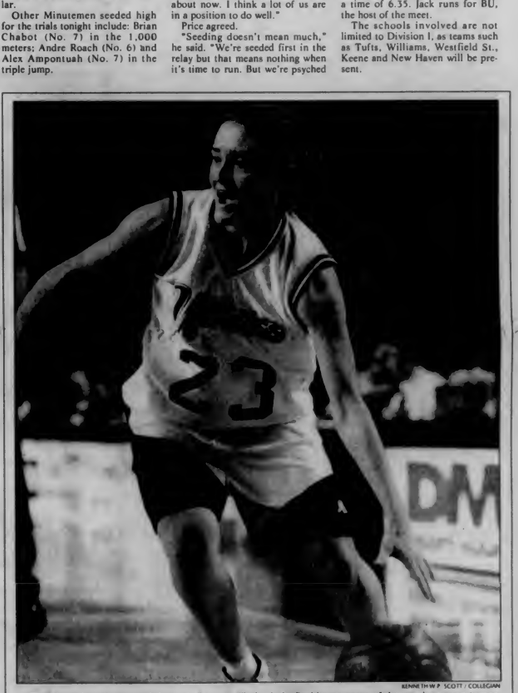
Matthew Behl is seeded No. 5 in the 5000m, Benjamin Baraldi is the No. 3 man in the 55m high hurdles; Toye (No. 4).

Price (No. 5) in the 200, Concepcion (No. 5) in the 400, and Cahill (No. 4) in the 500 are also seeded Minutemen.

"I don't think seedings will have much of an impact," said Stevens. "We should all just be ready for the meet. It's a championship meet, and this is what we've been training for.

"We should be peaking right about now. I think a lot of us are in a position to do well."

Price agreed.



"Seeding doesn't mean much," he said. "We're seeded first in the relay but that means nothing when it's time to run. But we're psyched for it. We can win."

UMass relay time of 3:15.22 is the best in the meet, hence it owns the highest seed. Right on its tail is UConn, however, with a mark of 3:15.63. Next comes UMass-Lowell (3:15.06), Maine (3:18.33) and Wheaton (3:20.24).

In the shot, Stevens is chasing another Huskie, Steve Santoli, whose qualifying throw is the field's best.

Incidentally, a Massachusetts native is seeded first in the 55m dash. Johann Jack of Lexington has a time of 6.35. Jack runs for BU, the host of the meet.

The schools involved are not limited to Division I, as teams such as Tufts, Williams, Westfield St., Keene and New Haven will be present.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts women's basketball team will play in its final home game of the regular season tomorrow at 1 p.m.

■ crew

continued from page 10

with a finals time of 6:52.60.

Other notables for UMass were Ellen Kielmeyer, who finished at 7:29.30 and Erica Gilbert (7:30.70). Neither qualified for the finals.

Melissa Allen qualified for the collegiate lightweight final after finishing 23rd at 7:45.40. Right behind her was Sarah McAuley, who finished 24th at 7:46.30.

Other notables were Nancy LaRocque and John Powell who finished first overall in the 1000m collegiate mixed doubles event for the larger schools competing.

While the Minutewomen have been practicing indoors, they hope to move outside soon, in preparation for their late March race against Boston College. That race, to be held on the Charles River, will kick off the spring crew slate.

■ women's track

continued from page 10

Melissa Ward is expected to start the meet off on a positive note Friday morning.

"Melissa is leaving early before the team, and we are counting on her to compete well and earn some points early in the pentathalon."

UMass will also look forward to seeing what freshman Sally Hirsch will come up with rebounding from her most exciting 3000m run of the season last week, when she battled tooth and nail to the wire, shaving off 10 seconds from her time, before falling to the winner at the tape.

To move up into the top two places, the Minutewomen will need to receive outstanding clutch performances from a healthy balance of the veterans alongside these freshman.

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n pleasant st amherst 256 0733
145 main st northampton 586 0155

Davey Jeans Locker
273 Pleasant St., Northampton
587-0176

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Are you interested in bringing a speaker to campus? Do you want to gain real-life experience working for a student organization? Come to a meeting for THE DISTINGUISHED VISITOR'S PROGRAM on Tuesday, February 25 at 7pm. in Room 1686 of the Campus Center. Call 545-0046 for more info. Food will be served.

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session: 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS: 6 credits, airfare. Eurorail. Room/board. ALL FOR $3298! Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

ANNOUNCEMETS

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm. in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Large Studio Apartment Amherst Center. Available now. 253-0245

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 DAYTONA TURBO 5-speed, AC, detach face stereo, T-tops, 88K miles. Asking $3000 or B/O. 549-3543

1987 Ford Escort GT Burgundy Hatchback, AC, FM, sunroof, excellent condition. 104K miles. $2125 or B/O. Lis 256-1238

1987 Plymouth Sundance Excellent body, runs very well! $1800 or B/O. Call 549-4435

1988 VW Jetta 5-speed, sunroof, good condition $1800. 586-0383

1984 Honda Accord 4-door, 5-speed, 114,000 miles, needs brake work $500 or B/O 253-3071

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call: (206)971-3554 ext. C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

COMPACT DISK BUYERS!!! CD's go MLM! Earn free CD's and great weekly income. $50 One-Time Investment. International Program (413)323-6120

Camp Wayne-sister half of brother/sister camp, Northeast Pennsylvania 6/23-8/20/97! Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students. Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation. On-Campus Interviews March 11. Call (800)279-3019

LIFEGUARD- Private beach on Cape Cod. Free beachside room. Memorial Day- Labor Day. WSI Certification. 253-8619

Responsible person to care for infant in our home. ON BUS ROUTE Three afternoons per week. 548-5035

The Ultimate Summer Job Whitewater Rafting Guides needed. No experience necessary. Looking for outgoing, enthusiastic people- previous outdoor or athletic experience is a plus. For more info. send resume and letter of interest to Crab Apple Whitewater, P.O. Box 295, Charlemont, MA 01339 or call (413)339-0188

EMPLOYMENT

Premiere Brother/Sister Camp in Massachusetts On-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all Team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball; 30 Tennis Openings, also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling; other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Skiing, Sailing, Wind surfing, Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board and travel. June 22nd-August 20th. Call for information. MAH-KEE-NAC(boys) 800-753-9118 DANBEE(girls) 800-392-3752. Recruiters will be On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am.-4pm. at the UMass Camp Day.

Cruise Lines Hiring- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. Room/board. Ring (919)918-7767 ext. C180

Alaska Employment- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. on bus route. Heat and hot water included. $322/month. Call 546-0262

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

8X CD-ROM DRIVE 28.8 DATA/FAX MODEM Call Rafael 549-4529

Bolster your immune system, improve your energy and focus with wild, organic, Super Blue Green Algae. 90-Day money back guarantee. Call independent distributor, Matthew Vargo at 256-1331 for more information or a free tape.

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers. $250/Pr. Call 253-9520

STEREO EQUIPMENT Buy-Sell-Trade Large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

Color Printer $99. 546-8863

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday "G" Thanks for all the memories and for being such a good friend to us. We love you so much! Nicole, Meg, Rana and Elena

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

CT (aka Prickly Poer) Happy Almost Birthday, Ehmegod! May juicy buma abound on your special day! Buttercup P.S. I love you more than tofu.

INSTRUCTION

Bartend with Univarsity Bartending 50% student discount. On- campus classes starting soon! Call (800)U-Can-Mix for info.

LOST

Small Black Earring between Boyden and Morill Science Center. LOST 2/18 If found please call 367-2640

Black Organizer/Phone Book $Rewards$ if found. Please contact Adam at 549-2623

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity. Vata Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, E-Mail ZBT@BTNATIONAL.ORG or call Brett Hrbeck at (217)334-1898

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)668-4793

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. Available immediately. On bus route. Sugarloaf Estates. Keira (203)294-1336 Females only.

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall '97. Call Amy 546-0706

SERVICES

WEB PAGE DESIGN Business or Personal E-mail at: AGRO-ART@MAIL-ME.COM

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available. (800)773-8704. Cost $29. Applications close 2-24-97.

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street, Northampton. (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. F50016. (We are a research and publishing company)

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK/ Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Panama City, South Padre. Lowest prices. Reliable Company. Asta Iatan Member. Contact Matt 253-6473

Scuba Spring Break Earn 2 credits. March 16-22. Call (800)282-0977 for info.

Jamaica-Spring Break from $599. Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week. (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

TRAVEL

Europe $165, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations. Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009. airhitch@netcom.com or www.isi.com.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations- free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guarantee! From $98 (800)426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

COAST to COAST
$189/ow $289/rt*
Hartford to Puerto Rico
$149/ow $269/rt*
→ Huge savings on ALL Domestic & Int'l Fares
→ Fly the Major Airlines
→ No Advance Purchase
→ No Gimmicks
→ Express Delivery
→ Lowest Airfares. Anywhere
1-800-256-3491
DISCOUNT TICKETS, Inc.

RESERVED

For Your Collegian Classifieds

Starting Sunday, Feb. 25, the Collegian FYI section will be relocated to the Classifieds page. In addition, FYI entries will be limited to free Five College events only. Only entries fitting this description will be run in the FYI section. All other entries must be submitted through the Classifieds Department. For information about Classifieds rates, call 545-3500

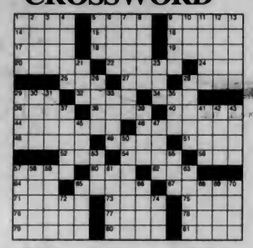
Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS!
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are unacceptable. Personals of a vindictive or obscene nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order.
9. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the laws.
10. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Standard Headings

Activities
Announcements
Apartment For Rent
Auto For Sale
Employment
Entertainment For Sale
Found (2 days Free)
Happy Birthday
Houses For Rent
Instruction
Lost
Musicians
Miscellaneous
Motorcycles
Personals
Room For Rent
Room Wanted
Roommate Wanted
Services
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Transportation Wanted to Rent
Wanted

Rates



$2.00 minimum/day

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1. Free from a habit
5. TV's "21 ___ Street"
9. Onassis, for one
14. Fixed charge
15. Latin abbr. (2 wds.)
16. Country on the Red Sea
17. Singer Burr
18. The King of Babylo
19. Watered silk
20. Tapeed
22. Gore
24. Diamond or Shanghai
25. Generic addressee
27. Wind dir.
28. Assemble for action
29. Before bone or breaker
32. "It Must Be Him" singer
34. Shattered side
36. Shortening
38. Spoil cheerily
40. LuPone or LaBelle
44. Goes on horseback
46. Tyre
48. Sharker's gulter
49. Partial parts
51. American, to a Brit
52. Hot pita
54. Whisper's antonym
56. More, to Ourson
57. Headstrong resistance
60. Summer, in Arles
62. Women's ___
64. Expects teammate
"Shoot" country
67. Salt quantity
71. Elizabeth P's wear
73. Actor James
75. Sailorett's home
76. Camera introduced in 1888
77. Scandinavian capital
78. Collar type
79. Mercedes
80. Son of Noah
81. Pierre weeds

DOWN
1. Judicial decree
2. Waterproof spot
3. Egyptian deity
4. Abodes for birds
5. The head Clampett
6. Shashoneans
7. Colts
8. Conducts (a trade)
9. Exercise rooms
10. Olden car
11. Author Zola
12. Strange
13. Prepared to propose
21. Command to a dog
23. Au Pont Co.'s home base
26. Sound like a heavy sleeper
28. Substantial
30. Turkish regiment
31. Walk
33. Allergic reaction
35. Conservationist gp.
37. Chan portrayer
39. Warmer
41. Time, Nast' Year
42. Cubs or Bears
43. Bluelin or bonito
45. Annoys a little
48. Zirodia or bromide, e.g.
47. Stream of song
50. Pawpr protector
53. Something to button or zip
57. Uses a cradle
58. Actor Flynn
59. Destroy slowly
61. Mexican treats
63. Nibbles
65. Pressman's needs
66. Where Bill met Hillary
68. Defense group abbr.
69. Ravens kin
70. Painter Hofmann
72. Gum lump
74. ___ de guerre

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If someone shows a little shy, turn on the charm. Your sparkling personality could be the key to starting a great new friendship. Pay attention to other social obligations you could be committing a major faux pas without thinking.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
If you're tempted to spend, take a closer look at upcoming expenses. You might be in a position to loosen the purse strings a little—but if you're not, the consequences could be disastrous. To save even more money, find creative ways to recycle.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Feeling bored? Try planning a big social event. If that seems overwhelming, enlist a friend to help you with some of the details. Need ideas for what to do? Consider a picnic with a volleyball game or a group camping trip.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Don't skimp on preventive maintenance this week. You could avert an expensive breakdown. Bone up on your technical skills before making a major career decision, and you'll reap the benefits in the near future.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Take a close look at a bad habit you'd like to break. Now could be the right time to make that change. Once you've started, don't be discouraged if it's tougher than you first thought. This is a good time to make a change for the better.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
An unexpected brush with the past could send you off in a different direction. Consult with your family before doing anything drastic. It's a splendid time for traveling. You could make an interesting discovery in a new land.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Your nonchalant efforts at a tedious project are about to be noticed, so don't let up now. If you're near the end of your rope: Keep track of your cash flow as you don't get caught off guard by an expensive mishap. Call on a friend to get some extra advice or support.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
The competition could be tougher than it looks when it comes to a difficult project. Ask for help from a close friend. Use your wits; don't be afraid to innovate and you'll be fine. Don't waste your breath arguing with a stubborn person.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
If you're looking for romance, try making the first move. Consider volunteering for something. You could acquire valuable new skills and enjoy life more, too. Chaos at home sets your teeth on edge. You can straighten things out by delegating tasks.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Your sense of perspective lets you understand the big picture. Use this knowledge to your advantage, but don't be surprised if others don't share your insight. Instead, focus on individual problems and try to solve them effectively.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
Bring something that's bothering you out into the open. If you let it fester, it will only get worse. But do it tactfully—thoughtless words are an enemy in progress. A little extra good fortune smiles on you as the week comes to a close.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Take a close look at your "Things to Do" list. Although it seems overwhelming, if you start to assign priorities, it will start to grow more manageable. Make an investment in your future. Household chores lead to a change that's refreshing to you.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

W	E	A	N		J	U	M	P		G	R	E	E	K
R	A	T	E		E	T	A	L		Y	E	M	E	N
I	V	E	S		D	E	S	I		M	O	I	R	E
T	E	N	T	S		S	H	E	D	S		L	I	L
			S	I	R		E	S	E		M	E	E	T
J	A	W		C	A	R	R		L	E	E
O	L	E	O		S	A	S	S		P	A	T	T	I
G	A	L	L	O	P	S		A	M	A	T	E	U	R
S	I	T	A	R		H	E	M	I		Y	A	N	K
			N	E	G		Y	E	L	L		M	A	S
R	E	E	D		E	T	E		L	I	B
O	R		I	T	A	L	Y		P	I	N	C	H
C	R	O	W	N		C	A	A	N		T	A	R	A
K	O	D	A	K		O	S	L	O		E	T	O	N
S	L	E	D	S		S	H	E	M		S	O	W	S

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL

41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Standing in Line... ✪ Don't waste your time! Behind Antonio's

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
Save Phil! Dance Party tonight @ 10!

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 21, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	(3)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	McLaughlin	Connecticut	Fourth Estate	First Flights	World at War "Desert"
WFSB	(3)	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	AbleJournal	Dave's World	Raymond	JAG "Full Engagement"		Nash Bridges "Rampage"		News	Late Show
WBZ	(4)	News	CBS News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Dave's World	Raymond	JAG "Full Engagement"		Nash Bridges "Rampage"		News	Late Show
WCVB	(5)	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	★★½ "The Flintstones" (1994, Comedy) John Goodman.				20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	(6)	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★½ "Never Say Never Again" (1983, Adventure) Sean Connery.						Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	(7)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Deteline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	(1)	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	★★½ "The Karate Kid" (1984, Drama) Ralph Macchio.				News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	(3)	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Deteline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	(8)	Simpsons	Rosanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Millennium "Seraphim"		News	Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	(2)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Deteline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	(4)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Static We're In	Frug, Gourmet	Bill T. Jones; StillHere (R)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	(2)	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	★★½ "Hocus Pocus" (1993, Comedy) Joni Goodman.				20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	(3)	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	★★½ "Island Rises" (1960, Drama) Aldo Sambrell.				News	Martin	Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	(6)	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★½ "The Ape" (1940, Science Fiction) Joel Goodman.				★★★ "Camp" (1976, Horror) Stacy Sparrow, John Travolta.
A&E	(6)	Quincy "A Question of Time"		Equalizer "The Reherers"		Biography: Elizabeth II: Queen		Emma (R)					Profiles (R)
CNN	(3)	World View	Moneyline	Larry King Live		Prime News	Benson: Prof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	(6)	Tick	Dream On	Comic Justice	Lizards	Simbad: Brain Damaged (R)		T. Davidson	Comic Justice	Bill Bellamy	Comic Justice	T. Davidson	Comic Justice
DISC	(6)	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings of the Luftwaffe (R)		Wild Discovery: Migration		Invention	Beyond 2000	Wings "The Bear Trap"		Wild Discovery: Migration
ESPN	(6)	Up Close	Sportscenter		Figure Skating	European Championships.			Winter Sports Festival			Sportscenter
LIFE	(6)	Supermarket	Debt	Dish	Pandora	Wire	3 Blind Dates	("Real Genius" Charlie") (1997, Drama) Lindsay Wagner.				Dish (R)	Pandora (R)
MTV	(6)	Ren & Stimpy	Week in Rock	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos (In Stereo)				Beavis-Butt.	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	(6)	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	(6)	Twilight Zone	Star Wars Trl.	She-Wolf of London		★★ "Wings of Chance" (1976, Horror) Mi-Kaeli Hawk, Louise Sorel.				Friday the 13th: The Series		She-Wolf of London
TLC	(6)	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime	Hometime (R)	Quest (R)	What a World	Revolutionary War Part 6 of 8		Volcano Park		Quest (R)	What a World
TNT	(6)	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball: Chicago Bulls at Washington Bullets. (In Stereo) Live					Inside-NBA	★★½ "John Boyd-Art" (1988)
USA	(6)	Renegade "God's Mistake"		Highlander: The Series		★★½ "The Punisher" (1994, Suspense) Alexandra Paul.				La Femme Nikita "Love" (R)		★★½ "Harry Axonest" (1993)
HBO	(6)	Making Juror "Pulitzer Prize From Erik Jon Van"				★★★ "Rosa's Desire" (1995) David Carlisle. (R)				"Profile for Murder" (1997, Suspense) Lance Henriksen. (NR)			Dennis Miller
MAX	(6)	★★½ "Thief" (1981, Drama) Jorfe Foster. (In Stereo) (NC-17)				★★ "Surf 3" (1995, Drama) Helena Handle. (In Stereo) (R)				★★½ "Money Train" (1995, Suspense) Wesley Snipes. (R)
SHOW	(6)	★★½ "A World Apart" (1988, Drama) Barbara Hershey. (NR)				★★½ "Tank (I'm Not Going" (1995, Mystery) (R)		Extres: Denzel	Outer Limits	Outer Limits "Journey Home" (R)		"Mad Max" (R)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown Judd Winick

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

Hey, I'm only 15, but I'll bet if Jesus knew the atrocities done in the name of Christianity, he'd go off by himself to the local park and have a good cry.

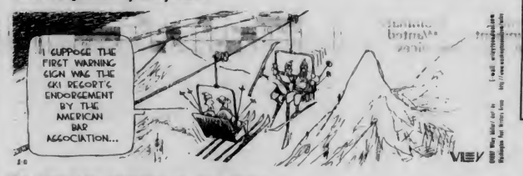
No, No, I know what he'd do.

He'd vomit.

No, No, No, you know what he'd do?

He'd go shopping .... grab himself some credit cards and go to the mall.

He'd buy so much stuff he'd start foaming at the mouth and telling a bunch of bad jokes.



Moses, Mohammed and Ron Kurtz were already there.

University² By Frank Cho

Non Sequoter By Wiley Miller

The Unsilent Majority By Luke Meredith

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

Robotman By Jim Meddick

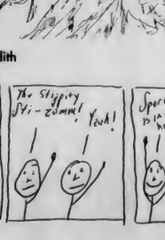
Dilbert By Scott Adams

First Impressions By Kenneth W.P. Scott

Close to Home By John McPherson

Twenty-seven years of finding Phil's toenail clippings lying around the house culminated in one glorious act of revenge for Donna.

Quote of the Day



"But if you use four significant figures, you are telling the reader in very clear terms that you are not a person to be trifled with."

–Prof Russel Engineering Dept.

Joke of the Day

Why'd the Golfer wear two pairs of pants?

–In case he got a hole in one!

Today's Staff

Seema Gangatirkar
Night Editor

Lisa Chiu
Copy Editor

Chris Cesnek
Photo Technician

Mark McGrath
Production Supervisor

Sandi Krauss
Elizabeth Brown
Production

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Taco	Baked Chicken
Clam Roll	Glazed Ham
Reuben on Roll	Spag/ Sauce
Veggie Taco	1/4 Pounder

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Burgers	Baked Chicken
Chick Cut Sand	Glazed Ham
Capt's Catch

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Capt's Catch	Baked Chicken
Turkey Divan	Pineapple Ham Steak
Fettucine	Korean BBQ Tofu
Black Eyed Peas	Pastabilities

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Capt's Catch	Baked Chicken
Fettucine	Pork Ginger Stir Fry
Wheatball Grinder	Tempeh Stir Fry
	Ravioli

SPORTS

Friday, February 21, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Fordham destroyed by UM's knockout punch

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

If it was a fight, they would have stopped it.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team knocked out Fordham early last night, surging out to a 21–4 lead seven minutes into the game and cruising past the overmatched Rams, 75–58, last night at the William D. Mullins Center.

The Minutemen improved to 17–10, 10–3 in the A–10 with the win, and have now won six straight, a season high.

UMass never trailed against the Rams, which have now gone 3–25 in their first two years of A–10 play. Senior center Tyrone Weeks set the tone early, scoring six points in the first two minutes, and 3–pointers from Carmelo Travieso, Edgar Padilla and Charlton Clarke gave the Minutemen a 17–4 lead four minutes into the game. Fordham never came within 11 points after that.

MASSACHUSETTS	75
FORDHAM	58

"The difference for us is when we play the upper-echelon teams [in the A–10]," Fordham coach Nick Macarchuk said. "We

Turn to HOOP, page 7

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Lari Ketner poured in 15 points and grabbed 16 rebounds in the Minutemen's thrashing of Fordham last night.

Paint players Ketner and Weeks combine to form lethal force

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

If a coach whose team just fell 75–58 is capable of understatement, Fordham's Nick Macarchuk Jr. is that coach.

"[Tyrone] Weeks and [Lari] Ketner are pretty good," Macarchuk said. "I don't care if it's Fordham playing them or Maryland playing them. Ketner gets better and better and better. Weeks is so intelligent and crafty and knows how to play. They work that high–low pass so well, we had very few answers for that."

As of late, not too many squads have had an answer to the question the Weeks–Ketner combo poses. Last night, the Rams didn't have an answer either.

Weeks was unstoppable in the paint, knocking down 22 points tying a career high mark set Nov. 26 against the University of Virginia.

"He was just on fire," teammate Charlton Clarke critiqued. "Don't let him lie to you. He was like Hakeem Olajuwon out there."

In his last 11 games, Weeks has averaged a double–double (13.1 pts. 10.2 rebounds) while shooting 50.9 percent from the floor and 78 percent from the line. All season long, the 6–foot–7 forward has developed a lethal top of the key jumper.

"Me and Lari say before every game, we want to try to dominate inside," Weeks said. "There was one play for me that was getting me open a lot, so we kept running it. I scored some easy baskets, Lari got some easy baskets. It worked out for both of us."

While Weeks has been a quiet performer since the first tip in November, Ketner has emerged as a force. Last night, the UMass center broke a William D. Mullins Center record for rebounds with an impressive 16 — topping the previous record of 15, set by both Marcus Camby (twice) and Donta Bright last year and Lou Roe in 1994. In addition, Ketner tied his career high for blocked shots, erasing five potential Ram hoops, while scoring 15 points.

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 7

Minutewomen host Flyers wrap up their regular season

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team concludes its regular season schedule on Saturday when it takes on Atlantic–10 West rival Dayton in the William D. Mullins Center. Game time is 1 p.m.

The Minutewomen, (16–9, 10–5 A–10) have secured second place in the A–10's East division, which means they will receive a first round bye and a home date for the second round of the tournament, which kicks off next Tuesday, Feb. 25. UMass will host it's game on Thursday, Feb. 27, against the winner of the Duquesne vs. Rhode Island/Temple first round match–up.

If UMass wins next Thursday, they will travel to the site of the highest remaining seed, which by all indications will be George Washington. The highest seed will host both the semi–finals and the A–10 championship, which will be played on March 2 and March 3.

For the near future, UMass will have to deal with the pesky Dayton Flyers. The Flyers, (11–14, 6–9 A–10) haven't been playing well lately, losing four of their last five, but rebounded Wednesday night by pounding Rhode Island 83– 55. Jonelle Ristau led the Flyers with 22 points and seven rebounds. For the year, Ristau is third on the team in scoring, with 10 points a game, and first in rebounds with five. Dayton is lead by Christi Hestor, who is averaging 14.3 points a game. Also potent for the Flyers is Sieph Mathu, their long range specialist. Mathu is averaging 11.5 points a game, and has hit on 52 of 165 three pointers, tops on Dayton.

The Flyers haven't had the best of luck in the conference this season, but beat Xavier, who defeated the Minutewomen 59–52 on Wednesday night, 73–64 back on Jan.21, behind 19 points from Mathu. Dayton also played A–10 power and No.23 George Washington tough, losing 74–60.

UMass can give much of the credit to it's 16–9 season to the play of senior forward Crystal Carroll. Carroll, the 6– foot–2 Watervliet, N.Y. native, has struggled of late, posting back to back 10 point outings, but still leads the team in scoring at 16.4 points and rebounds at 6.1 a game. Kelly Van Huisen, who led the Minutewomen in scoring in Wednesday's loss to Xavier, ranks second on the club with 10.6 points a game, and has racked up an incredible 48 percent shooting from three–point land. UMass has been bolstered lately by the improved play of junior center Kara Tudman, who provided a big blocked shot to preserve a win against St. Bonaventure on Feb. 13, and pulled down a team–high seven rebounds in Wednesday's loss.

A–10 Notes:

It looks like George Washington head coach Joe McKeown will have quite a new look for the A–10 tournament. McKeown has promised his Colonials that if they finish A–10 play with a perfect 16–0 record, he will shave "16–0" in the back of his head. GW is currently 14–0, and play LaSalle and Duquesne to wrap up their season...

St. Joseph's is a perfect 7–0 on the road in conference this season, including a 50–48 thriller over the Minutewomen on Jan. 23.

Hockey faces Boston College for senior night

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Sometimes there's more to something than just a name — which will be good news for the Massachusetts hockey team Saturday night. There's a certain stigma still attached to Boston College in college hockey circles, built on decades of dominance under legendary coach Len Ceglarski.

Thankfully, though, the Eagles stand amidst a tail–spin at this hour as they prepare for their Hockey East playoff run, likely as the sixth seed just ahead of the probably seventh–seeded Minutemen.

UMass has not been playing well of late, but neither have the Eagles, who have lost six of their last seven, including a home–and–home sweep by Merrimack last weekend.

The Minutemen's aspirations of not playing at either New Hampshire or Boston University in the upcoming Hockey East quarterfinal also lie in the wings of the Eagles. UMass can still catch slumping BC and claim the league's sixth seed by winning Saturday night and next weekend at Maine; while the Eagles need to fall next weekend to pride–filled Northeastern and the Warriors in the frozen confines of the Volpe Complex, where they fell 11–5 last Saturday night.

UMass will look to get back on track itself this weekend. The Eagles must be beaten tonight to ensure that the road to the Fleet Center does not roll through the ATM–less town of Durham, N.H. or down Comm. Ave. — an even worse detour because it would be quicker to take Storrow Drive coming from Amherst.

"The way that BC's playing right now, anything can happen, and the way that we're playing right now, anything can happen," coach Joe Mallen said. "We could use the two points for momentum going into [next Saturday's] Maine game. The two Merrimack losses upset them and I think you're going to see them really determined.

"We're still trying to make some progress towards being the best team that we can as we enter the playoffs. This game will be a good test to get us back on the right direction."

Rest assured, BC coach Jerry York will be looking to turn around his team's ship too. Since beating the Minutemen 3–2 on Jan. 24 on Kelley Rink at Conte Forum, BC has fallen in six of its last seven, all to league opposition. The Eagles are beaten up as well, with freshman sensation Tony Hutchins and solid defenseman Chris Masters potentially out of the lineup, suffering from injuries sustained in the Beanpot Championship game.

UMass meanwhile enters on the heels of a home sweep at the hands of the Black Bears last weekend and as losers of seven of its last eight. Yet, with the playoffs on the horizon, the regular season means less at this time.

The Minutemen need to get themselves back on track before March 7 for the arrival of the league quarterfinal. Winning the best–of–three series will automatically make

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

Women's gym hosts final home meet in cage today

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team will compete in their final home meet of the season tonight at the Curry Hicks Cage at 7 p.m. They will take on No. 15 Minnesota, Vermont and MIT.

Tonight's meet is special for two reasons. One, it's the last time the Minutewomen will be competing at home, and two, it's a senior meet, one where graduating seniors are honored and given a final farewell.

"Last year was the first year of that tradition and we had a tremendous meet," said UMass coach Dave Kuzara.

The two seniors are Tara Swartz and Lianne Laing, who both have had outstanding careers with the Minutewomen, consistently improving thier best scores, as well as setting many new school records.

"They came here and they never settled for being second best, they never acted that way and they never let the people around them act that way," Kuzara said. "But we were not very good when they first came. We scored 185 and 186's. Now we're a 194 team."

This season has been a great one for the Minutewomen. With an overall record of 6–2, they have virtually outdone themselves in almost every meet.

Last weekend's was no exception. Both Laing and Swartz gave their best overall performances this season, and Swartz tied her own school record on the uneven bars, scoring a 9.950.

Kuzara spoke very highly of Laing and Swartz, praising them for being leaders, especially to some of the underclassmen. He cites this meet as one of significance because he has coached the two seniors throughout their UMass career.

"The difference I think for this meet especially for these two seniors has to do with the fact that they were my first class all the way through the system," Kuzara said. "And these two have had a tremendous amount of personal growth and they've also been the absolute cornerstone of this program.

"It's really important that they get set off the right way. We have a tradition that seniors compete in all the events that they can compete, so they'll both be doing all–around, and they'll be in the anchor positions. So it's a tribute to the seniors," Kuzara said.

For tonight's meet, neither Vermont nor MIT should pose too much trouble for the Minutewomen. Most importantly they are focused on beating Minnesota.

"Minnesota's a good team and they'll be ranked a little bit ahead of us, but we think it's another step in what we are trying to accomplish here," Kuzara said.

Speaking about tonight's meet, Kuzara expressed both an optimism about the seniors, and the season overall.

"It really is an important meet every year, everybody always does a tremendous job, so I'm really excited about this weekend. It's the end of a long home stand and we've done every possible thing that we could have thought," Kuzara said.

Rob Bonneau

Tom Perry

Gerry Cahill

Warren Norris

Dennis Wright

Rich Moriarty

Minutewomen back in Kingston for NEs

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

To the Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team, the road to Kingston, R.I. is a familiar one. Last week, the Minutewomen headed out of the town the recipients of a hard–fought second–place finish at the Atlantic 10 Championships.

And this week, the destination will once again be Kingston, where UMass will look to wreck havoc upon "the Ocean State" at the New England Championships.

Last season, UMass placed fifth in a tough New England field, despite having several women bow out of the meet due to a spreading stomach virus.

"We really felt that we would have finished in the top three," coach Julie LaFreniere said. "But the virus going around really hurt our lineup."

Needless to say, the Minutewomen feel they have something to prove, and this year's field will be competitive enough to challenge the Minutewomen into giving one of their most determined efforts of the season.

"Northeastern and Connecticut are the two teams that are going to battle for first–place," LaFreniere said. "We hope to be, expect to be, and it's realistic for us to be in the top three."

Still, LaFreniere doesn't rule out the possibility of moving up a place, or even falling a place or two.

"Rhode Island is a very tough team that will be challenging us from behind, and if things fall our way we have a chance to catch UConn," LaFreniere said. "Anything can happen."

The New England Championships is a two–day meet, with preliminary stages tonight for eight events (200m, 400m, 500m, 800m, 1000m, mile, 55m hurdles, and 55m dash.) The top finishers in the separate heats of each of these events will have the honor of moving on to the next day to compete for the real deal.

"We are going to try to qualify the women for the Saturday events without using up too much of their energy," LaFreniere said. "We want them to be as fresh as possible Saturday."

The Minutewomen have No. 1 seeds in the mile (Rebecca Donaghue) and in the 4x200m relay with Silifa Kenku, Melanie Bell, Emma Gardiner and Shelanda Irish.

In the relay, UMass is tailed by UConn and URI very closely. But UMass' #1 seed was estimated without the consideration of Kenku, who has not been a member of the relay team. LaFreniere believes that her presence will erase at between two to three seconds off the team's time.

LaFreniere feels that this might be a coming out party for some of the freshman women.

The Minutewomen's rising star in the 800m event is freshman sensation Lisa Flood, from Red Bank, N.J.

"Lisa is running tremendously this season," LaFreniere said. "Every weekend she is getting faster and faster, and more competitive. She is up really up for this."

In the high jump, and 55m hurdles, freshman Andrea Comeau from Reading has been coming into her own.

"Andrea is ready to jump extremely well in the high jump, because she will not have to rush between events as she has had to in past weeks," LaFreniere said. "If she can get up to 6', she has a good chance to win the event and perhaps qualify for nationals."

In the pentathalon, freshman

Turn to WOMEN'S TRACK, page 7

Crew successful at weekend event

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

Last weekend, members of the Massachusetts women's crew competed in the Crash B World Indoor Rowing Championships. The tournament was held at the Reggie Lewis Track in Roxbury.

UMass not only rowed well, but 16 out of the team's 20 women finished in personal–best times.

The best time overall for the Minutewomen was from senior Wendy Wilbur, who finished the 2000m in 6:48.9. That time was eight seconds better than her previous personal best.

Wilbur's time, which came during a preliminary heat, was the fastest time for an American competitor Overall, Wilbur finished the Championship fourth.

"I cried [when I realized what my time was]," Wilbur said. "There was a lot of nervousness. Everyone knows that everyone's watching everyone."

Sarah Lauritzen of Denmark finished first overall, with a heat time of 6:45. 50 and a finals time of 6:36.80. She finished first in both events, scoring a perfect 100 points. Behind Lauritzen in second place was Claudia Barth from Germany with a finals time of 6:39.50, and Emily Dirksen, of the U.S. Rowing team, who finished in third overall

Turn to CREW, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 88 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Monday, February 24, 1997

A diamond of a show

Jewel delivered a gem of a show last weekend. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Two games to go

Despite a career–high 12 point effort from junior inus Norville, the Minutemen fell to Dayton yesterday (See Sports Weekend, page 12).

WORLD

Drug lord sentenced to 22-year prison term

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A judge on Saturday sentenced Cali cartel drug boss Miguel Rodriguez Orjuela to 22 years in prison for drug trafficking and conspiracy, the radio network RCN reported. In the past, Rodriguez has confessed to smuggling hundreds of tons of cocaine to the United States and other countries, for which he was sentenced last month to nine years in prison. Under Colombian law, jail sentences run concurrently.

The nine-year term, and a 10 1/2-year sentence given to Rodriguez's brother Gilberto, incensed U.S. officials. Justice Minister Carlos Medellin also expressed regret, calling them jail terms "that a car thief would receive in any other country."

Saturday's sentence, handed down by a judge whose anonymity is preserved for safety reasons, stems from the shipment of about 330 pounds of cocaine to Costa Rica, the radio station said. Rodriguez denied the charges.

It was not immediately possible to confirm the report. Justice Ministry officials had no information and no one could be reached at the regional prosecutor's office.

NATION

Ore. clinic aiding sick through marijuana use

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An illegal clinic in downtown Portland is dispensing marijuana to sick and dying people, The Sunday Oregonian reported.

More than 120 patients have found the Alternative Health Center through word of mouth since it opened six weeks ago, the newspaper said.

Patients who suffer from arthritis, multiple sclerosis, AIDS and other chronic diseases say they can buy an eighth of an ounce of marijuana for $20 to $50, depending on their income. Marijuana cookies are sold in $2 packs. A pot-filled brownie goes for $3. The clinic opened after California and Arizona voters in November approved the medical use of marijuana. Oregon's lawmakers are considering bills to legalize marijuana for medical use. The federal government still considers the drug illegal, and scientists said further study is needed to assess its potential medical benefits.

Patients allowed the newspaper to visit the Portland clinic on condition that the location not be disclosed. They also have other reasons for secrecy.

"We are concerned about vandalism, about our safety when it comes to people thinking that there are a lot of drugs here and a lot of money. And we are afraid of being accosted outside on the street," said Diane Densmore, once convicted of possessing the drug that she said helps her fight chronic back pain, irritable bowel disease, scoliosis, arthritis and depression.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue.	Wed.
HIGH: 35 LOW: 15	HIGH: 18 LOW: 0	HIGH:35 LOW: 20

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 12

University to decrease admissions to increase standards, public profile

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Provost Patricia H. Crosson announced at the Feb. 6 Faculty Senate Meeting that the University of Massachusetts will be seeking a smaller entering class for the fall of 1997.

Due to the large size of the current freshman and sophomore classes, the Enrollment Management Policy Committee recommended that next year's class have a target enrollment of 3700 students.

"What we have begun to do is to really look carefully at our results from previous years and set specific goals in a variety of areas, including the size of the entering class, and its academic profile and composition," Crosson said.

"We want to make progress on all dimensions of our enrollment goals," Crosson said. "We also want to be sure that the size of the student body is appropriate to faculty resources."

According to Arlene Cash, director of Undergraduate Admissions, this is actually the same target enrollment as last year, but the University will need to admit fewer applicants to reach this goal this year.

"It's actually the same goal as last year," Cash said. "More [applicants] took our offer than we expected, so we will admit fewer for 1997."

Cash said that this decision will result in higher admissions standards.

"Instead of admitting 75 percent of the applicants, we're talking about possibly accepting 72 or 70 percent of the applicants," Cash said.

According to Cash, this decision to increase the selectivity of admissions for next year's freshman class also ties in to the University's long range goal of raising the academic profile — Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores, class rank and grade point average (GPA) — of enrolled students.

In addition, the University plans to gradually increase the percentage of Massachusetts residents enrolled from the current 71 percent of the undergraduate student body to 75 percent.

"Out of state applicants will be much more critically looked at," Cash said. "We'll accept fewer of them."

Cash said that part of the reason for increasing the selectivity of admissions is to improve the University's public image.

"Our rankings will be better in college guides and our public perception will go up," Cash said. "The state legislature may see it and justify giving us more money.

"It's only recently that we've begun to pay more attention to SAT scores. The college guides really focus on them, and public perception has a lot to do with how we get funding."

Attracting highly qualified students

Cash also said that $8,000 a year, four–year scholarships are being offered this year to all Massachusetts high school seniors who are first or second in their class.

These scholarships, financed through the Office of the President and the New England Board of Higher Education, are open to all valedictorians and salutatorians who are recommended by their high school principal and who complete an essay application.

The students can use the scholarships at any of the schools in the UMass system.

Cash said that she felt the scholarships have attracted more students to apply to UMass–Amherst this year.

"We have attracted a lot of students through the scholarships that have not looked at us before," Cash said. "We should be attracting the best, and enrolling the best."

Cash could not guarantee that the scholarships will be available again next year.

"We do not know about kids applying for 1998. That hasn't been discussed yet," Cash said.

Job, trade losses threaten Clinton plan for NAFTA

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is counting on Chile's president to push Congress toward accepting his country into a reconstructed NAFTA as the next step toward creating a Western hemisphere free trade zone.

But the idea's harshest critics aren't on Capitol Hill — they're thousands of Americans whose jobs have gone south to Mexico. That makes the pertinent question whether Congress will listen to Eduardo Frei, its Chilean guest this week, or told folks like Gary Hefner, unemployed American.

Hefner was laid off last month after a 30-year career at a General Electric plant in Hickory, N.C. For 40 years, the plant made electric transformers to power America.

Last year, Hefner and 300 co-workers received notice: Contending the Hickory factory was no longer profitable, GE was shutting it down and moving the work to Monterrey, Mexico.

"They put us out to pasture because we were making $15 hourly wages and they could get the work done in Mexico for 83 cents an hour," Hefner said.

Opponents of free trade have made similar charges since President Clinton went against labor unions and many in his own party in 1993 to push the North American Free Trade Agreement through Congress.

With the assistance of former Presidents Ford, Carter, Reagan and Bush and a healthy dose of Republican support, Clinton won that battle against opponents who, in the phrase of Ross Perot, warned of a "giant sucking sound" as Mexico drained high-paying jobs from the United States.

The 1997 replay promises an even tougher fight. Opponents have armed themselves with statistics showing swollen trade deficits with Mexico and Canada since NAFTA's birth.

Clinton blames factors unrelated to NAFTA. He argues that unless Congress quickly renews his authority to expand NAFTA, the United States risks losing to European and Asian competitors already moving into America's economic back yard.

The president hopes by 2005 to bring not only Chile but all the democratic nations of Latin America into what would be the world's largest free trade zone.

Frei is coming to Washington for a Wednesday meeting with Clinton and a speech to a joint session of Congress on Thursday. Clinton travels to Mexico in April and makes his first presidential trip to South America the next month.

However, Clinton's carefully orchestrated sales schedule is in danger of slipping over a dispute that has tied up the free trade effort for the past two years.

Trying to mollify unions and environmentalists, Clinton wants authority to negotiate environmental and labor safeguards as part of any new trade agreement. The Republicans who control Congress don't want to give Clinton such authority, saying those issues don't need to be addressed in trade agreements.

In the new battle, opponents say Clinton will have to overcome a dismal NAFTA track record.

Ralph Nader's Public Citizen released a report Sunday titled "NAFTA's Three Year Reality" that charged the trade agreement has cost more than 600,000 American jobs and resulted in soaring trade deficits with Mexico and Canada.

Figures released last week show America's deficit with Mexico hit a record $16.3 billion in 1996, and its imbalance with Canada rose to $22.8 billion, highest in a decade.

The overall U.S. trade deficit climbed to an eight-year high of $114.2 billion last year, and 60 percent of the deterioration since 1993 has represented rising deficits with Mexico and Canada.

"NAFTA has become the trade agreement from hell. The United States has gotten clobbered, and that fact has a lot of members of Congress nervous," said Lori Wallach, director of Public Citizen's Global Trade Watch.

Administration officials dispute the job-loss figures. They say a special program set up under NAFTA to retrain workers has handled a far smaller 107,000 claims, which does not take into account jobs gained from record-high U.S. exports.

The administration argues the higher trade deficits are the fault not of NAFTA but of unrelated economic forces. Mexico's economy plunged into deep recession in 1995 after a peso crisis, and the dollar has strengthened considerably against the Canadian dollar, making U.S. exports more expensive in Canada.

Police stress awareness after recent crime jump

Several incidents which occurred last week, including assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and theft, have police warning students to be aware of suspicious activity on campus.

According to University of Massachusetts police, John C. Cleary, 18, of 12 Lunt St., Quincy was arrested early Friday morning in John Adams Residence Hall on assault and battery charges as well as assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

Cleary used his foot and fist to assault the individual with whom he had a dispute. In addition, Cleary had possessed a knife "which he displayed but did not use," according to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold.

The individual received minor injuries.

In an unrelated story, an individual walking by Patterson Residence Hall Thursday afternoon reported that he "saw an individual pointing what appeared to be a weapon out a window," Luippold said.

As of Friday afternoon, the reports had not yet been confirmed.

"We are attempting to confirm through conversations with the individuals who live off–campus," Luippold said.

UMass police are also asking members of the UMass community to be aware of any suspicious activity around academic buildings.

Additionally, Thursday afternoon three wallets were stolen from offices in Tobin Hall.

"We believe the three wallets were related in the sense that they were all stolen by the same individual," Luippold said.

So far, the police have no suspects.

All suspicious activities around academic buildings should be reported immediately at 545–2121.

— Leigh Faulkner

Grad student found dead in parking lot Saturday

Anthony S. Nsiegbunam, a graduate student in the political science department at the University of Massachusetts, died Saturday morning. The cause of death has not yet been determined.

Nsiegbunam was pronounced dead at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton after being found unconscious in Parking Lot 71 at the University around 11 a.m. He was 28 years old.

According to Kay Scanlan, spokesperson for the University, there "was no indication of foul play."

An autopsy was scheduled to take place yesterday in Springfield.

Nsiegbunam, originally from Nigeria, lived at 60 Platinum Circle, Northampton. He interned at the Daily Hampshire Gazette.

Scanlan said that Nsiegbunam would be fondly remembered on campus.

"He was bright, funny and interesting," Scanlan said. "Everyone who knew him will miss him."

— Tamar Carroll

ANNA FEDER/ COLLEGIAN

A different point of view

Junior forestry major Colby Streeter gets an upside down look from the top of the Campus Center yesterday afternoon.

Parking ticket appeals process fully revised

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Recipients of parking tickets on the University of Massachusetts campus will soon have a new system and process of challenging those tickets with the new Parking Ticket Appeal and Hearing Process.

The new process will replace the current system that has ceased to function over the past few months.

Under the old system, all appeals were heard through the Parking Appeals Board, whose decision was final, and could not be overruled by a higher authority. The process takes, on average, four to five months because of a large backlog and the failure of the board to meet regularly.

"The system needs to be changed," said Sandy Anderson, director of Campus Services. "People think that their tickets are just going to disappear when they appeal."

With the new system, all appeals will be sent to a parking hearing clerk for review before being sent to the newly restructured Appeals Board. The hearing clerk will have the power to decide on ticket appeals in straightforward cases, and pass the rest on to the newly restructured board.

Anderson projects that a substantial amount of the appeals could be taken care of through the hearing clerk, and therefore, the time commitments required of board members would be greatly reduced.

"There will be a filtering process," Anderson said. "Eighty percent will probably never see the board."

Decisions of the hearing clerk will be final, unless appealed for one of three reasons: new evidence, a procedural error, or the decision was not supported by the facts of the case.

The Hearing Review Board will differ greatly from the current Parking Appeals Board. The new board, modeled after the highly–successful Students Judicial Hearing Board in the Office of the Dean of Students, will have members drawn from a pool of up to 50 volunteer representatives of students, faculty and staff. The desired number of committee members would be five, but the board could function with only three.

Anderson said that Parking Services is currently looking for interested students to volunteer for the board.

"We'd like students to volunteer for this Parking Ticket Hearing Review Board," Anderson said. "Students provide an interesting slant, and we want to make team decisions. We don't have our board yet, but the program is in a pilot mode."

The reason for the new structure is to ensure that none of the volunteers of the board are unfairly burdened with decision making. Each member could serve once or twice per semester and the system would be able to function. If any one or two people are unable to attend, there will be others available on the list to call.

According to a report on the process, the system will provide a number of benefits not currently received. It will give a timely process, make the process easier to understand and make better use of the volunteer board.

With the prospects of parking fees being raised, members of the University community are more concerned with ticket

Turn to PARKING, page 2

Man opens fire on tourists on top of Empire State Building

By Tim Whitmire
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A man opened fire on the observation deck of the Empire State Building yesterday, killing one person, wounding six others and sending dozens of panicked tourists running for cover. The man, who muttered something about Egypt seconds before he began shooting, later shot himself in the head but survived.

"I've never seen so much blood in my life," said witness Stef Nys. "The most scary part was when people started to panic."

The man began shooting at about 5:15 p.m. on the 86th floor observation deck of one of the world's best-known tourist sites, authorities said.

"I'd been out there about one minute when I heard what I thought to be firecrackers," said David Robinson, a tourist from England. "Then everyone started panicking."

Witnesses said dozens of tourists made a mad dash to the stairway and elevator exits. Seven people were injured after the shooting, including some who were trampled when they tried to flee the bloody area, emergency spokesman George Semidey said.

Nys, a Belgian businessman who said he came to the landmark building "just to relax myself a little bit," said the man said something about Egypt just before he began firing.

Nys also said he saw the man lying on the floor and his dentures had popped out near a souvenir shop.

One victim died at a hospital, while one of the shooting victims was a child, emergency officials said.

The Empire State Building is one of the most loved and admired tall buildings in the world. Standing 1,250 feet, it had reigned as the tallest building in the world until 1972, when it was overtaken by the World Trade Center.

The skyscraper, which opened on May. 1, 1931, is usually described as 102 stories because of the tower that sits atop its highest point. It's been the site for hundreds of scenes in movies like King Kong, An Affair to Remember, and Sleepless in Seattle.

Fifth Avenue was closed between 31st and 35th Streets, as police escorted frightened witnesses from the building.

Skies were clear and visibility from the deck was about 10 miles and temperatures were in the 40s, according to the National Weather Service.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Chris Conner
Copy Editor: Laura Stock
Photo Technician: Anna Feder
Production Supervisor: Lorraine Urbanski
Production Staff: Chris Lavin
Josh Sylvester

ID office extends hours for photos

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

In an attempt to combat long lines at the close of the semester, the University of Massachusetts ID office is now taking pictures for the new All-Campus Card that will be implemented across campus at the start of the fall 1997 semester.

Additionally, from Feb. 25–27, the hours will be extended in order to allow more convenience for students in need of a new ID.

The ID office, located in Franklin Dining Hall, will be open until 7 p.m., Tuesday through Friday for the above dates.

As of Friday, students will be able to enter the ID office to get their picture taken during the regular business hours Monday thru Friday 9 a.m.–4 p.m.

According to ID officials, students are recommended to take advantage of the convenience of the extended hours. This way, students will be able to avoid waiting in long lines at the end of the semester.

"The entire process takes less than two minutes," according to Linda Overing of the ID office.

The current IDs will not be accepted as of the fall semester, 1997. At that point, the current IDs will not be valid for the dining hall Meal Plans or residence hall access.

According to ID office employees, right now they are only taking pictures. The actual IDs will be processed at a later date and sent out over the summer, or at pick-up points around campus.

The new ID cards will be provided to students free of charge.

Students who lose their IDs and need a replacement will be charged the normal standard fee.

Additionally, these new All-Campus ID cards will operate by electronic validation. This new feature will eliminate the use of semester stickers.

Electronic validation will also allow the students the opportunity to employ their new ID cards as debit cards in order to make purchases for campus services and merchandise.

For further information about getting pictures taken, students can call the ID Office.

History professor awarded Fulbright Scholarship to teach, research abroad

By Julie Siegal
Collegian Correspondent

Kevin Boyle, a University of Massachusetts assistant professor of history, has been awarded a Fulbright scholarship to teach at University College in Dublin.

"The Fulbright is a federal government program which sets up opportunities for American professors to teach abroad," Boyle said. "It's also a good opportunity to do research abroad."

The nine month appointment, which will begin in September, is part of a special Fulbright scholarship known as the Mary Ball Washington Chair in U.S. History. This special Fulbright funds chairs throughout Western Europe, and is the only one of its kind in Ireland.

The Fulbright program has been running for 30 years and offers programs in 100 countries.

"I chose Ireland mainly because my family's from there," Boyle said. "My mother was from Cork in the south, and my father from Donegal in the north."

Boyle also hopes to contact numerous relatives who still live in Ireland.

Boyle applied for the scholarship last summer in hopes that he will be able to teach American history to foreign students.

"It's so straightforward teaching 20th century American history to Americans," Boyle said. "It'll challenge my teaching now that I have to teach to non-Americans."

In holding the Mary Ball Washington Chair, Boyle will focus primarily on teaching rather than research. A specialist in U.S. labor history, he will offer two classes in U.S. political history each semester.

In addition to his teaching duties, Boyle plans to pursue various research projects during his spare time. Since he is presently working on a biography of Robert Kennedy, he hopes to explore the Kennedy family's origins in Ireland. He also hopes to travel to England to gain background material on the period during which Kennedy's father, Joseph, served as U.S. embassador there.

Boyle is the author of The UAW and the Heyday of American Liberalism, 1945–1968, a study of the rise of the labor movement, which was published by Cornell University Press last year.

Boyle has taught at the University since 1994.

RACHELLE JOSEPH/ COLLEGIAN

Heart and soul

A group of students express their enthusiasm for Dominican Independence at a dance hosted by Casa Dominicana in the Student Union last night.

■ parking

continued from page 1

enforcement then they have been at other times.

"Now, with the proposed parking fee increase, people are talking to us," Anderson said. "They're asking, 'If I pay this, am I going to get a spot?'"

"Human nature is not keeping people out of the wrong parking lots. We don't want to be ticketing and towing."

According to Parking Services, in the time period between the beginning of last July and mid December, over 15,000 citations were issued. Of that number, almost 90 percent were not contested. Of those contested, half were dismissed because of the dissolution of the board. Only 26 were upheld. The remainder are still pending.

Looking for FYI?

Turn to the Classifieds page of the newspaper, the new location of the For Your Information listings.

ANNA FEDER/ COLLEGIAN

A showcase of talents

A group of dance students perform at the Acidlounge Arts Festival Thursday night in the Campus Center.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
COMING MARCH 5!
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

DAILY COLLEGIAN
1/2 PRICE
THURSDAYS
Starting Thursday February 27, 1997
Students place a classified on Thursdays for only 10c !!!
Call the Collegian classified staff at 545-3500, visit our Campus Center Concourse newsstand, or come down to our office in the basement!

~ NATIONAL/INTERNATIONAL ~

Netanyahu hires criminal lawyer in trading scandal investigation

By Jack Katzenell
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, under questioning in an alleged influence-trading scandal that could bring down his government, has hired one of Israel's top criminal lawyers to represent him, the lawyer confirmed yesterday.

As the scandal spread, the opposition Labor party prepared for the possibility of early elections.

Netanyahu, who was in Jordan yesterday, reportedly has been warned by police that he could face criminal charges in connection with the short-lived appointment of a political crony as attorney general. He has denied any wrongdoing.

"Not only is the prime minister not tainted with any criminal act, he has not committed so much as a particle of a criminal act," Netanyahu's new lawyer, Yaacov Weinroth, told The Associated Press.

Police Minister Avigdor Kahalani, a leading ally in Netanyahu's government coalition, said Saturday that the scandal could bring down the government.

But Netanyahu said he was certain he would see his term through to the next scheduled vote in 2000.

"I intend to continue to lead the state of Israel," he said in Jordan. "I heard the (opposition) is getting ready for new elections. I have good advice for you: 'Wait. You have a good four years left in the opposition'."

Netanyahu was questioned last week about allegations that Arieh Deri, leader of the religious Shas party, made his party's support for last month's Hebron agreement conditional on the appointment of a Jerusalem lawyer, Roni Bar-On as attorney general.

Deri is being tried on corruption charges and Israel Television reported that Bar-On was to arrange a plea bargain in exchange for his appointment.

The station said Deri threatened Netanyahu that unless Bar-On was appointed, he would withdraw Shas's vote for Israel's agreement to hand over most of the West Bank city of Hebron to the Palestinians.

Netanyahu and Deri have denied any such conspiracy. Bar-On resigned one day after his appointment amid criticism he was chosen only because of his political ties.

Israeli media, citing police sources, reported last week that police believe they have enough evidence to bring charges against at least one senior government official.

According to Israel Radio, police and prosecution sources said Netanyahu was warned that he might face criminal charges after he evaded difficult questions and his testimony contradicted that of other witnesses. It was the first time an Israeli prime minister was questioned by police as a suspect in a criminal case, the radio said.

Weinroth, Netanyahu's new attorney, met Sunday with State Attorney Edna Arbel to complain about the leaks in the case. "The prime minister, like any citizen, is entitled to a fair investigation, not an investigation accompanied by leaks," he told the AP.

Labor party Secretary-General Nissim Zvilli called a meeting of party officials Sunday night to begin planning for the possibility that the government might fall, in which case new elections would have to be held within 60 days.

100 killed in fire during religious meeting

By Ranjan Roy
Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — Fire swept through a cluster of thatched-roof buildings in eastern India where scores of worshipers had gathered to seek the blessing of a dead Hindu guru yesterday, killing more than 100 people, a government official said.

Satijeb Hota, home secretary of the eastern coastal state of Orissa, said 110 bodies had been found by late yesterday, and that 165 people had been injured in the fire near the city of Baripada. More bodies were being dug up late yesterday, officials said.

The fire tore through the group of temporary structures erected for followers of Swami Nigamananda. The flames sent panicked worshipers, many of them impoverished villagers, running for exits, Press Trust of India reported, quoting witnesses.

Many of the victims may have died in the stampede, the news agency said.

The fire, about 1,250 miles southeast of New Delhi, overwhelmed Baripada, which has only two fire trucks, and the state government ordered doctors from larger towns to rush to the site.

India news agencies earlier reported that at least 200 people had been killed and 500 were injured, 300 of them critically. United News of India quoted local police in Baripada as saying that 120 bodies had been retrieved.

Some of the injured were lying on the road leading to a local hospital waiting to be treated, United News reported, and the hospital had to put some patients on its verandah after its rooms filled up with victims.

Hota, speaking in a telephone interview from Bhubaneshwar, the state capital, said the search for bodies continued but that only a few more were likely to be recovered.

More than 12,000 devotees of Swami Nigamananda, a Hindu spiritual leader, had assembled for several days of worship at an area known as Madhuban grounds, on the outskirts of Baripada. Swami Nigamananda has been dead for many years, but his followers, mostly in eastern India, worship his memory and continue to seek his blessing.

Organizers had built one huge hut and several other sheds of straw walls and thatched roofs to serve as meeting halls and temporary shelters, Hota said. "So it all burned really fast," he said.

When the fire started at about 3:30 p.m., many of the devotees were napping in the living quarters to escape the afternoon heat, said Hota. It was unclear, however, if all the victims were in one building.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately known, though witnesses told Press Trust an electrical short circuit was to blame, while United News said it may have been sparked by the explosion of a gas cylinder used for cooking.

Zaire rules out talks with rebels

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

KISANGANI, Zaire — Zaire will never negotiate with anti-government rebels, despite their continued victories in eastern Zaire, the president's son vowed yesterday.

"Our position remains the same from the start. We will not discuss or negotiate whatsoever," Nzanga Mobutu, who serves as his father's spokesman, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from southern France.

Even as he spoke, government officials in the Zairian capital, Kinshasa, were conceding the rebels had made fresh advances toward the government's northeast military headquarters in Kisangani, the country's third-largest city.

The Defense Ministry said Kalima, a small mining town about 180 miles south of Kisangani, came under rebel control Saturday. The rebel advance prompted more than 25,000 refugees who had taken refuge in Kalima to flee into the forest.

Most of the refugees are Rwandan Hutus who have been on the road since the 1994 Hutu-orchestrated slaughter of a half-million Rwandan Tutsis. They're reluctant to return home for fear of reprisals by the Tutsi-led government in Rwanda.

Rebel spokesman Moise Nyarugabo Muhizi said the rebels were moving from Kalima south to Kindu, a distance of 75 miles, to try to capture one of two government airports in eastern Zaire.

"We can be in Kindu in a few days," Nyarugabo said.

He said of Nzanga Mobutu ruling out negotiations: "If they accept, we will talk. If they refuse, we will go on fighting." Refugee workers fear the rebels will next attack the 160,000 people in the Tingi-Tingi refugee camp, 150 miles southeast of Kisangani. Laurent Kabila, leader of the rebel Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo-Zaire, alleges Zaire's government has armed former Rwandan Hutu soldiers and militiamen among the refugees at the camp.

Capt. Ndgoli Esenge Ekeli, a legal adviser to the ministry of defense, told The Associated Press on Sunday that the "the determination of the rebels to attack the refugees demonstrates Laurent Kabila does nothing but obey the Tutsis in their objective to exterminate the Hutus."

Zaire has long accused Rwanda, Burundi and Uganda of militarily backing Kabila.

Ndgoli accused Burundi of sending aircraft to the strategic southeastern port city of Kalemie, the Lake Tanganyika town Kabila captured two weeks ago, to deliver troops and supplies.

He also accused Uganda of sending surface-to-air missiles to another rebel-controlled city, Goma, on the eastern border with Rwanda.

Kabila, whose fighters have captured a 900-mile strip of eastern Zaire, had threatened a new offensive if the government hadn't begun peace talks by midnight Friday.

International efforts to bring both sides to the negotiating table in Cape Town, South Africa, appeared stalled again yesterday. Kabila's Alliance took up arms in September, after the government tried to oust ethnic Tutsis from eastern Zaire. Their rebellion is aimed at toppling Mobutu Sese Seko, whose 31-year dictatorship has left mineral-rich Zaire among the world's poorest countries.

"The military advance is needed to force the hesitant Zairian so-called authorities to come to negotiate their relinquishing of power," Kabila told The Associated Press in Bukavu on Saturday. Mobutu quietly flew to his villa in southern France on Friday night for further medical treatment for his battle with prostate cancer, said Nzanga Mobutu, who previously had said the visit was unrelated to his father's medical condition.

He said his father would return to Zaire by Tuesday, "if all goes well."

Scientists learn to clone adult mammal

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Researchers have cloned an adult mammal for the first time, an astonishing scientific landmark that raises the unsettling possibility of making copies of people.

Scientists slipped genes from a 6-year-old ewe into unfertilized eggs and used them to try to create pregnancies in other sheep. The result: A lamb named Dolly, born in July, that is a genetic copy of the ewe.

The feat opens the door to cloning prized farm animals such as cattle, and should make it much easier to add or modify genes in livestock, experts said.

It's also scientifically stunning. Researchers used DNA from the ewe's udder cells, proving that mature mammal cells specialized for something other than reproduction could be used to regenerate an entire animal.

Scientists had thought that was impossible.

Experts said the same technique might make it possible to clone humans, but emphasized that it would be unethical to try.

"There is no clinical reason why you would do this. Why would you make another human being?" said Ian Wilmut, one of the scientists who cloned the sheep. "We think it would be ethically unacceptable and certainly would not want to be involved in that project."

Carl Feldbaum, president of the Biotechnology Industry Organization, which represents about 700 companies and research centers in the United States and abroad, agreed.

"I can think of no ethical reason to apply this technique to human beings, if in fact it can be applied," he said yesterday.

"The biotechnology industry exists to use genetic information to cure disease and improve agriculture. We opposed human cloning when it was a theory. Now that it may be possible, we urge that it be prohibited by law."

A report of the sheep cloning will be published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature by Wilmut and colleagues at the Roslin Institute near Edinburgh, Scotland, and others.

Before the new work, scientists had been able to take tissue from adult frogs and create genetically identical tadpoles. But the tadpoles never developed fully into frogs.

To do the sheep cloning, scientists took cells from the ewe's udder tissue and cultivated them in a lab, using a treatment that made the cells essentially dormant. They also took unfertilized sheep eggs and removed the nucleus, the cells' central control room that contains the genes.

Then they put the udder cells together with the egg cells and used an electric current to make them fuse. The eggs, now equipped with a nucleus, grew into embryos as if they'd been fertilized. The embryos were put into ewes to develop.

The process was horrendously inefficient. Of 277 fused eggs, only one led to a lamb.

Wilmut said he expects the efficiency to improve. Someday a dairy farmer, for example, might make a few clones of cows that are especially good at producing milk, resisting disease and reproducing, he said.

A farmer wouldn't want entire herds of identical animals, because populations need a diverse genetic makeup, he said. Without that diversity, a lethal disease that struck one cow might wipe out all the clones, too.

The advance will also provide a much more efficient way to insert genes into livestock, Wilmut and others said. Inserted genes can be used to make animals secrete valuable drugs in their milk, for example.

Scientists currently insert genes into fertilized eggs in a laboratory, which is a very inefficient way to produce animals that use the genes properly.

With the new technique, they could start with a virtually unlimited supply of body cells from an adult animal, use a much more effective lab technique to insert genes, identify cells that use the genes as planned, and fuse them to eggs.

Collegian Online : http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Sure We Build Amazing Theme Parks, But We Also Build Amazing Résumés.

As part of the Walt Disney World® College Program, you can do some pretty amazing things.

- Learn from some of the top managers in the hospitality and entertainment industry.
- Work behind the scenes at the world's number one vacation destination.
- Live with people from all over the world.

The opportunities are priceless! And so is the experience. You must attend our Casting Session to be considered. Start building up that résumé now.

Ask our Representative about special opportunities for those students who speak Portuguese.

INFO SESSION DATE: Tuesday, March 4 TIME: 7 pm
FOR MORE INFO, CONTACT: Jeff Silver (410) 651-7796
Also visit us at www.careermosaic.com/cm/wdw/wdw1.html

Walt Disney World Co.
EOE • Drawing Creativity from Diversity

A Reminder - Please Note Deadline Below

SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATION NOW AVAILABLE
Attention all Undergraduate Students affiliated with:

CCEBMS UALRC BCP MEP DIMES

Are you rovíding some service to your UMass or hometown community that demonstrates leadership, caring or initiative?
or
Do you have a special talent, gift or skill?
and
Do your grades reflect positive academic achievement?
if so,
You may qualify for a scholarship for the academic year 1997-1998.

Inquire or pick up an application at:

BCP	CCEBMS	UALRC
Wilder Hall	New Africa House	Knowlton Building
545-1987	545-0031	545-1844
MEP	DIMES	Enrollment Services
Marston Hall	School of Manangement	208 Whitmore
545-2030	545-5618	545-0428

All completed applications must be submitted by March 3, 1997!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig I. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadareyu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Position Vacant Circulation Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Oatis Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

UHS, heal thyself

Christina Poletto

Urgent Care."

Maybe somebody should explain this to me, but do these words not essentially mean "immediate medical response?" According to the University's registration manual, 24-hour urgent care is one of the best benefits of our health system. Pardon me, ladies and gentlemen, but you're wrong. I can prove it.

It has gotten to the point that I actually regret being sick. Now, correct me if I'm completely wrong, but wouldn't you think that a campus of such size and stature would provide some organized and methodical practice for treating the sick?

First story occurred freshman year. I was sick. Sick as a dog. Sicker than sick. I had it all. I possessed more symptoms than you could shake a stick at. I had the coughing, sneezing, runny nose, watery eyes, congestion, sore throat, earache, blocked sinuses, headache, fatigue and the chills. It was amazing how many strains of bacteria I held within my body. I felt like I was literally dying. So, I ask you, what would you recommend to any dying student in need of medical attention? Go to urgent care in the University Health Services Building, of course!

I took their advice, unfortunately. I must have waited for over two hours. Okay, I do realize that doctors and nurses get busy, but please, how long does it take to recognize symptoms and write a prescription for some antibiotics? Certainly not two hours. (For the record, I was one of three people in the waiting room).

But wait, it gets better. Much better. I'm talking horror stories you wouldn't want to tell your children.

Last year, three days before my very anticipated spring break, I fell ill. It started with black spots in my eyes. Then, my equilibrium was off. Shortly after, the shaking started. It was in my limbs — an evident, spasmodic, inner body tremor that soon had me in full body convulsions. It was 1 a.m. when I went to urgent care at the UHS — exactly three hours since I had started blacking out.

Eventually, the doctor arrived and sent me home — with a prescription for Dramamine. (For anybody that doesn't know, Dramamine is an over the counter pill for motion sickness. Most people take it before they board an airplane or an amusement park ride. Maybe the doctor at UHS believed I was going through drug withdrawal. After all, this is Zoo Mass).

Unbelievable, right? It didn't end there.

I returned to UHS the next day for a check up. I still harbored all of the symptoms of the night before. This time, the same doctor — Dr. Dramamine — called my mother from the examination room saying "I have reason to believe that your daughter might have Alzheimer's disease. Does it run in your family?"

I would've been the only 19-year-old healthy female in the history of the world to contract Alzheimer's overnight. Needless to say, I went home to the hospital and spent spring break in bed. I was sick from food poisoning.

Three days ago it happened again. It was pathetic. I called UHS three times during various points during the day about an allergic reaction I was having to medication. Plain and simple — I couldn't breathe. The medication was closing my throat. Triage advice lady told me to come to UHS. I did.

It was after one-and-a-half hours that I left without being seen. What, then, actually constitutes an "emergency" at UHS?

Case and point, the UHS urgent care system doesn't work. The reasons? Simple — there is not one aspect of the system that is efficient.

For example, look at the location of Health Services. It's situated on the curve of a one-way street that is usually congested with University traffic. Why isn't it located on central campus where it can be directly accessed from an any direction? Southwest, Sylvan and even Northeast residents aren't given any such convenience.

Another problem is the phone system. If you call the Triage Advice Phone Nurse, she/he is just going to tell you to come into urgent care. They always have, they always will. I realize that the triage nurses can be held liable for false advice given over the phone, but really, why offer the service if no one can take advantage of it?

Third disadvantage — the waiting room. Approximately 25,000 students attend this university. Why then, are there only 16 chairs in the waiting room? (I've witnessed patients who actually had to sit on the floor due to lack of seating).

These aren't just my horror stories. I've heard worse from friends, acquaintances and even strangers.

Hello, UMass? Isn't this telling you something?

If UMass can possess one of the best phone systems in the country, why can't our urgent care system be improved? How about some more waiting room chairs? It's high time our priorities are re-evaluated — especially since we're paying for medical care through our fees. Guaranteed at UMass, something is bound to go wrong if our questions are left unanswered. Just wait and see.

Christina Poletto is a Collegian staff member.

Well... maybe

Nicole Cournoyer

I think maybe this is how things happened. Picture it.

One day, men and women evolved from apes.

They decided they kind of liked this humanity thing so they had sex to keep it going by creating more humans. In propagating the species, these people became consciously aware of a fact that they had only known instinctually before. They discovered that only females could bear children. This puzzled members of both sexes. What did this biological difference between them mean? What were its social implications?

Well, they decided, since the women couldn't get around as easily when they were close to giving birth, and after having given birth had to spend some of their time nursing their children (because females were the only humans who had breasts), it would make sense for the males and the non- pregnant females to hunt and gather for the pregnant and nursing women. And so it went in this efficient, egalitarian society.

After a while, it was decided that since women who had given birth before knew what it was like, they should stay with the pregnant and nursing women to make it easier for them and ensure the health of the babies. While they were waiting for the pregnant women to give birth, these early midwives had to make themselves useful, so they started doing chores around the huts. They cooked, cleaned and made things.

Soon, the men and women who were still hunting and gathering realized that the ratio of men to women in the bush had increased significantly with the absence not only of the pregnant and nursing women, but also the supporting women.

Over time, the muscles of the humans in the bush grew because the work the supporting women did around the huts freed the others to do more hunting and gathering than ever before. The muscles of the women by the huts diminished because they were getting less exercise than ever before. The more muscular people found that they could be physically intimidating to the women by the huts and they began to use that intimidation to force the weaker women to do more work, including all of the caretaking of the children. These women began to take on an image of inferiority and abusability that had not been there before.

Now, the men in the bush, who greatly outnumbered the women in the bush, decided to get these muscular women pregnant so that they would have to go to the huts. Some muscular women refused to have sex and some refused to go to the huts despite their pregnancy because they didn't want to be equated with the inferior women. The men got together and drove off or killed the women who refused to obey them.

So now all of the women stayed in the huts and all of the men hunted and gathered. The men were physically stronger than the women and used this advantage to force the women to work only around the huts, doing all of the lowly, boring, tedious chores, and to have sex whenever the men wanted them to. The men developed big egos by oppressing the women and began to do "manly" things together to prove that they had no inferior, "feminine" qualities in them.

The women, on the other hand, would have gone mad if they had had to live consciously knowing that they were terribly oppressed by men, so they began to rationalize their oppression. Men are men and women are women. Women are naturally weaker and more nurturing and, therefore, better suited for home life and child-rearing. Men are naturally stronger and more aggressive and, therefore, better suited for hunting and acts of bravery. The women bought into these myths in order to stay sane.

When the tribe split apart due to the clashing of male, "aggressive" egos, each man decided he would take a woman with him to continue doing the hut work for him and to bear and rear his children. Now that the nuclear family was formed, both sexes, now engendered, found that it was easier to keep the couple together if they made up a story, another myth, that said that men and women were meant to be together and could only be happy and complete if they were together in this exclusive relationship. Women, especially, needed something to tell them that it was OK that they were bound to their men. So, some genius came up with a fairy tale that ended with a man and woman falling in love and living happily ever after.

Romance was born... and we're still telling that story today.

Nicole Cournoyer is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

SGA needs to quit internal squabbling

To the Editor:

I write this letter in a state of grief stricken rage which results from the front page article published in Thursday's Collegian regarding the motion to impeach Sen. Tom Sadlowski put forth by Sens. Backer and Pellegrino. The article explains that because of their disapproval of Sadlowski's performance, Backer and Pellegrino have taken it upon themselves, as the self-proclaimed guardians of Senate productivity, to trim the herd of those senators who may be in opposition to them. The candor and gall exhibited by Backer and Pellegrino is reprehensible.

I have had the honor of dealing with Mr. Sadlowski in the past during the '95-'96 senate term. We both began our careers as representatives of Northeast, and from the outset, Tom distinguished himself as a leader. Through his competence and initiative he has grown to a level of importance within the student body. He has demonstrated an impressive career of honesty and integrity.

By design all legislative work must be deliberate. The federalists papers discuss the importance for a congressional body to take all factors into consideration and to be exacting and precise. Sen. Sadlowski embodies these legislative principles and should be praised for his high level of professionalism.

A simple, yet prudent solution to this dilemma would have been for Backer and Pellegrino to offer their assistance to Sen. Sadlowski in his efforts rather than attempting to undermine his authority. This could lead to a more productive body rather than the divisiveness which currently reigns.

As a former member of the Senate, I entreat the current senators to turn away from this current course of character assassination. There is indeed more at stake than simply a position on a committee. The student body grows weary when they are handed empty promises and delivered internal squabbles. The people care nothing for hearings and impeachments. While you squabble amongst yourselves, students still pay too much for subpar facilities. They yearn for leadership and integrity which are so painfully lacking.

I would be remiss in not mentioning that there indeed admirable senators such as the valiant, yet at times loquacious Bill Ramsey. A man who has truly redefined the term military intelligence.

All students read and hear about is that the Senate is not even capable of maintaining quorum. This means that senators do not even respect their posts enough to show up for work. While those that do spend precious time bickering amongst themselves.

You were elected as a result of your competence and initiative. The people expect you to be the leaders you have so often claimed to be. Now is the time to deliver on the promises of your prosperity.

Sean Loughran
Sylvan

Senators' disregard for Constitution is shameful

To the Editor:

Those who read [Thursday's] Collegian know that at Wednesday night's Senate meeting I sponsored a motion to remove Senator Tom Sadlowski as chair of the Title VII committee, based on a litany of irresponsible and unethical actions he has taken.

As dismayed as I have been by Senator Sadlowski's behavior, I am far more disgusted by the actions of several other Senators, who decided their point of view is more important than the Constitution, and that they only need follow the rules when it is convenient. As reported by the Collegian, Senator Cassanto tried to prevent the motion from being heard by calling quorum, and then leaving the room, hoping to force the Senate to adjourn, preventing the motion from being heard. That is explicitly unconstitutional, and Senator Cassanto knows it. She deliberately obstructed the business of the Senate, because she didn't like the motion being considered, and that is extremely irresponsible and unethical. Following her lead were Senators Lisa Cook, Jen Keller, Seth Avakian, and several others, all of whom knew full well that they were acting unconstitutionally. It's good to know the Constitution of the SGA, which is what gives us the power to fight for your rights, is optional for these Senators. After all, why follow the rules, if it doesn't benefit you? That is wrong; these Senators swore an oath to abide by the Constitution and their display [Wednesday] night was abhorrent. Worse, the administration is going to see that we can't even keep our own student leaders from violating the Constitution, and they're going to stop listening to us, and that's bad for all students. The Constitution gives us the power to stand up for your rights, and by deliberately disregarding that document, these Senators are making it harder for us to stand up to the administration. The actions of those Senators were unethical and they know it, but they will probably be lauded as heroes for putting one of their political allies before the good of the whole student body. I'm almost tempted to ask them to resign, but that would require a shred of ethics, something I feel these Senators are lacking, and unfortunately, I find it hard to believe that this Senate, as politicized as is, would ever vote to expel anyone for something as minuscule as deliberately violating the Constitution and not doing their jobs.

Finally, I want to say how utterly disgusted I am by the decision of the speaker to rule the motion dilatory. Not because his argument against the motion was poor, though it was, but because twice that day he was asked if the motion would be ruled dilatory, and twice he said no, that the motion was fine. In three hours, something powerful must have come over the speaker to get him to change his mind. Especially since the Speaker had read the act beforehand, providing advice as to the wording, and even made it clear that he agreed with us about Tom's behavior (or lack thereof.) Whatever the reasoning, the Speaker and those Senators who put their personal self-aggrandizement ahead of their role as student leaders have some serious answering to do.

Dan Backer
Amherst

Iran and U.S. share many similarities

To the editor:

Before I start my letter, I would like to ask you not to edit it. If this "great nation" could put up for four years with a vice-president who could not spell the word potatoes, I hope you will tolerate me for a couple minutes. Since I came to this "great land of opportunity and dream" and the "land of the brave and the free," I've been struck with many similarities between the Islamic Republic of Iran, the country I was born in, and the United States of America. I know it sounds odd to juxtapose the great U.S. democracy with the horrible Islamic autocracy. But, I am far from exaggerating. If you bear with me, you may come to the same conclusion after reading what I have to say.

Let me start with a few examples. Take the example of capital punishment. Both the government of the United States and the Islamic regime have this great desire and unsatiable thirst to execute people, of course in the name of the society. In Iran, most of the times the killing is done by firing squads; sometimes convicts are hanged, and other times they are just stoned to death. Here in the U.S., we are moat sophisticated and "humanitarian" when we kill people. I guess it makes us feel good and proud to think that we have "humanitarian" methods of killing; after all we are supposed to be very civilized.

Another example is the mania to put people behind bars. Both the Islamic regime the U.S. government prefer prison to school. The former turns schools into prisons, and the latter simply takes money from education and puts it into building more prisons. They are also great drug warriors. They declared a war on drugs, of course with no avail. While posing to fight drugs, the Islamic government supported drug smugglers who fought the Russian-backed government in Afghanistan. The U.S. did the same thing, but in Nicaragua. In addition, they are unabashedly big liars. The Islamic Republic pretended to fight the "great Satan," and the U.S. government had Iran as a terrorist country on its black list. However, hidden from the public eyes, they were in bed together selling and buying arms, something that came to be known as Iran-Contra scandal.

I can go on and on with these examples and give you a long list of similarities between the U.S. democracy and the Islamic autocracy. But before I end this letter, let me give it a final try to make my argument more compelling. I have recently found out that the Islamic Republic of Iran gave an ultimatum to employers in Iran to fire their "foreign" workers and hire from internal labor market. The Islamic regime also decided to deport one million immigrant workers and their families back to where they came from. While waving the shameful banner of nationalism and nativism, the Iranian government blames "foreign" workers for unemployment, poverty and homelessness. This sounds very familiar, doesn't it?

Is Iran learning from the U.S., or vice versa? Who knows; they might simply be competing with one another in their callousness and cruelty against humanity and human dignity. By the way, don't get me wrong. I never believed that the U.S. democracy and the Islamic autocracy are the same thing; I will not even try to argue that. For your and my comfort, I admit with all my heart that there is a difference between them; the former is the lesser-of-the-two-evils. If it weren't the case, I might not have been here.

Mahmood Keiabohi
Labor Studies

Now you can send your letters to the editor via e-mail!
Remember to remember:
1) Try and keep it short and concise (200 words is a nice length).
2) Don't forget your name, address and phone number for verification purposes.
3) Send letters over email to Letters@olivma.oit.umass.edu or drop them off at 113 Campus Center, c/o Mike Burke

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Arts & Living

Monday, February 24, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Fortune shines at Iron Horse

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

SONNY FORTUNE QUARTET
Iron Horse
Feb. 22

NORTHAMPTON — Alto saxophonist Sonny Fortune, a former sideman of such jazz legends as Miles Davis, Elvin Jones and McCoy Tyner, brought a perfectly uniform quartet of jazz musicians to the Iron Horse. In addition to Fortune, the band included bassist Santi Debriano, pianist Ron Mathews and legendary drummer Billy Hart.

The quartet played two hour-long sets that mixed burning upbeat hard-bop numbers with spare ballads. They started off the evening with a quick run-through of Thelonious Monk's "Hackensack," which was played roughly the same as it appeared on Fortune's 1994 Monk tribute album, Four In One.

For the next two songs, Fortune pulled out his flute, which he is equally, if not more, adept at as his is with the alto sax. He played an original, "Awakening," which set the tone for slower numbers for the evening: meditative lines, melodic ensemble playing as opposed to individual solos, and a dark, moody flute over the whole canvas of sound.

Fortune followed "Awakening" with Billy Strayhorn's standard "Chelsea Bridge," with the same sensitivity. He often would leave the stage during these spacial, slow numbers to let his band jam without him, much like his old boss Miles Davis would often do. Debriano played a sweet, bowed bass solo.

On the first set closer, "This Side Of Infinity," Fortune snatched up the alto again for this groove-jazz number with break-neck pace alto solos that shouted as a person might shout out their faith during a gospel number.

During the short intermission, I was able to have a few words with pianist Ron Mathews. The New York City-born pianist is a regular member of the T.S. Monk band, and they are now working on an album celebrating what would have been the 80th birthday of Thelonious Monk, the father of drummer T.S.. The all-star cast for the album, which is being recorded now (no release date set yet), will include Wayne Shorter, Herbie Hancock and many others.

Back on the stage, Mathews put in a soulful solo on the second set opener, Kenny Barron's "Sunshowers." Following this mid-tempo number were two more slower, spare, flute- accented ballads by Fortune's own pen, before he finished off the evening with another original "Comin' In Out Of The Rain," from his latest release on Blue Note, From Now On.

This last tune was Billy Hart's all the way. Never has more furious drumming been seen at the Iron Horse. Jack DeJohnette could be the only other drummer who has as much texture and mastery of upbeat numbers as Hart, in terms of recent Horse shows (DeJohnette played drums behind Pat Metheny and Michael Brecker in late January), and jazz in general. The man just wailed. The band gave Hart many solo breaks near the end of the tune — just little four bar spaces — where Hart could truly illustrate how he keeps a band moving ahead. That's what Fortune also looks for in his playing: a view beyond the horizon.

Bo Diddley looked back on his 40-year career Friday at the Iron Horse.
COURTESY ATLANTIC RECORDS

Bo knows: never too old to rock

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

BO DIDDLEY
Iron Horse
February 21, 1997

NORTHAMPTON — Bo still knows. Friday night, rock n' roll pioneer Bo Diddley brought 40 years of expertise and knowledge to the Iron Horse. His blend of music, humor and off-color anecdotes captivated a packed house for the duration of his set; it was the music, though, which defined the evening.

In order to fully appreciate Bo Diddley (real name — Ellas McDaniel), one has to understand the magnitude of his influence. Although he has never received the recognition reserved for the likes of Chuck Berry, Little Richard and the other black stars of the '50s, Diddley was just as important; his early work personified the "jungle music" tag applied to rock music at its inception. With layers of maracas, tom- toms and tremolo-drenched guitars, his early Chess classics "Who Do You Love," "Roadrunner" and "I'm A Man" combined call-and-response vocals with his trademark "shave-and-a-haircut-six-bits" rhythm to create a sound which has never been duplicated.

Not to say that people haven't tried. Buddy Holly stole Bo's style for "Not Fade Away"; the Rolling Stones opened for him in 1963 and recorded his "Mona"on their first

Turn to BO, page 8

COURTESY MICHAEL MULLER
Alaskan folkie Jewel overcame fire alarms and security problems to deliver a spectacular set at Chapin Hall.

Jewel keeps cool at Mt. Holyoke

By Lisa Oliveri
Collegian Staff

JEWEL
Chapin Auditorium
Feb. 20

SOUTH HADLEY — Alaskan native Jewel brought her folksy sound to a sold-out crowd last Thursday evening at Mount Holyoke college. Playing to an extremely receptive audience in Chapin Hall, Jewel's wit and talent carried her throughout her 90-minute long performance.

Jewel appeared by herself on stage, wearing a long, flowing dress, carrying only her acoustic guitar. She was sans spotlight to begin, with only slight overhead lights bearing down on her, giving her an almost angelic appearance. Her voice was clear, beautiful and refined — there was no question she is a gifted musician.

And then the problems began. No sooner than a chord into her second song, Chapin Hall's fire alarm went off, sending groans throughout the audience. But Jewel handled it well, joking with the audience as if nothing happened. She played a few bars of "Foolish Games," and then prompted the entire audience into collectively shouting "loser" at the person who set off the alarm.

For the approximate 10 minutes the alarm buzzed, Jewel entertained the crowd with personal looks into her life and career. She spoke of the last time she was in the Valley, talked about her upbringing in Alaska and then sang snippets from "Pieces of You," inserting sarcastic remarks about people who pull fire alarms.

With the exception of the overhead lights flickering on and off at the end, it was smooth sailing the rest of the show. For most of her set she was alone, which is sometimes difficult for an artist to pull it off. But Jewel had no problem. Right from the start she was the center of attention — not once did she ever get lost in the crowd. For a small woman she has a powerful stage presence.

With the intimacy of a smaller venue, the audience and artist can establish a favorable rapport. Jewel took full advantage of this, weaving quirky stories and funny anecdotes between her songs. Each song had its own tale, and Jewel quickly enraptured her fans with her eloquent storytelling.

Though she only has one album thus far, Jewel took this show as an opportunity to premiere some of her new songs, giving her fans a sneak preview as to what will be on her forthcoming album.

If an audience is receptive to an artist, and exerts a lot of energy, the show is usually that much better. And there was no problem with the energy level last Thursday night. There was, however, a problem with the students who were working.

The students working the show were distinguished by

Turn to JEWEL, page 8

Put the world at your fingertips.
Software Engineering
Systems Engineering
Computer Design
Signal Processing
Electro-Optics
Image Processing
With Raytheon Electronic Systems, you'll create the technologies that define the future of tomorrow's world. You'll maximize your Engineering and Computer Science knowledge and make an impact when you join our team. We currently have over 350 opportunities available in the technical areas listed above.
Raytheon Electronic Systems will be visiting campus soon. To find out more about the complex challenges we have to offer, please contact the Career Placement Office to sign up for an interview.
For additional information, please see our homepage at: http://www.raytheon.com/res
Interested candidates who are unable to meet with us on campus may send a resume directly to: Raytheon Electronic Systems, Professional Staffing, M/S T25L2, 50 Apple Hill Drive, Tewksbury, MA 01876-0901. Fax: (508) 858-1183. E-mail: staffing@res.ray.com
U.S. citizenship may be required for some positions. Equal Opportunity Employer.
Raytheon Electronic Systems

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE™
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, March 5th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Shop Around & Compare!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Wednesday, February 26, 1997
Room 804
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass
I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?
If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services Health Education at 577-5181 or General Medicine 2 at 577-5233

Singleton's Rosewood honors 1922 massacre

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

ROSEWOOD
Directed by John Singleton with Jon Voight, Ving Rhames, Playing at Mt. Farms Four Theater

Two years after graduating from USC film school, John Singleton created a true masterpiece of modern urban drama. His film, entitled Boyz N' the Hood, recognized Singleton as a provocative and talented young filmmaker, with ambitions of using the medium of film to confront America with its social ills. His latest picture, Rosewood contains the same passion that fueled Boyz N' the Hood, replacing present-day Los Angeles with the backwoods of central Florida during one week in 1922.

Singleton recreates the true story of the Rosewood massacre, which is said by the Florida House of Representatives to have had casualties of two whites and six blacks. However, survivors of the massacre claim that the true number of dead could be estimated at between 40 and 150, the vast majority being African-American.

What is so bizarre and yet brilliantly innovative about Singleton's recreation is that he tells the story in the format of a classic western.

Turn to ROSEWOOD, page 8

Golden Key National Honor Society
General Membership Meeting
*****
Where: Campus Center*
When: February 24, 1997
Time: 7:00 P.M.
*Please check at information Desk

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs...

Monday, February 24, 1997

Note From the Editor

Since I first got involved with the Black Affairs Desk in the spring semester of 1996, we have made considerable strides in making the Black Affairs Page a dependable source for members of the ALANA community to read and be informed on issues affecting people of color.

Now, in the spring semester of 1997, we are continuing to do the same. The Black Affairs Page is about to take a big step in bringing you what you want to see. We're making changes that we hope will make the page bigger and better than it has ever been. These changes are taking place in three main components:

1. We are expanding the scope of the page to include more national news pertaining to people of color.

2. We are bringing in more involvement from RSOs such as the Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP) and the Black Student Union (BSU) to let you know what's going on with your student-run organizations.

3. As of March 10, the Black Affairs Page will no longer run every other week. Following the week of Spring Break, the Black Affairs Page will appear in the Daily Collegian every Monday.

These changes are only the beginning. We are also on a mad dash for the recruitment of students of color to write, not only for Black Affairs and other diversity desks, but the Collegian as a whole.

The Collegian and the Black Affairs Page have received a lot of criticism over the past semester. A lot of that criticism stems from students thinking that the paper is not inclusive enough of the issues involving students of color.

When I first read the Daily Collegian, I saw that there was a need for black representation. I saw the need and I got involved. I took it upon myself to make a difference and I didn't waste time with criticisms that didn't help make direct change.

We all know the problem. It's easy to talk about the problem, but doing something to actually change things is easier said than done.

Those of us here at Black Affairs are dedicated to helping bring about awareness and real change. Many of our writers not only write for the Black Affairs desk, but also write for News, Arts and Living and Sports.

Gregory Casimir and Allana Todman have had front page stories on a number of occasions, as well as myself. When people can look at the front page of the Collegian and see black writers, it lets them know that there are students of color making moves. It's encouraging and helps bring other students of color into the mix.

Black Affairs and the Daily Collegian are here for you, but you have to get involved. If you don't make the effort, no one else will. No one ever made significant change waiting on others to do it for them, and we won't either.

Students of color on this campus will continue to be treated as pets (nice to have around, but don't count for much in the long-run) until we take control of the tools around us. This paper is one of those tools that gets circulated thousands of times over — daily. That is power. That is what we need. That is what Black Affairs is trying to get, but we can't do it without you.

Thanks to all of those who have contributed to the Black Affairs Page in the past and to all of those who will in the future.

Grow in Knowledge. Peace and God Bless.

— Humphrey brown III

CASA night succeeds again

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

On Saturday night, Feb. 22, the 5th Annual Dominican Independence Celebration took place in the Student Union Ballroom.

The event was put on by CASA Dominicana, the Dominican student-run RSO. The members of the CASA committee include Aida Baez, Wenda Peralta, Jean Metayer, Arline Castillo, Maximo Cabral, Arlene Price, Simon Alex, Rhoda Nunez and Monique De La Oz.

The evening began with a traditional Dominican cuisine being served. Baez started the event of by thanking all of the RSOs and other organizations that sponsored the event.

Among the sponsors were the Haitian Student Association (HASA), Campus Design & Copy, Asian American Student Association (AASA), Concepto Latino, the Black Student Union (BSU) and Boricuan Unidos.

Baez commented on how the event was born out of the emotion that Dominican students feel towards their country.

"Although CASA has been registered for four years, this is our fifth annual celebration," Baez said. "This means that CASA night was born out of the love for our Dominican independence."

Baez also cited the original members of CASA — Jenny Lopes, Judy Aquino, Lucy Lopez and Belkis Alvarado — for making this cultural event an ongoing tradition:.

The keynote speaker of the evening was Dominican diplomat Carlos Jose Cepeda. He gave a historical overview of what the celebration signified.

"On February 27, 1844 men and women gave their lives to get independence for their country," Cepeda said.

The founding father of the Dominican Republic was Juan Pablo Duarte. Although Francisco del Rosario Sanchez and Matias Ramon Mella led the actual revolt against the Haitian regime, Duarte is considered the founding father because he provided the impetus and inspiration for the achievement of independence.

Duarte is also responsible for the design of the current Dominican flag.

Despite the fact that the Dominican Republic ousted a Haitian rule in order to become independent, Cepeda embraced their fellow islanders in a message of unity.

"We feel honored to be neighbored with a country like Haiti, despite the difference in the people, and the language," Cepeda said.

Cepeda closed on a note of good future promise.

"Today, Dominicans have created a free and liberal country," he said. "In 1996, we put in a new government. We are in a new period in time."

The next event that followed was a poetry reading by freshman committee member Monique De La Oz entitled, "Dominicana Yo Soy."

The entertainment began with four sensational dance performances by the CASA dance group, Cayena. They put on three traditional dance numbers: "Soy Dominicano," "Compadre Pedro Juan" and "Mi Tierra Querida," and finished with a more uptempo act that had the crowd jumping. They ended their performance with an enactment of a traditional Dominican festival known as "Carnaval".

The costumes were designed by Jenny Balbuena, and the performances were choreographed by Rhoda Nunez.

There was a brief dance intercession before the artistic performance took place. La Banda X, a mambo band, provided live musical entertainment for the night, and Concepto Latino deejayed the dance party.

Baez commented on the importance of events like this for students of Dominican descent.

"It gives them an opportunity to show UMass that the Dominican culture is all about," Baez said.

Baez also explained on how events like CASA night can benefit non-Dominican students.

"We educate other people in our culture, our traditional foods, dance and folklore, music and history," she said.

To Baez, the big turnout of the night showed how receptive the UMass community is to the Dominican culture.

"The increase of people shows that the word spread. It means that the people who had a good time before came back, and brought along friends," Baez said.

Tell me: who da man?

Onyinyechi Ihedigbo

Many brothers walk around with their guard up. Fronting like they hard, to protect what is all bottled up inside, caused by crazy stress in the world.

They are targeted by society, being labeled and defined by false media images of what it means to be a black man in America.

It leaves them empty, bound up in pain, unable to express themselves freely, for if they do they will be considered weak, making them question their own manhood.

Saturday Feb. 22, at the Hampden Gallery, I witnessed something amazing. I was amazed by what my eyes had seen after watching the film I AM A MAN by Northeastern graduate Byron Hurt. Brothers were being real to themselves and each other, expressing their insecurities about black masculinity in America.

This film was designed to take a look at black men in America and what it means to be "Da Man".

This film was brought to campus by the Women of Color Program and the Counselor Advocate Program at the Everywoman's Center, in honor of Black History Month, and in honor of black men who don't receive the programming they need to empower their own development on campus.

I AM A MAN is a film that resulted from Hurt's self-exploration and how he, as a black man, masked his own feelings of vulnerability. To play the role of being "hard," the only way in which society would affirm him and many other black men, would be to play the role of an angry beast unable to be tamed.

Look at the image of King Kong. He was an ape, and he also represented the image of a black man. Kong was captured from Africa, brought to America to chase after white women with bright blond hair. Not to mention the massive attacks of abuse he received. He had no emotions, for he was non-human, invincible and supposed to be captured and placed in a metal cage.

Is this story not parallel to the struggle of the black man in America? They were captured from Africa, brought to America to be enslaved, set free, abused and re-captured to be put in cages by the same forces that brought them here, but in a different time period.

So where does emotion and pain fit into this whole picture?

Do black men not have any feelings to express?

Are they beings that are emotionless? They have been stripped of so much and are still dehumanized as being lazy people, abusers, murderers, rapists, thieves who must be punished, enforcing America's fear of the black man. You hear it all the time.

"The black man did it!"

What is to be the response of black men in America? If they are affirmed by playing such roles, how are they able openly to express themselves? How can they come together and deal with the issues that hurt them so deeply? If they can't be tough, have physical strength, and high emotional tolerance, they are less than a man.

So, who da man?

Responses were made by brothers and sisters who sat in the audience for the discussions during the two-hour film, covering issues such as media images, masking, cool pose, sexism, abuse and the future of the black man.

Brothers engaged in intense conversations, trading stories of incidents that occurred in their communities. They discussed the roots of problems such as attacks by white people, relationships with women, relationships with other males, issues of intimacy and how to define their masculinity.

When the program ended brothers remained, taking a deep look at themselves and the world around them. They didn't want to disperse from a place they were validated for being open, honest, compassionate and sensitive.

"It was nice to know what's going on inside other brothers minds, instead of feeling like the isolated case," said Rodney Powell, a graduating senior.

I AM A MAN is scheduled to be aired on PBS in 1998

Onyinyechi Ihedigbo is a Collegian correspondent.

Debut novel shines

By Millicent Jackson
Collegian Correspondent

SHENESKA JACKSON
Caught Up In The Rapture
Simon & Schuster

In her debut novel, Caught Up In The Rapture, Sheneska Jackson gives a heart-warming and well thought-out contemporary love story, full of wisdom and passion.

The romance Jackson writes about is that between two newly signed artists at a black record company, known as Black Tie Records, which is built on family values and service to the community.

Jazmine Deems, a church-raised singer of prodigious natural talent, and Xavier Honor, an aspiring rapper, are from the same neighborhood in South Central L.A., but from two different worlds. Jazmine is 26 and her life hasn't really started yet. The daughter of a devout Baptist preacher, Jazmine doesn't have much of a life. Her typical day consists of going to school in the morning, working in the afternoon and hoping to get discovered in her free time.

As far as men are concerned, she is through with them. Due to bad past experiences, which have left a sour taste in her mouth, she has opted to concentrate her energies on herself. Jazmine's primary objective is to make it on her own, discover her sexuality and have some fun in the meantime, if at all possible.

Xavier, on the other hand, is a gangsta living strictly in the fast lane, headed for a life of pure destruction, unless something big happens in his life. Through his rapping, Xavier sees a chance to escape the hood. Like Jazmine, Xavier too is not looking for anything as far as romance is concerned; however upon their meeting the issue of romance is inevitable. Xavier and Jazmine's relationship blossoms against the dramatic backdrop of two executives scheming to succeed Black Ties Records' founder, ex-lovers, drive-bys and jealous friends.

Sheneska Jackson creates believable and intriguing characters — for example, Dakota, Jazmine's sassy, outspoken best friend who helps her come out of her shell and later on manages her singing career. The most troublesome part of the novel is Jackson's conflict resolution, which she readily dismisses by hurrying the story along. This can be a bit bewildering at times, but Jackson's character development is strong enough to keep her readers engaged. However, the most compelling element of this first time novelists work is her brilliant voice which alternates back and forth from the male, female point of view, meanwhile rendering the kind of socially grounded, uplifting story that people are hungry for. Caught Up In The Rapture is a story that restores ones faith in the power of love and clearly shows that you can achieve what you want in life regardless of your background.

Black vs. white justice

Dr. Manning Marable

This is not a column about O.J. Simpson's personal tragedy. It is not an examination of his 1996 criminal trial, which found him not guilty, or his recent civil trial, which established his responsibility for the deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ron Goldman. Neither is it about the merits or weakness of the prosecution's case, nor the sudden establishment of Johnny Cochran last year as a popular political icon among segments of the black community.

Over the past two and one-half years, a virtual industry has been constructed around the trials and tribulations of former Heisman award-winner, O.J. Simpson.

Only days after his initial arrest, t-shirts flooded black communities emblazoned with the slogan, "Free O.J.!"

Sleazy pseudo-journalists, like Geraldo Rivera, used the controversy to resurrect their floundering careers.

Prosecutors who had failed to convince a jury of O.J.'s guilt in the criminal trial nevertheless succeeded in raking in millions of dollars from book contracts. All the central protagonists in the case seemed to be "making a killing."

Our standard of justice in a criminal trial requires the prosecution to convince a jury of the defendant's guilt "beyond a reasonable doubt." This standard was not met in the first trial, with too much evidence tainted and probably planted. Conversely, it now seems highly probable that Simpson planned and committed these murders.

But let us go beyond the narrow facts of the case to examine it's larger political significance. Why was the entire nation deluged with this bad legal soap opera? Who gained and who lost from the media circus?

Before his arrest, O.J. Simpson had little connection with the African-American community. He was apparently mesmerized with the symbols of white power, prestige and sexuality. O.J. was quite skillful in running through airports for Hertz rental car commercials, but seemed at a loss when trying to locate black neighborhoods or organizations.

O.J.'s racial awareness and political consciousness were virtually nonexistent. Unlike some socially-conscious black athletes, O.J. stood outside the struggles of black America. So, given his obvious racial self-hatred and alienation, how did O.J. Simpson become the "poster boy" for black fairness in the criminal system?

The Simpson trial came along at a time when the political assaults against black America were steadily escalating. In the universities, minority scholarships were being eliminated.

In academic circles, pseudoscientific books such as The Bell Curve advocated the cultural and genetic superiority of whites over blacks.

In the courts, minority economic set-asides and majority- minority legislative districts were under attack. Inside the civil rights movement, the media and conservative interests were waging a relentless campaign to remove the Reverend Benjamin Chavis as head of the NAACP. Virtually the same day it was announced that O.J. was the prime murder suspect, black leaders representing a wide spectrum of ideologies and perspectives met at the NAACP headquarters in Baltimore, attempting to forge a black united front.

I am convinced that many in the media seized upon the O.J. Simpson case with two objectives in mind: to illustrate beyond a doubt that black had been given "too much," and that the legal system went too far in protecting black criminals.

O.J. Simpson, once the darling of corporate America, had been given every possible perk and honor a Negro could ever expect. How dare he repudiate his patrons! The O.J. case symbolically told white America that affirmative action was no longer necessary, and that whites had become the innocent victims of black rage, crime and violence.

Logically, and not surprisingly, many African-Americans felt it was necessary to rally behind O.J. Many of us privately thought that this ex-athlete was nothing less than a spouse-abusing slimeball, but larger issues were at stake.

Thousands of our young black men were routinely railroaded in white courtrooms, as police destroyed our tainted evidence or coerced confessions from the accused. We knew that Mark Fuhrman was no isolated case, but symptomatic of a deep-seated racism within police departments throughout the country.

It was not for O.J.'s personal situation, but for our sons, brothers and husbands, that many African-Americans questioned the criminal and civil prosecutions against him.

White justice and black justice are still two different things.

Dr. Manning Marable is professor of history and the director of the Institute for Research in African-American Studies, Columbia University, New York City.

Sista Choice Speaks

Dear Sista Choice,

I have braids and I'm trying to grow out my hair. I have permed roots on the ends. Do you have any ideas about what I should do during this transition stage? Also I was wondering what style of clothing I should wear?

Sincerely,
Selma

Dear Selma,

I've been through braids and wanting to grow my hair out after seeing my roots coming in. The perm at the ends were only breaking off my hair, due to the new growth, giving me a reason to run to CVS to buy a box of OPTIMUM extra strength. I realized that if I really wanted to grow it out I would have to either cut off everything or just put in braids until I reached my desired length. I decided to do the braid thing. The only problem with the braid thing was that my hair was thinning and my scalp was itching too much. So, if you want to grow it out, cut off the perm. There are many different styles you can do with short hair. Go to a nearby salons and check out your options. Do the thing that makes you feel comfortable.

About the clothes — spring is coming so wear something with colors that enhances your skin and figure, but don't enhance too much. You don't want to give the wrong impression. Long skirts are in, try halter tops too. Don't be afraid to try something new.

Dear Sista Choice,

I've been spending much time with my best friend's girl. Even though he's my boy, I find myself developing a deep like for her (it's not even physical, it's mental). It's gotten to the point that we talk on the phone late at night about things like life, religion and... us. He's my boy, I don't want to disrespect, but she gives me the kind of stimulation I've been looking for. What should I do?

Sincerely,
brother nobody has to know

Dear brother nobody has to know.

What your doing is the no-no of friendships.

Rule number one of a friendship is no touching, feeling, smelling, enticing or wanting your boy's property. Sometimes we find ourselves in situations that are potentially very damaging to ourselves and others involved.

If you can prevent the fire from blowing in your face, stop it right away. The spark has begun and It can only get bigger. If you feel that this young woman is all that, let her go.

Let her know that what's developing isn't cool and you can't go there. Play her "Next Life Time" on Erika Badu's new album. Later on she will probably have more respect for you. You won't be considered a dog. If it's meant to be, you'll cross paths again.

If you do continue this relationship with this girl, think about how it would feel not having your boy? Maybe you'll see him next life time.

Sista Choice is a liaison to the Black Affairs Page and not a Collegian staff member. Sista Choice Speaks is a bi-weekly advice column for students of the ALANA community and abroad. If you have anything you'd like to ask Sista Choice, direct questions or comments to Sista Choice c/o Humphrey brown III of the Black Affairs Page at the Collegian. You may also drop questions in Humphrey's box down in the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

This is the first in a series of three pieces dedicated to the travels of enslaved Africans and their journey, thereafter, in Amerikkka.

This is a new lifeline through which my blood flows and as I paint bitter blood on paper walls. I still see you. The west coast of Africa became transformed from beauty to sorrow, a memory that is. The burden of shackles, wounded ankles as I try to proceed through the swamp of society's insanities... My ankles hurt. The blood from my wounded ankles spread red dry trails all over the west coast of Africa. As though mercy had forgotten me, I remained in my grave lifeless but still praying to my god. The only reminder that I wasn't in the ground was the constant rocking of the ship. It wasn't the ground, but it was hell afloat. The raising of the sun I had not seen for many moons, for I was buried alive in the belly of capitalism and greed. Not a sunset to behold, how could I have known that mother Africa still existed. Would I ever return and would mother Africa welcome me back? The water splashing against the wooden frame of the boat, the jaws of sharks, the sound of pain all around me... I wanted to die, but I couldn't even kill myself. Ain't this some shhhh, I lay there silently praying for mercy, and welcoming death. The sharks guided by natural instincts follow blood trails that lead to an occasional tearing on my charred flesh. I arrived in the Americas cramped from the confinement of my horizontal grave that was right below the top of the water. I heard those jaws and wishing those jaws to be my permanent end.

The mercy of death was not mine to be held, at least not yet. The weight of the shackles was pressing me deeper into my own feces. Being [stored] in conditions not fit for an animal, made me of an angry manner. You see, there is no getting away from my own ankles and my neck... THE PAIN. Eyes half open; mind alert to the movements of my world. They say I'm in a state of mind numbing awe. The pain cannot make me cry, it's far from that stage now. I feel it though. My reality is not even believable to myself, as though the silence of my own insanity was too much to bear, I search for calm among the sane. Who is the judge of ones mental state? Who determines normality? Who determines who is sane or not? Laying there I was bounded neck, hand and ankles. Should I be going crazy at this point? Should I be alive? Is this my punishment for the color of my skin?

I hope I'm still sane.

As my back pulsated with a sensation unlike lungs breathing fire, this was worst. Thirty-nine lickings, cotton picking had to proceed, even on hot summer days.

— Omar O. Gayle

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

...On Black History

Monday, February 24, 1997

It's time to resurrect W.E.B. Du Bois

Martin F. Jones

History cannot ignore W.E.B. Du Bois. Because history has to reflect truth and Dr. Du Bois was a tireless explorer and a gifted discoverer of social truths. His singular greatness lay in his quest for truth about his own people. There were very few scholars who concerned themselves with honest study of the black man and he sought to fill this immense void. The degree to which he succeeded discloses the great dimensions of the man.

— Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. speaking at the Centennial birthday celebration of W.E.B. Du Bois at Carnegie Hall in New York City, February 23, 1968.

As we celebrate the annual Black History Month commemoration for yet another year, there continues to be a conspicuous absence in recognition of one of the most important African-American figures of the 20th century. Many years ago, he was a household name, and was eulogized at the 1963 March on Washington following his passing the previous day. In 1968, at a centennial celebration of his birth held at Carnegie Hall in New York City, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. acknowledged him as "one of the most remarkable men of our time," describing him as a "restless, militant black genius."

William Edward Burghardt Du Bois, over the course of his 95 years, clearly laid down the critical foundations for the establishment of an independent African American identity, one that upheld and defended our humanity. Born in Great Barrington, Mass., Du Bois became the first African- American to earn a doctoral degree from Harvard in 1895. He would go on to teach sociology at a number of distinguished institutions, most notably Atlanta University, where he taught for a total of 23 years, and in 1905, Du Bois established a black think-tank of African-American scholars and activists from around the country called The Niagara Movement. Four years later he would become a founder of the NAACP, America's largest and oldest civil rights organization, and for the next 24 years would become the voice of America's black conscience as the editor of the NAACP organ, The Crisis magazine.

So now the question must be raised. Why isn't Du Bois acknowledged more frequently in public life, particularly in the mass media, including the black press. Is it possible that someone of Du Bois' stature could be forgotten so easily? Probably not. Clearly, Du Bois legacy has been nearly completely erased from the public awareness, along with Paul Robeson and others who were blacklisted during the McCarthy Era because of their political views. After the Second World War, Du Bois became more and more uncompromising in his opposition to European colonialism and U.S. imperialism. Du Bois had first traveled to the Soviet Union in 1926, and was very vocal about his support for the success of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, and the 1949 Chinese Communist Revolution. During the Cold War, such views were considered acts of political treason.

In the manuscript of his autobiography, A Soliloquy on Viewing My Life from the last Decade of its First Century, completed in 1961, Du Bois wrote this passage, entitled Communism.

"I have studied socialism and communism long and carefully in lands where they are practiced and in conversation with their adherents, and with wide reading," he wrote. "I now state my conclusion frankly and clearly: I believe in communism. I mean by communism, a planned way of life in the production of wealth and work designed for building a state whose object is the highest welfare of the people and not merely the profit of a part.

"I believe that all men should be employed according to their ability and that wealth and services should be distributed according to need. Once I thought that these ends could be attained under capitalism, means of production privately owned, and used in accord with free individual initiative. After earnest observation I now believe that private ownership of capital and free enterprise are leading the world to disaster.

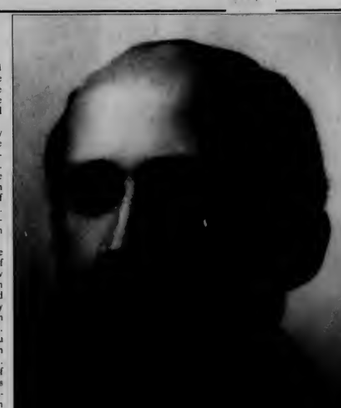
"I do not believe that so-called 'people's capitalism' has in the United States or anywhere replaced the ills of private capitalism and shown an answer to socialism. The corporation is but the legal mask behind which the individual owner of wealth hides. Democratic government in the United States has almost ceased to function. A fourth of the polls are disenfranchised, half the legal voters do not go to the polls. We are ruled by those who control wealth and who by illegal power buy or coerce public opinion."

Du Bois further added, "I resent the charge that communism is a conspiracy: Communists conspire as do capitalists. But it is false that all Communists are criminals and that communism speaks and exists mainly by means of force and fraud. I shall therefore hereafter help the triumph of communism in every honest way that I can: without deceit or hurt; and at any way possible, without war; and with goodwill to all men of all colors, classes and creeds.

"If, because of this belief and such action, I become the victim of attack and calumny, I will react in the way that seems to me best for the world in which I live and which I have tried earnestly to serve. I know well that the triumph of communism will be a slow and difficult task, involving mistakes of every sort. It will call for progressive change in human nature and a better type of manhood that is common today. I believe this possible, or otherwise we will continue to lie, steal and kill as we are doing today."

In 1951, the McCarthy Era was emerging as a nationwide witch-hunt against liberal activists, many of whom were charged and convicted for supporting "subversive communist activities" in the U.S. Du Bois' activities with the Peace Information Center in New York City compelled the United States to file an indictment against him and fellow staffers at the organizations for "not having registered as an agent of a foreign principle." Du Bois would become a "persona non grata" as many of his former friends and supporters turned their back on him for fear of the consequences associating with him would bring. The trial ended in acquittal for Du Bois, but the damage had been done, as Du Bois later lamented. "Little children shall no longer know my name," W.E.B. Du Bois would officially join the U.S. Communist Party 10 years later in 1961. That same year Du Bois and his wife moved to Ghana, upon the invitation of President Kwame Nkruma, to edit the Encyclopedia Africana. Du Bois would spend his last days in Ghana until his passing on August 27, 1963.

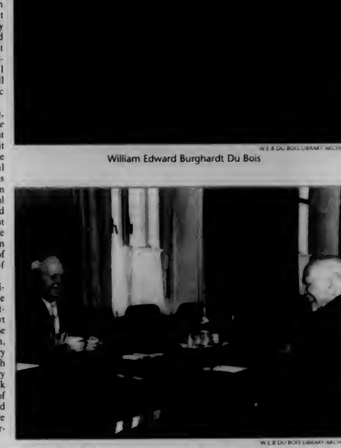
Ten years would pass thereafter before Du Bois would begin to receive the honor and recognition he so rightfully deserved here in the land of his birth. In 1973, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, under the leadership of Dr. Randolph Bromery, would purchase the largest collection of Du Bois papers and personal correspondence from his widow, Shirley Graham Du Bois. The collection was deposited on the 25th floor of the University's main library, and consists over 180,000 documents and photographs. I recently visited this massive archive of historic proportion during a class and the sad stirrings of W.E.B. Du Bois. There, I saw letters to Du Bois from Booker T. Washington and his colleagues at Atlanta University, and also viewed documents from his FBI dossier, which filled nearly half-a-dozen boxes. This archive proved an invaluable resource for Rutgers University professor and Historian David Levering Lewis, who wrote an impressive 735-page biography of Du Bois entitled: W.E.B. Du Bois, A Biography of a Race, 1868-1919. The biography, published in 1993, is the first of two volumes on Du Bois; the second of which is due to be released this year.



On February 23, 1996, the 26-story main library, formerly known as the "Tower Library," was officially dedicated in honor of W.E.B. Du Bois. This would mark the first time in the history that an academic building in Massachusetts would bear the name of one of its most prestigious native sons. It would mark the final successful conclusion to an initiative which had been in the works for over 20 years.

These projects and endeavors are clear indicators that, in the absence of the Cold War, there is a growing thaw of the public stigma against the man who met with Nikita Khrushchev and later joined the U.S. Communist Party less than three years before the Cuban missile crisis of October, 1962. However, the legacy of W.E.B. Du Bois still remains deeply entombed in the shadows of American history. Most Americans have never heard of him, and those that have still obsess over the fact that he supported communism for much of his life. It is an even more a tragic observation that many African-Americans, notably those of whom which most benefitted from his life's work, have for the most part been brainwashed by U.S. propaganda to support the irrational anti-communist sentiment that still infects this supposedly democratic nation of ours.

Du Bois' Harvard doctoral thesis, The Suppression of the African Slave Trade, should serve as a reminder that it is capitalism, with its need to exploit cheap labor (e.g. slavery) and polarize the proletariat (workers) into racial and other class divisions, that forms the basis of our historic oppression here in America. Given this historical fact, Du Bois and his legacy can and should be considered to be the most significant challenge against those forces which stand the most to gain through the continued oppression of African-Americans and people of color around the world.



As we approach the new millennium, the time has come to dismantle and deposit these forces into the dustbin of history. As America's most powerful and outspoken critic of the injustices of racism and capitalism, Dr. Du Bois left behind for us the very scientific and philosophical tools with which to fulfill this great revolutionary crusade. To begin, we must refer back to and revisit a mighty champion of this never-ending battle for soul and conscience of humanity. Now, more than ever, the time has come to resurrect W.E.B. Du Bois.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

W.E.B. DU BOIS LIBRARY ARCHIVES

William Edward Burghardt Du Bois

W.E.B. DU BOIS LIBRARY ARCHIVES

W.E.B. DU Bois meeting with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, at the Kremlin in Moscow, 1959.

What is black history? A tradition

Allana E. Todman

Black history is the history of the people of African origins and their interactions with other people of the world. Black history is the history of the Diaspora of African people who were forcibly sold into slavery to build the new world which includes North, Central and South America as well as the Caribbean. Contrary to popular beliefs, black history begins in Africa, and thus the founding of black history is African History.

Black history begins with the origins of humankind, which emerged from Africa millions of years ago. Dr. Louis Leakey found the remains of the original ancestors of humanity in Olduvia Gorge in Tanzania East Africa in 1959. If Africa is indeed the cradle of humankind, it is also the birth place of human culture.

Black history is the history of a people who built great civilizations along the Nile, the most prominent of which was in Egypt. The Egyptian Pharaohs were the world's first absolute monarchs, with unlimited power. They founded the first bureaucracy. They invented Hieroglyphic writing, one of the ancestors of the modern Latin alphabet. The Egyptians invented decimal numbers so that they could make counting easier, as well as the calendar to keep track of time and the seasons. Finally, Egypt profoundly influenced Greco-Roman culture, upon which Western culture developed.

Black history is the history of a people who ruled Spain for 800 years. It is ironic that the Spanish King and Queen, Ferdinand and Isabella, defeated the last Moorish stronghold of Grenada in 1492, the same year Columbus landed in the Americas.

Black history is the history of the great West African empires of Ghana, Mali and Songhay. Timbuktu became the educational center for Mali and under the Songhay Empire, education continued to flourish. The great Moslem University of Sankore attracted scholars from North Africa, Egypt and Europe.

Black history is the history of a people who migrated to Asia and the Americas before Marco Polo and Columbus. Runoko Rashidi, a cultural historian, recorded that an African people known as the Khmers, built the kingdom of Funan in Southeast Asia in the countries that are now known as Burma, Thailand, Kampuchea, Malaysia, Vietnam and Laos. It is also widely known that Africans traded with Asia long before Europeans encountered Asia or Africa. In fact, the camel was introduced into Africa from Asia in 100 A.D. Also, fruits such as bananas, plantains, sugar cane and coconuts were introduced into Africa from Asia during this ancient trade period. In addition, Ivan Van Sertima, an anthropologist at Rutgers University, documented In his book, They Came Before Columbus, the early presence of Africans in Central and South America before the coming of Europeans.

Black history is the history of a people who built their civilizations along the Niger River, the most prominent of which was Timbuktu. Timbuktu became the educational center for Mali and under the Songhay Empire, education continued to flourish. The great Moslem University of Sankore attracted scholars from North Africa, Egypt and Europe.

Black history is the history of a people who migrated to Asia and the Americas before Marco Polo and Columbus. Runoko Rashidi, a cultural historian, recorded that an African people known as the Khmers, built the kingdom of Funan in Southeast Asia in the countries that are now known as Burma, Thailand, Kampuchea, Malaysia, Vietnam and Laos. It is also widely known that Africans traded with Asia long before Europeans encountered Asia or Africa. In fact, the camel was introduced into Africa from Asia in 100 A.D. Also, fruits such as bananas, plantains, sugar cane and coconuts were introduced into Africa from Asia during this ancient trade period. In addition, Ivan Van Sertima, an anthropologist at Rutgers University, documented In his book, They Came Before Columbus, the early presence of Africans in Central and South America before the coming of Europeans.

Black history is the history of those whites who used their homes as way-stations as part of the underground railroad to assist blacks in their escape from slavery to freedom.

Black history is the history of a white woman, Viola Liuzio, of Detroit, Michigan who was killed in the deep South in the 1960s while helping register blacks to vote.

Black history is the history of Presidents Abraham Lincoln and Lyndon B. Johnson, both of whom signed significant legislation that changed the condition of black people and the nation. The Emancipation Proclamation of 1863 and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 knocked down the legal barriers of equality.

Black history is not only American history, it is also world history. There are common threads that run through our experiences of arriving, inhabiting, building and shaping the country. One of those common threads is that early arrivals; the adventurer, the colonists, the slaves and later, immigrants came by boat. We are a nation of boat people who wanted to be free. The adventurer wanted to be free to explore and search for prosperity. The colonist wanted to be free of religious and political persecution. The slaves wanted physical, political and economic freedom and the immigrants wanted economic and political freedom.

This piece was written by Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc.

Editors Note:

Keeping in mind that the true meaning of black history includes the history of the world and humanity, it is only fitting what we give it the proper respect it deserves. This and a whole wealth of information is available for you to see for yourself, but only if you look for it. You won't get this kind of knowledge in the classroom. Our history has been denied from us for far too long and it runs deeper than cotton and peanuts. It's time to learn the truth about our origins so that we can better understand one another and come together as a nation. Grow in Knowledge. Peace and God Bless.

The Black Affairs Page would like to pay tribute to all the men, women and children who fought in the freedom struggle of all African people around the world. This Black History month, and always, take it upon yourself to learn about the sacrifices of those who died to make a better life for you and me.

One Time For the Mind: Ideology of Black Women

Allana E. Todman

"No other group in America has had their identity socialized out of existence as have black women. We are rarely recognized as a group of separate and distinct... when black people are talked about, the focus tends to be on black men. When women are talked about, the focus tends to be on white women," said black feminist Deborah King.

As a black individual, there are many struggles that I have to encounter on a daily basis because of my race. But as a woman of African descent, there is another consciousness that has to be dealt with, because of the struggles I deal with based on my gender.

Ideology and stereotypical views about black women plague us even to this day.

A simple stroll down an aisle in Stop 'n Shop will prove this. Looking at Aunt Jemima on the syrup stand reveals the "Mammy" image that has marginalized black women even to this day. Although she has turned In her scarf for a new relaxed look, Aunt Jemima has been a symbol and reminder that society has us just where they want us.

The heavily embedded view of black women as nurturers and caretakers has not only placed a stereotype that many black women are always uneducated and on welfare, but has also transcended into the types of domestic jobs that many black women, who are often the main breadwinners of the family, receive.

With many black women working in service occupations, Dr. Julianne Malveaux, writer, educator and political economist, pointed out in her lecture during the ALANA lecture series, that 43 percent of African Americans earn less than $7.50 per hour.

On the economic scale black women are at the very bottom.

With many black women working in temporary jobs, economic security is lacking for a lot of them. Many of these jobs, which single black mothers hold, do not offer health insurance that is pivotal for raising a family.

Other views of black women have also been subtle accepted truths. The idea of the "Jezebel", which stems from the slavery period, stating that black women are naturally sexually aggressive, is one ideology that has continued to develop.

During the primitive years, slaves were viewed as inhumane, therefore justifying many of the slave masters decisions to exploit and rape female slaves.

This type of de-feminization of African-American women, distinguished our experience as sexual slaves to that of white females' experience.

White females, in spiritual eyes, viewed black women slaves as objects who were adulterers, turning their husbands on to have sexual contact with them.

This has been the root of what separates white feminists and black feminists. Our experience of being mutilated is one that will never be understood, but subtly exists throughout our culture.

The Jezebel ideology is constantly played out through the way we as black people are portrayed and visualized.

The media is one way we can analyze this view.

This allows me to pose a question about some of our recent popular artists such as Little Kim and Foxy Brown.

As black women in academia, do we move and groove to the sounds of these female "icons," who for many represent all black females, without analyzing the explicit language they use to express their sexuality?

Or do we allow the heavy bass and beat sway our bodies from paying attention to the words that are being said?

This question is a prevalent one, because as a community many black Americans use music art and poetry to express and distribute information. We need to become aware of the messages that are being sent to our community and to the rest of society.

As black women, we need to vocalize our struggles and begin to interact more with white women in order to come together.

Ironically enough, many conferences that are planned for all women to have conversations of such, black women's issues usually get ignored. White women in the past have attached our oppression as a black race onto their own, in order for them to relate.

"We as white feminists are drawn to black women's visions because they concretize and make vivid a system of oppression," said three white feminist academics in "The Occult of True Black Womanhood: Critical demeanor and Black Feminist Studies" by Anne Ducille.

We are not objects from which to gain conviction or purpose from, but in the same context our struggle to be heard is not to be taken lightly.

Black women have always played an essential role in community, through the church and local political organizations.

Prominent women like Maria Stewart, Julia Anne Cooper and Sojourner Truth have paved the way for creating more of a black consciousness for black women.

Their work was definitely not done in vain.

Our intellectuality has been questioned for too long. As black women in academia, we have the opportunity to examine the communities in the political and economic arenas in order to consistently challenge many of the false ideologies that society places on black women.

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian columnist.

■ Jewel

continued from page 5

bright red t-shirts with the insignia, "The Network Rules" on the back. Never before have I seen such a rude, inept group of security. For starters, the show was standing room only, and people lined the perimeter of the auditorium to try to catch a glimpse of Jewel. The "Network Rules" group proceeded to kick everyone in my section of the balcony out, citing a "fire hazard." No sooner did the ticket holders leave the area than the workers sat down.

It's too bad that the "Network Rules" girls took all this effort in dispersing the crowds only to stand exactly where the audience was told they couldn't stand. But even that wasn't quite as bad as when one of the workers stood directly in front of a child, and then refused to move when her father asked nicely. And often the spotlight seemed erratic, with shadows of people standing in front of it — yet another slip-up from the security.

But all this aside, Jewel showcased all of her abilities and never lost one moment of excitement during her set. From her new songs, to her hit single, "Who Will Save Your Soul," to her powerful encores, Jewel was impressive and captivating. With all of her talent, it's such shame she had to play in such a bad environment with inefficient staff. Maybe next time she might want to return to the Iron Horse or try John M. Greene Hall in Northampton.

■ Bo

continued from page 5

album; hell, George Thorogood built a career copying every trick in the book from the Diddley Daddy himself. The bottom line, though, is that nobody knows Bo better than Bo himself.

Touring in support of his new album, A Man Amongst Men, Diddley spent ample time before the show at the bar, guitar in hand, graciously mingling with well-wishers and autograph hounds. Unfortunately, back problems kept Bo seated for most of the set, and thus it took a bit longer to work up the energy seen at previous shows.

However, once Bo got his mojo working, there was no stopping him. Although "Roadrunner" failed to match the original version, his signature song, "Bo Diddley," was dynamic. It also must be said that watching a couple of hundred drunk, middle-aged white people trying to clap along to Bo's trademark beat is an utterly horrifying experience.

Sharp back-up by the Fabulous Heavyweights served to highlight Diddley's guitar playing and voice, both of which have only become richer with age. To see a living legend in such an intimate venue is a treat in itself; to see one as timeless and electrifying as Bo Diddley is a rarity.

■ Rosewood

continued from page 5

The narrative focuses on the situations of two completely intriguing men, who each play their conventional roles to fit the western format.

Jon Voight's (Deliverance, Midnight Cowboy) character is the one white man who lives in the prosperous black community of Rosewood, Florida. Voight's John Right is a shop owner who has recently been remarried after the death of his wife. Through an affair with his attractive black employee, it is understood that Right is not a prejudiced man. Yet, he subtly exploits the inhabitants of Rosewood while believing that because he's not in the Klan, they respect him.

Ving Rhames (Pulp Fiction, Mission:Impossible) is Mr. Mann, the silent and mysterious stranger who enters Rosewood days before the massacre will occur. He is the typical lonesome hero, attempting to make the decisions which classify as right and wrong.

The massacre is the responsibility of a white woman from Sumner, who was brutally battered during an extramarital affair. Captured through an incredibly haunting camera movement, the woman walks outside after her lover leaves, and screams out to the entire town that a black man has raped and beat her. The entire community knows that this is most likely untrue, yet the town of Sumner is filled with prejudice and resentment towards Rosewood and takes this situation as an invitation to violently destroy their black neighbors once and for all.

After the failures of Singleton's two previous films, the mundane Poetic Justice and the blatantly racist Higher Learning, Rosewood will be his return to Hollywood's favor. However, Rosewood is strikingly powerful in composition and disappointingly empty in narrative. The story's passion is only successfully evoked through Singleton's camera work. A master of mis-en-scene, his images appear to resemble the truest of tragic proportions. Not since Citizen Cane, has a film's construction appeared so well thought out within each individual frame.

Although a true story, Rosewood offers nothing new that Hollywood hasn't already released 100 times before. What Singleton has made is a much better western than social historical drama. His point to show alternative readings to historical events is well made, but the characters become so lost in the magnitude of the film's context that when it's over, one realizes they never really said anything. The transitions that each principle character must endure are interesting and yet somehow unbelievable. They are attempting to grow and change in the same way characters have always been portrayed doing so in fiction.

Rosewood is an entertaining and disturbing look at our country's past. What it lacks in depth it more than makes up for in potential and, if nothing else, it is a beautiful film to merely look at. It is best to understand Singleton's story as an historical recreation of a situation that is not taught in high school history classes. B

Rosewood's Jon Voight

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA wins match between ACC, PAC 10's best

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — J.R. Henderson was still rubbing sleep from his eyes when No. 17 UCLA's game against sixth-ranked Duke tipped off late Sunday morning.

Two early fouls resulted in an eight-minute rest on the bench that didn't help Henderson's momentum, even though the Bruins built a 10-point first-half advantage in his absence. But Henderson awoke with a bang in the second half, scoring 16 of his 18 points, including the go-ahead basket off his own miss with 40 seconds remaining.

Toby Bailey then hit two free throws with 15 seconds to play, helping UCLA beat Duke 73-69 and snap the Blue Devils' seven-game winning streak. Duke is in first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference, while the Bruins are atop the Pacific-10.

"This game is huge. It does a lot for us as a team and our conference," Bailey said. "When you work hard, you deserve to win games like this at home. We did a lot of good today."

It was Steve Lavin's biggest victory since taking over as UCLA coach after Jim Harrick was fired just before the season started. "We've come a long way the past couple of months," Lavin said. "We still have a long way to go, but our team has an unbelievable heart, and we're a real basketball family."

Lavin, 32, beat his former pen pal and mentor, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, in their first meeting. Lavin initially wrote to Krzyzewski for coaching advice after he graduated from college in 1987, and Lavin has talked to him monthly since replacing Harrick. "He's not looking up to me today. I'm looking up to him," said Krzyzewski, who nearly hired Lavin away two years ago. "The way his team played, I'm sure he wasn't paying attention to who was on the other bench."

Duke (22-6) made a desperate attempt to score after Bailey's free throws. But Ricky Price's shot was blocked by Charles O'Bannon down low, then Roshown McLeod missed a 3-pointer and Bailey flung the ball downcourt as time expired.

"UCLA was really ready to play us," Krzyzewski said. "Us not hitting from outside in the first half had a bigger impact on us than I thought it would. We were fortunate to be so close at halftime."

Hundreds of the record 13,478 fans who jammed Pauley Pavilion rushed the court as UCLA (17-7) completed its first significant victory over a non-conference opponent this season.

Reserve Kris Johnson added 14 points for UCLA, which won its fifth straight and made a case for staying in the West Regional in the upcoming NCAA tournament.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...

THE CAMPUS SENDER
224 LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER

- Peter Pan Bus Tickets
- U.S. Post Office
- Shipping Service via UPS
- Fax Service
- Self service copier

Conveniently located (formerly McGregor Travel)

This Week in the Campus Center

INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND SPECIALS FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER/STUDENT UNION COMPLEX

Take a break at the BLUEWALL
Have a coffee ...
Win a Kayak ...
... Write your mother

University Store
Stop by for weekly specials!

Save 20% ▶ ALL Long Sleeve Tee Shirts • Picture Frames
ALL UMass Glassware • ALL Folders • ALL
Stephen Oates Paperbacks • Travel Books for Spring Break Getaways

Buy 2 Books from our African-American History Month
book display and get a FREE Tote Bag!

Save 25% ▶ Stephen Oates The Approaching Fury

Save 50% ◀ All Pictoral Calendars

Campus Center/Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS

■ hockey

continued from page 12

opened the scoring 8:59 into his comeback game.

Masters had a clear shot at Brian Regan and beat the UMass netminder with a hard wrist shot pegged for the top corner, blocker side.

The Minutemen thought they had either a power play or the equalizing goal midway through the second, but were wrong on both counts. After Rob Bonneau was hooked down by Andy Powers with no call, he regained the puck and fed Dean Campanale at the top of the crease for a beautiful redirection over Taylor's glove into the top shelf.

However, at this point the focus of the Mullins crowd of 4,217 was turned to the fifth of the famous "five W's" that one learns about in high school English class. For each of these W's there exists an unanswerable question. Saturday night the UMass faithful was exposed to the "when."

There is no real answer to:

- What is the sound of one hand clapping?
- Who put the bop in the bop-she-bop-she-bop?
- Where in the world is Carmen San Diego?
- Or the simply-stated but ever-perplexing: Why?

Likewise, there is no real answer to: When does a puck legally enter the net but is not called a goal?

Campanale's shot tickled the twine, something that could be proved by the moving water bottle, an item that would not move if the puck either struck the post, or failed to hit the netting. The goal was evident to pretty much all in attendance, including members of the Boston media assembled in the press box who could see the puck from their perch high above Hadley.

Spearheaded by referee John Gravalese, the officiating crew, which earlier in the game had whistled UMass for icing on a puck that went well through the BC crease, saw otherwise. No goal was called and the momentum swung to BC's side for most of the remainder of the game.

Neither side said much after the game. Mallen didn't want to pin the loss on the call, while the Eagles didn't want to look a gift horse in the mouth, but the no-goal call impacted the flow of this 3-2 game.

"At home it's always a goal," Mallen said. "I didn't have a clear view of it. A lot of guys thought it was in, but it was a tough call."

"I couldn't look back fast enough to see if It had gone in or not," Taylor said. "The guys were talking about it after the game and half of them swore it went in, and half of them didn't."

Masters scored his second goal of the night minutes later on a power play. The puck squirted loose of a scrum in front of Regan and found its way onto Masters' stick beside the right post for an easy tap-in.

BC went up 3-0 with 10:32 to play in the game when Mike Gaffney was left helpless as the lone Minuteman back on a 3-on-1 Eagle rush. Defenseman David Wainwright converted on a Blake Bellefeuille pass for the BC score.

Not to disappoint the senior day home crowd, the Minutemen mounted a furious comeback attempt.

Tom O'Connor scored at the 12:49 mark of the third period when his 15-foot wrist shot broke between the pads of a butterfly-styled Taylor. Bonneau and Steve MacKinnon picked up assists on the junior defenseman's third goal of the year.

Playing with an added fire, UMass made it a one-goal game at the 14:54 mark. Warren Norris stole an errant pass in the neutral zone, broke past a BC defenseman and went in on Taylor. The Eagle netminder made a beautiful sliding stop on the senior's point blank shot, but he could not corral the rebound, which Keith O'Connell knocked home, making it a 3-2 game. It was the first goal the BC transfer had scored against his former mates.

Unfortunately the game ended as a 3-2 BC victory, which clinched eighth place in the league standings, and the seventh playoff seed for the Minutemen. UMass will face either New Hampshire or Boston University on the road in a best-of-three Hockey East quarterfinal series starting on March 7. The opponent likely will not be determined until the teams face each other at BU's Walter Brown Arena on March 1.

■ seniors

continued from page 12

they're going to find out it even gets higher so we'll see if they're ready for it."

The upcoming conference tournament will be an indication of the underclassmen's readiness to step up in the coming years into the leadership positions so capably filled by this year's graduating Minutewomen.

"Right now we feel solid," O'Brien said. "I think the guards are starting to play a little better together.

"I still don't think we've come close to playing our best basketball. We've got to go into Thursday and hopefully this weekend playing our best basketball of the year," O'Brien added. "Everyone's playing really well together."

NEED TO SELL A CAR?
Collegian Classifieds

"There is such a thing as a free ride."

Announcing the AT&T "Ultimate Road Trip" Sweepstakes.

Going abroad this school year? AT&T would like to help pay your way.

10 Grand Prize Winners — Round-Trip Air Transportation from the U.S. to the country where you'll be studying.

Plus thousands of chances to win high-quality currency converters (hey, you may find it more valuable than the air transportation).

To enter, call 1 800 257-5424 ext. 300

Or you can enter on-line at http: www.att.com /student_abroad

Do it today.

AT&T

No purchase necessary. Void where prohibited. Sweepstakes ends 5/1/97. Open to residents of the U.S., 18 years or older, enrolled at a U.S. college or university during the '97-'98 school year and traveling internationally for 14 days or more. See your Study Abroad Counselor or http://www.att.com/student_abroad for official rules and details.

© 1997 AT&T

Rob Bonneau fed Dean Campanale, whose goal was recalled to the dismay of the Mullins faithful.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

■ bitter

continued from page 12

he was recruiting the first ever Canadian-born player for that program in 50 years.

"It was 50 degrees below zero, and I had frost bite on the bottom of my feet for about a week," Mallen said. "I couldn't figure out what was wrong, but you just don't wear a regular pair of dress shoes up there. Everybody leaves their car running almost 24-hours a day. If you go up town for a sandwich and coffee, their car runs the whole time.

"I walked across the street from the hotel to the rink, it was about only three or four hundred yards, no kidding, and I thought my nose was going to fall off. So, it was like being on Mars, that's the way I look at it. When those kids from Saskatchewan come down here they probably walk around with their shirt off all day."

Along with Regan, the Sherwood, Alberta native can be considered one of the most underrated goalies in the Northeast. Both have similar playing styles, à la Patrick Roy, and both have intriguing futures when the subject of the AHL, IHL or NHL comes up.

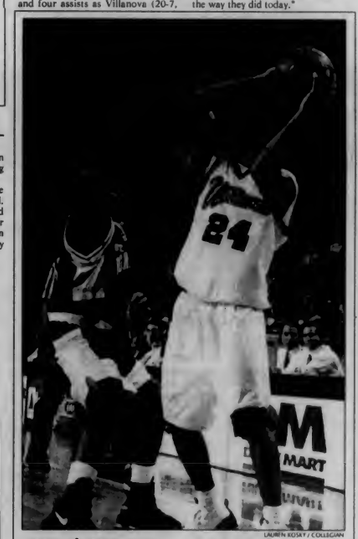
On Saturday night, though, Taylor looked to be open to being beat high, à la Roy, but UMass could not fully take advantage. In the third period, junior Tom O'Connor beat him to his strength, the five-hole, while senior Keith O'Connell took advantage of a beautiful offensive rush by Norris to score his fifth career goal.

But in the end, Mallen's former recruit burned his current team. Color his team unlucky, because unfortunately on this night, their coach was and still is too good a judge of talent. Four years ago, his nine seniors were the ones every other team forgot about, and they have helped his team on the road to regional and national respect.

"I looked down there, and [Taylor's] keeping the puck out, and I said, 'Geez, I wish I did a little bit poorer with him,'" Mallen said. "I'm disappointed, and I thought we could take this game tonight, and not be swept by BC.

"We've had three one-goal games against BC, and I don't see too much difference right now, and this year, between their program and our program. You generally go from two or three goal losses to one goal losses to wins, and that's where we're really at right now."

'Nova's Alvin Williams shines, Wildcats rout Huskies



By David Kinney
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Villanova coach Steve Lappas knew his seniors' last home game would be a sad event for him. Alvin Williams showed him why as he led the 19th-ranked Wildcats in scoring for the fifth time in six games.

The senior guard had 16 points and four assists as Villanova (20-7, 11-5 Big East) held off Connecticut 65-58 yesterday to move into first place in the Big East Six. Jason Lawson, also a senior, added 11 points and eight rebounds.

"I'm sorry to see them go," said Lappas about a senior class that has posted a 91-34 record and is one win away from becoming the winningest group in Villanova history.

"But I'm happy to see them go out the way they did today."

LAUREN ROSATI / COLLEGIAN

Hawk Hunters
Carmelo Travieso and the UMass squad travel to Hawk Hill as they look to reclaim the No. 1 spot in the A-10 East after losing to Dayton yesterday.

They did it by pulling away in the final four minutes and hitting their foul shots down the stretch when the Huskies (14-11, 10-6) couldn't.

"We continue to compete," said Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun after watching his team miss six of 10 from the line in the final seven minutes. "We just have to win now. Making some foul shots would help."

Tim Thomas and Howard Brown added 13 points each for Villanova. Richard Hamilton scored 22 for Connecticut, while Kevin Freeman had 10 points and 14 rebounds.

Villanova shot just 39 percent against a team that is ranked No. 5 in nation in field goal percentage defense (36.7 percent). What pleased Lappas was that the Wildcats had only 12 turnovers — their lowest total in the last 13 games.

"The first thing I always look at is the turnover column. We did a great job in that department today," he said.

The Huskies trailed just 52-51 with four minutes left. But Thomas made two free throws, Williams hit a jumper and Lawson made one free throw after being fouled inside. He added a layup to give Villanova a 59-52 lead with a minute remaining.

Meanwhile, Rashamel Jones missed two free throws with less than two minutes left. Hamilton missed one of two from the line 29 seconds later.

Calhoun blamed the youth of his starting lineup — three freshmen and two sophomores who played the bulk of the minutes.

"I think you eventually pay a price for that," he said. "They've got an 'A' in character. Now let's get an 'A' in wins." In the first seven minutes of the second half, the Wildcats managed just one field goal and turned the ball over five times. But the Huskies never took advantage, pulling ahead by just three points, 43-40.

Then Williams hit two 3-pointers, John Celestand made two foul shots and Brown finished a fast break with a dunk to key a 9-2 run that gave Villanova at 52-45 lead with 6:20 remaining.

Four points by Freeman and two free throws by Jake Voskuhl made it 52-51, but UConn couldn't get any closer.

Celtics lose basement battle

By Tom Canavan
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The new New Jersey Nets won one and lost one yesterday.

Kendall Gill had 24 points and Sam Cassell 20 as the Nets got their first win since their blockbuster trade with Dallas by handing the Boston Celtics their 10th straight loss, 109-93 Sunday. However, the happiness was offset by news after the game that power forward Jayson Williams, the NBA's third-leading rebounder, plans to have surgery on his right thumb, an injury that has limited his play recently.

"Losing Jayson at this point is going to be tough," Gill said. "But it makes it easier now because we know we have more horses." The Nets seemingly improved their talent level Monday in acquiring Cassell, Jimmy Jackson, All-Star forward Chris Gatling, Eric Montross and George McCloud, who later was dealt to the Lakers for Joe Kleine and draft choices.

"This week is going to be important for us," Jackson said. "It will be the first time we've had a chance to practice together and learn about each other. We've been learning on the fly the past week, but we still have to figure out who does what well." Against the struggling Celtics, that didn't seem to matter. The loss capped an 0-9 road trip for Boston and the overall 10-game losing streak ties the Celtics' second-longest in a season. It is three shy of the team record set in 1994. The Celtics also had a 10-game slide in 1949.

"They have a lot of firepower," said Rick Fox, who had 22 points for Boston. "There has been a stretch of games were we've had opportunities but just didn't get it done. I'm a little discouraged because we seem to be hitting a wall."

Jackson added 19 points for New Jersey and rookie Kerry Kittles had 18 in his first game off the bench since early in the season. Xavier McDaniel added a season-high 15 as New Jersey's reserves outscored Boston's 44-22.

McDaniel, who had played only three minutes In the past two games, got 30 Sunday because Williams left the game late in the first quarter while Gatling was sidelined with an ear infection. "I went up for a rebound in the first quarter and tried to squeeze the ball and there was nothing there," Williams said. "It's that time. It's frustrating. I just can't do the things I want to playing with one hand."

Eric Williams tied his season high with 27 points for the Celtics. Todd Day had 19 and Antoine Walker tied career highs with 16 rebounds and six assists.

The Nets are 3-0 against the Celtics this season. Boston is 0-16 against Atlantic Division opponents.

"We'll just keep going," Boston coach M.L. Carr said. "Sure, we'd like to win, but we have to just keep learning and playing hard."

New Jersey, which trailed by 10 points early in the second quarter, took control with runs of 9-0 and 8-2 in the third quarter.

Gill had seven points during the 9-0 spurt, giving New Jersey a 66-55 lead. Cassell, who missed Saturday's game at Detroit with a hip flexor, had six in the quarter-closing 8-2 burst that put the Nets ahead 78-67.

Boston got within eight points twice in the final quarter, the last on a three-point play by Williams.

However, Kleine scored on a layup on a pass from McDaniel and the Nets built the lead to as many as 18 points in the closing minutes.

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS,
AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

- OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
- FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
- INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
- PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

256-8157 256-1385

53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

thinking about grad school?

Kaplan can help.

If you're interested in taking that next step to success, come to Kaplan. We'll walk you through the admissions process and help you get a great test score on the GRE.

Class begins March 3
Ace the Exam!

the leader in test prep and admissions counseling.

KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Are you interested in bringing a speaker to campus? Do you want to gain real-life experience working for a student organization? Come to a meeting for THE DISTINGUISHED VISITOR'S PROGRAM on Tuesday, February 25 at 7pm. in Room 168C of the Campus Center. Call 545-0046 for more info. Food will be served.

SUMMER IN SWITZERLAND First session 5/24-6/27 ALL MAJORS: 6 credits, airfare Europa!: Room/board.. ALL FOR $3299- Contact Chris 545-4411 or Jeff 545-4046

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Large Studio Apartment Amherst Center. Available now. 253-0245.

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Stanza 5-speed, loaded, power everything A/C, FWD 110,000 miles. Runs mint. Only $2100. 546-1912

1985 Skylark automatic, V-6, FWD, sunroof. $850. 546-1912

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1987 Ford Escort GT Burgundy Hatchback A/C, FM, sunroof, excellent condition, 104K miles $2125 or B/O. Lia 256-1238

1987 Plymouth Sundance Excellent body, runs very well $1800 or B/O. Call 549-8435

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 VW Jetta 5-speed, sunroof, good condition. $1800. 586-0383

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER JOB! Camp Samoset is now interviewing staff for this summer. Top boys' sports camp in Casco, Maine, seeks male and female counselors for all land and water sports, archery, riflery, arts and crafts, drama and woodworking. Also hiring secretaries, kitchen and maintenance workers. Call or fax resume to Winter Office, Wellesley, MA. Phone (617)237-3017 Fax. (617)237-7289

COUNSELORS: TOP BOYS' SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Get in on an exciting, fun summer! Must have good skills, able to instruct, coach or assist. Openings in: Baseball, Basketball, Soccer, Tennis, Hockey, Lax, Swimming(WSI), Water-skiing, and all Water Sports. PLUS: Camping and Hiking, Ropes and Climbing Wall, SCUBA, English Horseback Riding, Archery, Riflery, Arts and Crafts, Martial Arts, RN's, Secretaries. Top salaries, awesome facilities. Room/Board/Laundry. Travel. Call the (800) number now!! (800)473-6104 for an appointment for an interview on March 11th in the Student Union Ballroom, 10:00am-4:00pm. or E-Mail (cobbie camp@aol.com) or write: Steve Rubin, CAMP COBBOSSEE (Kah' buhsee) 10 Silvermine Dr., South Salem, NY

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- How would you like to work in exotic locations, meet fun people, and get paid? Call. (206)971-3554 ext. C50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

EMPLOYMENT

CDMPACT DISK BUYERS!! CD's go MLM! Earn free CD's and grait weekly income. $50 One-Time Investment. International Program (413)323-6120

Camp Wayne(sister half of brother/sister camp, Northeast Pennsylvania 8/23-8/20/97) Have the most memorable summer of your life! Coaches, teachers, students. Pre-requisite: Must love children, enjoy living and working in a group situation. On-Campus Interviews March 11. Call (800)279-3019

LIFEGUARD- Private beach on Cape Cod. Free beachside room. Memorial Day- Labor Day. WSI Certification. 253-6619.

Responsible person to care for infant in our home. DN BUS ROUTE Three afternoons per week 549-5035

Premiere Brother/Sister Camps in Massachusetts On-Campus Interviews Counselor positions for talented and energetic students in all team Sports, especially Baseball, Basketball, Roller Hockey, Gymnastics, Field Hockey, Soccer, Volleyball. 30 Tennis Openings, also Golf, Archery, Riflery, Ropes and Rock Climbing, Weights/Fitness and Cycling, other openings include Performing Arts, Fine Arts, Figure Skating, Newspaper, Photography, Yearbook, Radio Station, Rocketry, Swimming, Diving, Sailing, Wind surfing, Canoeing/Kayaking. Top salaries, room, board and travel. June 22nd-August 20th. Call for information: MAH-KEE-NAC(boys) 800-753-9118 DANBEE(girls) 800-392-3752. Recruiters will be On-Campus Tuesday, March 11th, 10am -4pm at the UMass Camp Day

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE LINES HIRING- Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel(Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary (919)918-7767 Ext. C180 (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

ALASKA EMPLOYMENT- Earn up to $3000-$6000/month in fisheries, parks and resorts. Airfare! Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group., 332 Bleecker St.- G40, NYC, NY 10014

National Park Employment Work in America's National Parks, Forest and Wildlife Preserves. Our naturalists uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3620 ext. N50017 (We are a research and publishing company)

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sagarloaf Estates Ultra modern two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washer/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Call 665-3856.

FOR RENT

One bedroom in a 2 bedroom apt. on bus route. Heat and hot water included. $322/month. Call 546-0262

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

8X CD-ROM DRIVE 28.8 DATA/FAX MODEM. Call Rafael 549-4529

Bolster your immune system, improve your energy and focus with wild, organic, Super Blue Green Algae. 90-Day money back guarantee. Call independent distributor, Matthew Vargo at 256-1331 for more information or a free tape.

KLH 3-Way 350W SPKRS DBL 12" Woofers, $250/Pr. Call 253-6520

STEREO EQUIPMENT Buy-Sell-Trade large selection, used/reconditioned, from inexpensive dorm systems to audiophile quality separate components. Great prices, honest advice, satisfaction guaranteed. Pick-up/delivery available. Stereo & Video Exchange, 256-0941

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Cindy, We know you wanted everyone to know it is your birthday, so here it is. Happy 21st! Love, Your Drinking Buddies Kimberly and Amy (Oops, Sorry Amy)

LOST

Small Black Earring between Boyden and Morrill Science Center. LOST 2/18. If found please call 367-2640

LOST

Black Organizer/Phoas Book $Reward$ if found. Please contact Adam at 549-2623

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged sad didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity. Vata Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood. E-Mail ZBT@IBTNATIONAL.ORG or call Brett Hrbeck at (317)334-1898

New Metabolism Breakthrough Period Lose 5-100 pounds. Doctor approved. Cost $35. (800)666-479

PERSONALS

JAY ROSE!
Congrats 2 U and Allia on your engagement! Your Friends at Admissions

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on Bus line starting Fall '97. Call Amy 546-0706

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 females needed to share an apt. Fall '97. Call Kim or Karen 546-0617 ASAP

SERVICES

HIGH-SPEED Internet comes to the Five College Area! Unlimited local access, no busy signals, free Web Page with account. Call TIAC at (860)644-6732. Student rates available

SERVICES

GRE GMAT
Prep-Courses
30 hours
3 weeks
$295.00
1-800-808-Prep

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

Foreign Students-Visitors. Greencard programs available (800)773-8704 Cost $29. Applications close 2-24-97.

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State Street. Northampton (413)586-0829

Seeking Financial Aid? Don't limit your possibilities for financial aid! Student Financial Services profiles over 200,000+ individual awards from private and public sectors. Call (800)263-6495 ext. FS0016 (We are a research and publishing company)

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '97! CANCUN, BAHAMAS, JAMAICA AND FLORIDA. 7-meal plan only $19! GROUP ORGANIZERS EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH. CALL TODAY! (800)700-0790 www.vagabondtours.com

Spring Break '97 Don't be left out! Space is limited! Cancun and Jamaica from $449 and Florida from $139. Call STS @ 1-800-648-4849 for the best rates!

London $189, Paris $199, Rio $250 (ALL R/T) 50-90% off all fares Air Courier Int'l (800)298-1230 24 hrs

TRAVEL

Scuba Spring Break Earn 2 credits. March 16-22. Call (800)282-0977 for info.

Jamaica-Spring Break from $599 Go with whom you can trust. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week. (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen.

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Europa $155, Caribb./Mexico $189 R/T. Worldwide Destinations Airhitch Tm. (800)326-2009 airhitch@netcom.com or www.isi-com.fr/airhitch

Spring Break '97 It's heaven. Wake and Bake in the hottest destinations-free parties!!! Organize group and travel free. Lowest price guaranteed from $99 (800)426-7710. www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

ATTN SNOWBOARDERS- I need pictures for my snowboarding zine called Toothsome. Please call 253-6493

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be pre-read by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Community Calendar

MONDAY, FEB. 24

Meeting — The Golden Key National Honor Society will hold a general member meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 901. Please bring your ideas and suggestions.

Meeting — Amnesty International will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 902. The focus will be discussion and letter writing on human rights violations in Zaire. All are welcome to attend.

TUESDAY, FEB. 25

Lecture — Michael Thelwell, professor of Afro–American Studies, will be lecturing on Civil Rights Activist Kwame Ture, formerly Stoakley Carmichael from 7–8:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. The event is free and open to the public.

Meeting — Anyone interested in bringing a speaker to campus and gaining real–life experience working for a student organization should come to a meeting for the Distinguished Visitor's Program at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C. Call 545–0046 for more info. Food will be served.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 26

Discussion — Ilan Wagner and Guy Korngold will present "Israeli & American Cultural Differences Today" and "Pro–Israeli Activism on Campus" at 8 p.m. at Hillel House. Sponsored by UMass Hillel/ Hamagshimim Group.

Film, discussion — Commuter Area Government presents Final Judgement, a documentary film by UMass alumnus Jonathan Stack, showcasing the last few weeks of Antonio James' life. The true story from which the movie Dead Man Walking was based. The film, which starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, will be followed by a panel discussion with Jonathan Stack (Director/ Producer), Burl Cain (Warden, Louisiana State Penitentiary) and Bill Newman (Attorney, Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union).

Lecture – Ross Chambers, Marvin Felheim Distinguished University Professor of French and comparative literature at the University of Michigan will present a lecture, "Anxious Reading: Eric Michaels' Unbecoming and the Death of the Author" at 4 p.m. in the Front Room of Amherst College Campus Center. Presented by Amherst College and its French Department, the event is free and open to the public.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Performance — Craig Hickman performs "Portraits of a Black Queen" at 8 p.m. in the Hampden Theatre. Part of the GLBT Cafe Series and co–sponsored by the Stonewall Center and the UMass Arts Council.

NOTICES

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance club invites everyone to come dance with us every Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15–7 p.m. at 101 Totman Gym. Newcomer Waltz/ Chacha class begins Feb. 25. Intermediate/ advanced instruction by a pro every Wednesday, 6:15–7:30 p.m. All instructions are free. For more info, call Kevin Murphy at 549–4036.

SGA nominations — The Elections Commission would like to announce that the nominations for the positions of President and Student Trustee, along with positions for local Area Government are now being held. The nomination forms are available in the SGA office. These nominations close on Feb. 27 by midnight, all forms must be turned in by this date, otherwise the candidates are not eligible to run for office.

Religious — The Alliance Church of the Pioneer Valley in south Amherst will provide rides to church. Pick up is at 9:40 a.m. on campus. Call Mark at 253–0361 for more information.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Writing — Spectrum Magazine is accepting submissions for poetry, prose, artwork and photography for its spring release. The magazine is open to all Five College staff and students, and is a registered student organization. Please come by the office at 406E Student Union or come by the concourse table in the Campus Center this week.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Film — The interdepartmental program in film studies is offering its fourth annual Multicultural Film Festival: "Emigres, Exiles and Sojourners in Contemporary Cinema" this spring. Screenings and discussions with directors and faculty will be held on Wednesday evenings, 231 Herter Hall at UMass and Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College, at 7 p.m. The first event will be When Mother Comes Home for Christmas, a documentary by Nilita Vachani (Sri Lanka/Greece, 1995) on Feb. 25. For a full schedule, watch for brochures and posters at the beginning of February, or check out our webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 hamburger tacos after 10 tonight!

Full Menu Served 'til 1 AM!
We accept Credit Cards

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — FEBRUARY 24, 1997

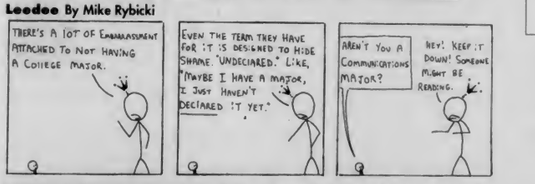
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places		American Experience	"The Donner Party" (R)		G. Washington	Nova "Hunt for Alien Worlds"
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Cosby		Murphy Brown (Cybill)		Late Show Video III (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Cosby		Murphy Brown (Cybill)		Late Show Video III (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Happy Birthday Elizabeth – A Celebration of Life (In Stereo)				Freeloaders (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Savannah "Oh No, Mr. Bill (Part 1)/ Don't (Part 2)"						News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Lance Burton-Magician		"Dying to Belong" (1997, Drama)		Hilary Swank, Jenna Von Oy		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks	Goode Beh.	News		L&PD	Real TV
WYIT	16	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Lance Burton-Magician		"Dying to Belong" (1997, Drama)		Hilary Swank, Jenna Von Oy		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Melrose Place "Frames 'R' Us"		Married... With Children		News		Coach	Babylon 5
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Lance Burton-Magician		"Dying to Belong" (1997, Drama)		Hilary Swank, Jenna Von Oy		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places		American Experience	"The Donner Party" (R)		Maras	Charlie Rose	(In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Happy Birthday Elizabeth – A Celebration of Life (In Stereo)				Freeloaders (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at Washington Capitals. (Live)					News	Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	Senior PGA Golf	Senior Slam							★★ "Fatal Exposure" ('99)
A&E	45	Quincy "Death Casts a Vote"		Equalizer		Biography: Roseanne		Mummies (R) (Part 2 of 2)				Law & Order "In Memory Of
CNN	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	29	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	★★ "Pat Is Spiral Tap" (1984, Satire) Christopher Guest				On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	TV Nation
DISC	28	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	See Wings "The Scout" (R)		Wild Discovery "Wildest Africa:		Jaws in the Mediterranean (R)		Secrets of the Internet		Wild Discovery	"Wildest Africa
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter			College Basketball: Syracuse at Providence. (Live)					College Basketball: Kansas at Oklahoma (Live)		Sportscenter
LIFE	33	Supermarket	Desi	Designing	Designing	Dinner With Oprah		"Shadow of a Stranger" (1992, Suspense) Emma Samms				Intimate Portrait
MTV	51	Ren & Stimpy	Grammy	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)				Road Rules	Star Wars	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	52	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	59	Odyssey	Sci-Fi Trader	Time Trax "The Contender"		Tekwar "Forget Me Not" (R)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		V (R) (In Stereo)		Time Trax "The Contender" (R)
TLC	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines		Flights of Courage		Earth's Fury		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	55	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		WCW Nitro (Live)				Adventures of Robin Hood		Sports Illustrated Swimsuit (R)
USA	60	Renegade "The Lala Shift"		Highlander: The Series		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				La Femme Nikita "Treason"		Wings	Wings
HBO	61	(5:45) ★★ "Richie Rich" (1994)		Macaulay Culkin.	Testament	★★★★ "Good Will Hunting" (1997, Drama) Robert De Niro, Ray Liotta. (In Stereo)						Tracey Takes	Carlin at Carnegie
MAX	62	(4:30) ★★½ "Malcolm X" (1992)		Denzel Washington.	PG-13	★★½ "Up in Smoke" (1978) Thomas Chong.				R		★★★ "Strange Days" (1995, Science Fiction) Ralph Fiennes. (In Stereo)
SHOW	63	★★★ "Silver Streak" (1976, Comedy) Gene Wilder.			PG	★★½ "Devil in a Blue Dress" (1995, Mystery)				R	Extras: Denzel	★★★ "Crimson Tide" (1995, Suspense) Denzel Washington.	R

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



Non Sequitor By Wiley

University² By Frank Cho

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Keep a close watch on details, especially those involving finances. Small changes could mean a big payoff. Take time for yourself. Don't become overly involved in other people's irreparable problems.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Stick to a routine, and establish priorities and follow them. Your natural abilities emerge, especially if you have an audience. Old friendships are renewed and new ones are formed this week. Don't take situations or people for granted.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Keep emotions under control. Study situations before taking action. Pay attention to health. diet. Stress on the domestic horizon will blow over if you let them. Finish one project before tackling another one. A circus skill makes a better starting point for a new project at work.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
Let others take the lead. Wait and watch for the right moment to make a move. Don't worry. you'll know when the time is right. Things will become clear over time. Share concerns, especially financial ones, with your mate.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Work hard and stay focused on your goals. Ignore distractions and try to keep worries to a minimum. Things will work out as they should. There is a growing chance for travel and/or romance. Be aware of the signs and act on them.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
The pressure of conflicting duties and desires could build up. Be aware of what's really required. Try to see the big picture and let the little things work themselves out. Avoid scattering your forces or spreading yourself too thin.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Learn from past victories and mistakes. Don't try to force your opinion—adding subtly is better now. Work in the background and let others take credit for ideas and actions. Even small actions can have big consequences. Take time to comfort others.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
See things as others see them. Giving in a little now can get you more in the long run. Take a breather when you need it. Pushing yourself too hard could backfire and keep you from reaching goals. Your mate really does want to help if you allow it.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Don't let work pile up. Keep on top of things for best results. Keep health resolutions about rest and diet. Stick to a middle-of-the-road course for best results. Resist efforts to draw you into an extreme position. Now is the time to stay on the sidelines.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Read the fine print and study details closely. Domestic problems could be unnerving just below the surface. Deal with them now rather than later. Your situation will get better in time. Take time to tie up loose ends.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A potential ally is waiting in the wings for the right moment. Don't fixate on health and relationships. Trying to force the issue only makes the situation worse. Now is the time to avoid unnecessary expenditures and watch your budget.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
You have to be the watchdog. Hold others accountable and be sure to get receipts. Your mate and business partners may grumble about it, but they will thank you in the end. Asking the right questions at the right time could give the answer you need.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"At last, paint sample chips big enough to actually give you a feel for how the color will look!"

Quote of the Day

"Aunt Ruth, I love you but you're gonna get it..."

–Kyle MacLaughlan in Blue Velvet

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Social Norm By Mr. K

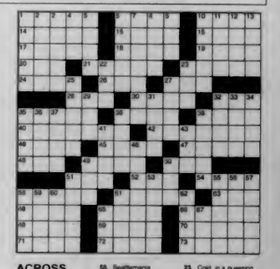
University² By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-3626 for more information.

Franklin		Worcester
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Beef	Pork	Pizza	Pizza
Potatoes	Smurfs	Burgers	Chicken
Lettuce	Onions	Fries	Peas
Scrod	Scrod	Scrod	Scrod

Hampshire		Berkshire
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Sauce	Salmon	Bacon	Truffles
Stroganoff	Shrimp	Beans	Tex-Mex
Sheep	Scallops	Brine	Tofu
Scrod	Scrod	Scrod	Scrod

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996



My mother says when a woman gives birth part of her mind comes out with the baby and that part is lost forever.

The hospital didn't warn her about this.

She found out later when I turned 15.

She said according to Federal regulations, she thinks when I move out of the house she can return to the hospital and get it put back in her head.

ACROSS
1. Stink
6. Lhasa ___ (dog breed)
10. Beast's abode
14. Coat fold
15. Young deer
16. Where some work out
17. Sociologist Durkheim
18. Mag. or Musketeers, e.g.
19. Harvest
20. As easy as ___
21. Night vision
23. Natives of Oulu
24. Eat between meals
25. Falklands feudin' abbr
27. Mid. Ismaic
28. Actress ___ B. Davis
30. General Bradley
32. ___ Buddhism
35. In a high dudgeon
36. Don't bet ___ (2 wds.)
39. Member of an '80s pop group (2 wds.)
46. Took out
47. Weird
48. Perjured oneself
49. Disturbance
50. Salad ingredient
56. School courts: abbr
58. Props for Siouxy Sales
59. Beatlemania adjective
61. D.C. lobbying gp.
62. Singing syllable
64. ___ the Top (Stallone film)
66. Express grief
67. Honesty
69. All About ___
70. Hays
71. Cheese, in a housewarming
72. "You like a lamb" follower
73. Pamplona

DOWN
1. Purge
2. MIA rescuer of film
3. Narrative
4. Electric ___
5. Asked for mercy
6. Ten Years ___
7. Model
8. Do the crawl
9. Artist Yoko
10. Kind of soprano
11. Hymn ender
12. Positive thinker's phrase (2 wds.)
13. Sings like Hammer
22. Alter-___
23. Cold, in a guessing game
25. Loathed
27. Inventor James
29. Clear profit
31. Moor morning feature
32. "The Twilight ___"
33. Layers' legacies
34. Hays
36. Spin wheels
38. Tackroom item
37. Break ___ ("Good luck") (2 wds.)
38. Garfield's stooge
39. ___ Talks (1984 film)
41. Actor Bogosian
43. NYC building
46. Flightless bird
49. Certain camera shot
50. Suet
51. Nudges
53. Gordon and Roman
54. Poet's output
56. Musical set in Argentina
57. Rent anew
58. Catcher's need
59. Early Ron Howard role
60. ___ car dealer
61. Adieu
62. Boaters
63. Tucker's mate
67. Hand, informally

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

W	E	A	N		J	U	M	P		G	R	E	E	K
R	A	T	E		E	T	A	L		Y	E	M	E	N
I	V	E	S		D	E	S		M	O	I	R	E
T	E	N	T	S		S	H	E	D	S		L	I	L
		S	I	R		E	B	E		M	E	E	T
J	A	W		C	A

SPORTS WEEKEND

A-10 Championships
Check out tomorrow's Collegian for a wrap up of the men's and women's performances in the A-10 Championships.

Monday, February 24, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

MEN'S HOOP	WOMEN'S HOOP	MEN'S HOCKEY	MEN'S SOFTBALL	MEN'S & WOMEN'S SWIMMING	MEN'S TRACK	WOMEN'S TRACK
Tuesday, February 25 @ ST. Joe's Saturday, March 1, @ TEMPLE	Thursday, February 27, A-10 SECOND ROUND	Saturday, March 1, @ MAINE	Friday, February 28, @ COLUMBUS, GA.	Friday, February 28, @ ECAC Championships	Sunday, March 2, @ IC4A Championships	Sunday, March 2, @ECAC Championships

Minutewomen top Dayton 62–55

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

After a season in which things just never got off on the right foot, UMass senior guard Beth Kuzmeski picked quite a night to get hot.

MASSACHUSETTS	62
DAYTON	55

Kuzmeski poured in 15 points and grabbed 10 rebounds on Saturday, including a back–breaking three–pointer with :58 seconds left, to lead the Massachusetts women's basketball team past a scrappy Dayton team 62–55 at the William D. Mullins Center. Fellow senior Crystal Carroll added 14 for the Minutewomen, who celebrated senior night before the game.

UMass ends its regular season with a 17–9 overall record, 11–5 in the Atlantic 10, and now awaits the results of the Duquesne–Rhode Island first round A-10 tournament game. The Minutewomen will play the winner Thursday night in second round action at the Mullins Center.

"UMass is such a good basketball team because they have so many weapons," Dayton coach Clemette Haskins said. "If you contain Carroll, [Kelly] Van Huisen, someone else will step up. Today it was Beth Kuzmeski."

The Flyers stayed close throughout the second half, but some balanced play on the UMass side kept them at bay. They came within four, 57–52, with 4:00 left on the game clock, and Dayton had its chance to close to within two when Kuzmeski fouled Flyer freshman Christi Hester from behind the three–point line. Hester missed all three chances, but Dayton still cut it to four, 59–55, by the 2:16 mark. Kuzmeski then ripped a rebound away from two Flyers on the next Dayton possession, and with :58 left, and no time left on the shot clock, Kuzmeski threw up her third three of the day from the top of the key. The ball bounced on the rim, hung for a second and fell in, sending the 1,326 at the Mullins Center to its feet and ending the regular season in dramatic fashion.

"When you're a shooter, a lot of your confidence comes from shooting the ball well," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "It's a streaky thing, shooting."

Streaky enough for UMass in the first half of Saturday's game, at least. The Minutewomen fell behind 10–2 in the first half, thanks to some missed chances. But they rebounded quickly, and took their first lead, 16–15, on a Crystal Carroll free throw with 11:03 in the half. Dayton and UMass fought back and forth for the rest of the half, but the Minutewomen pushed its lead to four at halftime, courtesy of a pair of Kuzmeski threes. She hit the first with :51 left to give UMass a three–point lead, and after Dayton closed within one, Kuzmeski drained a second three from the left corner, complete with emphatic pumping fist, with :08 left before the horn, giving the Minutewomen a 32–28 lead at halftime.

"She had a great game," Haskins said. "We knew about [Kuzmeski], we were just hoping she wouldn't hurt us. But she did."

Kuzmeski was counted on by the Minutewomen at the start of the season to be a main force in the offense, especially from behind the three–point line, where she has led the Minutewomen all three seasons in Amherst. But foot injuries sidelined her up until late December, and Kuzmeski has also seen her playing time limited by the emergence of freshmen Kelly Van Huisen and Alison MacFarland, who played well in her absence early in the season.

"It feels good," Kuzmeski said. "I've been struggling with my game. I wanted to prove to people that I'm still the player I've been the last four years."

Now for the Minutewomen is the A–10 tournament, which is going to be crucial for them this year, given that a 17–9 record and some tough losses is going to be hard for the NCAA selection committee to overlook. Winning A–10's is an automatic bid, and the road starts Thursday night. Speculation is that a rematch with Duquesne is imminent, which isn't entirely good news for the Minutewomen, who lost to the Dukes 85–58 last month.

"We have to take care of ourselves this week," O'Brien said. "We have to clean things up and go in Thursday and play our best game of the season."

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Senior Beth Kuzmeski drained a three to put the Flyers to bed 62–55 on Saturday.

Seniors shine in final home game

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

Saturday's senior night win over Dayton, and the upcoming Atlantic 10 tournament, mark the changing of the guard for the Massachusetts women's basketball program. The Minutewomen defeated Dayton with a mix of offensive and defensive contributions coming from all depths of the roster.

Seniors Crystal Carroll, Sabriya Mitchell and Beth Kuzmeski played their last regular season home game in the William D. Mullins Center. They played with the intensity and experience their positions of leadership demand, combining with the talents and youthfulness of the up–and– coming underclassmen. The result was possibly the most balanced attack the maroon and white have showcased all season.

Seven Minutewomen put a notch in the scoring column, and three scored in double figures. Kuzmeski threw in 15 points, hitting the money on three key attempts from downtown.

"I just wanted to come out today and prove that I am the player I have always been for the past four years," Kuzmeski said. "I was in a bit of a slump. Today was the best day for me to come out of it. I was very excited about today."

Carroll added 14 points and made two blocks. The second rejection came late in the game, she disallowed a Dayton shooter the courtesy of the open shot her teammate had earned by beating a double team. Carroll shifted to her left, and sent the prospective Flyer field goal away from the basket, staving off a late lead change.

"It's a good feeling to leave with a win, I just hope we can do the same thing on Thursday," Carroll said.

Mitchell's contributions included a game–high nine assists, and the game's shortest player also grabbed four boards. The point guard put forth one of her typically strong defensive efforts, and she may be the lone exception to the senior night tradition. A recent NCAA rule change allows students whose freshman year athletic eligibility was restricted by Proposition 48 academic requirements to assume a fourth year of eligibility if they are scheduled to graduate on time. Mitchell has not yet announced her plans for next season, but she is slated to graduate in May, giving her the option to have a second senior year.

The upperclassmen were not alone on the court against the Flyers. Freshman Alison MacFarland shot 66 percent, scoring 12 points and grabbing six rebounds in 26 minutes of play. MacFarland's performance lately has been key in filling in for the injured Kuzmeski. With Kuzmeski putting up some of her best numbers of the season the freshman's continued hot streak just added to the Minutewomen's arsenal.

"I think the freshman are starting to realize the intensity that they have to play at," Minutewoman coach Joanie O'Brien said. "I think on Thursday [in A–10 tournament play]

Turn to SENIORS, page 9

UMass' win streak snapped; Minutemen fall to Dayton

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

It may have been that the Massachusetts men's basketball team was looking ahead to its meeting with Atlantic 10 East leader St. Joseph's tomorrow. It may have been the fact that on paper, the Dayton Flyers just didn't pose as strong a threat.

MASSACHUSETTS	67
DAYTON	69

Whatever it was, the Minutemen didn't play to win at the University of Dayton Arena yesterday — and it showed. UMass dropped a 69–67 decision to the Flyers in a pivotal A–10 contest.

The Minutemen now stand at 10–4 in conference, a mark that puts them in second place behind St. Joseph's. Dayton, meanwhile has posted a 12–12 (5–9 A–10) record and has quietly become a contender for the No. 2 spot in the West behind frontrunner Xavier.

The Flyers trailed UMass for most of the game, pulling to only their second lead in the late stages of the game. In the final crucial minutes of the game, Dayton made UMass play to its level, forcing the Minutemen to come up with key shot after key shot.

"You've got to give them credit," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said of the Flyers. "They came back and did a great job of staying with it. They played really hard."

Case in point, with 11.2 seconds remaining in the game, the Flyers led by five and UMass had the ball. Minuteman point guard Edgar Padilla crossed the ball to Carmelo Travieso, who nearly had the ball taken away. However, the senior shooting guard came up big, knocking down an off–balance 3–point shot without a clear look and with a pair of defenders in his way.

With the UD lead cut to only two, the Minutemen looked to foul, and quickly sent Ryan Perryman to the line after the Flyers inbounded the ball. Perryman nailed both of his shots from the stripe to boost the Dayton margin to four.

Knowing the success Travieso was having from behind the arc, the Minutemen again gave the ball to No. 24. This time, with a clear look at the basket, Travieso knocked down another from downtown, cutting the margin to just one with 3.5 left on the clock. UMass again looked to foul, this time sending Edwin Young to the line. Young, who finished with nine points and two rebounds for the Flyers, missed his first shot before connecting his second.

Tyrone Weeks inbounded the ball for UMass' final shot with 2.7 seconds remaining. Padilla caught the ball just over half–court, but his off–balance 3–point attempt was hit off the backcourt and the Minutemen fell, snapping their six–game win streak.

Travieso shouldered most of UMass' scoring burden with 22, while Inus Norville posted a career–high with 12 points off the bench.

Material from 99.3 FM WHMP was used in this report.

Dayton 69, Massachusetts 67

Massachusetts (17–11, 10–4 A–10)

Clarke 4–6 0–0 8, Weeks 1–3 2–2 4, Ketner 3–10 4–5 10, Padilla 2–6 0–0 5, Travieso 8–16 2–4 22, Smith 0–1 2–2 2, Bast 1–6 2–2 4, Norville 5–7 2–2 12.

Dayton (12–12, 5–9 A–10)

Perryman 3–6 8–14 14, Turner 7–12 0–0 14, Ashman 5–12 3–4 13, Hoskins 4–11 1–2 12, Young 2–7 5–6 9, Haughn 1–1 0–0 3, Horton 1–1 0–0 1, Postorino, Josh 0–0 0–0 0, Beyina 0–0 0–0 0

Halftime — Massachusetts 35–30. 3–point Field Goals — Massachusetts 13 (Travieso 4), Dayton 11 (Hoskins 3). Rebounds — Massachusetts 30 (Basit 10), Dayton 33 (Perryman 11). Assists — Massachusetts 12 (Padilla 7), Dayton 12 (Young 6). Blocks — Massachusetts 2 (Norville), Dayton 2 (Turner). Attendance — 11,893.

Player of the Game

Inus Norville – 12 points, 2 blocks.

Highlights...

The Minutemen held a five point lead at the half, yet fell apart in the final minutes of play. Carmelo Travieso led the Minutemen in scoring with 22 on 8–16 shooting from the floor while Inus Norville knocked down a career–high 12 points off the bench. Edgar Padilla received an inbounds pass from Tyrone Weeks with 2.7 seconds left, but couldn't get the off balance 3–pointer to fall. The Minutemen fell to 10–4 in the league and are now hold the No. 2 spot in the A–10 East behind St. Joe's (10–3).

Senior night bitter sweet for UMass' Joe Mallen and team

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Senior night for the Massachusetts hockey team was bittersweet for the nine graduating seniors, but more so for coach Joe Mallen. The 3–2 loss to Boston College last Saturday night was the final home game for the founding fathers of the current UMass hockey program.

Due to their guaranteed seventh place finish in the Hockey East standings, the Minutemen will be travelling to either Boston University or New Hampshire for the first round of the playoffs. A third period comeback attempt just fell short, and the cornerstones of the reinstated program were left with a bitter taste in their collective mouths.

Besides all of this, you have to think that Mallen had the worst of the entire deal. Before being hired for the head coach position at UMass in 1993, he was an assistant coach at Boston College. A tough jump already with the rivalry between the two schools, but his ties there were deep with his nine–year involvement with the Eagles. On Saturday night, he had to watch the star of his last group of recruits at BC single–handedly beat his first group of recruits at UMass.

Senior goalie Greg Taylor came up with 29 saves, most of the mind–boggling variety, to hold back the Minutemen's senior offensive threats like Warren Norris and Rob Bonneau in solidifying the Eagle win. He and junior goalie Brian Regan put on a goaltending clinic, with Regan putting up one of his best efforts (31 saves) of late to no avail. If Regan keeps up that kind of play, it will only help the team to no end come playoff time against high powered squads like BU or UNH.

Now Mallen is all about the maroon and white, but he had to deal with some conflicting emotions at the end of Saturday night's game.

"But talking about mixed emotions on this night," Mallen said, "The funny thing is that we've got nine guys that are survivors of 40 or 50 kids that wanted to play college hockey that have got to the end. And on the flip side, I've got a class of seniors at Boston College that I recruited personally that are playing against us.

"I'm looking at Greg Taylor, Joe Harney and all those guys, and after the game I shook their hand and told them they had four good years, and they were very grateful and thankful. So, it was a pretty interesting night, seeing a lot of seniors playing in their last game here."

In the post–game press conference, Mallen waxed nostalgic when remembering his first encounter with Taylor. He made the trip north of the border to scout him when he played for the Melfort Mustangs of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League. It was a different world for Mallen, and also a different world for BC, as

Turn to BITTER, page 9

UMass hockey falls to Boston College

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

Boston College hockey's leading scorer, Deerfield Academy product Marty Reasoner, and one of its top defensemen, Brendan Buckley, both missed the team bus Saturday afternoon after the team meal at a restaurant on Commonwealth Ave. in Newton.

MASSACHUSETTS	2
BOSTON COLLEGE	3

The two hurried and made it to the William D. Mullins Center in time to lace up their skates against Massachusetts. Both were non–factors in a 3–2 Eagle win, but enough of their teammates, including likely All–Hockey East goaltender Greg Taylor, would make the difference in the game.

Saturday night, the Massachusetts hockey team paid tribute to nine seniors who will be hailed as the founding fathers of the current program. The first class of four–year seniors to leave the team in 18 years went down fighting, but a late rally fell a goal short.

"We had great chances," coach Joe Mallen said. "We stuck to our system very well. We had good goaltending, good defense and we certainly had a lot of good opportunities but we just couldn't finish. It was a tough way for the seniors to end at home, but it was a good, strong effort.

"I'm disappointed [with the loss]. I thought we could take this game tonight. [We played] three one goal games against BC [this year] and the way I look at it I don't see much difference right now between their program and our program and I look at that as a positive. I think that as our recruiting improves and our timing improves in terms of the age of the program, that we'll get over the hump."

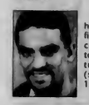
UMass carried the flow of the game early, heavily outshooting the Eagles in the opening 10 minutes, but BC drew first blood in the contest.

Chris Masters, playing in his first game after sustaining a mild concussion and several facial lacerations as the result of a vicious elbow by Boston University's Dan LaCouture in the Beanpot final on Feb. 10,

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Gerry Cahill and his fellow seniors fell to Boston College in their final game on the Mullins Center ice.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 89 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 25, 1997

Colvin inspires Noho

Folk musician extraordinaire, Shawn Colvin, played an impressive and moving set at Smith College. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Philly finale

The UMass men's hoop team plays its final, and most crucial, road game tonight when they travel to St. Joe's. (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Mexican drug official linked with cartel lord

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico has fired 36 employees of its national anti–drug office who were linked to the ousted drug czar accused of accepting bribes from a top drug trafficker, the attorney general said yesterday.

Mexico last week indicted Gen. Jesus Gutierrez Rebollo, the former head anti–narcotics official, on charges of cooperating with drug cartels.

"The National Drug Control Institute has fired all personnel who were in contact with Gutierrez Rebollo, and all of the agency's employees will be subject to review, presumably including a security check," Attorney General Jorge Madrazo Cuellar said yesterday. Other firings may still occur, he said.

After being appointed head of the National Drug Control Institute in December, Gutierrez Rebollo moved into a luxury Mexico City apartment allegedly loaned to him by one of Mexico's most notorious drug lords, Amado Carrillo Fuentes.

Police believe Carrillo Fuentes lived at least occasionally in an apartment in the same building. Authorities said Monday that police had found $10,000 in cash, an assault rifle, a letter to Carrillo Fuentes, and a small barrel of tequila with the drug lord's name engraved on it in the apartment.

NATION

Ramsey parents think they're prime suspects

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The parents of JonBenet Ramsey believe they top the police list of suspects in the brutal murder of their 6–year–old daughter, a family spokesman reiterated Monday. "As I've said all along, it's pretty obvious that from what the police and district attorney have said in recent weeks, they consider the Ramseys at the top of their potential suspect list," Pat Korten said Monday.

Search warrants for the Ramseys' home and automobiles will remain sealed for 90 days or until an arrest is made in the case, a judge ruled Monday.

It has been nearly two months since JonBenet's body was found strangled in the basement of her family's 15–room home here. John Ramsey found her body about eight hours after her mother discovered a ransom note seeking $118,000.

An autopsy revealed the former Little Miss Colorado may have been sexually assaulted.

Korten said the seals on the search warrants remain because the Ramseys haven't been eliminated as suspects in their daughter's murder.

In addition, the parents have yet to sit down for a formal interview with police, although the two sides remain in contact. "All dealings are through the attorneys," Korten said.

Also Monday, a newspaper reported that Boulder police returned to Atlanta with questions about the alibi for JonBenet's half–brother, John Andrew Ramsey.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 20 LOW: 15	HIGH:30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 20 LOW: 15

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News.....page 2
Sports.....page 12

Members of Title VII committee drop move against SGA senator

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

A motion proposed at last week's Student Government Association (SGA) senate meeting calling for the removal of committee chair Tom Sadlowski has been dropped.

Tom Sadlowski, chair of the Select Committee on Title VII, was accused by senators Dan Backer (EROC) and Amy Pellegrino (Southwest Area), of failing to allow other committee members to participate in the drafting of Title VII.

Pellegrino felt that she was not shown respect as a freshman senator and member of the committee.

"If he [Sadlowski] doesn't respect me or my age, at least respect my constituency," Pellegrino said.

Title VII concerns the relationship between the SGA and other organizations on campus, including registered student organizations (RSOs), agencies, the Greek system and student businesses. The SGA currently has an incomplete version of Title VII which calls for a version to be written.

Chair Sadlowski feels that he has been fulfilling his duties as chair and the discontent directed towards him should have been dealt with a different way.

"During the entire process I've tried to get as many people involved as possible. Now for something to come up where people say they weren't involved is questionable," Sadlowski said.

"Why didn't these people before the senate meeting talk to me instead of taking this route?" Sadlowski said.

The Select Committee on Title VII members include Pellegrino and Sen. Stacey Shackford (Central Area) who both feel that they were excluded from the decision making process.

"It [Title VII] has kind of been a personal project for him," Shackford said. "He met with other groups on his own, we were there to make it official."

Reacting to a section of the motion claiming that Sadlowski stated "the SGA and the Senate has no business in drafting Title VII" Sadlowski said, "They have every business.

"If it goes in the Constitution, they have business. The students do too. It's about outreach to everyone involved. Everyone has business in drafting Title VII."

Because of the all encompassing nature of Title VII, Sadlowski feels that "we will be lucky to finish it by the end of next semester. We want this document to last," Sadlowski said.

"I feel like he's [Sadlowski] has done an amazing job because the task is so enormous. He has tried to get everyone's feedback which is pretty impressive" said Maydad Cohen, who attended meetings on Title VII as a representative of Campus Design and Copy.

Backer has now agreed to drop the motion brought against Sadlowski because he has been told the committee will meet, and all members will have input.

"I've decided to withdraw this motion because Speaker Tirrell has given me personal assurances that there will be meetings," Backer said. "If Tom's going to do the job, I'm fine with him being chair."

Tentatively, Pellegrino and Sadlowski will now co–chair the committee, with Speaker Tirrell present.

According to Tirrell, he will attend the meetings "to facilitate communication, make sure there is mutual respect and that there is a working relationship that can be had."

Albright makes stop in China; anticipates improving relations

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

BEIJING — Declaring that U.S. relations with China are the key to world stability in the 21st century, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright warned Chinese officials yesterday that they must "act constructively" and improve their country's record on human rights.

Otherwise, she said, China could face condemnation by the United States and its European allies.

"I said I would tell it like it is, and I told it like it is," Albright said of exchanges she held with President Jiang Zemin and other top Chinese officials on the eve of a memorial service for Deng XiaoPing.

She was the only Western leader permitted to visit Beijing during a six–day mourning period for the paramount leader. Albright said she considered that "an extremely good sign" that China will move toward even greater cooperation with the United States. Jiang put aside a speech he was preparing for the service to talk to Albright for 45 minutes. Prime Minister Li Peng gave her an hour and Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, two hours and 45 minutes. Albright, speaking first at the U.S. Embassy and then at a joint news conference with Qian, signaled the Clinton administration's commitment to improving relations with Beijing. But she noted differences over human rights and a growing trade deficit — $39 billion last year up from $33 billion in 1995.

"There is no question our relations with the Chinese are a key to stability as we go into the 21st century," she told some 100 U.S. Embassy workers and family members.

Albright, on her first foreign tour as secretary of state, was received with respect by Chinese officials. Deputy Foreign Minister Li Zhaoxing greeted her with kisses on both cheeks at Capitol Airport.

But at the news conference, Albright said that "problems do remain" in China's sale of missile technology and chemical weapons ingredients to other nations — suspicions center on deals with Pakistan, Iran, Iraq and Libya — and that American and Chinese officials will meet in Beijing next month to go over them. And she gave no indication the Chinese yielded to entreaties she made on human rights after American officials handed over a long list of jailed political foes.

"We admitted we had a difference on it," Albright said of her plea that China treats its people better. "They understood the importance of the issue."

Albright said if China did not ease up on dissidents, the United States would join with European nations in sponsoring a resolution criticizing China's record at a U.N. conference next month in Geneva.

"But there is still time," she said, mindful that political opponents are sometimes released without notice after a top level U.S.–Chinese meeting.

State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said "we don't believe, based on these meetings, that there will be any imminent breakthroughs in China's human rights record."

Qian denied the Communist government is imprisoning people for their political views. He said Chinese courts were dealing fairly with "sentenced criminals."

On the touchy issue of China's sporadic efforts to intimidate Taiwan, Albright affirmed U.S. commitments to the Shanghai Communique signed during President Nixon's breakthrough trip in 1972 that first took the position there was only one China. She urged China to deal in a humanitarian way with Hwang Jang Yop, the high–ranked North Korean official who has taken refuge in the South Korean consulate in Beijing.

And she called for preservation of Hong Kong's "way of life" when the prosperous and democratic British colony is taken over by China on July 1.

Qian, the only Chinese official to make public remarks, offered a mixed assessment of the relationship.

He said China and the United States have common interests. "However, we do not evade our differences."

With the Beijing stop Albright concluded a nine–country, 11–day worldwide trip to Europe and Asia.

Former UMass student diagnosed with meningitis

An Amherst resident, formerly a University of Massachusetts student, was diagnosed with meningitis yesterday at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northhampton.

The former student was first seen at University Health Services (UHS), and then transferred to Cooley Dickinson and later to the UMass Medical Center in Worcester for treatment.

Meningitis is an inflammation of the linings of the brain and spinal cord, caused by either viruses or bacteria.

According to Anne J. Lardner, UHS public health nurse, the diagnosis in this case was bacterial.

Bacterial meningitis is a rare but serious illness which can be fatal. Persons who have had intimate contact with a case in the two weeks prior to diagnosis may be advised to take preventative antibiotics, such as ciprofloxacin or rifampin.

Bernett A. Melby, director of health services, said that the patient's housemates and co–workers have been contacted and advised to contact UHS or their health providers to obtain preventative antibiotics. Health services at the other four colleges in the Five College Area have also been notified.

Bacterial meningitis is spread through direct contact with respiratory droplets from the nose and throat of an infected person. The bacteria can not live long outside of the body, though, so the disease is not transmitted easily by routine contact with an infected person in a public setting.

Lardner said that everyone can reduce their risk of contacting airborne diseases by washing their hands frequently and not sharing items such as eating utensils, drinking cups, water bottles or smoking materials.

Early symptoms of meningitis include fever, neck stiffness, nausea and vomiting, exhaustion, lethargy and severe sudden headache.

Anyone experiencing these symptoms should contact the UHS triage nurse at 577–5229 or their private health provider.

— Tamar Carroll

African–American culture celebrated at Black Social

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

Undergraduates, graduate students, alumni and a host of staff and faculty gathered this past Sunday to celebrate African–American culture and history at the annual Black Social.

The event took place in the Campus Center Auditorium, where people from all ethnic backgrounds came together to eat, fellowship and witness a showcase of talent from a variety of gifted graduate and undergraduate students of color.

Assistant Vice–Chancellor for Student Affairs, Ricardo Townes, expressed the significance of having students exhibiting their talents at an event such as the Black Social.

"People weren't aware that [the students] had those talents," Townes said. "So, to see guys like Kenny read poetry or to go up and have these guys do their music thing... that's a really good part of it, having an opportunity to showcase the talent that students have."

The level of talent displayed at the conference surprised a number of people who were not aware that these students had such gifts.

Stand out performances included several numbers performed by the musical group, NYC plus 1.

Shawn Kelly (piano), Shayshahn Machpherson (violin), Jerry Pearce (xylophone). Alex Marcelo (drums) and Tim Dahl (base) make up the multi–dimensional group that moved the crowd with jazz covers of Thelonius Monk and Miles Davis.

The group also blessed the social with two Guinean drum songs called KooKoo and Sunoo. The varying rhythms of the African drums set the tone for the evening, as the spirit of the social began to take form.

Other performances included poetry readings by Black Student Union President Kenny Lacoste and the student known as Shaggy, as well as a cappella singing by Carlos Anderson.

The brothers of Phi Beta Sigma, Inc. kept with the tradition of stepping, which has its roots in African dance, by performing what they called the "African step."

Lead by Jamer E. Callahan, the Sigmas displayed precision and accuracy as they stomped, slapped and clapped in the spirit of unity and brotherhood.

The Black Social is held every year and every year its significance is felt by those who attend.

"I think it [the social] has a lot of cultural significance," said sophomore Odynio Fagade. "A lot of the time, we don't have an identity. I don't think we have a real sense of where we come from. So, this is very important for blacks to get an awareness of who we are and just come together and unify in spirit like we should be doing 24–7."

Junior, Renee Henderson, echoed similar sentiments.

"The significance of an event like this, for me, is unity," Henderson said. "It brings everyone together. It shows us what kind of talent we have. It shows us what unity is all about and what being black is all about and allows us to come forth and talk about it."

Lack of funds may delay U.S.–Russia space flight

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Construction of the international space station, scheduled to begin with a Russian flight in November, could be delayed once again because the Russian space program is broke.

The Russians had said previously they were eight months behind on a service module that was scheduled to be launched in April 1998 and the United States was making plans for a temporary stand–in. But statements made in Moscow yesterday by Yuri Koptev, head of the Russian Space Agency, indicated the Russians may not be able to meet their November 1997 date for launch of a guidance, navigation and control module — the first element of the station to be put into orbit.

The United States has paid $215 million for the module and is paying $472 million for space station cooperation, including use of the Mir station, according to Marcia Smith, a Congressional Research Service specialist in aerospace matters.

NASA learned of the possible delay from news accounts.

"NASA has not made any decisions about possible changes in the first–element launch," said Daniel S. Goldin, administrator of the space agency. "We are aggressively reviewing our options in terms of flight hardware and assembly schedule."

Goldin also said that if news reports about Koptev's statement are accurate, "I'm sure Mr. Koptev will convey his views on the assembly schedule to NASA."

The United States is committed to spend $17.4 billion on the space station for construction, which had been scheduled for 2002. This is in addition to $10.2 billion spent over a decade for designs that went nowhere.

Koptev said without elaboration that the United States, Japan, Canada and the 10–member European Space Agency were inclined to accept the delay in the schedule.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

"Work–study"
Michael Vezina, a resource economics major looks over some school work as he passes a slow day selling UMass gear in the Campus Center.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Copy Editor: Laura Stock
Photo Technician: Kenneth W.P. Scott
Production Supervisor: Matt McCarthy
Production Staff: Joylyn Lombard, Kelvin Torres

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Relax
Terry Longe relaxes while waiting for a bus home.

UMass team dances to Daytona

Suraski leads 50 students to finals in national competition

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

No matter how her solo dance performance turns out at the National Dance and Cheerleading Competition in April, one thing will remain true — Jessica Suraski is one of the top six dancers in the nation.

Suraski, a sophomore biology major, has been a member of the University of Massachusetts' Dance team since the beginning of her freshman year.

She has been dancing since she was 13–years–old.

Suraski, who was the only UMass Dance team member to submit a video, was selected to compete in a individual dance routine against five other dancers from across the country in Utah, Tennessee, Texas and California.

The Nationals, which will take place April 2–7, will be held in Daytona, Fla.

"I was really excited. I was screaming in the halls and no one had any idea why," Suraski said. "I am very nervous but I think I am more excited than nervous."

"Jessica is one of the hardest working and strongest dancers on the team," said Janine Santilli, one of the dance team co–captains.

"I can't think of a better person to represent UMass or our team. I think she will do well, but no matter what, she is still one of the top six dancers in the nation," Santilli said.

The dance team won a bid for Nationals last summer. Since then they have been practicing three nights a week, and in addition Suraski puts in extra time to work on her individual routine.

"Only four people went to dance camp to get the bid for nationals and the whole team is benefitting from that," Suraski said.

The team does not have a permanent dance studio so they practice in the Southside room in Southwest.

"It's real hard on us. It's not a real dance space so we have to be careful not to hurt ourselves," Suraski said.

In addition, the team must raise $10,000 so they can get themselves to Nationals.

"We are still trying to raise money. We are looking for donations and are also doing fundraisers— selling Avon and Yankee candles. We mostly depend on donations though," Co–captain Kellie Shea said.

They women added that the campus support has been great.

"The alumni association gave us a grant and we have been petitioning businesses. Students also have donated some money as well," Santilli said. "The support has been very helpful and it shows that students do care."

"Attending the Nationals will be a great experience for us all. We are very psyched and we are getting fired up and ready to go," Shea said.

Approximately 50 cheerleaders and dancers will represent UMass in each area of the competition, the female and co–ed cheerleading division, the dance team division and the individual performance by a dancer.

"We have competed before but we have never made it this far," Santilli said. "There are 15 people on the team and this is what we want. We are going to go down there and do well.

"We want to prove ourselves. We don't want to just go down there for the experience."

Facts revealed about Empire State shooter

NEW YORK (AP) — The Palestinian teacher who went on a fatal shooting rampage atop the Empire State Building carried a note blaming the United States for using Israel as "an instrument" against his people.

The note found in Ali Hassan Abu Kamal's pocket contains "rambling, angry stuff," a high-ranking police source said last night.

Written in English and Arabic, it also expresses animosity against France and England and indicated that Abu Kamal planned to vent that anger at the Empire State Building, the source said. The man's family claimed the shooting had nothing to do with politics.

The landmark building was fitted with an airport-style baggage scanner and two metal detectors Monday. The mayor blamed the shootings on laws that allowed the man to buy a gun just weeks after he came to America.

Seven tourists were shot Sunday, one fatally, on the 86th-floor observation deck of the famous landmark, long a symbol of romance and tourism. Kamal then killed himself.

That Abu Kamal — a 69-year-old Palestinian in the country only two months — could buy a Beretta semiautomatic handgun "is totally insane," Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said at a news conference. Police Commissioner Howard Safir described Abu Kamal as "one deranged individual working on his own."

An anti-terrorist task force was still part of the investigation, Safir said, but so far it had found no evidence that Abu Kamal was aligned with any terrorist group.

In Abu Kamal's hometown of Gaza City, relatives said he had been distraught over losing his life savings of more than $300,000 and had no ties to Palestinian radical groups. Abu Kamal called home Sunday and said he could not send tuition money to one of his sons, who is studying civil engineering in Russia, a son-in-law said. The letter in Abu Kamal's pocket discussed personal issues but did not mention the loss of his life savings, the police source said.

A senior law enforcement official told The New York Times, "The note shows he had a raft of grievances, but chiefly it shows that we are dealing with someone who was quite unstable. He wanders all over the lot. I can't even say there is real substance to the note."

The Times also reported in today's editions that Abu Kamal visited the observation deck on Saturday, the day before the attack.

"He may have gone up there without his gun to see what the security was, whether there were metal detectors there," a federal law enforcement official told the paper. "Or he may have gone up there with his gun and he simply chickened out."

A security camera showed that Abu Kamal concealed his weapon under a long coat while entering the Empire State Building on Sunday. He took an elevator to an observation deck visited by 3 million tourists each year.

Some witnesses said he was asking people where they were from, then said he was from Egypt before opening fire on a group of tourists, many of them foreign. As panicked sightseers stampeded toward exits, Abu Kamal shot himself in the head, police said.

The Empire State Building was closed to tourists Monday and the bright lights that illuminate the building were turned off for the night at 7:45 p.m. to mark the tragedy. Visitors today will be screened by the metal detectors at the second-floor elevator to the observation deck, and will have to check their bags through the scanner.

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb. 26, 27, 28
Open House at the North Fire Station, Fbruary 28, 5:00 p.m.
Call 549-5419

Attention
RSOs / GSOs / Agencies
Space Allocation Procedure has Begun!
The Campus Center/Student Union Commission has once again begun the Space Allocation Procedure for office spaces within the Campus Center/Student Union Complex
Pick up an application at the Campus Activities Office, 416 Student Union!
A person from each RSO/GSO/Agency has to sign out an application at the Campus Activities Office.
Completed applications should be dropped off at the Campus Activities Office by 4:45 p.m. on February 28, 1997.
Applications Available: February, 11, 1997, Noon
Applications Due: February, 28, 1997, 4:45 p.m.

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
TO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

WEEKLY UPDATE
MATHER CAREER CENTER
CO-OP in NEW YORK CITY
for ENGLISH/JOURNALISM/COMMUNICATION MAJORS!
DMTG
J.Walter Thompson Direct
Marke Communications
McCann Erickson
Also check out the following co-ps...
Arnold Publications, Arthur J. Gallagher, Health New England, Houghton Mifflin, Keyport Life Insurance, Reebok (TV production), Simon and Schuster, Vineyard Gazette Come Visit Our Table At...
HRTA CAREER DAY
March 5, Campus Center, 9am - 3pm
Are you involved in community service? Would you like to be?
THEN JOIN US AT "THE BIG RALLY" COMMUNITY SERVICE CONFERENCE!
The University of Massachusetts Community Service Program is sponsoring the fourth annual "Big Rally" Community Service Conference.
Saturday, March 8, 1997
9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Campus Center Room 163
To register call 545-3327 before Friday, February 28.

UM prof, students develop computer driving simulator

By Juliette Doro
Collegian Correspondent

Researchers at the University of Massachusetts are working with the Massachusetts Highway Department and private industries to improve road conditions and reduce motorist fatalities.

Using a car with its engine replaced by computer circuitry, Professor Donald Fisher and graduate students in the Mechanical and Industrial Engineering Department are simulating various road conditions such as the location of signs, the use of three–dimensional signs, and collision–warning systems — a radar in the car which signals the driver if an object is in front of it.

Fisher and his associates recently used the $500,000 lab to research for the Central Artery Project in Boston. They tested the location of signs under different conditions to find the best placement for drivers to spot signs early. According to graduate student Rob Glaser, Fisher's lab manager, the state makes preliminary decisions based on the research.

Glaser said it takes him about one hour to construct the realistic scenarios using computer graphics. He can construct scenes, and then change weather or road conditions. Researchers track everything from how hard a driver steers or how fast they brake while the motorist drives the simulator like a regular car.

One of the projects they are working on is testing three– dimensional road signs to see if older drivers will react better. Although they are easier to see, the signs could be more of a distraction to drivers.

"Not knowing how they will react to those signs could be quite dangerous... we want to determine how the motorists will react," Fisher said.

Another project the lab is testing is collision warning systems which would be placed in cars to alert drivers if an object is in front of their car. They test different conditions such as the need for a warning from both sides of the car rather than only one in the front.

Glaser said that it is important to test these devices.

"We want to find out how best to design these things so that they won't be more of a distraction than a life saving device," Glaser said.

Some of the institutions who have hired the lab are Motorola, Millitech Corp. of South Deerfield, the National Science Foundation, the National Institute of Aging and the Massachusetts Highway Department.

Fisher has also visited the White House to show a videotape of the simulator. According to Glaser the federal government is interested in hiring Fisher's lab to conduct a young drivers program.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Ping-pong the witch is dead...
Ngawang Phunstok is playing ping-pong at the Student Union with a friend from UMass.

Opinions differ on high court drunk driving rulings

BOSTON (AP) — Prosecutors and defense lawyers, awaiting a Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court ruling in a case of suspected drunken driving, don't agree on the effect of past rulings in such cases.

Some law enforcement officials say rulings over the last three years restricting evidence use make prosecuting tougher.

"For a prosecutor, you want the jury to consider all the facts and to paint as complete a picture as possible for them, because obviously the burden is on us to prove the case beyond a reasonable doubt," said Norfolk County Assistant District Attorney John G. Birtwell.

"Every procedural roadblock that the court puts between the jury and the evidence makes it more difficult for them to reach a just decision," he told The Boston Globe.

Defense lawyers say the past rulings have moved to restore the balance between the rights of the accused and the public's wish to get tough with dangerous drunken drivers.

They also say law enforcement officials are not so limited they can't do the job.

"Those are narrow issues being decided by the court," said Christopher Muse, a Boston defense lawyer.

"None of these measures are going to tie the hands of law enforcement and prosecutors," he said.

The ruling awaited is in a case in which defense lawyer James B. Krasnoo argued his client should have been warned about self-incrimination before being asked by police to recite the alphabet during a field sobriety test in Salisbury in 1994.

"The test is performed at a time when the defendant is the focus of the investigation," and constitutional safeguards should be in effect, Krasnoo said.

